The term disbudding may at times prove misleading to the uninitiated. The beginner may be pardoned for supposing that to disbud means to remove superfluous flower buds. As a matter of fact the removal of unnecessary growth buds is included in the word disbud in garden phraseology. In the case of such subjects as chrysanthemums, roses, pæonies, and carnations, disbudding is the word used to describe the action of removing side flower buds, which is done of course with the object of obtaining larger centre blooms. In the case of vines the same word is used to describe the operation of removing excessive growth buds. We have no sympathy with the system of disbudding as applied to the flowering plants mentioned above, when it is carried to extremes. It is advisable to moderately disbud roses and carnations, especially if the blooms are required for cutting purposes. The centre bud up to first part of the flower stem left on they would be of little practical use, hence the wisdom of removing them to enable the centre flower to receive all the available support from the plant. So far as the cruse for six centre blooms exhibites of sweet peas will have to go to excessive disbudding. If the plants do not branch naturally enough they should be stopped, that is, have the head of the growth nipped out. Two or at the most three shoots should be the maximum number to allow to each plant. All subsequent growths should be rubbed out as they appear. This diverts all the strength of the plant into the leading growths, and when flower spikes appear they also must be kept under observation, and those which are not the best buds must be picked off whilst quite small. If the exhibition blooms are wanted for a special day all flower spikes should be removed as they make their appearance until about seven days before the show. Dahlias of the cactus and show varieties must also be treated drastically if intended for particular purposes. As a rule they develop large numbers of side growths from the first natural break. Three or four of the strongest may be retained to grow on to the flowering stage. The side growths will in turn produce many lateral growths, all of which must be rubbed out as they appear. This, of course, means that ultimately only one flower to each main shoot will be left, and to do this and at the same time though the gardener who grows his plants for garden decoration only will think it a waste of time and flowers, the fact still remains that for exhibition purposes the above details must have regular attention. In the case of chrysanthemums the same remarks apply so far as the Japanese and incurved varieties are concerned. We notice that several of this year's show schedules state that disbudding of singles and decorative varieties will lead to disqualification of the exhibit. This state of affairs was almost inevitable after the abnormal stand singles we saw shown last November. To disbud severely was the effect of destroying the character of the flower, which is essentially a subject for basket or table decoration. The above remarks will be sufficient to act as a guide to intending exhibitors. There are many other kinds of flowers treated in similar manner. Pansies, violas, etc., etc., come under the same list. The object of all this disbudding and removal of side growths is obvious. The smaller the number of shoots and flowers and the greater the chances are of obtaining large blooms. The same system is applied in growing fruit. Grapes, apples, pears, plums, etc., are all thinned out. In the case of grapes, thinning is absolutely necessary, as the fruit is produced so thickly as to prevent it developing under natural conditions.

VEGETABLE GARDEN

The kitchen garden will require a lot of attention during the next few weeks. Sowings may be made of the following kinds of seed:—Beet, salsify, lettuce, radish, onion, garden turnip, spinach, peas, parsley, and if a warm, shelter-ed corner is available sow at once a few rows of French beans. Prick off the remainder of the celery plants in a cold frame. Dust with dry lime and soot to keep the terrible Sawfly at bay. This is the insect which produces the leaf-mining maggot.

MINT

Mint cuttings will root freely if inserted during the early part of May. Select young growths from four to six inches long, and pot them on a small particle of root attached if possible. Dibble them into rows a foot apart, and allow six to nine inches from plant to plant. Give a good watering if the soil is dry, and if the cuttings droop syringe them night and morning until they start to grow.

RASPBERRIES

Raspberries are commencing to push up new basal growths, and it is advisable to remove all except six or five to each plant. These will be sufficient to produce a useful crop, and if more are left they will neither grow as strongly, or prove as fruitful as the smaller number. The roots should never be allowed to get dry, and with the object of preventing this a good mulching of manure should be given. Some growers mulch in the autumn, and where this has been done the manure should be left on.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

The pricking out of seedling bedding plants should be completed as quickly as the seedlings get large enough to handle. A few inches of soil placed in a frame bottom will accommodate the plants, and less attention in regard to watering will be required than in the case where the seedlings are grown in boxes. Boxes containing similar seedlings may be removed to the cold frame also. Arrange all bedding plants such as fuchsias, heliotrop, geraniums, lobelia, etc., will make more satisfactory progress in a shallow frame row than they would in a greenhouse. Ageratums, summer-flowering chrysanthemums, and marguerites may be hard-ned off and put outdoor.

SHADING

Flowering plants under glass must be shaded from bright sunshine or they soon deteriorate to such an extent as to make them worthless. Cineraries, calceolarias, schizanthus, azaleas, and other seasonable flowers are all more or less tender, but by carefully shading them they may be made to remain in bloom for several weeks longer than they would if left unprotected. Canvas or flaxy blinds on rollers are most serviceable as they are easily raised or lowered. This is a decided advantage over the system of smearing the glass with whitening or green shading. Shade is harmful when the sun is not shining.

GENERAL REMINDERS.

The atmosphere of glass-houses containing growing plants should be kept charged with moisture. Sprinkle water on the floors, walls, and staging daily. On very hot days the operation may be repeated several times. This is far more important than is often realised.

Flower pots and flowering plants do not require to be dumped down.

Fresh air plays an important part in the cultivation of plants under glass. Ventilate freely so long as draughts can be avoided and the necessary temperature can be maintained.

Cineraria Stellata requires nearly two months longer growing period than the grandiflora type. Sow now for flowering early next year.

BABY OPENS A BAZAAR—AMUSING SCENE.

All bazaar-opening convention went by the board at a function held in connection with St. Saviour's Church, Leeds. The opener, a seven months old baby, exercised the large audience for more effectively than many older persons who undertake similar tasks.

Master Charles Ingram Courtenay Wood, son of the Hon. E. F. L. Wood, M.P., and Lady Dorothy Wood, of Templenewsam, was the hero of the occasion.

After making a felicitous speech, the Vicar, the Rev. John Wylde, escaped the task of persuading Master Wood to perform the formal opening. And a rare task for the worthy vicar it proved to be! First he tried baby with a golden key, which he thought would please, but would have been quite adequate, but the youngster responded with as loud a howl as he was capable of, and turned to his nurse for protection.

The audience were vastly amused. The Vicar, besides thoroughly enjoying the novel situation, was quite equal to the occasion, and next held out a silver bell as an inducement to the opener, remarking naively that "speech is silver, silence is gold."

But Master Wood was still backward, and it was only after much more fun, and a little assistance from the Vicar, that the little bell rang, amidst vociferous acclamation by the assembly.

The applause puzzled and alarmed baby more than ever, and when the Vicar thanked him, the child positively shrieked, and it was quite a long time after the conclusion of the ceremony that the youngster was effectively comforted by the joint efforts of his mother and grandmother (Viscountess Halifax).

ARTIFICIAL INCUBATION—ITS HISTORY

Many are under the impression that artificial incubation is the result of modern research. This is not so. On the other hand, it is of great antiquity, artificial incubation having been employed in Egypt and China before the commencement of the Christian era.

It is true, though, that within the last two generations the systems employed have been greatly developed, resulting in greater certainty of results, simplifying the management required, reducing the cost to necessary apparatus, until to-day artificial incubation is within the reach of all.

Tod-ay we have two distinct styles of machines, those which derive their heat by aid of hot water, and those controlled by hot air. There are devotees of each kind. I do not propose to argue the merits of either. I have used both, and have had equally good results from each pattern. It is, however, fair that I should mention that the hot air machine is the original, and that in connection with artificial incubation the name of "Hearson" should be immortal.

Once thirty years ago the Hearson Champion Incubator was placed upon the market. It was the first successful machine from a commercial point of view, and though there decades have since elapsed, no more modern invention has displaced it from its proud position.

The hot-air machine hails from America, and has received increasing support during the last ten years.

The onus of determining the exact machine you require is yours, and financial considerations will perhaps govern your ultimate choice, but whatever you may determine upon

BUY A STANDARD MACHINE

Do not be led away by alluring and misleading advertisements and quotations in a few shillings. A standard machine commands a fair price, and when acquired you will find that lamps and other accessories are of first-class manufacture, for about the machine itself; spoiled eggs are thus reduced to a minimum. Disappointment and loss obviated, and dangers from fire entirely avoided. The last consideration is an important one.

"Buy a standard machine," I have written. If you can afford a Hearson purchase one. None can give you better results, and as the sound materials employed in its construction, in conjunction with good workmanship, make for long life, apart from its initial cost, it is not really more expensive than others.

Naturally, however, "a standard machine" denotes there are others worthy of consideration, but for the information of the less experienced, I would suggest that they write for information after the "Hearson" to Tambi's Nonpareil, an excellent machine of the hot-water type, and the "Gloucester" and "Cyphers," which are hot-air machines.

Finally, remember materials and good workmanship cost money. If you desire a machine constructed on these lines you must be prepared to pay a fair price, and then, by following out the manufacturer's instructions, be it hot water or hot air that is employed as the heat-generating power, there is no reason why you should be unsuccessful.

What have the innkeepers to say? "I have noticed for years," writes that motorists are making a practice of taking a hamper out with them, calling a halt, and having a rare spread in the corner of a field or on a hill side. It is a point that is a reflection of the farmers in country towns and villages. I rather think this is the natural outcome of the fancy prices some people charge when one pays them a flying visit in the summer time."

A HEARSON INCUBATOR for 5/- a year!

A 60-Egg Hearson costs £5 5s 6 complete and carriage paid, and will hatch every fertile egg for upwards of 25 years, therefore the initial outlay works out at less than 4d. per annum; thus it is the poultry rearer's most profitable investment.

SUCCESS OF BARKSTON ASH CHOIRS.

NEWTON KYME SCHOOL SCORES.

WIGHILL, HEALAUGH, AND MONK FRYSTON FIRST.

ABERFORD, SAXTON, AND CHURCH FENTON CHOIRS.

On Monday the school contests in connection with the Yorkshire Choral Competitions were held at Yeadon, and the Festival Concert Rooms were filled with an army of bright little girls, wearing the colours of their respective schools, and of little boys who found no difficulty in emulating the very good behaviour of the girls. Seated on a platform in the centre of the hall was an almost boyish figure. It was that of the adjudicator, Mr Harry Evans, who has for some years been familiar so children in attending these festivals.

One would have to go far to make a more happy choice than has been made in the selection of Mr Harry Evans as adjudicator, for he is not only one of the really great musicians of his day, but he is peculiarly at home when sitting in genial judgment upon the efforts of young singers, for his own early days were spent in the day schools as a pupil teacher.

Adj. E. C. Brooksbank, of Healaugh, who has for so long been keenly interested in these festivals in the ardu-ous and dual role of secretary and treasurer, was at his post.

Amongst the subscribers to this year's festival are the names of Miss G. Egerton, the Misses Wilson, Mr W. Bridgeman Simpson, the Duchess of Norfolk, the Hon. Lady Ingilby, Lady Bridgeman, Mrs Lund, Mr and Mrs E. C. Brooksbank, Mrs Hall, Mrs A. M. Duncombe, Mr and Mrs W. F. H. Thomson, Mr and Mrs Hargreaves, the Viscountess Halifax, Mrs Paget, Hon. L. de Yarburgh Bateson, Miss Barstow, Mrs Scatchard, Mr A. Rowntree, M.P., Hon. Mrs Tew, Mrs F. Thompson, Mr G. W. Lloyd, Mrs E. Bethell, the Dean of York, Mr C. H. Cobb, Mrs Arthur Grey, Miss Barry, Miss C. Dent, Mrs Raitt, the Countess of Liverpool, the Archbishop of York, Mrs Wrigley, Mrs Ernest Viscount, Mrs Gascoigne, Lady Plumer, Mr Lawson Smith, Miss Brooksbank, Mrs Illingworth, Mr Fairfax Cholmeley, Mrs Rickaby, Miss E. Moore, Mrs Argles, Major Sykes, Lady Herries, Miss Milner, Lady Hawke, Mrs Palmes, Mr Birles, Lady Legard, Mrs Crosthwaite, Mrs Wailes Fairbairn, Mrs Swift, Susan Lady Worsley, Mrs Jowitt, Miss M. Hildyard, Miss E. Hildyard, and Mrs Rice.

NEWTON SCHOOL SCORE

The opening contest was for small village schools which have not more than 50 children on the books. The test piece was "Robin Redbreast" (Colin Taylor). There were to be not less than twenty nor more than 25 children in each chorus. Two choirs entered in this contest—Newton Kyme, conducted by Mrs Webb, and Bolby C.E. School, under the baton of Mr and Bolby C.E. School. Giving his decision, the adjudicator said he hoped all the children would do their best during the festival, as had the two choirs which had just sung. Most of his comments during the day would be of praise. They had just heard some very good tone, which would some day become very much better. The only fault of the first choir was one of diction. Some of the words were a bit nervous, not too confident. But when they proceeded further they were safer, and the last phrases were quite clear and the pace quick. In the second choir they had some good strong voices, and they began well, showing greater promise than the first choir, though they sang a little shaky. The first part was sung very nicely, but in the second part there was some little nervousness and misunderstanding. He awarded 86 points to the first choir, and 83 to the second.

Mr Brooksbank announced that a second prize would be given in view of the closeness of the points.

The next contest was also confined to village schools, in this case schools with not more than 100 on the books, not less than 12 or more than 40 to be in each chorus. The test piece was "The Lamb" (Geoffrey Shaw). There were four choirs competing, the adjudicator decided in favour of Newton Kyme, with 87 points, Bolby School (under Mr Cook) secured 84 points; Saxton (under Mrs Asb), 76; Holme Cowell School (under Mr Kenworthy), 75.

WIGHILL FIRST

On Tuesday there were slightly more entries for the village contests than in preceding years, and one or two new features were introduced, including a special prize of 0 sovereign for the best unison singing.

The morning session opened with the lovely strains of Sullivan's "Hymn of the Homeland," wherein the harmony is really suited for choral rendering. The contest was confined to twelve village choirs, and as the four choirs 56-feet bowed one another the listeners were easily able to forget that amateurs were taking part. First to render the beautiful hymn was Scarthingwell, led by Miss Kate Milner. Then came Church Fenton (Mr Herbert), Holme-on-Spalding Moor (Mr Williams), and Wighill (the Rev. C. Daly Atkinson). The first prize was the Miss Wakefield challenge cup.

The adjudicator (Mr Harry Evans), in giving premier place to Wighill said that taking the class on the whole it was very satisfactory. Church Fenton choir did not keep up the key. There was some good tone, but the sopranos must be careful to blend not only with themselves, but with the rest of the choir. There was a good utterance in places. It was rather a pity the pitch went flat, because the general effect would have been so much better otherwise. The expression was very good. He awarded this choir 83 points. Holme-on-Spalding Moor, to whom he gave the second prize, had some very good utterance, but the movement was not always exact. Wighill Choir had a very nice, quiet movement, and a very nice balance of tone.

HEALAUGH WINS

In the male voice competition, open to villages with a population of under 550, Elgar's difficult "Feasting, I watch" was the test piece, and some splendid singing was heard. The adjudicator awarded the first prize to Healaugh (Miss M. Cooke) with 90 points. Church Fenton had been the first choir to mount the platform. Mr Evans said it was very rare for small male voice choirs to attempt such a work as this. The interpretation of the piece by two conductors —ladies—made him open his eyes. (Applause). He was doubtful whether the piece had been better conducted than by two ladies, because they expressed everything so splendidly. Church Fenton opened a little undecided. Many of the chords were unsettled, and the utterance was always distinct. The final bars received the best treatment. One was not surprised to hear in such a small choir so many inaccurate chords. He awarded them 60 points. Wighill, to whom he gave 73 points, had some very good tone here and there, but the first part was a little too loud for a satisfactory chord effect. The tranquil section was a little too slender in its movement. There were one or two doubtful chords, but the effect was more attractive than the previous choir. There was more certainty in the harmony. Healaugh sang at a better pace, with a surprising "solemn splendour" at the end.

CHALLENGE CUP WINNERS

In the small village part song contest the test piece was J. E. West's "The Pride of May." The winner (Terrington), was entitled to a challenge cup, and the conductor to a silver medal. Five choirs entered, and referring to their efforts, the adjudicator said of Church Fenton that they had fairly good utterance, with chording nearly always accurate. He gave them 79 points. Naburn (Mr Calvert) had very nice tone, but the pace was a shade slow. He gave them 87 points. Wighill began at a very smart pace, but slackened in the middle. The chords were not quite satisfactory. He gave them 84 points. Terrington (91 points), led by the Rev. H. A. K. Hawkins, sang at a right pitch, and the voices were nearly always together. They had the sweetest tone in the competition. Healaugh (85 points) had a nice tone, well balanced, but the utterance of the words was not so clear as by the previous choirs.

FEMALE VOICES

In the female voice competition, Brahms' "The Little Sandman" was the test-piece, and there were seven entrants. The adjudicator said that the choirs did not make the words of the piece sufficiently distinct. Healaugh choir, to whom he gave 89 points, had a beautiful tone, but he could not hear the words properly. Wighill (80) had a good tone, too, but there also the words were not clear. The intonation was a little subtle, the pace pretty even. The pace of Scarthingwell (84 points) was a little slow, but the words were pretty good. The intonation was good. The pace of Saxton (79 points) was a little too slow, but the utterance was fairly good. Terrington (90), had a very good tone, and sang with delicacy. Westbridge (72) sang very delicately, but the words here also were not clear, and the intonation was occasionally a little bit risky. Newton Kyme (82) began nicely, but the voices were not together. Terrington were, therefore, the winners of the first prize. This contest concluded the morning session

AFTERNOON SESSION

The afternoon session opened with a male voice competition open to large villages with a combined population of under 2,000. The test piece was Bantock's "Down among the dead men." Six choirs entered—Monk Fryston (Mr Morris), Harewood (Mr Calvert), Naburn (Mr Calvert), Aberford (Mr Morris), and Darrington (the Rev. C. Daly Atkinson). Wykeham (Mr Rose) did not compete. Mr Evans awarded the highest points to Aberford (87), and delivered over the contest as certainly the most amusing he had experienced, because he did not know that a great many of the gentlemen really realised what they were doing. They seemed to be trying to do with a temperance meeting or with anything funereal. Monk Fryston, to whom he gave 76 points, had good tone, he said, and was well balanced on the first, but the utterance of the words was not as crisp and clear as it should be. It was more the exhibition one would expect from people who had had a night off, as it were. Harewood (73 points) had not quite so good tone in the opening parts. The style was too smooth and the words not clear enough, and the music got a bit unsettled in tone. Naburn (71) had some good tone, especially in the basses. The tenors were a little weak, and the voices got a little mixed. There was some description in the rendering, but really not what the composer intended.

MONK FRYSTON, ABERFORD, HEALAUGH

In the part-song contest for large villages there were eleven entries for the test piece, "The Three Kings" (E. German). The adjudicator said that Wighill, to whom he gave 74 points, had good piece, but the balance was unsatisfactory. The utterance was good. This choir did not do as well as he intended. (Laughter). Terrington (87 points) had very good tone, but was not vigorous enough. The utterance generally was clear. Naburn (93) were the best all-round party, but the pace got a little hurried. The phrasing was very good, and the movement full of meaning—a very good performance. Monk Fryston (80) had very good tone; and good utterance, but the softer phrases were not delicate enough, and the basses were not quite accurate. Everingham and Seaton (77) were not quite accurate in the bass, but the pianissimo was very good. Newton Kyme and Bolby (81) had good tone, especially by the sopranos. Aberford (88), had a good tone and very good utterance. Harewood (84) were also good in tone and utterance. The tenors were not quite accurate, and final bars were not quite exact. Healaugh (86) had very good utterance —that was the striking feature. Their tone was good, but not so full as in the case of some of the other choirs. The special prize for the best conductor rested closely between Naburn (Mr Calvert) and Healaugh (Miss M. Cooke), but generally speaking,

BARKSTON ASH DIVISION LIBERAL ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING AT HALTON.

SLECTION OF OFFICERS—PROSPECTS AND FINANCES.

The annual meeting of Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association was held in the Parochial H.ll, Halton, on Saturday afternoon Mr Martin Harvey (Pr sident) was in the chair, and others present were Mr and Mrs H. Foster, Mrs and Mr W. Sutcliffe (Chairman), Captain Glover (vice-chairman), Mr R. G. Macpherson (hon. sec.), Mr W. G. Smithson (Crossgates), Mr H. Westwood (Cliffhill), Mr Billy (Wetherby), Mr and Mrs J. B. Bevod, Mrs Best, Mr R. Brownridge, Mr Wellock, Mr A. Wellock, Mr A. Goodall, and Mr Fawgill (Scarcroft), Mrs Glover (Collingham), Mrs Wyles (Boston Spa), Mrs Taylor (Selby), Messrs Hyde, Crosthwaite, Robinson, D. Hall, Wolstenholme, Abbott, Brown, and Day, Mrs Holgate (Halton), Mr Hilton (Wetherby), Mr and Mrs G. H. Dickie (Sandal), Mr F. Hartop, and Mr Wood (Crossgates), Mr Green (Roundhay), Mr Allison (East Keswick), Mr Smith (Selby), Mr Alf. Simpson (Barwick), Mr Turpine (Boston Spa), Mr Richardson (Thorner), Mr Garner (Shadwell), Mr Aikin (Collingham), Mrs Taylor (Micklefield), Mr Simpson (Great Preston), Mr Hartley (Scarcroft), etc.

An int resting letter was read from Mr L. J. Dewhirst, C.C. (hon. treasurer), who was absent owing to illness. In the course of the letter he wrote:—

I am thankful that with your fingerel help and assistance we have been able to keep the accounts of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association in a solvent condition. The cause is a good one, and I once more appeal to you to make a fight now to keep the Liberal flag flying in this great Riding. The work had been nearly accomplished, but unfortunately, owing to the sad illness of Mrs Dewhirst, I am unable to keep the Association as solvent as I could wish. As to my report I will show the Association can not be kept going without much financial help, and that during the past five years, although we have not had a Member of Parliament to support, we have always found ways and means to pay our accounts as we go along, and to keep out of debt, which to me, as treasurer, was a very pleasing position.

Other letters were apologising for absence were Mr Walter Thompson (vice-president) and Mr Chas. Cowell (Stanks).

Mr Macpherson, the hon. sec., then read the annual report. He said that during the year death had removed from their ranks several of its "old guard," viz., Mr Sherwood (Boston Spa), Mr Waghorn (Church Fenton), Mrs Dale (Selby), and Mr Richard Humble (Adel), and they were better for the help so generously given by those stalwarts. The organisation, he said, had been considerably improved, the registration work had been carefully handled, and their thanks were due to the agent and those who assisted him. Mr Foster had spoken at numerous meetings in all parts of the Division, and in other ways had endeavoured to educate and win over the electorate to Liberalism. He had been ably seconded by Mrs Foster and the ladies, notably Mr Harvey and Mr Sutcliffe. The report continued:—

The agricultural workers, whose votes have for many years been given in our favour to any large extent, are beginning to take a lively interest in our politics, and are no longer content to remain in a political bondage in the same manner as did of the brewery workers in Tadcaster. The signs of the times are encouraging, and we have every reason to be of good cheer. Considerable industrial developments are in progress which will inevitably strengthen our forces, and if, as we believe, we shall be freed from the plural voter before next election, it's not too much to hope for a victory for Liberalism. We cannot too warmly thank Mr Foster for the great work he has done, is doing, and will do for Liberalism in the constituency. The energy, enthusiasm, and dogged perseverance displayed by him will certainly have a most telling effect when the election comes. His work should be an inspiration to us all. We must lose no opportunity of supporting him in the fight for political equality.

The report was adopted, and, in the absence of the treasurer, Mr W. J. Taylor, the agent, read the financial statement. He stated that the chief items of income were donations £214 1s. 6d., and subscriptions £122 10s. 6d., and after expending the expenditure there was a balance in hand of £46 15s. 8d. There was an increase in donation and subscriptions of £12 as compared with last year. The report was adopted.

The President said that the interest taken in politics was surprising in districts which were thought to be benighted, but it was only when people began to think that Liberalism would come into its own. They were preparing for the next election, and they honestly believed that they could carry the Division them. (Applause.) Mr Foster had been received enthusiastically everywhere. He seemed to have the right ring about him, and the more he mixed among the people the more they were pleased with him. He urged them not to be afraid to stand up for their colours. There was an idea abroad among Tories that if they put up enough bluff and bluster they could frighten people into their way of thinking. They made ridiculous statements, and when they pinned them down they went off on side tracks. They seldom met an out and out Tory who would admit defeat when he was in the wrong. The only thing they could do was to hold them up to ridicule, because it was about the only argument they could understand. He paid a tribute to the work done by the agent, and he complimented the Association on the favourable financial report, regretting that Mr Dewhirst was not present to submit it. He congratulated the members on the healthy condition of the Association, and said he hoped they would go on from one degree of success to another until they returned Mr Foster as Member for the Division. (Applause).

The officers were elected as follows:—President, Mr Martin Harvey, Peckfield Lodge; vice-presidents, Messrs R. H. Barran, M.P., T. E. Harvey, J. P., Tom Wing, M.P., J. H. Armitage W. Aitkin, I. Barden, J.P., R. Bowe, J.P., W. G. Smithson, Walter Cliff, J.P., Joseph Cundall, Lawrence Clayson, J. T. Dodgson, E. Ellis, T. B. Firth, W. Harvey, Joseph Henry, Mark Scott, J.P., P. B. Scott, S. M. Scott, F. G. Simpson, Walter Thompson, G. E. Verity, W. Wilburn, H. Westwood, and W. Wilkinson; chairman, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe, Manston, Crossgates; hon. treasurer, Mr L. J. Dewhirst, C.C., Whinmoor Lodge; hon. sec., Mr R. G. Macpherson. Executive Committee—Messrs Tom Young (Aberford), J. H. Shackleton (Barwick), E. Alcock (Bramham), T. R. Roberts (Haddlesey), Walter Thompson (Crossgates), Blackburn (East Keswick), G. Eden (Hambleton), H. Humpherson (Micklefield), A. Simpson (Great Preston), A. Vollans (Scarcroft), G. Greig Thompson (Shadwell), J. Roberts (South Milford), J. Parker (Swillington), J. Tomlinson (Wistow), Stead (Adel), F. Gabbitt (Boston Spa), E. Dudding (Carlton), A. Deighton (Church Fenton), J. J. Winters (Drax), J. B. Breed (Garforth), E. A. Myers (Harewood), Greaves (Roundhay); G. Dixon (Monk Fryston), J. H. Dixon (Selby), W. Foster (Sherburn), J. Winter (Spofforth), H. H. Blackburn (Thorner). A. H. Baron (Halton), and Electric (Wetherby). Others appointed on the Executive were—Barkston Ash Women's Liberal Association, Miss Morton; Scarcroft and Crossgates Women's Association, Mrs Deakins and Mrs Brady; Boston Spa Women's Association, Miss Sale; Selby Women's Association, Mrs Taylor; Micklefield Women's Association, Mrs Taylor; Templenewsam Women's Association, Mrs Wollands; Roundhay Women's Association, Mrs Hartley; Crossgates League of Young Liberals, Messrs G. Dodd, J. Batty, and J. W. Rayner; co-opted members—Messrs J. H. Cowell, Town Council candidate, Mr Harvey had, he said, been a most genial President, and he had worked admirably. In regard to the Chairman, Mr Sutcliffe had worked very hard, and he was well satisfied with what he had done. As to Captain Glover, he would had been nearly seventy—(laughter)—and they would have missed the amount of subscriptions that had come from Collingthorpe a great deal. He thought the Collingthorpe people were well-to-do through cancer. They could not have a better treasurer than Mr Dewhirst, and Mr Macpherson always did a week of hard. Mr Taylor, the agent, had done well, and had got through an enormous amount of work the members knew nothing about.

Mr Westwood (Cliffhill) seconded, and the resolution was carefully passed.

Mr F. W. Sutcliffe responded, and described some interesting incidents in connection with the campaign in the Division.

Mr E. H. Foster, the prospective candidate, who had a very hearty greeting, made a short speech, and referred to the loss Liberalism had sustained by the death of Mr Humble and Mrs. Dale. He expressed himself self-satisfied with the result of the winter campaign, and said that the meetings had been larger and more enthusiastic than ever. The Liberals of the Division were greatly indebted to the officers, particularly Mr Harvey and Mr Sutcliffe, for the work they had done, and, as he said before, he was not afraid of an election come when it might, but he wanted the Government to pass the Home Rule and Disestablishment Bills and to carry the Plural Voting Bill (Applause).

The delegates were provided with an excellent tea in the Wesleyan Schoolroom, and in the evening a public meeting was held, this being reported elsewhere.

MOTORISTS IN TROUBLE AT WETHERBY.

A BOY'S NARROW ESCAPE.

At the Wetherby Petty Sessions on Thursday several motorists were dealt with on charges of driving at a speed dangerous to the public.

Alfred Angus Scott and Clarence Procter Wood, Bradford, and Oliver Cyril Godfrey and Frank Albert Appleby, London, all motor engineers, were charged with riding motor-cycles at Wetherby on Sunday, April 5th, at a dangerous speed. Two police officers and three civilians estimated the speed of the defendants at from 40 to 50 miles an hour at a very narrow, zig-zaggy entrance to the town at the Harrogate road. They did not sound any alarms when rounding the corners of the road, but fortunately there was no other traffic about. Three of the men were riding abreast. When asked to produce their licences two of the men partially put their hands in their pockets with their hands. The defence was that their speed was not more than eight or ten miles an hour, and that it was absolutely impossible under any conditions to observe the corners at anything approaching a speed of 20 miles an hour. Three of the defendants had been previously convicted. Scott was fined £5, and costs, and the other defendants £3 and costs each.

Edgar Bertie Marsh, chauffeur, Harrogate, was charged with driving a motor-car to the danger of the public at Fishpools Hill, Boroughbridge. A man named Smithson, accompanied by his 13-year-old son, were going up the hill with a horse and cart, and crossed the road for the purpose of easing the horse. All the time, it was alleged, there was room on the off-side of the road for a car to pass, but as the driver was pulling his horse back to the near side of the road defendant attempted to slip through on that side, with the result that the lad was knocked down by the off-side mudguard and the rear wheels of which ran over him. Defendant pulled up and conveyed the boy home, and he had to stay in bed for two days. The defence was that the car appeared to be travelling on the off-side of the road, and that defending on the off-side of the road, and that defending on the off-side of the road, and that defending

MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr. ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7

SATURDAY, MAY 2nd, 1914.

Every year the authorities in the district spend thousands of pounds in fighting infectious disease, and the isolation hospitals at Seacroft, Rothwell, and Garforth, which are maintained by the ratepayers, have been built for this purpose. Isolation is assuredly the only way of stamping out certain diseases, and were it thoroughly carried out greater protection would be given the public, but, incredible as it may seem, while the authorities are doing their best to eradicate disease, there are people, by gross negligence, doing their best to extend its ravages. "Although effective isolation in their own homes is often difficult," says the medical officer of Tadcaster rural district, "many parents make little attempt to keep infectious children apart from others." Not a few people have a strange belief that children must take certain diseases, and consequently they let them run all manner of risks, but it is high time this erroneous notion was exploded. Local authorities have properly prosecuted parents for exposing children suffering from infectious diseases, and this is the only way to bring home to them the seriousness of their offence. It is no use, as some Councils do, sending letters of warning to parents, who are careful not to publish abroad their censure, and the only effective way of bringing offenders to book is to bring them before a public Court. It is recognised that in mild cases it is not always possible to detect disease, and sometimes the complaint is not evident until the period of greatest infection has passed, but when parents know children are suffering, and do not take steps to isolate them they should be punished. Their offence is a very serious one, for they not only are instrumental in spreading disease, and causing suffering and sometimes death, but they put the ratepayers to great expense, doing incalculable harm all round. Authorities sometimes spare offenders, but it is very foolish to do so, and the authorities themselves deserve severe censure. Scarlet fever is spread by infection, although many ignorant people put its spread down to bad drains, and in regard to no disease is more carelessness shown. Children are often sent to school suffering from it, or allowed to play in the streets with other children, and then parents wonder why the disease is spread. When selfish people have the trouble themselves they do not try to safeguard the health of others, yet by not doing so they are causing expense to themselves and their fellow-ratepayers. There is much need for instruction in respect to this question, and when the County Council nursing scheme is in full working order in the towns and villages, it is not improbable that much suffering and expense will be saved.

Family life in the district seems to be growing unpopular, and the medical officers' reports reveal a steady decrease in the number of births. Not many years have elapsed since the movement in favour of smaller families set in, and, although it was expected it would be confined to well-to-do sections of the community, it appears to have been embraced by every class. In Garforth, for example, it was recently stated that the number of scholars was becoming less every year, and this, in face of the increase in population, was inexplicable to many people. Nevertheless, it is true, and the only way in which the growth of population can be accounted for is by the incoming of adults following industrial developments in the district. In Rothwell the number of births last year was the same as ten years ago, although the population had gone up by 2,500, and this is regarded as a somewhat alarming condition. No explanation can get rid of the fact of decreased numbers, and it is obvious that if the figures continue to go the wrong way the school population of the Rothwell area will grow less. The birth-rate for England and Wales in 1913 was 23.9, and for the Tadcaster rural area, extending as it does from the boundaries of Leeds to the boundaries of York, the figures were 24.6. This rate, when compared with that for the whole country, may be regarded with complacency by some people, but it was almost two per thousand less than that of any previous year. For the last five years it was 28, and prior to that it was consistently over 30, so that in less than ten years the birth-rate may have dropped something like eight or ten. The decrease in the larger parishes is apparently not so serious as elsewhere, for the rate in Allerton Bywater was 29.6, in Kippax 29.4, and in Tadcaster 27.6—all above the rate for the district. The rural parishes in the Sherburn sub-district come worst out of the comparison, the rate being 21, while in the rural areas around Tadcaster the figure was 22. It is possible to show where the leakage is greatest, but the movement for smaller families is having its effect in the mining districts, where at one time the rate was about 35. One pleasing feature of some of the districts is the declining death-rate, but the infantile mortality figures are too high. Despite all the expense that the authorities have incurred on improved sanitation, the wastage of child-life goes on, and it is due, in a large measure, to the ignorance and carelessness of mothers, many of whom need either instruction or punishment. It is patent that the efforts of the authorities will not have a full return until the parents play their co-operation. One local Councillor blamed the craze for amusements as being in some degree responsible for infant deaths, stating that parents carried children from hateful atmospheres into the cold of a winter night, and thus placed the little ones in danger of attacks of pneumonia, etc. A large number of deaths last year occurred owing to diarrhœa, and it is probable that many of these children would have been saved had they been properly fed. The infantile mortality for England and Wales was 109, and it may well be asked why it was 216 in Allerton Bywater parish, and only 77 in Tadcaster.

ALLERTON BYWATER

OGGLEDRESS DIVISION.—At a meeting of the Gooll Trades and Labour Council on Thursday evening, a discussion took place over the nomination of a Labour candidate to contest the Osgoldcross Division. The name of Mr George Goodrick, miners' representative, who has recently been addressing meetings throughout the division, was put forward, when there was a surprise nomination, a delegate of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union stating that he had instructions to nominate their leader, Mr J Havelock Wilson. The two names were declared at some length, and eventually it was decided to defer selection until the next meeting of the Council.

A PAINFUL CASE.—The verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind" was returned at an inquest at Castleford on Wednesday on James Queen (58), miner, of 58, William Street, Lock Lane, who was found hanging in his house on Monday. Evidence was stated that her husband was present, and said "the hadn't done anything but knock off." He was not exactly sober." Witness told him she would inform the police. He had admitted scrubbing with the girl before. The Coroner said the fact of Queen hanging himself to evade the consequences of his act would not mean he was of unsound mind.

BOWERS ALLERTON

LECTURE.—Mr J. W. Pearson, of Leeds, gave a lecture on Monday night before a large audience in the Mission Hall. The subject of his discourse was "Some of the Great Statesmen of Methodism," the late Rev. Thomas Cook. Commencing with his boyhood, the lecturer said his hero took life seriously, and at 14 years of age, when he was converted, he commenced his evangelistic work by holding services in his father's house, his brother afterwards a valuable worker in the cause being his first convert. To extend the range of his influence, Mr Cook and a friend made a rough desk, which they carried about the streets, his friend singing and he preaching. Mr Cook in early manhood was a day school teacher, but in 1880, being then 21 years of age, he stood as candidate for the ministry, but owing to certain ideas which he had developed, was rejected. In 1882, however, he entered the ministry. It was as a missioner that Mr Cook made his mark. Mr Pearson remembered his mission at Brunswick Chapel, Leeds, when he converted 100 a night for a night. At a Cornwall mission the vestries had to be enlarged to make room for enquirers. Mr Cook once converted a young lady who was leading a wicked life and recid us life, and that lady afterwards became Mayoress of Bradford, and she opened East-brook Chapel, giving 2,000 guineas on that occasion. Once when Mr Cook was holding a Leeds Mission Station a man entered the waiting room looking rather down-hearted. The rev. gentleman, after much persuasion, was told by the man that his circumstances were pressing him hard, and himself very much and bankruptcy was staring them in the face. Mr Cook happened to know his chief creditor and wrote the man a note asking him to speak to his creditor. He not only forgave his debts, but also set him on his feet again in his business. Mr Cook was the first principal at Cliff College, near Sheffield. He died at the age of 53 on August, 1913.

CARLTON

TEMPERANCE HALL.—The winners of the snooker handicap just concluded at the Temperance Hall are as follows:—1, W. Turpin; 2, Bennett; 3, A. Tate; 4, G. Priestley. Two G. Bradley; 3, A. Tate; 4, G. Priestley. Two prizes were awarded in the domino handicap; the first being won by W. Brook, and the second by G. Ramsden.

CROSSGATES

GOLF CLUB.—Mixed foursomes were played on Saturday, the successful couples being:—1, Mrs. E. N. Thewlis and G. P. Poyser; 2, Mrs. J. Simpson and J. A. Thornwood.

BOARD OF GUARDIANS.—In the distribution of honours at the annual meeting of the Leeds Board of Guardians, Crossgates came in for a pleasing measure of recognition. Mr A. Chadwick was elected chairman of the committee for the boarding-out of poor children, and Mr A. Lee secured the chairmanship of the Contracts Committee.

THE CHURCH.—At a meeting of the communicants in connection with Manston Church on Tuesday night it was decided to increase the membership of the Church Council from nine to twelve. Five members were elected at a previous meeting by the communicants, and the Vicar now appointed Messrs J. Mervyn Wade, Mr Woodhead, and Mr Allanson.

LECTURE.—On Friday evening last at the Crossgates Methodist Church, Whitkirk, a lecture on "Aviation up-to-date" was delivered by the pastor, the Rev. J. Miller Hamilton. Mr Philip Garth presided. The lecture was dealt with the subject in a most interesting and instructive manner, and seventy excellent limelight views considerably enhanced the value of the lecture. At the close the usual vote of thanks was passed on the call of Mr Diggle, seconded by Mr Burrus.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—In connection with Crossgates Wesleyan Church Sunday anniversary a public meeting and prize-distribution took place on Saturday night in the schoolroom—Mr E. E. Broadbent presiding. The Rev. E. Bell gave an address on Sunday school work, and prizes for attendance and conduct were presented to the scholars by Mr H. Nattrass, of New Wortley. A delightful musical programme was rendered, those who took part were Miss Ivy Wood, Miss Hetty Noble, Miss Ethel Holliday, Miss Annie Taylor, and Miss Ethel Lee. The recitation "The Building of St. Sophia" was admirably given by Miss G. Hodgson. On Sunday the special preacher was the Rev. J. W. Legsby, B.A., B.D., and the services were well attended. In the afternoon a "Model Children's service, entitled "Altars and their builders," was given, and Mr F. R. Carlton presided. The scholars rendered the service, which was trained by Miss Popplewell, Miss G. Hodgson, and Mr Dyson. Mr Lightley gave an appropriate and instructive address. The collections on Sunday amounted to £14 9s.

GOLF CLUB.—In the monthly medal competition on Saturday at Garforth the results were —H Sandy, 94, 20, 74; W H Tatham, 103 27, 79; R G Dobson, 91, 14, 77; L P Dobson, 103 26, 77; H F Smithson, 85, 6, 79; J Prime, 105 26, 79; W Smith, 103, 23, 80; C P Denby, 102, 20, 82; W. Tate, 103, 20, 83.

Supt. Vaughan, of Saddleworth, who was for many years sergeant at Garforth, has been promoted to the Skipton division.

MR J. W. DOBSON, on his appointment as Chairman of the Garforth Urban District Council, took his seat on the bench at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday.

NEGLECTING TO EDUCATE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Albert Nicholson, miner, of Garforth, was summoned by Mr H. W. Powell (Clerk to the Garforth Education Committee) for not sending his child regularly to school.

Out of a possible 238 times, the child had only attended school 48. An order for the child to attend school was made.

"It's a FAIR COP."—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Wilfred Smith, a pony driver, of Garforth, was summoned for riding a bicycle without a light on the Leeds and Selby Road, Garforth, on Monday, April 20th. When stopped by P.C. Alborough, who proved the case, the defendant said "It's a fair cop." He was ordered to pay a fine of 2s. 6d. and costs.

CHURCH BAZAAR.—The bazaar held in connection with the Parish Church raised about £100, as reported in our last issue, the opening ceremony on the first day was performed by the Hon. Mrs Lane Fox, and on Thursday afternoon Mrs Wilkinson, of Harrogate, discharged a like duty, there being a good attendance. During the afternoon and evening entertainments were given by Miss V. Dent and others, while the children of the Parochial Infants' School submitted a short programme, containing a flower song, which was nicely done by the elder children. The youngsters once again a pretty picture in a little play, entitled "Bo-Peep." The stall-holders were as follows:—Plain Stall—Mrs Chadwick, and Mrs Short. Fancy Stall—Misses Richardson, Miss Sissons, and Misses Howe. The Teachers' Stall—Teachers of the Sunday School. Surprise Stall —Miss Hebden and Miss Oxtoby. Competition —Miss Hebden and Miss Couper. G.F.S. Stall—Miss Hebden and Miss Bedford, assisted by Mrs E. Hebden. Flower Stall—Misses Denby. Refreshment Stall—Mrs Thompson, Mrs Dent, Mrs. Dimelow, Hebden, and Miss Milnes. Literature Stall—Captain Pakes, of the Church Army.

GREAT PRESTON

AMBULANCE SOCIAL.—A very pleasant evening was spent by a large number in the Infant Schoolroom on Saturday, when a dance was held by the local Voluntary Aid Detachment, kindly lent for the occasion by the brothers Dyer, while the refreshments were arranged for amateur Mr G. Nowell was M.C. The proceeds are for the purpose of helping to stock the emergency stall, over which the men of the Great Preston detachment will preside, at the bazaar to be held in Monk Fryston Park on Saturday.

A DANGEROUS OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Hutchinson, labourer, and Charles Wagstaff, miner, of Great Preston, were summoned for trespassing on the North Eastern Railway. The wives of the defendants were present. The evidence was about 12.40 a.m. on April 12th the men were seen on the line at Kippax, and both were under the influence of drink. An empty coal train was coming from the direction of Castleford, and the men had to be brought off the line into safety. Their attention was drawn to a board warning people about walking on the line. The Bench fined each defendant 10s. and costs.

HALTON

COAL DEALER'S EXCUSE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Broadhead, coal dealer, of Halton, was summoned for keeping a dog without a licence. Defendant said he had been ill and off work for some weeks. A fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

NO DOG LICENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Bernard Crawley, commercial traveller, of Halton, was summoned for keeping a dog without a licence. When called upon on March 2nd by P.C. Stothard, the defendant said he was thinking of doing away with the dog. A fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

KIPPAX

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—Special services were held in this Church on Sunday, and the preacher was Mr G. C. Cookson, of Fairburn. The collections were given to the Wesleyan Local Preachers' Mutual Aid Association.

OSGOLDCROSS UNION AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.—The half-yearly meeting of the Osgoldcross Division Liberal and Labour Association was held at Ponefract on Saturday. Alderman A. Bell (Castleford), vice-president, was in the chair, and Sir Joseph Compton-Rickett, the Member for the division, was among those present. The report, which was considered quite satisfactory, and the financial statement were adopted. The latter showed that a deficit of £4 11s. at the beginning of last year had been increased to £7 7s. Mr F. Andrews was re-elected president, and Alderman Hartley vice-president, with a large executive and general committee. A vote of confidence in the Government was passed and Sir J. Compton-Rickett replied.

FAIRBURN

A marriage has been arranged, and will take place early in July, between Charles Ashforth, son of the late Rev. C. A. Cartledge, and only daughter of Mrs Cartledge, and the late Rev. David Hague, of Harrogate, and Ethel Cooper, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Richard Kemplay Snowdon, vicar of Askham, and Mrs. Snowdon, Headingley, Leeds.

MICKLEFIELD

ACCIDENT.—The final tie for the Deighton Shield, at Tadcaster, on Saturday, the opening teams being South Milford and Wetherby, was marred by a nasty accident. Half-way through the second half Cade (Wetherby's outside left), and Hick (Milford's centre-half) ran into violent collision, with the result that Hick had the misfortune to break right across the shin bone. First aid was rendered on the ground, after which he was carried on a door to the neighbouring barn, where he was seen by Dr Garland, and afterwards removed to the Union Infirmary by motor-car.

MR HARVEY'S VIEWS.—Mr Martin Harvey, of Peckfield Hall, was president of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association, presided at a demonstration at Selby on Thursday night. He said that he had been astonished at the enthusiasm with which Mr Foster had been met throughout the constituency. Why was it? He thought it was because the people were beginning to think for themselves, and to see that when the Liberals got in they always did something. There was only one way in which they could satisfy the Tories just now, and that was to destroy the House of Lords Act, and thus leave the Liberals in the same difficulty as they were in before the passing of that Act. (Hear, hear). But the Liberals were out to get on with business, and that was what they were fighting for ness, and that was what they were fighting for. (Hear, hear).

In the Barkston Ash Division. (Hear, hear).

MOOR ALLERTON

Mr Joshua Bower Brooke, of Moor Allerton, solicitor, who was killed in the hunting field on March 7th, left legacies of £100 each to two clerks, and £50 each to three clerks, f in his service at the time of death. His estate is valued at £28,649.

THE LATE MR J. R. FLITCH.—The death took place on Wednesday evening, at his residence, Uplands, Moor Allerton, of Mr J. R. Flitch, a well-known Leeds magistrate. Mr Flitch, who was in his seventy-first year, was for a number of years head of the firm of J. J. Flitch and Son, Springwell Leather Works, Bushlethorpe, but retired from business some three years ago. Apart from his assiduous attention to his duties as a magistrate he took little part in the public life of the city, but the Tariff Reform campaign found in him an ardent supporter. He was a prominent Wesleyan, and took a keen and generous interest in religious work. Almost since his retirement Mr Flitch was in failing health, and the death of his wife last year was a severe blow. He leaves two sons and two daughters.

QULTON

BOWLING.—On Saturday afternoon Oulton Bowling Club played a team from Altofts in the first round of the Preston Shield Competition, at Oulton. Health of Rothwell Urban Area

THE WASTAGE OF CHILD-LIFE.

MEDICAL OFFICER'S COMMENTS.

Dr. Hugh Stevenson, medical officer of health for Rothwell urban area, in his annual report, states:—The number of houses in occupation in the district at the end of 1913 was 3,004, and taking the number of inhabitants per house to be 4·65, I estimate the population of the entire urban district to be 14,855, showing that the population of the district has increased during the year 1913 by 135 inhabitants.

BIRTHS.

The total number of births registered during the year was 422, comprising 205 males and 213 females. Last year the registered births announced to 393, and for the year prior to that the figure was 350. Of the total number of births, those registered in the sub-registration district of Rothwell, consisting of the North, South, and Stourton wards amounted to 254, of which 130 were males and 124 females. Of the births registered in the sub-registration district of Ardsley, comprising Carlton and Lofthouse with Thorpe wards, amounted to 168, of which 79 were males and 89 females.

Comparing our 1913 figures with those for 1912 we find a difference in favour of this year of 29 births for the entire district; there was an increase of 11 in the Rothwell and Stourton districts, just sufficient to prevent the Lofthouse and Carlton wards, which show an increase of 28 on their previous year's record, from claiming all the credit for the achievement, and of pointing the finger of scorn at their more laggard neighbours in the Rothwell and Stourton wards as being retrograde in that all important feature in the life history of any district, namely, its birth rate.

In spite of the most commendable efforts made by the Lofthouse and Carlton wards to redeem the shortcomings of the rest of the district, thus enabling us to show an increase in 1913 of 29 over the birth figures for the previous year, the lamentable fact that a large district had still remained not ten years ago, with a population 2,500 smaller than it is to-day, we had the same number of births and a distinctly higher birth rate, and that without possible on this state of affairs is that it leaves little scope for self-commendation, and that if this retrograde movement continues for several more generations at the same rate the situation will become one, not merely for comment, but will be one of most serious import. It may, however, be some comfort to those who feel the severity of this criticism to learn that though they may not have done well there are others who have done still less well, as shown by the fact that the average birth-rate during 1913 for England and Wales was only 23·90, against our local figures of 28·40.

The birth-rate of the entire urban district is 28·40 per 1,000 inhabitants, showing a slight advance on the 1912 figure, which was 26·69; the figures for the two years preceding that had been 27·04 and 27·45 respectively. The birth rate for all England and Wales for 1913 is 23·0 per 1,000 inhabitants.

The illegitimate births numbered 16, comprising 6 males and 10 females. Of the total number 11 belonged to the Rothwell and Stourton wards, and 5 to the Carlton and Lofthouse-with-Thorpe ward. The illegitimate births were in the proportion of 1 in 26 of the total births registered as compared with 1 in 30 in 1912 and 1 in 45 in 1911.

DEATHS.

The total number of deaths registered in the entire urban district in 1913 was 214, comprising 114 males and 100 females. Of these 214, the Rothwell sub-registration district claimed 129, 65 males and 64 females, whilst the Ardsley sub-registration district accounts for the balance of 85 deaths, comprising 49 males and 36 females.

In 1912, a year of wet and sunless weather, the total number of deaths registered in the entire urban district was 164, a number appreciably lower than that of the present year, while 1911, a year memorable for heat and absence of rain, was responsible for 220 deaths, 6 more than the present year shows.

The outstanding difference in the list of causes of death" in the two years under question is in the case of deaths from diarrhœa, which disease during 1912, with its low temperature and high rainfall, was practically non-existent, and accounted for only two deaths during the year, while in 1913, as also by the way in 1911, both of which years were characterised by plenty of warmth and sunshine, diarrhœa has shown itself to be one of the biggest contributors to the list of deaths from any cause during these years. This shows fairly conclusively the great part which climatic conditions play in the causation of this disease, and only emphasises what I have so often said in my annual reports when dealing with infantile fevers, a condition closely allied to epidemic diarrhœa.

When we consider that in 1911 no fewer than 21 out of the total number of deaths (England & Wales) from diarrhœa, or due to diarrhœa, of which 17 occurred in children under two years of age, and that in 1913, 19 deaths occurred from this disease (equivalent to 1 death in 11·1 of which no fewer than 15 were those of children under two years old, we cannot but admit that this state of affairs shows a lamentable wastage in child life, and one which is of far too serious a character to be passed over without careful consideration, and as will be seen under my remarks on infantile mortality I am of opinion that while much may be done by Public Health Authorities in removing or ameliorating conditions which materially contribute to the prevalence of this disease, there is at the same time a serious responsibility devolving upon parents in this matter.

Another condition which has been a big contributor to the mortality figures during the past year was diseases of the respiratory organs, 35 deaths being returned as due to pneumonia and bronchitis, which works out at about one death in six as due to these causes. As again bearing upon this question of mortality in young children it is instructive to note that of the 35 deaths during the year from pneumonia or bronchitis, 21 of them, that is 60 per cent., occurred in children under one year of age.

As was also the case in 1912 deaths due to organic heart disease form a large proportion of the total deaths during the year, the proportion being 1 to 6·5 of the total year's deaths, practically the same as in the case of pneumonia and bronchitis.

The only other point which I think merits special comment is this peculiar fact that the cases of deaths from tuberculosis (all forms) disease, which provided 23 deaths during the year, equivalent to 1 death in 9 of the total deaths registered.

DEATH-RATE.

The district death-rate for 1913 is 14·49 per 1,000 inhabitants, compared with 11·14 in the preceding year and with 15·21 in 1911, the average death-rate for the ten years 1903-1912 inclusive was 13·03, so it is seen that our rate this year is higher than the average for the past decade. I find that on only two occasions during the past ten years, namely 1905 and 1904 was our annual death-rate higher than it is this year, though as is shown above our rate for 1913 is not materially above that of the average for the last decade.

A more unsatisfactory feature of the death returns than the mere gross total of deaths or even the gross death-rate, is the fact that in 1913 37 per cent. rather more than one-third of the total deaths registered, were those of children under 5 years of age, as compared with 30 per cent. in 1912 and with 30 per cent. in 1911. This most undesirable proportion of deaths in children will receive considerable attention later on in this report when discussing infantile deaths.

The death-rate for all England and Wales in 1913 was 13·7 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Ten inquests were held during the year 1913, as compared with 6 in 1912.

The causes of death were returned as follows:—Accidentally killed, 4; syncope, 2; heart disease, 1; heart failure while under an anæsthetic, 1; septic poisoning, 1; suicide (drowning), 1.

ZYMOTIC DISEASES.

During 1913 thirty deaths were returned as due to zymotic diseases:—Typhoid fever, 1; measles, 1; scarlet fever, 4; diphtheria, 5; epidemic diarrhœa and enteritis, 19.

During 1912 only 9 deaths were returned as due to zymotic diseases, while 1911 showed 39 such returns.

The zymotic death-rate for 1913, viz., 2.01, shows a considerable advance on that for 1912, which was only 0.61 per 1,000 inhabitants. I find on reference that our zymotic death-rate for this year has been surpassed on only one occasion during the past ten years, namely in 1911, which like last year was characterised by drought and warmth. The rate for all Eng land and Wales for 1913 was 1·26.

An analysis of the causes of those zymotic deaths shows the source of our heavy rate, to no fewer than 19 deaths were returned during the year as being due to diarrhœa and enteritis, while at the same time we have an unusually large number of deaths from scarlet fever and diphtheria, namely four and five respectively.

It is satisfactory to record that although we had during the year a severe outbreak of measles in the North ward we had only one death returned during the year as due to measles, and none at all as due to whooping-cough.

IMPUDENT THEFTS AT GARFORTH

SMART PUNISHMENT

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Reginald Simpson, labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with stealing a gold ring, valued at 15s. 6d., and a Post Office boone safe, and contents, valued at 23s., the property of Sophia Baxter, of Garforth.

Supt. Symonds briefly outlined the details, and said prisoner had stolen the safe under very peculiar circumstances, having first obtained the safe belonging to the prosecutrix, and then having taken one out from the post office and placing this in the drawer from which the first one was taken.

The prosecutrix, a married woman, said that the prisoner had been lodging at her house since January. She had missed the ring in a drawer on April 9th. On Good Friday morning it had gone. Information was given to the police. She now identified the ring, which she valued at over 15s. 6d.

Frank Midgley, a pawnbroker's assistant at Garforth, said that on Thursday, April 9th, the prisoner came into his employer's shop with a ring, which he offered for pledge. When asked if it was his ring, the prisoner said it belonged to his girl. Witness advanced 3s. 3d. upon it.

This concluded the evidence in the first charge, and, in answer to the Clerk, prisoner pleaded guilty.

In giving evidence relating to the second charge, Mrs Baxter said prisoner had seen her drop money into the home-safe, and on one occasion asked where he could get one similar. She told him that he could get one at the post office if he paid a deposit of 3s. Witness related how she had found another safe in the place of her own.

John Hall, sub-postmaster of Garforth, said that previous to Good Friday Simpson came to the office and made enquiry about a home-safe. Subsequently he paid a deposit for one, and the following Saturday Mrs Baxter brought a safe which he (witness) identified as the one which had been stolen to Simpson.

P.C. Hough gave evidence of receiving the prisoner from Selby, when he said he had only taken 3s. from the safe.

Prisoner said he was very sorry and would lead a better life in the future.

The Chairman said this was not the prisoner's first theft, and sent him to prison for two months on each charge, with hard labour, the sentences to run consecutively.

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

HE—TELLS HOW COALS OF FIRE WERE HEAPED ON THE HEAD OF A CRITICAL NEIGHBOUR

"You would have thought," said Patty, "that after I had made such a success Diamond-dyeing my serge skirt and Mrs Finch's silk blouse, I shouldn't have been nervous when it came to helping Mrs Bridges dye a long straight piece of faded linen.

"But you try it yourself—specially if you've got a great big loud-voiced woman fussing around, and hoping you aren't going to spoil her stuff like you spoiled some of your own clothes when experimenting with one-packet-for-everything dyes.

"'We're on sure ground with Diamond Dyes,' I said to her, 'wool dye for woollens, cotton dye for cottons and linens—no hazard whatsoever. And if you had read the Diamond Dye Direction Book the evening gave you when you bought these two three-penny packets of dye you would have known better than to give way to such fidgets.

"I worked on with the dyeing all the time I was talking, and by and by, there was the linen, one solid beautiful stretch of colour hanging out on the line in Mrs Bridges' garden. It had been faded greeny-grey before, and now had dyed it Severn blue and—well!

"When Mrs Hendry, who lives next door to Mrs Bridges, saw the linen made up, she fairly begged me to give her a hand dyeing some lovely Jacquet feathers and sky-blue sash-ribbon to an even shade of elephant grey. I was a bit doubtful about trying feathers; but it was Mrs Bridges herself who declared that if anybody or anything could manage them I and Diamond Dye could."

BARKSTON ASH LIBERALISM.

PRESIDENT AND A PRIZE DONATION INCIDENT.

ADDRESS BY MR PRINGLE, M.P.

MR E. H. FOSTER REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS.

Under the auspices of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association a public meeting was held on Saturday in the Parish Hall, Hatfield. Mr Martin Harvey, of Peckfield Lodge (President of the Association), was in the chair, and he was supported by Mr W. M. R. Pringle, M.P., for one of the Lansdesire Divisions, Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C. (prospective Liberal candidate for the Division), Mrs Foster, Mrs Harvey, Mr F. W. Sutcliffe, Manston (Chairman of the Association), Captain Glover, Cullingham (vice-chairman), and Mr R. G. Macpherson (hon. sec.). There was not a large audience.

The Chairman said that their opponents were such funny people that there was no satisfying them. The Government had tried in all sorts of ways to give them exactly what they asked for, but still they were dissatisfied. The fact had become more were too many Irish representatives in the House of Commons, and the Government introduced the Home Rule Bill, and proposed to cut down Irish representation by something like 10 per cent., but the Tories said they did not want that. They said that they wanted a General Election in order that the electors might show their disapproval of the Government and in particular of Mr Asquith. The Prime Minister, ever ready to oblige, arranged an election, but they did not take him on. (Not a bit.?). He would like to see a very good case against the Tory Party. They had definitely undertaken, if and when returned to power—it was a long time ahead—(laughter)—to consult not our own people, but some of the leaders in foreign countries as to what was the best kind of legislation for this country. Ulster, they were told, declined to be drummed out of the Empire, but if Home Rule was to put Ulster out of the Empire, it stood to reason that all the self-governing colonies were outside the Empire. Yet the Tories, in order to catch votes, had undertaken to consult with the leaders in these colonies, which, according to their own statements, were foreign countries, as to how they would tax the bread and butter of this country. (Applause). The position had only to be thus explained to show the absurdity of their so-called arguments. In the Great Preston district some of the Tory ladies had been going round trying to induce women to sign this so-called Covenant. They carried with them a little flag, and they told the people they wanted them to sign the paper because it meant the preservation of the flag and the prevention of the streets of Ulster running with blood. A large number of women had signed the Covenant on arguments put forward in this way. If that was a fact—and he had it on the authority of persons residing in that district—it was an absolute disgrace, not only to the people directly concerned, but to the Tory Party who were supporting such a thing. (Applause). At the bottom of the Covenant was an attempt to get at the Army in the interests of party politics. (Applause).

Mr Pringle, who is a racy speaker, delivered a lengthy address, confining his remarks exclusively to the Irish question. He said that the Ulster Unionist Council had pretended to set forth in terms of dual the characteristics of a dastardly plot formed by the Government to over-awe Ulster, and the Leader of the Opposition had demanded a judicial inquiry, and a motion had afterwards been carried in the House of Commons, the terms of which he read. He dealt with the measures taken by the Government in Ulster, and stated that they were of a purely precautionary character. He stated that the Unionist Party were in a condition of hysteria. Why had they become so? There was one mischievous man responsible for the panic they were in by the situation. They saw that they were within a few months of the Parliament Act taking effect. (Applause). For the first time they saw the Liberal Party not only in office but in power. If they examined the attitude of the Tory Party with regard to other questions of the day they would be driven to the conclusion that they had cut themselves adrift from all political principles, that they were absolutely destitute of policy, and were also bankrupt in leadership. He believed that at the present time there was no greater benefactor of the Liberal Party than Mr Bonar Law. (Laughter and applause). He would counsel all his fellow Liberals not only to deal charitably and generously with him, but every day they lived they should offer their fervent thanks for his being the leader of the Tory Party, and pray for his long continuance in that position. (Laughter). Mr Bonar Law was suspected of being a Scotsman. (Laughter). He, however, was born in New Brunswick, and he was of North of Ireland extraction. (Laughter). He had spent most of his life, like himself, in the City of Glasgow, and there he was regarded as a successful politician who had retired from business, but in the rest of the country he was regarded as a successful business man who had gone into politics. (Laughter). The more extreme Tories were pressed with his leadership; they were delighted to have a man who spoke with what was described as bluntness and directness—he was not saying what was in his mind—but they were often in a difficulty with their last leader, because he noticed that when Mr Balfour used to indulge in some of his subtle arguments they did not know which way to cheer. (Laughter). There was also a difficulty with Mr Bonar Law. (Laughter). There was a serious side to this question. Long before the Curragh incident speeches were made on Tory platforms regarding what the Army would do in the event of civil war in Ulster, and they could not be construed otherwise than as an encouragement to the Army to disobey the orders which might conceivably be given by the Government of the day. Sir Edward Carson had stated that he had letters from any number of officers in the Army promising that they would not take action against Ulster. He thought they were justified in construing all those statements from Tory platforms as systematic attempt on their part to influence the Army so that if a crisis arose the officers and men would refuse to carry out the orders of the Government. There was only one condition under which they could have a Standing Army in a democratic State, and that was that the officers and men should obey the orders given by the Government, altogether apart from the individual views of the officers and men. (Applause). It was now argued that officers and men could act upon orders according to their own views, but if that was accepted they were no longer a free people. But that was not all. They found this same thing in regard to the Carson movement in Ulster. The implication was that when a minority were forcibly ruled by the majority they were not bound to abide by the result, and not to be satisfied with the ordinary remedies offered to minorities, but to forcibly resist the carrying out of the will of the majority. If they once admitted that any minority was entitled to resist by armed force their democracy was reduced to a mockery and a sham. (Applause). The Tories had tried to use National Insurance and bigotry in Ulster to overthrow the Parliament Act and to place themselves in the government of great mass of the electors cold. They appreciated what had been gained for democracy by the Parliament Act; they regarded it as the charter of democracy. (Applause). The Government had behind them a record of political and social reform unexampled in recent political history, and although they had been in office for nearly nine years, and had fought many strenuous and bitter fights, and carried through much arduous work, their energies were unabated. They were ready to deal with other social problems, and led by the political genius and statesmanship of Mr Asquith—(applause)—they were looking confidently forward to the issue of the next election.

Mr E. H. Foster, who had a capital reception, expressed his regret that Mr Lory Fox, M.P., had had to undergo an operation. (Hear, hear). He had been an absolutely courteous opponent so far as he was concerned, and he hoped they would soon see him back again restored to health and strength. (Hear, hear). He then proposed the following resolution :—

That this meeting thanks Mr Pringle, M.P., for his presence and speech. It expresses its unabated confidence in His Majesty's Government, and warmly supports them in their efforts to pass the Home Rule, Welsh Disestablishment, and Plural Voting Bills into law during the present Parliament, thus clearing the way for important measures of social reform.

He said that he had had serious and rather severe criticism from Mr Lane Fox and Mr Brooksbank, and also from Mr Lee, in a letter which appeared in the "Courier." It appeared that they objected very much to some remarks that he made at Garforth, which were excellently and faithfully reported in the "Courier." He had, however, nothing to withdraw from the remarks he made then. (Applause). Mr Fox and Mr Brooksbank both said they were very much surprised that he, in particular, should have made remarks about the Army because he was a member of the Territorial Association. It was precisely because he was interested in questions affecting the Army, particularly the Territorial Army, that he made the statement. He did not charge the Army into the controversy; it was dragged into the arena of politics by the Tories, and Mr Pringle had shown them how the Tories had encouraged in every way open sedition in the Army. The Army in the main had behaved well, but it was idle to say there had not been exceptions, that communications had not passed between Tory leaders and officers in the Army, and to say there was not an outburst on the part of a small section at the Curragh which was in the nature of a political outburst. They had thrown the challenge down and they (the Liberals) did not hesitate to take it up. He thought it was Mr Lane Fox who said he was about the only Liberal who had ever done anything for the Territorial Army, but he pointed out that Captain Glover, who was on the platform, imperilled his life by serving in South Africa. (Applause). Mr Brooksbank had said that he was an Englishman first and a Tory afterwards, and he quite accepted it. He had nothing to say about Mr Brooksbank—he was a colleague of his on the County Council—except that he was a Tory and a political opponent. What had he to say about Mr Asquith? One would have thought that if there was one man in the political arena to-day who was above all a great Englishman more than a party man it was the present Prime Minister. (Applause). He stated that he was travelling with two well-known Tories in that part of the world, and he was chaffing them about their leader, and he said he did not think much of a party that threw over a man like Mr Balfour, and put Mr Bonar Law in his place. They said they did not think very much of either of them. (Laughter). They said they regarded Mr Balfour as an old woman and Mr Bonar Law as a stop-gap. "Who would you have as leader, then?" he asked. They hesitated, and then they said "We would like your man." (Applause). This was the real opposition when they got behind all the talk in which they indulged.

Dealing with the land question, he said, that he had been criticised for his speeches, and he had been charged with creating discord between masters and men, but there had been a debate in the House of Lords, and they had had a speech from Lord Salisbury on the lines on which he (Mr Foster) had been talking. Lord Salisbury stated in regard to agricultural labourers' wages :—

The Blue Book stated that the average weekly wages were :—In Wiltshire 13s., total earnings, with allowances, 16s.; in Suffolk, cash 12s. 5d., total, 15s. 9d.; in Norfolk, cash 12s. 7d., total 15s. 4d.; in Oxfordshire (the lowest on the list) cash 12s. 11d., total 14s. 11d. Those were very serious figures. The highest, 16s., was a very low figure on which to maintain a wife and family. To that must be added the fact that prices had risen to such an extent that these wages were not so valuable as they used to be.

Afterwards Lord Lucas made a speech, and he said :—

The question of the wages of agricultural labourers was serious. The average of the very highest of 4. In twenty-three counties in England at the present time the total earnings (including harvest money, rent of cottages, etc.), were under 16s., in fifteen counties they were under 15s., in three under 16s., and in one county under 15s. Out of the total number of ordinary labourers no per cent. were earning less than 18s. a week.

Lord Lansdowne he regarded as one of the best and surest speakers on the Tory side, but he did not admire what he said on this question :—

The general position of the agricultural labourer at this moment, far from being, as a general rule, a desperate position, was an extremely hopeful one.

(Laughter.) Why was it hopeful? There was no hope for him. It went from bad to worse until it was taken up by the Liberal Government in their land inquiry. (Applause). He then described what had happened on a great landowner's (Lord Lilford) estate in Northamptonshire. His labourers earned 15s. a week, and they formed a Union just as a Unionist had performed in various parts of Barkston Ash. The labourers got a rise of 1s., and they were told that if they did not cease being members of the Union they would lose the rise. That kind of thing at this time of day was absolutely intolerable. He was determined to go on with this campaign, and having started, he would not be turned back. (Loud applause).

Mr J. Batty seconded, and the resolution was cordially passed.

Mr Pringle replied, and, on his call, a vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman.

Mr and Mrs Samuel Laycock, of Templ Hirst, Selby, have celebrated their golden wed ding.

CRICKET NOTES.

BARKSTON ASH CRICKET COMPETITION.

The Barkston Ash League season opens on May 9th, and Mr E. D. Dawson, the energetic hon. sec., has made all the necessary arrangements. He has just issued the League handbook, and no cricketer in the district should be without one. It extends to 64 pages, and contains, besides the rules and fixtures, a mass of information of a purely local character which should be of utmost value to exponents of the game. The records have been brought up-to-date, and the handy little book should have a large circulation in the district.

CHURCH FENTON CRICKET CLUB.

Owing to the unfortunate existence of two Clubs in the village, the above club desires to enrol unattached players, residents in the Barkston Ash Division, as members. Good ground, and pavilion. Batting, bowling and fielding prizes. Hospitality. Write Mr A. B. Hoggarth, The Laurels, Church Fenton, Leeds.—Advt.

SCALBURY DEFEATED BY CROSSGATES WES.

Not a fifth interest was manifested in the game between Scacroft and Crossgates Wes. at Old Manston on Saturday. The ground eleven scored 90, Mr Wm. Goodlass and Mr Vendley Beaumont doing well, and Scacroft were got rid of for 58, H. Toft being top scorer. The scores were:—Crossgates Wes.—E. Webster, c Stead, b Toft, 22; P. Binns, bowled, 8; Umpleby, run out, 0; T. Yeadon, b Pickersgill, 16; E. Mills, c Toft, b Stead, 2; P. Coultas, b Stead, 11; A. Withy, b Stead, 4; A. Beaumont, b Lindley, 11; W. Goodlass, b Stead, 24; Geo. Mills, b Taylor, 1; G. Williams, not out, 2; extras, 8; total, 92. Scacroft—T. Toft, c Beaumont, b Coultas, 3; G. Thompson, b Beaumont, 6; P. Taylor, b Coultas, 0; H. Toft, b Binns, 7; H. Toft, c and b Binns, 15; H. Atack, b Umpleby, 5; Pickersgill, c Beaumont, b Umpleby, 2; E. Guest, b Webster, 2; J. Lindley, b Umpleby, 6; E. Lindley, not out, 4; A. Marshall, run out, 2; extras, 3; total, 58.

In the game between Scacroft A. and Crossgates Wes. A. on the Green at Scacroft, the homesters did better than the scores, but they failed to effect a win. They rattled up 126, B. Johnson, P. Taylor, Smith, and Hunter having the honours, and Crossgates put on 68 for 7 wickets, Heath and C. Brook batting well. The scores were :—Scacroft—P. Taylor, b E. Beaumont, 22; C. Avison, b C Brook, 0; F. Derwick, b C. Brook, 0; E. Hunter, b C. Brook, 10; C. Parkinson, b J. Selman, 13; J. Dennell, b E. Beaumont, 42; B. Johnson, b Selman, 34; J. W. Smith, not out, 16; J. Hepworth, b C. Brook, 8; J. Hardy, b C. Brook, 3; S. Ball, b E. Beaumont, 1; extras, 5; total, 126. Crossgates Wes.—C. Brook, b Ball, 18; H. Brook, c Hardy, b Derwick, 0; F. Hewitt, b Ball, 19; H. Thompson, run out, 9; E. Beaumont, run out, 8; A. Brook, not out, 5; H. Rodgers, c Dennell, b Parkinson, 0; E. Walker, c Derwick, b Johnson, 0; extras, 9; total (for 7 wkts.), 68.

SOUTH MILFORD V. WHITKIRK.

Whitkirk went to South Milford on Saturday afternoon, and although the sides were not at full strength, some interesting cricket was seen. Milford were dismissed for 65, Rombottom claiming 6 wickets for 25, and the batting honours went to A. Atkinson, W. Dale, and Lindley. The feature of the Whitkirk innings was the batting of W. Cuttle, who played well in the second for a stop-gap. He was in fine form, and made 41. Whitkirk's total was 114 for 8 wickets, and A. Shepherd, Loveday, and Haigh contributed substantially to the total. Scores:—Milford—H. Atkinson, run out, 9; J. Rowell, b Romford, 0; T. Atkinson, b J. Shepherd, 0; J. Hodgson, b Romford, 4; A. Atkinson, run out, 13; A. Lindley, run out, 10; H. Hodgson, c and b Haigh, 1; J. Fewdrey, b J. Shepherd, 0; W. Wynans, b Romford, 4; W. Dale, not out, 11; J. Harrison, c and b Romford, 4; Hudson, run out, 5; R. Dale, b Romford, 11; extras, 8; total, 65. Whitkirk—W. Cuttle, c Lindley, b W. Cuttle, c Atkinson, b Hudgson, 41; H. Nowell, run out, 1; F. Loveday, b Lindley, 14; J. Shepherd, b Lindley, 9; C. Harrison, b Lindley, 2; S. Haigh, b Hodgson, 16; W. R. Bates, run out, 8; extras, 13; total (for 8 wkts.), 114. Declared.

KIPPAX V. OULTON.

On Saturday afternoon Kippax first eleven played Oulton at Kippax, the scores being as follows :—Kippax—W. Lloyd, b Copp, 10; E. Bickerdike, b Walker, 0; H. Bickerdike, c Copp, b Walker, 0; J. Chew, b Walker, 0; S. Edwards, c H Butler, b Copp, 4; E. Plows, b Walker, 0; A. Cripwell, b Walker, 3; H. Limbert, b Walker, 3; Albert Cripwell, b Copp, 0; G. Cripwell, b Copp, 0; J. Bickerdike, not out, 0; extras, 3; total, 24. Oulton—H. J. Butler, c Chew, b A Cripwell, 0; B. Chappell, b A. Cripwell, 0; P. Butler, b Bickerdike, 0; R. Higgins, b A. Cripwell, 15; P. C. Higgins, b Lloyd, 12; J. E. Jackson, flw, b Bickerdike, 3; R. V. Higgins, b Bickerdike, 0; S. Pulfreeman, b Lloyd, 1; C. Higgins, not out, 4; B. Walker, c and b Lloyd, 2; W. Lloyd took five wickets for 10 runs, and A. Cripwell took three wickets for eight runs, Bickerdike three wickets for three runs, and W. Lloyd two wickets for five runs.

SATURDAY'S MATCHES.

Crossgates will be at home to Garforth, and Crossgates A. will be at Farnley Ironworks A. on the ground of the latter. Boston Spa will have Gloss Houghton as visitors, and Boston Spa A. will tackle the United at Clifford.

FIRST CASE UNDER NEW ACT.—At Selby, on Monday, the first case under the new Mental Deficiency Act arose on an application by Mr Nowman, representing the Education Committee of the West Riding County Council, that a boy named George William Friend, aged ten years, the stepson of a man named Wilson, of Millgate, Selby, should be sent to a special institution. It was stated that the boy had given a great deal of trouble to his mother by reason of his petty pilfering. The case was adjourned for the stepfather to attend.

MYSTERY CLEARED UP.—A year ago last October Mr William Tookie, of Leeds, secretary of the Yorkshire Mineral Water Manufacturers' Association, disappeared from his home in Reservoir Street. It was stated at the time Reservoir Street. It was stated at the time that he had been seen in Roundhay Park, and it was thought he may have been drowned in the Lake there. Diligent search was made, but without avail. The original fears, however, turned out to have been well founded, for on Monday, after eighteen months, the body was recovered from the big lake. It was seen by a man walking by the edge of the water, and was, of course, in a very decomposed condition. The son, however, was able to identify it, with the help of the property found in the clothing—a knife, a pair of eye-glasses and a key.

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS.

By MRS. L. T. MEADE

Author of "The Orchid Room," "The Medicine Lady," "From the Hand of the Hunter," "His Massol," "Little Wife Hester," &c.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS:—The story opens at Connop Grange, the charming country residence of Paul Colthurst, to all appearance a very wealthy man. The relationship at the Grange is somewhat peculiar. Both Paul Colthurst and his wife have been twice married. Peter Colthurst is Paul's son by his first marriage, while Pamela Jessop is Mrs. Colthurst's daughter by a former marriage. Peter and Pamela are deeply in love with each other, and one night they gleefully proclaim the fact that they are engaged. Paul Colthurst and his wife are delighted at the news, and Paul tells his son that Walter Colthurst, a relative of his, had long years before arranged that the young couple should marry when they came of age; if they didn't, then things would be very much different at Connop Grange. Their fortune would go elsewhere. Peter learns this with much amazement, and endeavours to hide the fact that the marriage, having been planned, takes the romance off the scene. While they are speaking, a caller—Miss Patricia Ransome—is announced. Paul shows great concern on hearing the name of his visitor.

It appears that Peter is not Paul Colthurst's son. Patricia Ransome's mother had been the lad's foster-mother, and Paul had taken the boy and passed him off as his own. Patricia warns Paul that a Mr. Oswalds are in London making inquiries about old Walter Colthurst's will. The Oswalds succeed to the Colthurst money in the event of Peter and Pamela not marrying.

Paul reports that he had been summoned to the deathbed of his cousin, Walter Colthurst. The old man asks about Paul's son and Paul, mindful of the promise he had made to the boy's mother, says that Peter is his own boy.

At Patricia Ransome's request Paul takes Peter and Pamela on a visit to London, so that they might call on Miss Patricia in due course of the visit, as she is afraid that the Oswalds may discover the identity of her guests.

The Oswalds stumble across the fact that Patricia's friends are the fortunate ones under Sir Walter Colthurst's will. Pamela is greatly taken with Patricia, and asks her down to Connop Grange for a short stay. Patricia consents, as she wants to be near Peter.

CHAPTER X.

Thomas Oswald turned to talk to his neighbour. "As I was saying, Miss Patricia—"

"Yes?" said Miss Patricia.

"I have discovered by the most lucky fluke the names of your guests. They are people I am specially interested in. They live at Connop Grange, and the young people are engaged. Now, you clearly understand me—may I speak to you in a whisper?"

"Oh, if you wouldn't speak at all at present!" said Miss Patricia, in a voice of almost agony. "I—I beseech of you, not now, not before others!"

"Why not before others? I assure you my young people are absolutely delightful. Mrs. Jessop Perkinses, and Mrs. Luck, are naturally, would not be. Mrs. Luck if she listened to what we were about for her to hear. As a good friend—Miss Ransome—I intend to put a spoke in that young man's wheel. It is quite time, in the interest that he should marry that pretty young girl. Far from that, I observed to-day—I have a great deal of observation, Miss Ransome—"

"Indeed you have, Mr. Oswald; I have always noticed that."

"Thank you, Miss Ransome, thank you. It is nice to be appreciated. I appreciate you, Miss Ransome; I do, most truly. Well, being a person of observation, I noticed to-day that my boy, my young Tom (as fine a fellow as ever breathed, with the heart of the lion and the sinews of the oak), I saw him sak—sen, the heart of the oak), I saw him looking at that young girl. According to the will, if the said young man's nuptials should, he gets ten thousand pounds. Miss Ransome, she shall marry my boy, Tom Oswald, and—if I can help it—I will be arranged, it may be arranged, I don't see why it shouldn't be arranged—Laura can marry Peter Colthurst. There! There's my little scheme. I have it as pat as pat. I am going to see Paul Colthurst; he cannot refuse me admission—his own distant cousin, indeed—he will invite us all to stay at Connop Grange. I am delighted—delighted. Miss Ransome, I feel a little faint. I should marry that pretty young girl. Far from that, I observed to-day—I have a great deal of observation, Miss Ransome—"

"Indeed you have, Mr. Oswald; I have always noticed that."

"Thank you, Miss Ransome, thank you. It is nice to be appreciated. I appreciate you, Miss Ransome; I do, most truly. Well, being a person of observation, I noticed to-day that my boy, my young Tom (as fine a fellow as ever breathed, with the heart of the lion and the sinews

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week the revue, "Hello! Everybody!" is an exceptionally bright and amusing show. From start to finish it gives with a rare swing; the book-is unusually capable and well trained, the principals are well above the average, the whole is beautifully dressed and delightfully staged, and above all the revue is entirely free from suggestiveness or bad taste. Much credit for the success so far must undoubtedly belongs to Mr George Clarke Newell, "H.M.S. Impossible!!!" The authors are Messrs Ray Waters and Fred Bowyer, who describe "H.M.S. Impossible!!!" as being three encounters with many perils. Orlando Pow II is responsible for the incidental music. While Leopold Bywaters is the producer. The cast is as follows:—Jo Tubbs, Arthur Roberts; "Capt. Gascoigne," Jack Pogey; "Uncle Lord Boodle," Percy Cahill; "Violet Renfrew, Finesse Bond; "Sadie Renfrew," Dolly Nellie Townsend; and "Aunt Tabitha," Dolly Vernon. The Leslie Stone Troupe of English dancers, and the London Beauty Chorus, supplement d by a full company of supernumeraries, give an idea of the quality of the production. A word should be said about the scenic effects, which are contained in three scenes, the first of which is the exterior of the Atlantic Restaurant; the second the deck of "H.M.S. Impossible," the second the deck of "H.M.S. Impossible," and scene 3 should be left to the public curiosity. The other attractions are very numerous, including such fine performers as the Federsel Bros., comedy aerial artistes, featuring the famous "Pederson Trick"; Rasford and Valentine, the jesting jugglers and maniacs of mirth; Ida Barr, a charming comedienne; Dore Duquesne, a wonderful juvenile entertainer; Drew and Alders, comedians; and that bunch of conticality, Harry Levaine.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week Mr Harry Burns is presenting his latest revue "They're Off." Good singing, superb dresses, and gags innumerable—mostly political—mark the principal features of this latest revue, while that popular comedian, Tubby Edlin, first as Boatman Bill, then as a waiter, is ever in the thick of it with his sparkling humour. Miss Bessie Burke, as the English girl, renders her songs in charming style, as does Miss Betty Bernard, in the role of an American visitor. The chorus are also deserving of special mention. Among the other turns in the bill, that supplied by the Maximo starts alone. Nothing approaching the eccentricities of this Cuban wonder upon the slack wire has been seen in Leeds for some time, how he manages to maintain his balance when in a state of seeming intoxication being remarkable. The Romps, eleven in all, give a sparkling vocal entertainment, and Prof. Will Ward's provides plenty of humour in his ventriloquial conversation with his college chum, "Ted," whilst Arthur Page creates plenty of laughter in his patter about "Four John Jo's." Fred Lincoln is also appearing.

Next week at the Hippodrome the principal attraction will be "Town Talk," a revue with a reason, and among the artistes engaged are Sandford and Lyons, Arthur Reece, Miss Bella Hare of Bells and Bijou, Barrett and Kilowles, Dave O'Toole, Eight Sunstars, etc. Others in the bill are Sammy Shields, the football comedian; Dolly Ross, comedienne; and Campbell and Barber, the comical wheelmen.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE

At the Queen's Theatre this week the stage is occupied by Charles Darrell's thrilling drama "The Eyes of the World," in which the part of Helene is being taken by Miss Ethel Vas Praugh. This lady had the misfortune to break a muscle of the leg in an accident last week, and acted a trying part very bravely on Monday, with the help of a walking stick. Her disability, indeed, served to invest her role with an added touch of pathos, and in response to the chickelous applause of the house at the afternoon matinee, she appeared before the curtain and made a little speech, explaining her stroke of bad luck, and thanking her friends for their kind consideration. On Friday Miss Van Prough will play Camille in "The Queen of the Camellias."

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Mr and Mrs Vaughan's Company will appear in the new original western romantic play, entitled "The Prairie Outlaw." Mr Norton Shield will take the part of "The outlaw," Mr Ernest Vaughan that of "Sheriff Hawkins" and Miss Mabel Douglas that of "Morita."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties an excellent bill of fare has been submitted, and Darnelle, in his novelty, Impos sible Solutions, puzzles the audience by the final stage trick. Another of his many ingenious achievements. Another good turn is supplied by Campbell and Brady, those smart club jugglers being neatly and effectively executed. Della and Pley cause plenty of amusement in their acrobatic boxing bout, while the Four Boob Bros give a first-class vocal entertainment, each being possessed of a pleasing voice. Other attractive items are supplied by the Two Weymans, in a refined and up-to-date dancing act, and Carl Osmonde, styled the Welsh nightingale.

Next week at the City Varieties Charlie Bell will submit the farcical absurdity "The Demon Photographer," and he will take the part of "Bobby Boom." Other turns in the bill are Wilton Wharton, magical humourist and card specialist; Lily Hill, the Lancashire vocalist; Hal Bryan, versatile comedian; The Seymours, comedy equilibrists, and Norman Osborne, in the ventriloquial fishing scene, "Watch his line." "Shadows" and "Across the Alley" will be the pictures shown.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

A "star" attraction for the first half of the week at the Theatre de Luxe was "A Romance of Old Brittany." This film was beautifully coloured and admirably produced, the powerful acting and splendid views being a great feature. An old favourite reappears in "Nick Winter and the Border." "A Child's Burden" was a fine dramatic study, and "Willies' Twin" and "A Bad Game" provoked hearty laughter. "The Convict's Son" is the premier film for the end of the week, and Mr Dixon will be screening on Monday next a thrilling Boer War film, 5,000ft. long for which he has secured exclusive rights for Leeds.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Guardians' Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon, the Chairman (Sir F. Hannay) presiding. Other members present were: Dr E. Groves, Father T. Iles, Messrs J. Butterick, W. Schofield, T. G. Cody, Messrs J. Butterick, W. Schofield, T. G. Conyers, D. W. Hargreaves, E. S. Marsden, G. Armitage, J. Gaskin, W. Verity, J. Flanagan, Armitage, J. Gaskin, W. Verity, J. Flanagan, J. R. Chappell, J. Bannister, H. J. Pulford, W. A. Appleyard, E. B. Pickersgill, W. Lunn, W. Steaf, W. Hemingway, G. W. Peace, and J. Steaf, W. Hemingway, G. W. Peace, and J. W. Verity, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Mee).

It was moved by Mr J. Butterick, and seconded by Mr T. Conyers that Mr T. Thomas be re-elected as Chairman of the Board for the ensuing year. Mr J. Gavins supported the re-election, which was carried.

On the proposition of Mr Conyers, seconded by Mr Appleyard, and supported by Father Cody, Mr Gavins was elected vice-chairman.

Mr Thomas and Mr Gavins replied. The latter remarked that he thanked the Board for the honour which they had conferred upon East Hunslet, as it took it more as an honour upon the ward than upon the person. No doubt the Chairman would find him a very willing vice-chairman, and a courteous one too, chairman, and a courteous one too, but whether he would always find him an obliging vice-chairman he could not say. He obliging vice-chairman he could not say. He knew he had a certain amount of temperament which he supposed he was born with, and which he could not perhaps eradicate, but from his (the chairman's) knowledge in years gone by of his temperament it would somewhat ease the matters if they did not see eye to eye. For the remainder his services were at the disposal of the Board so far as he could promise them.

The minutes of the Children's Homes Committee, held on April 20th, were passed. The minutes showed that out of the three selected candidates for the appointment of relief foster mother, Mary Isabella Rutherford, Alfreton, was chosen for the position.

The Clerk reported that on account of the recent coal strike he had deemed it advisable to take advantage of the offer made to the Workhouse Committee, and to order five tons of Newmarket cobbles coal from Messrs H. Beggs, Son, and Co., Ltd., at 22s. 3d. per ton delivered, to take the place of an unexecuted order for that quantity from Mr Phillips.

The Clerk's action was approved.

A letter was received from the Hunslet Medical Charities Committee giving an invitation for the children to visit their carnival in June.

It was resolved that the invitation be accepted for children over seven years of age on the usual conditions, viz., that conveyances and refreshments are provided, that the children are present in charge of two officers, that they are not taken round in the procession, and that they leave the ground not later than 9 o'clock p.m.

On the proposition of Mr Schofield and seconded by Mr Stead, a vote of thanks to the Chairman of the Committee (Mr Bennett) was passed. A similar vote was accorded Mr Chappell for the way in which he had supported the Chairman, on the motion of Mr Bennett, seconded by Mr Appleyard.

The report of the Permanent Relief Committee concerning the revision of out-relief regulations was considered at some length. The proposed revision would mean an increase of about £4000 to be distributed.

Mr Schofield, as Chairman of the Committee, in placing the minutes before the Board, deplored the poor attendance of members of the Committee, and called attention to a sentence preceding the proposed revision as follows:—"Owing to the paucity of the attendance referred to, many of the resolutions have been arrived at on a small vote, and by very slight majorities, and it is not intended to suggest that they all command the approval of the majority of the Committee." Mr Schofield said he was of the opinion then that relief as it was to-day was quite reasonable, and the best thing the Board could do was to vote against the minutes.

Mr Lunn said in that case he would move them.

Mr Hemingway seconded.

An amendment moved by Mr Gavins to the effect of reducing a portion of the proposed revised scale fell to the ground for the want of a seconder.

Mr Butterick argued that the Guardians should not make any regulations governing relief as it would only tie their hands in deserving cases. Each case, he said, should be considered on its merits.

Finally an amendment by Father Cody, that the matter be referred back to the Committee, and be brought up in a much better form for consideration by the Board was carried.

The following were elected on the Finance and General Purposes Committee:—Messrs Butterick, Gavins, Appleyard, Hargreaves, Schofield, Stead, Thomas, Verity, J. W. Verity, and E. B. Pickersgill; Workhouse Committee—Messrs W. Verity, Conyers, Hargreaves, Groves, Peace, Stead, Pulford, Appleyard, Hemingway, and Mrs Dickenson; Children's Homes Committee—Messrs Butterick, Bennett, Chappell, Appleyard, Stead, Lunn, J. W. Verity, Bannister, Groves, and Mrs Dickenson; Vaccination Committee—Messrs Chappell, Stead, Appleyard, Schofield, Bennett, Bannister, Peace, Lunn, Hemingway, Pulford, and J. W. Verity.

The Chairman and vice-chairman and Mr Butterick were elected chairman of the three respective rotary relief committees.

VESTRY MEETING.—On Thursday evening the annual vestry meeting was held in the vestry of South Milford Church—the Rector presiding. There was a very small attendance. Mr Barry Thorp was appointed Mr J. T. Jackson again as his appointed Mr J. T. Jackson again as his warden. The church accounts were explained by Mr Jackson, who stated that the offertories had improved, and there was a balance in hand of over £4—Mr Wm. Stainburn was again elected people's warden. Dr. Radcliffe, Mr W. Morris, and Mr J. T. Jackson were appointed to represent the Diocesan Conference. Sidesmen were appointed as follows:—Messrs Hy. Hodgson, Hy. Sherwood, Hy. Green, Wm. Townsend, Alfred Johnson, James Wise, James Terry, Thomas Wm. Garnett, Wm. Morris, Albert Stainburn, Thos. Baker, and M. Sissons.

A SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER.—At a special Court held at Sherburn on Monday—before Rev B. Hemsworth (Chairman) and Mr Wm. Crosland—James Plunkett, labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with being on enclosed premises with intent to commit a felony no 25th ult at South Milford. P.C. Parkinson stated he was on duty in the village of South Milford about 11.30 p.m. on the 25th April, when he heard a noise in the gardens of "The Terrace." In the front garden he found prisoner looking through a window of one of the houses. He asked him what he was doing there, and he replied that he wanted to be at Knottingley. He afterwards said he wanted to be at York. He could not give any satisfactory account of himself, so he took him to Sherburn Police Station and locked him up. The prisoner was sent to gaol for a month.

Selby's second military Sunday and parade will be held on June 21st.

Only two cases were down for hearing at Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday.

The Rev. B. Hemsworth, of Monk Fryston, performed the opening ceremony at the new Church Rooms at Castleford on Wednesday.

LEEK OMELETTE.—Take six eggs, one and a half ounce of butter, one tablespoonful of grated cheese, salt and cayenne, one tablespoonful of milk or cream, two small leeks, well washed, trimmed, blanched, and stewed till tender in brown sauce. Break the eggs into a basin, add the cheese, sufficient salt and cayenne to taste, and the milk or cream; beat well to amalgamate the yolks and whites of the eggs and other ingredients. Cut the cooked leeks into slices, and keep hot in a small stewpan, with just enough sauce to moisten. Melt the butter in an omelette pan; when thoroughly warm (not too hot) pour in the egg mixture, and stir over a bright fire until the eggs begin to set. Shape quickly into the form of a cushion. Place the cooked leeks in the centre, and fold in the ends. Allow the omelette to take colour; then turn out on a hot dish, pour a little brown sauce round the base of the dish, and serve quickly.

APPLE SNOW.—Take two good cooking apples, pare, quarter, and core them, and place them in an enamelled saucepan with just as much cold water as will cover the bottom. Cover closely, and cook gently by the side of the fire until the apples are quite soft, then, after draining, well beat to a smooth pulp, and sweeten to taste. Whip the white of a fresh egg to a very firm froth, and mix it lightly with the apple when cold. Should the flavour be liked, a little strip of lemon-rind may be cooked with the apples, but care must be taken not to serve any of it.

KEEN cyclists naturally prefer those cycle tyres which yield them the most profitable return:

MICHELIN Cycle Tyres.

The explanation of this exceptional value is very simple: Michelin quality is not surpassed by that of the highest-priced cycle tyres, while Michelin prices for a Roadster Cover, any size, are

8/- Wired 8/6 Beaded

Other manufacturers are forced to higher prices by the greater cost necessarily incurred by the production of several qualities. Michelin prices are what they are, simply by virtue of the enormous Michelin resources and the cost-saving Michelin policy of producing

One Quality Only—the Best.

TUBES.

Why buy two new tubes at, say 3/6 each, for every Cover? A Michelin Red Rubber Tube at 5/6 will outlast two covers, and save you 60%.

TO MOTOR CYCLISTS.

The Michelin "Light" Cover is essentially the cover for "Lightweights" Side-Cars and front wheels of heavy machines. Price of the 26 x 2 B.E. (1419), is lighter than the "lightweight" for which it is specially designed. Can be obtained in all sizes at proportionately low prices from any of the undermentioned Agents.

GARFORTH, LUMBY, MILFORD, MICKLEFIELD CASES.

At Sherburn Petty Sessions on Thursday the magistrates present were Col. Gascoigne, D.S.O. (Chairman), Rev B. Hemsworth, Messrs Walter Crosland, Wm. Crosland, H. S. Childe, and F. G. Lund.

The following rates were allowed:—South Milford, poor rate, 1s. 10d. and 11d., and special rate 8d.; Fairburn, poor rate, 2s. and 1s., and special rate, 4d.; Huddlestone-cum-Lumby, poor rate, 1s. 10d. and 11d.; Hillam, poor rate, 2s. and 1s. 2d.; Monk Fryston, poor rate, 2s. 4d. and 1s. 2d.; Barkston, poor rate, 2s. and 1s.; and Church Fenton, poor rate, 1s. 10d. and 11d.

FENTON, GARFORTH, MICKLEFIELD CASES.

George Sykes, butcher, of Church Fenton, was charged with failing to deliver up a swine movement licence on the 17th ult. Fined 1s. and 7s. 6d. costs.

Ernest Roberts, pony driver, of Garforth, was charged with riding a bicycle without a light on the 15th ult at Ledston. Fined 6d. and 7s. 6d. costs. Louie Atack, single woman, of Micklefield, was charged with a like offence on the 15th ult., on the North Road, Micklefield. Fined 6d. and 7s. 6d. costs.

George Lupton, shunter, of Lumby, was charged with having no control of a dog after sunset on the 10th ult, on the York Road, Lumby. Fined 1s. and 7s. 6d. costs.

ABERFORD YOUTHS IN TROUBLE.

Alfred Dodd, Robert Gatenby, George Parkinson, John Richardson, Walter Scott, John Barrett, Edward Wilson, Walter Dickinson, Ben Dickinson, and Alvara Jowett, hurriers, of Aberford, were charged with wilful damage to windows at a house belonging to Col. Gascoigne, on the 8th ult. at Saxton. Col. Gascoigne retired from the Bench in this case. Mr C. Kemp appeared for the prosecution. All the defendants pleaded guilty. Mr Kemp said the damage was £4 5s. Mr T. H. Prater said he had seen the house, which was badly damaged. P.C. Cooper stated he had made enquiries, and saw all the defendants, who admitted the offence, and said they all had a "go" at the empty house at Saxton. Each defendant was fined 5s. and 5s. 6d. costs, and 8s. 6d. damages.

LANGUAGE AT MILFORD.

Bernard Randall, of Catsyke, Henry Jarrett, of Whitwood, and George Westmorland, of Ghaw Houghton, pony drivers, were charged with using obscene languages on the 19th ult, at South Milford. P.C. Holliday proved the case. Defendants were on bicycles, and he followed them to Sherburn on his bicycle, and caught them. He had difficulty in one case to get defendant's name. Sydney Cope, of Sherburn, said he heard filthy language used by defendants when passing at South Milford. Each defendant was fined 10s. and 0s. 6d. costs.

Thomas R. Bentley, miner, of Glass Houghton, was charged with using bad language on the 19th ult. at South Milford. Fined 10s. and 9s. 6d. costs.

TRESPASS AT NEWTHORPE.

Bartholomew Brown-Ellis, quarryman, of Newthorpe, was charged with trespass in pursuit of game on the 12th ult, at Newthorpe. Mr C. Kemp appeared for the prosecution. John William Braithwaite, game-keeper, stated he was watching at 5.10 a.m., and saw defendant hide a rabbit out of a snare in a hedge. The defendant denied the offence, and said there was no notice-boards up. Fined 2s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. costs.

William Roberts, miner, and Joseph Smith, labourer, both of Castleford, were charged with trespass in pursuit of game on the 7th ult, in Fairburn Ings. Fined 2s. 6d. and 9s. 6d. costs.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Should not there be some similarity in fines imposed by magistrates for offences of the same kind? At Tadcaster, I notice, a man who forgot to purchase a dog licence was ordered to pay 1s. and costs, and at the Skyrack Court at Leeds persons who overlooked Tower's contribution to imperial needs were mulcted in 7s. 6d. and costs. At Sherburn the charge for cycling without a light is 6d. and costs, and at the Skyrack Court 1s. and costs, so it would appear that in the Leeds district, where wages are better, the prices even in police courts are higher. This, however, is not fair, and it would be better were a scale of charges fixed for the Ridding for first offences, and so on, so that there would be a similarity of punishment for all residents.

Justices will very likely say that this is an impossibility, but would a magistrate to have charge of the work in the district would not the punishment for offences be somewhat similar in every division? Unlike many people, who have no experience of Court work, I think the local magistrates do very well, indeed, and it is rarely that they wrongly convict persons, but in the matter of fines I think there is room for alteration, so that all districts would be placed on a common footing.

A reader wants to know why Scholes children are allowed to attend Manston School, seeing the scholars from the Templenewsam side have been turned out. I cannot enlighten him. Old Manston children are, I understand, still going to Manston School, and it would seem as if Leeds Education Authority, knowing there is sufficient school accommodation on the other side of the railway, did so for the sake of the scholars' convenience there. Some of the parents were very much annoyed about the new rule, but it has been expected for a long time, as the accommodation at Manston School was overcrowded.

The ambulance bazaar at Monk Fryston Park was splendidly supported, and the takings were excellent for a one-day affair. The prominent figure at the opening was the squire of Monk Fryston, as hale and hearty as ever, and the breezy manner in which he conducted the opening ceremony, going to London a good send-off. His "better-half," Mrs. Hemsworth, made a little speech, too, and there is no doubt both were delighted to have so many people at their home to support such a good object. Monk Fryston is an excellent centre for such a gathering, and the equipment of the grounds, which are visited by thousands of pleasure-seekers annually, enhances their value.

The Aberfordia Ambulance League, the formation of which was due to the influence and work of Mrs. Gascoigne, of Lotherton Park, who is an admirable platform speaker, extends its operations from Barkston to Rothwell, and if the enthusiasm is maintained and interest at members is readily should result. Apart from the primary object for which the Voluntary Aid Detachments exist, the training of women in ambulance work and home nursing is of the utmost value, and the knowledge thus acquired can be put into practice in everyday life. This phase of the movement should appeal to many people.

In another column a striking article on infantile mortality, written by one of the leading medical men in the district, appears, and, although the figures given relate to one particular district, they have a general application. It is pointed out that every seventh child born in Rothwell urban area last year died before it was one year of age, and in Tadcaster rural district every eighth child born went under, eighteen infants out of a total of 004 dying. This is a terrible list of affairs, and the majority of the Councillors, I'm afraid, do not give any thought to it. The infantile mortality for Tadcaster rural district was 124 per thousand births, every eighth child born dead, but these are not the worst figures for the district. In Alberton Bywater parish the infantile mortality was 216, showing that every fifth child born in the world had a speedy exit, while in Sherburn sub-district the rate was 148, and in Aberford sub-district 135. The town of Tadcaster had the best figures, which showed one infantile death in thirteen births.

This question demands the consideration of Tadcaster District Council, yet at last meeting when the county nursing scheme came up many of the members made for the door. It would have been interesting had a detailed report been given as to Rothwell, on the infantile mortality, so that the number of preventable deaths could have been seen at a glance, but it may be assumed that a good many of the eighty-six infants could have been saved. Parents frequently disregard the seriousness of whooping-cough and measles, with dire results, and I find that last year five infants succumbed to the former trouble, and one to the latter. Nine deaths were due to pneumonia and five to bronchitis, and 23 to diarrhœa and enteritis. That accounts for half the number of deaths, and there is not the slightest doubt that there has been a wastage of child life in Tadcaster district equally with Rothwell urban area. It is the business of the Council to do their utmost to check wastage, but I'm afraid that until the members evince a little more interest in the question, no remedial measures will be adopted.

Templenewsam, Oulton, Rothwell, and Hunslet ratepayers will soon be placing themselves under the paternal care of the Hunslet Board of Guardians if the distribution of public funds continues along lines of extended generosity. A new scale of out-relief, which makes it possible for a man, his wife, and six children, to draw 20s. a week from the rates, has been submitted to the Board, who have shown a reluctance to adopting it, and the ratepayers should study the figures which are given elsewhere. Hunslet Guardians, I believe, deal with their poor more generously than the great majority of Boards, but there must be some limit to expenditure of this character in order not to foster pauperism, and the members must decide what that limit is to be.

It is stated that in the last four years, in spite of old age pensions and national insurance, the relief afforded by the Hunslet Guardians has been increased by £870 per annum, and the proposals under the new scale would entail a further expenditure of about £4,000. Not long ago it was stated that many persons entitled to State pensions would not apply for them, being perfectly satisfied with the relief given by the Guardians, but this is not a satisfactory condition of things. The qualified suggestion, it was stated, had the relief brought to them, whereas, on the other hand, they would have to fetch their pensions, and they preferred the system that gave the least trouble to themselves. It would not be impossible to arrange the scale of relief—if one is to be fixed—in such a way that all persons entitled would find it to their advantage to apply for pensions. But why is a scale necessary? Would it not be better to deal with cases on their merits, making a distinction between deserving and undeserving, and granting relief to suit individual circumstances.

It is evident that Leeds Corporation are determined to give hold of Templenewsam by hook or by crook, and they are manœuvring nicely for position. When the District Council applied to the Local Government Board for sanction to borrow money for the extension of Halton sewage beds, the Corporation had the impudence to interfere, although the matter is not their concern, and I suppose they want the district drained to the Knostrop works, in order to strengthen their hold on the parish. The loan has, however been sanctioned, so the Corporation have been beaten on this question. A townplanning scheme for Templenewsam is being prepared, and one of the features of it is a road from near the top of Halton Hill, through the Primrose Valley, to Crossgates. This did not fit in with the plans of the Corporation, who wanted it as a road driven through the sewage works, in order to render them useless, but they received no support at the inquiry. Now Leeds Corporation are promoting a town-planning scheme for Crossgates district, and they have included Halton sewage works in it, and the proposal to make a road there appears again. This road would be of no value to the district whatever, because it would be possible to build on one side of it only, and the District Council are determined to oppose them at every turn.

One of the most prominent figures in the last elections in Barkston Ash Division was the Rev. Silvester Horne, who took a leading part in meetings in support of the candidature of his brother, Mr Fred Horne, and many will regret his passing at the comparatively early age of 40 years. Mr Silvester Horne, who was not in good health, was on a visit to Canada, and he died on board a steamer, after a visit to the Niagara Falls. He was possessed of a fiery eloquence which made him much sought after for political platforms, and during the Barkston Ash campaign he addressed large gatherings at Crossgates, Garforth, Boston Spa, and other places. He was one of the Members for Ipswich.

"Why don't you try to get a recreation-ground for Crossgates," asks a reader. "One is just as much required there as at Halton and Whitkirk." Have I not suggested the acquisition of a portion of Roundhay Park for that purpose? Unfortunately at Crossgates there is no generously-disposed and considerate landowner like the Hon. E. Lawley Wood, M.P., who has given Gelt for Temple Newsam, but if any gentleman is disposed to give the children of Crossgates a play-ground at a nominal rental he may be sure the offer will be accepted with gratitude. I do not know will do so, perhaps the ex-rulers will give consideration to the question.

STANNINGLEY.—At a special sessions held at Shipley Police Court on Thursday—before the Rev. R. Hemsworth—Herbert Townend, farm labourer, Church Fenton, was charged with an offence against a girl under the age of 16 years, on 5th April at Church Fenton. Supt. Stafford defended Townend, who was remanded.

CHURCH FENTON AND PUBLIC LIGHTING.—A meeting the ratepayers of Church Fenton, held in the schools on Monday night, with the object of discussing the advisability of adopting the Public Lighting Act, decided against public lighting. Mr Gray, who presided over a large attendance, said that since the sad death of Leon Salmon on the railway bridge there had been considerable discussion on the lighting of the bridge slopes and streets. The railway company had been approached, and it was pointed out that the danger at the railway bridge was not to be caused by the glare from the station lights. The railway company, however, declined to acknowledge any responsibility. Mr Clerk said a penny rate would only realise £17, and calculating on that basis a 6d. rate would be necessary to raise £102. Considerable discussion took place, and Mr Holgreaves spoke in favour of the Act being adopted, and Mr Cairns, Mr A. Deighton, Mr G. H. Ambler, and Mr J. T. Gaunt and Mr Calvert also spoke. It was pointed out that a Birdsall against. It was pointed out that the Church Fenton being such a long straggling village it would mean the laying of something like 3 miles of main gas pipes, the cost of which, with a work from the rates, has been submitted to would be very serious. On a vote being taken, only Mr Gaunt voted in favour.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE

At the Empire Palace this week the bill is headed by Arthur Roberts, in a naval revue, entitled "H.M.S. Impossible." The piece has an amusing plot, which gives the well-known comedian plenty of scope for his power of impersonation, either as the ship captain, the Irish soldier, or the lady who captures the susceptibilities of the admiral. Apart from the humour of the piece, there are some attractive numbers, including Irish songs and dances, by the large company appearing in the sketch. The other turns on the programme include the Dickinson Bros., who have some novel tricks on the trapeze, and Rolford and Valentine, who raise many a laugh by their comedy juggling scene. Doris Duquesne is a well-trained juvenile artiste, and there are also appearing Ida Barr, comedienne, Harry Lavaine, comedian, and Drew and Alders, comedians.

The "all-Irish" revue "Irish, and Proud of It!" which will be produced at the Leeds Empire on Monday next, is a happy-go-lucky Ireland pictured for us without any of the noise or bother of the present political Irish conflict. Nothing more can be said of it than the remarks contained in a famous dramatic critic's report of its quality. Here it is said: "There is a genuine flavour about the production, a pleasant mingling of Irish sentiment and Irish songs, and a crowd of some fifty merry boys and girls in the gaiety of the fast-disappearing costume of the peasantry, making a bewildering display of reds and green for the roving holiday, bright reds and green for the colleens, smart knee breeches and "Tipperary frills" for the gossoons." The mirth of the show is infectious, and the audience is often carried away with the high spirits of the performers. The recourse to the rich store of Irish melodies is a relief from the banalities of the ragtime revue. That the revue is entirely Irish goes without saying, when we find in the cast of fifty performers every name is Irish. There are Mulligans, O'Gormans, McConnells, O'Shea, O'Reilly, and so on. The principals, upon whom devolve a good deal of work in the way of sweet singing, are Miss Nora O'Gorman, Mr Joe O'Gorman, and Mr Jamieson Dodds. The latter will be pleasantly remembered by his singing in "Hullo, Ragtime!" and "Hullo, Tango!" at the London Hippodrome. Mr Dodds is accounted to be one of the finest baritone singers of to-day. In addition to this magnificent array, the programme will be supplemented by many interesting turns, including Madame Lucie Gillespie and Miss Kathleen Kingston, a refined, artistic, musical, and vocal entertainment; Ben Albert, comedian; George Newburn, the star mimic of star artistes; Five Clares, presenting a "Fun in a Drawing-Room"; and Pinkie Whyte, known as "The Californian Nugget."

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week a popular attraction is the revue "Town Topics," written by Mr William Hargreaves, the well-known composer, who has also provided the music and words for it. It is finely staged. There are three scenes: The Thames Embankment at night, the exterior of a Park Lane mansion, and the interior. All the Members of Parliament who are helping to make history are shown. Mr Lloyd George is there with his Budget, and Mr Winston Churchill with his clothes. Everybody who is anybody is caricatured. Among the artistes who deserve special mention are Mr Arthur Reece, who makes a good "swell"; Barrett and Knowles, so well-known to local pantomime audiences; Sanford and Lyons, the simultaneous dancers; and Miss Bella (late of Bella and Bijou). There are also some good variety turns, including Sammy Shields, the Scottish football comedian, with some capital football ditties; Dolly Ross, a Leeds lady who is making strides in the profession; Campbell and Barber, very comical vocalists; and Wal Rogers, a burlesque character comedian.

At the Hippodrome next week Messrs Wylie and Tate's latest revue "A Year in an Hour," with five seasons and five scenes, will be the chief attraction, and among the artistes who will appear are Deane-Tribune, Molly Drew, Lily Vine, Frank Benson, Harry Grale, Norman Griffin, F. Horton, Hedley Franklyn, Estellita Cerron, Nancy Reeve, Dulcie Garland, and Gwynneth Vane. Others in the bill are The Keebles, dialectic and dancers; Leo, the comedians; Alice Hollander, the Australian singer; and Silbon's Performing Cats.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week "The Prairie Outlaw" has been staged, and it is a Western drama, with a highly coloured plot and elaborate scenic effects. A series of diverting incidents in the vicinity of a Texas ranch are strung together so as to include plenty of sensational dramatic material, and there is vigorous action in every scene. The hero, Bob Middleton, is accused of cattle stealing, and the Sheriff and his "outfit" are keenly anxious to bring him to justice. Marita, the outlaw's wife, who is very resourceful as well as an attractive person, contrives to throw the Sheriff off her husband's trail, and this affords abundant opportunity for Mr and Mrs Ernest Vaughan's company. Besides these characters there is a gang of lawless cowboys and Indians, who discharge their revolvers on the slightest provocation, and a tribe of hostile Redskins who brandish tomahawks and execute fantastic war dances. Mr Norton Shields appears as the Outlaw, and is thoroughly at home in the part. As the Sheriff Mr Ernest Vaughan is convincing, and Miss Madge Douglas makes a good Marita.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Stanley Carlton will present a new and original Venetian drama "The Little Fortune Teller," or "An Italian's Revenge." Miss Rubie Maude will appear in the title role.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week Charlie Bell and Co., in "The Demon Photographer," are appearing. Mr Bell takes the part of an enterprising photographer, who makes things hum. It is a capital sketch, full of fun, and aroused uproarious laughter on Monday night. The programme is good all round. There is Norman Osborne in a clever ventriloquial fishing scene, and Lily Hall is a Lancashire vocalist with a beautiful voice. Hal Bryan is a first-rate comedian, and others on the bill include Wilton Warton, a magical humorist and card specialist, and the Three Seymours, novelty equilibrists.

Next week at the popular Varieties Herbert Landeck and company will appear in an entirely original farcical comedy, entitled "What a Sport." Others in the bill are Andre Romanoff, the great Apache violinist; Albert Voyce, in his novel creation, "Rip Van Winkle the Second"; King and Carson, comedians who differ; Rita Rhylle, comedienne and Melbor Bros., humorous sporting acrobats. Dramatic and humorous pictures will also be shown.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe in the first part of the week the principal attraction was a thrilling production in four parts of the Boer War. It was one of the best battle pictures yet seen, some thousands of soldiers and horses taking part, and the hard fighting scenes were tempered by some pretty love incidents. For the end of the week George Mozart is featured in "Cinco Ragtimer," and "The Devil's Disciple," and "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake," both two-part films, contribute to a programme of unusual strength.

CROSSGATES AND ROUNDHAY TOWN-PLANNING SCHEME.

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY HALTON SEWAGE WORKS.

At a meeting of Leeds City Council on Wednesday an explanation of the Corporation's proposals in respect of town-planning schemes for an area comprising Harehills, Roundhay, and Crossgates, and an area comprising Osmondthorpe, was given by Alderman F. M. Lupton, who said that all the preliminary steps had been taken. The grounds on which the schemes were desirable were to ensure the lines of suitable main roads, limit the number of houses, and provide open spaces. In the development of the first scheme, comprising Harehills, Roundhay, and Crossgates, two matters required special consideration. The area was very largely landlocked, and for development required good through roads, the roads most urgently needed being a main road from the junction of Harehills Lane and Roundhay Road extending eastwards, crossing York Road, and running to Crossgates; and a main road from the junction of the York and Selby roads running northwards to Wetherby Road near to Roundhay Park. The objections to the scheme included one from the Horsforth Rural District Council, who protested against the site of the Halton sewage works being included. The Improvements Committee had visited the land, and they considered that the very best line on which a main road could be made was through the sewage works. Residents in the Roundhay district had also objected on the ground that their land was injected on the ground that their land was injured, and adjoining land which formed part of Roundhay Park was excluded. There was no intention of developing that land at present, and if the question did arise in the future it could be made the subject of a new scheme. It was impossible to form any estimate of the cost, the intention being that landowners and Corporation should assist one another in improving portion should assist one another in improving the area. The Osmondthorpe scheme affected a district which was more industrial in character, and no objections had been made to the proposal. One member of the Committee were anxious to go forward with the first scheme was that several landowners had pressed them to obtain town-planning powers in order that the Corporation might help them in the development of the land. It was that pressure which had induced the Committee to go rather faster than would otherwise have been the case.

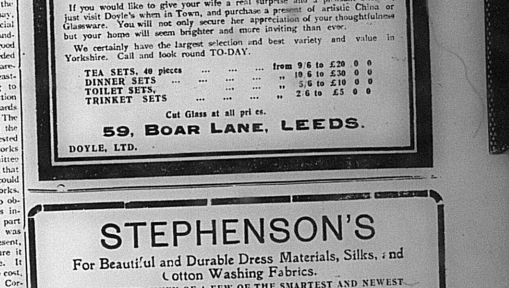
Mr Massey asked if it was proposed to widen Halton Hill or make an entirely new road.

Alderman Lupton said it was proposed to construct a new road, turning off to the left below the railway, and going into the middle of Halton.

Mr G. H. Pearson asked if the Committee had considered the question of providing workmen's dwellings in the area. He had heard that it stated that the area would be exclusively set apart for villa residences.

Alderman Lupton replied that, technically speaking, no scheme was yet prepared, and the only power the Improvements Committee had was to limit the number of houses per acre. With regard to the Osmondthorpe scheme, the area was more industrial, and there would be more possibility of allowing workmen's dwellings in the larger scheme, he thought he could say on behalf of the Committee that they would not limit the number of houses over the whole area so that there could be no workmen's dwellings in it.

By 50 votes to 11 it was decided to make application to the Local Government Board for authority to prepare a scheme for Harehills, Roundhay, and Crossgates.



Upon the Osmondthorpe proposal being put to the meeting, Mr Pearson asked if the Improvement Committee had taken into consideration the planning of areas in other parts of the city.

Alderman Lupton: Yes, we have considered them all round the city, but we must have a start.

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

The month of May is often described as the busiest month in the year so far as gardening is concerned. Seed-sowing, planting out, repotting, staking, and weeding are but a few of the important tasks requiring attention, whilst the water-can is almost constantly in use. Arrangements for the disposal of bedding plants must now be completed. Various points must be taken into consideration. Height, colour, time of flowering, and aspect are four important points to be borne in mind when making plants for bedding out. From time to time we have given hints as to suitable plants to grow in shaded and extremely sunny positions. Hot, dry borders at the foot of a south wall are sometimes looked upon with feelings of doubt. It is quite true that many sun-loving plants seem to get a surfeit of sunshine in such a position. Fortunately one of the most popular flowers of the day seems to luxuriate in such a position. The Antirrhinum is the plant referred to. No summer-flowering subject has been more improved during recent years than this one. There are three distinct classes, viz., dwarf (6 inches), intermediate (18 inches), and tall (3 feet). These may all be had in a variety of colours and this makes them ideal plants for beds and formal borders. They are so indifferent to dryness at the roots that they will grow and flower freely in the crevices of old walls. The nasturtium is another free-flowering plant which seems impervious to the trials of a hot, dry position. The dwarf varieties thrive remarkably well on poor soil, but the tall varieties should be provided with some fairly rich soil, and should have some rotted manure placed under them at the depth of about a foot. Cornopels Grandiflorum is another plant admirably adapted for growing against a hot wall. Few plants produce more flowers than this, and they are splendid for table decoration. Seed pods should be removed regularly, as they weaken the plants if they are allowed to develop.

Shady borders are often left vacant because of the mistaken notion that nothing will grow in them. Calceolarias, stocks, Iberis, many of the small-flowered varieties of violas, and mimulus are a few of the best subjects for such a position. Mimulus are very pretty, but will not thrive on light land unless regularly supplied with water. If violas are used dwarf varieties should be given preference. The taller ones get very leggy under shady conditions.

In forming colour schemes for beds in the open it should be borne in mind that a large variety of colours in one bed is never really artistic. Two, or at most, three colours should be allowed to predominate. A medley of shades may at first sight have a striking appearance, but it is almost certain that some will detract from the beauty of others. Theory and practice are two very different things in arranging flower beds. A bed composed solely of yellow and white flowers suggests to the imagination an insipid and lifeless appearance. As a matter of fact no more charming effect can be obtained than by a combination of the two. The green foliage acts as a foil to the two pale flowers, and the effect must be seen to be realised. A large bed carpeted over with alyssum minimum, with dot plants a yard apart of geranium Paul Crampel, is a sight to be remembered. Other schemes to scarlet and white, with a dwarf blue border of white violas, and filled with Paul Crampel geraniums has a telling effect. In every case a few tall foliage plants should be introduced to break the monotony. Dracæna lodiæa, Grevillea, Robusta, Kochia, Tricophylla, Artemisia Vlalfolia, and Zea Gracilus Variegata are a few suitable varieties to grow as "dots" plants. The Kochia should not be planted out until the end of June.

HARDY PERENNIALS

The present is a good time for sow hardy perennials in a cold frame. They may be grown on under glass until the end of June, and then planted into nursery beds outdoors. These plants should be kept well watered in dry weather, and if manure cannot be given artificially, it should be given naturally. Pyrethrums, Hollyhocks, Delphiniums, Oriental and Iceland Poppies, Lupins and Campanulas, are a few of the best for present sowing. Sow moderately large, thin seed the seedlings form the second pair of leaves, and prick out into boxes of rich soil when they are large enough to handle. It is advisable to allow the Pyrethrums to flower once in the nursery bed before transferring them to their permanent quarters, as there are always some unworthy of cultivation. These should be pulled out and discarded as they come into bloom.

KITCHEN GARDEN

The work in the vegetable garden will be heavy during the next few weeks. Early peas (except dwarfs) must on no account be allowed to topple over. Bushy twigs should be stuck into the sides of the rows to keep them erect. Moiscrop varieties may now be sown in quantity. Seedlings of the Brassica family—(cabbage, cauliflower, etc.), should be pilanted during showery weather if possible. Sow more seed of lettuce, radish, etc. Onions for pickling should be sown on poor land. Roll firmly before sowing and give a slight covering of soil. The seed may be sown thickly and no thinning is necessary.

GARDEN WEEDS

Annual Weeds—Annual weeds are reproduced only from seeds, and die, root and stem, each year. They may be eradicated by preventing seed production; but as many seed retain their vitality for several years, numbers of weeds may spring up at irregular intervals for many seasons, and those, of course, must be systematically destroyed by tillage before they seed.

Biennials and Perennials.—Bi-annual weeds are such as produce seed and die in their second season of growth. These are extirpated by constant surface tillage or by cutting the stems well below the collar or crown with a spade or hoe. Perennial weeds are propagated not only by seeds, but by some kind of underground runner, rhizome, stem or bulb, and they can best be destroyed by digging up bodily, or starving out. As regards digging, it should be borne in mind that the more breaking-up of the root-stocks of perennial weeds in the soil is positively harmful, because nearly every root-fragment vegetates separately. For this reason the roots of perennial weeds should be carefully collected into heaps and burned. Starving is effected by preventing the formation of foliage or stem above ground by means of continued surface-tillage, commenced, if possible, before the weeds show above the soil.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

Celosa, Petunias, Fuchsias, and similar plants grow freely at this time of the year. The main secret of success with these plants is to repot frequently, giving a small shift each time. It is better to repot twice into pots a little larger than to move from 4-inch pots direct to 9 or 9-inch. If dwarf, bushy plants are wanted, the points of the shoots should be pinched out at each successive six inches of growth.

Sweet peas in pots, from an October sowing, should now be in bloom. Liquid manure, about the colour of pale ale, should be given twice a week. Flowers cut early in the morning last longer than those cut at mid-day.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS

Rooted cuttings should be given cool treatment from this date. They should be potted firmly in a rich compost, and should never be sunk deeper in the new pots than they were in the old ones. They should be stopped when six or eight inches high, and again when the side growths are about the same length. Frequent fumigations should be given to prevent red spider, thrip, or greenfly getting a firm foothold. Few plants suffer so severely when attacked by insect pests, and it is impossible to get good results unless the plants are kept clean.

CYCLAMEN

Plants that have been flowering during the winter months will require a change of compartment when they finish flowering. The system of drying the plants until the bulbs shrivel does not appeal to me. The soil should never be allowed to get quite dry. Stand in a deep, cool, moist pit if available and give water as soon as the soil shows signs of getting dust dry. Under this treatment new growth will commence about July or August, when repotting will need attention. They like a fibrous compost, and recent observations lead us to advise that no manure should be mixed with it. It is better to feed when the plants are in full growth.

THE LATE MR J. R. FLITCH, MOOR ALLERTON.

There was a large and representative gathering at the funeral at Chapel Allerton Churchyard on Saturday afternoon of Mr J. R. Flitch, of Shirlcliffe, Moor Allerton. Prior to the interment a service of a most impressive character was conducted at the Chapel-Allerton Wesleyan Chapel, with which Mr Flitch was prominently connected, the officiating ministers being the Rev. Arthur Hoyle (resident minister), and the Rev Edward Mardin, who was formerly stationed there.

The service in the churchyard was conducted by the Rev. Sutton Pattinson (cousin of the deceased), and the Rev. H. L. Conner (curate).

Several of Mr Flitch's colleagues on the Leeds Board of Guardians were present, and amongst those were also representatives present from the Leeds University Board, the Women and Children's Hospital, and the Blind Institution.

The pall-bearers were Messrs Ellis Flitch (daughter), Rev. S. C. Flitch (son), Mr J. E. Crawford Flitch (son), Rev. Sutton Pattinson, Mr E. L. Oliver, Mr Hubert Pattinson, Mr and Mrs Frank Crawford, Mr and Mrs G. F. Crawford, Mr and Mrs A. Crawford, Mr and Mrs H. Crawford, Mr and Mrs S. Crawford, Mr Harold Crawford, Mr Kenneth Crawford, Dr Eustace Carter, Mr A. Irvine Drysdale, Mr Edward Hammond, Mr Walter Hammond, Miss Jane Atkinson, Miss Mary Parker, and Mr George Haddkway.

There were a large number of floral tributes, and in addition to those sent by relatives wreaths were sent by the members of the Leeds Brother Trade Associations, Messrs William Oldroyd and Sons, Ltd., Bushinghorpe, the old girls of the Chapel Allerton High School, the governors of the Chapel Allerton High School, the Rev. Canon and Mrs Brameld, and Mr Andrew Trapps.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

LOCATION OF THE INCUBATOR.

I have a theory that more failures result through the incubator being improperly placed than from any other reason. Frequently have my services been requisitioned to attempt to discover the cause of failure in hatching, and in 10 per cent. of the cases I have investigated it was found through unsuitable surroundings.

Science has demonstrated that an egg subjected to incubation requires pure air in order that a healthy chick may result, and to my mind that degree of purity—more or less—is the same standard as required to retain health in human beings. I may be over-exacting in my demands. If I am it is an error in the right direction, but when I operate an incubator is always a location that I could reside in throughout the period, at all events, from a fresh air point of view.

Too much attention cannot be directed to the subject of ventilation of the incubator-room; at the same time, draughts must be avoided.

The floor should be level and firm; vibration is unquestionably a deterrent to success.

Tank machines are not usually provided with legs, consequently they should rest on a solid platform, and at a convenient height from the ground for the operator.

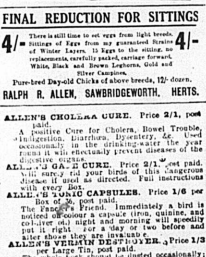
With hot-air machines it is most important that they should stand perfectly level, as only by this means can perfect circulation of the heat air be attained. It is, therefore, advisable before commencing operations to ascertain this is so by employing a spirit-level.

Incubators should not be placed against a wall; the air in the room should be free to circulate round them. Avoid also a position where they are exposed to the direct rays of the sun.

Bearing these points in mind, and selecting, if possible, an apartment with an equable temperature—that is, no extreme variation between the heat during the day and at night time—the next step towards success is accomplished.

LIVING-ROOMS I AVOID, if possible. Artificial warmth by day during the winter and early spring months is followed by cold nights; continual movement causes vibration; natural curiosity from close association is most conducive to success; and hanging of doors is highly detrimental.

PRELIMINARY ADVICE REGARDING INCUBATORS.



If you are about to use an incubator for the first time, make yours if thoroughly acquainted with the machine before entrusting it with eggs. Merely reading the book of instructions is insufficient and courting failure; rather strive to master every detail, so as to ascertain the why and wherefore of the maker's instructions, and then, providing a Standard pattern has been purchased, you have reasonable prospects of participating success.

I may be erring on the side of over-cautiousness, but even when this progress has been made, I counsel that in the first batch comparatively few fertile eggs should be employed. Artificial incubation, like everything else, requires to be learnt. Success may attend your first effort, but it is foolhardiness in the extreme to lay yourself out, consequently your risk of loss is minimised by using cheap eggs, while you are gaining experience.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT.—Mr Churchill's speech in the House of Commons and Sir Andrew Noble's statement to the shareholders of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth, and Co. (Ltd.), confirm the reports, which we have given from time to time, as to the Elswick firm's scheme for the establishment of aviation works on their newly acquired Barlow estate, near Selby. The preliminary arrangements for building are being made. Shops for the construction of airships, and a shed to house the craft will be built. Arrangements for securing the necessary material are in progress. The scheme will naturally be an immense structure, the chairman of the company remarking that it will be much larger than Durham Cathedral. Experts in aeronautics, including that of aeroplanes, temporarily established at Gosforth, is to be removed to Selby, where the Barlow estate affords a fine flying ground.

BARKSTON ASH FARMERS AND REPRESENTATION.

LABOURERS' WAGES—MR MYERS AND INSURANCE.

MR THOMPSON AND OLD HORSES.

At a meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Agricultural Clubs and Chambers of Agriculture held at Tuesday Major Sedgy presided, and the local members present were Mr John Thompson, East Rigton, Boston; Mr Frank Myers, Hillthorpe; and Mr G. P. Wright, Oglethorpe. A letter in support of absence was received from the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., or Templeborough.

Mr Bulmer moved "That this Union urges upon the Central Chamber of Agriculture the desirability of increasing the direct representation of agriculture in the House of Commons." For the future they had proposed legislation in connection with agricultural labourers' wages and housing, and it they did not do something they would very likely be as badly treated over these matters as they were over the Insurance Act. It was all very well to say the agricultural labourers were badly paid; very likely they were in some parts of the country, and perhaps the fixing of a minimum wage would not affect them very seriously in the north. But at the same time he thought they would agree that the principle was altogether wrong. (Hear, hear). In the House of Commons at the present time they were mostly represented by the landowning class, but these men were to a great extent discredited in Parliament when they advocated, no matter how strongly, the cause of the tenant farmer. They only got credit for looking after their own interests, and that was one reason why they should be represented by someone more practical. It was only reasonable that they should do something. They were threatened with serious legislation that would affect them adversely, and they were bound to take some action in self-defence.

Mr N. Fowell seconded. Farmers had for a number of years been looking in representation in the House of Commons, and they had suffered accordingly. At the present time the agricultural labourer seemed to be the shuttlecock of Parliamentary candidates, and that was a matter in which they were deeply interested.

Mr Myers (Hillthorpe) said they had many good representatives in Parliament of the landowning class, but what they wanted were members of the farming class to look them up. He knew of the farming class to look them up. He would like to impress upon them the necessity for someone to raise opposition against the severe taxation placed upon them at the present time. He thought they would agree that if they had realised the Insurance Act as the women and doctors did it would never have been on the Statute Book so far as it affected them. (Hear, hear).

Mr Dickinson said they did not want to allow party politics to come in. If they sent an agricultural representative to Parliament they must stick to him thoroughly. They did not want to go in finding fault with him or withdrawing their support from him because he had voted for some political movement with which they were not in agreement. They must all work politics and go in for agriculture. (Hear, hear).

Mr Hanson said they could take a leaf out of the Labour Party's book as regards organisation. The great fault in the past had been lack of organisation.

Mr Wood said that farmers generally did not discuss or find fault with the Insurance Act until it was passed, and it was then too late. They had a fine excellent members at present, but they were not acknowledged in the House of Commons, and not listened to as they should be.

The Chairman said the most important thing was that they must throw politics aside, and go in for the best man no matter what his politics were. What they wanted was ten or twelve members in the House, though he was told in London that if they had eight they could do a great deal.

Mr Bulmer's motion was unanimously carried.

On consideration of the Exportation of Horses Bill,

Mr Abbott said that personally he was strongly in favour of the Bill. He did not think these horses should be sent abroad to exercise the inhuman and cruel treatment they knew these horses received.

Mr Thompson (East Rigton) said he could not quite agree with what Mr Abbott had said. He did not know what proof there might be as to cruelty, but he thought sentimentalism was sometimes carried to extremes. In his opinion the exportation of worn-out horses had had very little to do with the suppression of cruelty to horses than anything else they could imagine (Hear, hear). The horses were taken away to these countries, and although they might be a certain amount of cruelty it was nothing to what they would suffer if they were kept in this country. If they were kept at home they would probably be sold to the man who could afford to give very much, and who would wear a horse down until it was a bag of bones. He in turn would sell it to someone lower in the scale, and so on, until it came to the manufacturer of glue—a miserable existence. He thought it was infinitely more on the side of humanity that—those horses should be sent away and killed in a few days rather than be driven to drag on an existence for a number of years, during which time they were gradually becoming worse.

Mr Abbott said he understood the Bill to suggest that the horses should be killed before exportation.

Mr Wood said he had seen horses trucked several times at Leeds, and every care was taken of them.

It was agreed not to support the Bill.

The Humane Slaughtering of Animals Bill was next the subject of discussion.

Mr Thompson objected to the provision in the Bill that any carcase, portion, blood or refuse of a slaughtered animal should be deposited so that another animal might smell the blood. He thought that was an absolute impossibility. If they left the matter in administration would be in the hands of officials. If they had a faddist official, or a busybody, as some of them were, he could very easily destroy a business. It would be necessary to re-construct the premises altogether. He moved that the Bill be opposed.

Mr Dickinson: We have heard a great deal of opposition to beneficial legislation this afternoon, but this crowns all.

Mr Exett: This is brought about by the city authorities to do away with private slaughter-houses.

It was agreed to oppose the Bill.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD KNOW.

PHYSICIAN'S TIMELY ADVICE

The fact that few dyspeptics really understand the cause of their trouble is probably the reason why drugs are still used to such an alarming extent. The practice is wrong, however, and is strongly condemned by many physicians.

The presence of excess acid in the stomach is the cause of practically all forms of digestive trouble, and this can be neutralised and rendered harmless by the occasional use of ordinary calcined magnesia—a product which can be obtained of any chemist. Physicians use bisurated magnesia themselves as well as recommend it to their patients, because they recognise that it not only overcomes dangerous stomach acid and thus ensures easy digestion, but by its use no harmful drug is introduced into the system, and therefore there can be no unpleasant after-effects. Half a teaspoonful taken in a little water after meals is usually quite sufficient to keep the food contents of the stomach free from fermentation and acid, thus ensuring normal digestion.

ITCHING ECZEMA CURED.

(Copy.) S. St. Agnes Road,
Gloucester Street, Leeds
Dear Sir,—I take the greatest possible pleasure in writing to inform you of the remarkable cure you have performed on me. I have, for a period EXTENDING OVER TEN YEARS, been a sufferer from ITCHING, from which I have undergone tremendous suffering. I have tried many doctors, and anything that anyone has suggested to me, but can only give local treatment, of my case insufficient praise. After a short course of your Herbal Treatment I am now THOROUGHLY CURED, and find NOT THE SLIGHTEST SYMPTOM of it returning, and it is now six months since you cured me. Wishing you continued success with your many patients.

I remain, sincerely yours.

AMBULANCE BAZAAR AT MONK FRYSTON PARK.

OPENING CEREMONY BY THE COUNTESS OF SCARBOROUGH.

ABERFORDIA LEAGUE A MODEL AND PATTERN.

Under the auspices of the Aberfordia Division of the St. John Ambulance Association, a special bazaar was held in the Alpine Hall at Monk Fryston Park on Saturday afternoon, and was specially supported by people from all parts of the district. It was largely owing to the energy and influence of Mrs Gascoigne, of Burton Hall (Lady of Grace and Dame Order of St. John of Jerusalem) that the Aberford League was formed three or four years ago, and it is now a strong and efficient organisation with detachments in various parts of both sides Ash Division, as well as at Rothwell and Bramham. In common with other movements it requires financial support, and the bazaar was arranged to that end. "Fifty per cent. of the financial proceeds should the promoters think fit," said Mr Gascoigne, "will be divided equally amongst the detachments on the Aberford side of the division, and the remaining fifty per cent. will be used in the purchase of medical equipment for the use of those who are sick or injured." The bazaar [illegible] was opened by Mrs Hemsworth, who takes a prominent part in every good work in Monk Fryston and district, and Mr Robert Routledge, jun., of Garforth (Hon. Secretary Brother of the Order of St John of Jerusalem), and the arrangements they made were excellent.

The stalls were as follows:—Mrs Gascoigne, stall (flowers, gloss, china, pictures, etc.).

Garforth Men's Detachment (public and [illegible] Mrs Hargreaves; lady superintendent, Mrs P Lowy; nurse, Miss Lydia Dent; hon div'sional secretary, Miss H. Routledge.

Tadcaster Women's Detachment (ladies and gentlemen) Commandant, Dr J. P. Scatchard; lady superintendent, Nurse Owen; hon. secs., Miss L. H. Brooksbank.

Bretherton Women's Detachment (miscellaneous stall)—Commandant, Dr J. O. Ward; lady superintendent, Miss Cocker; hon. secs., Mrs Ward.

Bowers Allerton Section (Ivanhoe stall)—Medical officer, Dr Taylor; hon. secs., Mr Albert Halsey.

Garforth Men's Detachment (general stall)—Commandant, Mr R. Routledge, jun.; medical officer, Dr C. H. Sykes; pharmacist, Mr H. Smithson; hon. secs., Mr W. W. Bewaniridge.

Aberford Women's Detachment (miscellaneous stall)—Commandant, Dr T. B. Abbott; lady superintendent, Miss Amy D. Jessop; hon. secs., Miss L. M. Pavey.

Whitkirk Women's Detachment (fancy and fancy work)—Commandant; Mrs Marsden; lady superintendent, Nurse Hodgson; medical officer, Dr Parker-gill; lady superintendent, Nurse Walker; hon. secs., Miss A. Green.

Rothwell Men's Detachment (advertisement stall)—Commandant, Mr J. W. Rilyard; medical officer, Dr Stevenson; hon. secs., Mr Norton Elliott.

Parcel-Wrapping Stall—Mr T. H. Prater.

Monk Fryston Women's Detachment (cake and chantian)—Commandant, Mrs Hemsworth; lady superintendent, Nurse Dobby; medical officer, Dr Parker-gill.

At the entrance to the bazaar were Messrs Reynolds and Branson (London) with a stall with ambulances, litters, etc., in charge of Mr Price.

The Rev. B. Hemsworth, J.P., of Monk Fryston Park, presided at the opening ceremony, and he was supported by the Countess of Scarborough, Brigadier-General and Lady Mends, Colonel and Mrs Gascoigne, Mrs Hemsworth and Mr R. Routledge, jun. (hon. secs.). Others present, besides the officials and stall-holders, included Lady Pilkington, Miss Plumer, General and Mrs. Baldock, Mrs. Lascelles (Swillington), Hon. Misses Hawke, Rev. C. Alderson, Miss Ficklin, Mr and Mrs Wilkinson, Rev. T. E. R. Ffolkes, Mr and Mrs Wilford (Garforth), Messrs Crostwaite, etc. Lady Scarborough was presented at the entrance to the hall with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by Miss Peggy Routledge.

The Chairman, at the outset, paid a tribute to the ambulance workers for their patience and energy, and said that they had done wonderfully well while working there. He took a great interest in both ambulance and hospital work, and he thought that the members of the Aberfordia League should be encouraged in their efforts. They were on a different platform to that they from politics or differing religious views; they were working for the benefit of their fellow-creatures, and they ought to do all they could to help them. Lady Scarborough held the same views as he had; she had a love for good work, and if she had [illegible] would no be there. So was their duty to encourage them in their good work.

The Countess of Scarborough, in declaring the bazaar open, said that it gave her great pleasure to attend the function. The keynote of this movement, she said, was preparation, and the want of it was one of the sad experiences of the South African War, which taught them that the day of peril was too late for preparation. That was why Voluntary Aid Detachments had been formed all over the country, and that was why Mrs Gascoigne and Mr Routledge and others were going so much into the work. [illegible] was that the organisation in that district was a model, and [illegible] would quite well be known, for she only saw that their efficiency was largely due to the energy, [illegible] and the object of that institution was to raise funds to help the work of the detachments. As a woman, she felt that there was specially women's work for her to do; they could not go and fight the line to defend their homes, they should make it their special duty to alleviate suffering and to encourage in every way they could those who were learning how to be useful. She then declared the bazaar open, and wished them every success. (Applause).

Mrs Gascoigne said that she had a delightful duty to perform, and that was to present a vote thanks to Lady Scarborough. She had attended an enormous [illegible] inconvenience and had come a long way to see the bazaar, and they really ought not to think [illegible] difficulty. All she had said about them and their efficiency was very kind, but it was perhaps a little highly coloured. (Laughter). She hoped, however, that they would not be [illegible] so efficient that it would not be too highly coloured. (Applause).

General Mends, in a few words, seconded the resolution, and it was cordially passed. Lady Scarborough briefly acknowledged the compliment.

Colonel Gascoigne then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr and Mrs Hemsworth, who had placed the grounds and the charming room at their disposal. It was very kind of them to do so. They had also been at a great deal of trouble in making arrangements for the bazaar, and they deserved their hearty thanks for their kindness. (Applause).

Mr Routledge, jun., in seconding, said that if they looked round and noticed the beautiful paintings in the room they would discern how Mrs Hemsworth had worked to make it [illegible] spot. (Applause).

The result of having been passed, Mr Hemsworth said they were very much obliged for the kind words that had been spoken, and then he remarked "I am going to make my better half [illegible] I can." (Laughter and applause).

Mrs Hemsworth said that she could not tell how delighted they were that they had got [illegible] Mr Routledge was a delightful young man, his energy had been wonderful, and he hoped he would be long to continue in that good work. (Applause). The resolution was passed and Mr Routledge replied.

One of the most popular attractions at the Park is the Zoo, and it was visited by hundreds of people during the afternoon and the Mayo provided amusement for old and young. Maypole dancing by Church Fenton children, under the direction of Miss Keates, and Morris dancing by Monk Fryston children took place in that part of the grounds known as "Bonnie Scotland," where, also in the Alpine Hall, the artistic work of Mrs. Hemsworth is [illegible]. Other attractions were a galvanic battery, air-rifle shooting range, chiromancy, etc.

In the Concert Hall entertainments were given, and the following items were submitted:—Part song, "The three knights," Aberford and Monk Fryston Choral Societies; song, "Yes, let me like a soldier fall," Mr H. Whitehouse; [illegible] "The early morning," Miss Ash; part song, "Sing heighho," Aberford Choral Society; song, Miss J. Greaves; part song, "Waken lords and ladies gay," Monk Fryston and Aberford Choral Societies; song, "Mid the harsh of the corn," Mrs Varley; male voice part song, "Down among the dead men," Monk Fryston and Aberford; song, "Joyous life," Mr Jenkinson; part song, (a) "In Mary's garden," (b) "A spring song," Aberford ladies; song, Miss Ash; part songs, (a) "In silent night," (b) "Maiden fair," Aberford Choral Society; violin solo, Miss Margaret Dennison; part song, "The bells of St. Michael's tower," Aberford and Monk Fryston Choral Societies (conductor, Mr D. G. Morris). Mrs Hemsworth was the accompanist. Recitations were given by Mr J. W. Rilyard, and a conjuring entertainment by Mr H. Smithson.

The Sherburn Band, consisting of Messrs J. Bradley, A. Copp, P. Dennison, W. Foster, Harry Gill, J. Gill, Fred Oglesby, and E. Pearson, with Miss Janet L. Cook as conductor, went through the following programme:—Opening Chorus, "We are pierrots"; song, "The Ballymona conversazione," Mr J. Bradley; song, "She only started giggling," Mr A. Copp; song, "Arah wanna," Mr W. Foster; duet, "The parrot duet," Misses Copp and Bradley; ensemble, "And so say all of us," Mr Oglesby; song, "The wedding in the moon," Mr E. Pearson; song, "All the girls are lovely by the seaside," Mr Phillip Dennison; finale, "Brannigan's band," the troupe.

In the Swimming Bath a dramatic entertainment was given by Miss Baldock's party, "A merry was given by Miss Baldock's party, "A little fool play," was the piece submitted, and the characters were:—Gilbert Warren, Mr R. the characters were:—Gilbert Warren, Mr R. Hasking; Sybil Warren, Mrs Hasking; Mr Tobbs [illegible] Mr R. W. Ardagh; and Mary, Miss V. Baldock. In addition the following items were given:—Song, Mr T. H. Breed; violin solo, Mrs [illegible] song, "My dear soul," Miss Wrigglesworth; song "My old Shako," Mr P. Wrigglesworth; and violin solo, Mrs Jessop. The accompanist was Miss M. E. Cooper, L.L.C.M. (Bronze Medallist, London College of Music).

The takings amounted to about £250.

DOCTOR SAID HIS ECZEMA WAS PAST CURING.

SURPRISING CURE BY ZAM-BUK.

Nothing but Zam-Buk's amazing skin-curing power could rid Mr. Thos. Hunt of his terrible eczema, and give him a new skin. Mr. Hunt, who has turned 70, lives at Richmond Common, Sneh-mikham, Bucks., where he used to a local [illegible]:—

"Hasty pimples first broke out on my hands and body. These pimples burst and turned to running eczema, which spread particularly all round my wrists, causing masses of sores. Even over me I was nearly driven to the terrible disease, but I were reserved with the terrible disease, but I were reserved with the terrible disease. "For weeks I could n't work, and finally I was [illegible] Joint Hospital, Leicester Square, London, for 27 weeks, and afterwards attended as an out-patient for several years. Still [illegible] me. I tried no end of remedies, and when no two doctors prescribed the same [illegible], I felt it was no use trying anything more.

"Then I saw a friend of mine using Zam-Buk. As a result of my skin and new healthy [illegible] took this place of the disfiguring and painful sores.

"Though I am over 70 years old I can honestly say that Zam-Buk has completely cured me, and has left me with a perfectly healthy skin. As Zam-Buk has cured such a terrible case as mine, no skin sufferer need ever despair."

AN ABERFORD GIRL'S LOST PURSE.

CHARGE AGAINST HALTON WOMAN DISMISSED

An unusual charge of larceny was brought against a [illegible] named Florrie Powis, of Halton, at the Leeds West Riding Police Court on Tuesday.

The facts of the case, said Supt. Symonds, were that on April 18th a young girl named Pawson was going along the Castleford Road to Aberford, when she dropped a purse containing half a sovereign. A few moments later the defendant rode by on a bicycle, and the girl Pawson heard her dismount, and on looking round, saw her pick something up, and ride quickly away. The defendant was later stopped by a man on a bicycle.

Per A. Willey defendant.

The girl Pawson, who is 13 years of age, gave evidence that about ten o'clock on Saturday morning, April 18th, she went out on an errand for her mistress, Mrs Smith, of Aberford, and was carrying a purse, which contained half a sovereign. She was, however, unable to purchase what she wanted at the shop, and was close what she wanted at the shop, and was [illegible] to the Hoole-Moor Road she examined her purse and then put it, as she thought, in her pocket. A few moments later a young woman (the defendant) rode past her on a bicycle, and witness heard her dismount and look round. Witness heard her dismount and look round. Turning round she saw the young woman pick up something like a small purse and ride away. Witness did not until then that she had lost her purse. She shouted after the defendant, who, however, took no notice. There was a man about fifty yards away with a bicycle, and witness asked him to ride after the young woman as she had picked up her purse.

Answering Mr Willey, the girl said that defendant would be about sixty yards away. She shouted "Hi!"

Isaac Stead, miner, of Aberford, said that on the day in question he was seated on the grass at Hoole Moor corner about eleven o'clock, when he heard someone shout "Hi!" He looked, and saw the last witness. He also saw a cyclist about a quarter of a mile away, riding towards Garforth. The girl Pawson asked him if he would ride after the defendant as she had got a purse. Witness did so and caught the young woman up at Garforth. First of all, he rode past and got in front. Pluvis asked him if he had come for the purse, and he said he had. She asked him if it was his, and he replied that it was not, but he knew to whom it belonged. Defendant also asked him if he knew how much was in the purse, and he said he did not. Defendant then told him that it had nothing to do with him. She, however, went to the police station.

Mr Willey said the girl was a victim of somebody's cruelty. In the Court was liable thing of which could be charged with. He indicated a finding of a Court that if a man found a purse of gold and picked it up with no idea of appropriating it, there was no case of felony, and if the man, not knowing to whom it belonged, decided to spend it a day after, there was still no case of felony.

At this stage the magistrates stopped the case, and said they were of the opinion that there was no case, and the young woman was allowed to go.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SUNDAY AT COLTON—THE GRAMAPHONE.

To the Editor.

Sir,—The modern inventions advantageous or the reverse? This is a question that calls forth [illegible] and real for an interesting discussion.

Half-my-life years ago, after a strenuous day in Leeds, I sallied forth to Whitkirk, and [illegible] that charming old village, Colton, where I found rest and peace, and benefit untold for nerves. On during my wanderings I repeated Gray's immortal lines—

"Now does the glimmering landscape on the sight,

And all the air a solemn stillness holds,

Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,

And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds."

On Sunday last I again traversed this hallowed spot, but, alas, what a change!

On Colton Common the piercing strains of a gramaphone offended my ear. To escape from it I hastened forward, when the grinding of another near the village school encompassed me round about. With accelerated step, I sought retreat in Park Road, where amidst the gorgeous foliage, verdure pastures, clarion notes of the thrushes, and the faint chimes of the old church bells, I had not forgotten the gramaphone strains pursued me far into the wild hyacinth-carpeted woods, and haunt me still.

No wonder many lovers of nature cried, "Shameful! Is this Colton, ay, oral is this the Lord's Day?"

I hurried away, and returned home by another route, where—

"Along the cool sequester'd vale of life,

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way."

Here, unlike my experience at Colton, Sunday was not desecrated, nor were nature's harmonies hushed by a gross abuse of a modern invention.

Often since have I exclaimed, "Pity the poor neighbours, who, in addition to sickness, have to endure this affliction from early morn till late at night." I am informed that the effect is so harrowing that some of the neighbours have to close windows and doors, whilst others, more favourable ones, take flight, for a few hours' respit, from the hideous noise.

Is there no remedy? Surely, in the interests of visitors, who appreciate the delightful walks which the district affords, as well as in the interests of the inhabitants of this village, the sanctity of the Sabbath ought to be respected, or steps ought to be taken to enforce it.—Yours, etc.,

LOVER OF NATURE.

A FERRYBRIDGE STACK-FIRING CASE.

MANIA FOR DESTROYING THINGS.

At Leeds Assizes on Monday Herbert Best (28), labourer, was indicted for setting on fire a haystack, the property of Fred Smith, at Ferrybridge, on April 8th.

Mr G. E. C. Marlborough said that the prisoner was there practically on his own confession, but now he pleaded not guilty. The haystack was standing on the side of the North Road. On the same evening as the fire Prisoner approached a constable at Pontefract, and said, "Beg pardon, sir, I have no where to stay to-night, so I intended roughing it. I went up to the haystack on Doncaster Road, it. I went up to the haystack on Doncaster Road, and as I was smoking I set the stack on fire. I didn't mean to do it."

Later, at the Police Station, the prisoner wrote a statement, which he signed. In this he said he had left the Isle of Wight Prison a month previously, and had applied to his relatives for assistance in vain. "I tell you plainly," he added, "that I set fire to the haystack. I am not particular what I do. At any rate, I will not tramp the country. I have tried my best, and I failed, so I again turn to my old tricks of destroying, and if I cannot get anything to do, I will destroy to the end of my life. I have now been destroying things since 1905, but it is nothing to me; the hair I've shed. I like destroying things. I have now had fifteen years of it, and if you think I am going to give it up I am not. . . . Call it a mania if you will, but there it is."

On the prisoner were found a box of matches and a text book of the French language.

His Lordship said there seemed to be a set of people who were constantly setting fire to things. "Evidently because our jolly system makes prison a more comfortable place than the workshouse."

The jury found the prisoner guilty.

His Lordship: If I thought what you said about destroying things was true, I should send you to penal servitude for ten or fifteen years; I hope you wrote it in a bad temper.

Sentence of nine months, with hard labour, was passed.

A GASCOIGNE WOOD FATALITY.

MONK FRYSTON RESIDENT'S DEATH.

An inquest was held before Major Arundel (Coroner) at the North Eastern Railway Offices, Gascoigne Wood Junction, on Monday on the body of Arthur Evans, railway shunter, who was killed on the railway on Saturday morning. Mr John Carr was foreman of the jury. Mr Waterhouse, [illegible], and Inspector Wm. Baker appeared on behalf of the North Eastern Railway, and Mr Claude Kemp, solicitor (South Milford) appeared for the National Union of Railwaymen and the relatives of the deceased.

Joseph Britton, farm labourer, Haxby, near York, said deceased was his son, and he was 26 years of age. He lodged at Monk Fryston and he last saw him alive a week before, when he was in good health.

William Towrise, foreman platelayer at Gascoigne Wood Junction, said that he saw Arthur Britton shunting on Saturday morning. He was getting between two waggons whilst they were in motion, trying to detach one, and he appeared to stumble in the four-foot. When he saw him he appeared to have hold of the couplings, and then he rolled on to the four-foot, and lay on the ground. He would be about fifty yards away. He went to the engine driver and shouted to him to stop the engine, as there was a train coming up the other line, and he could not get across. The engine-driver stopped as soon as he could. When he got to the man there were other men releasing him. He was fearfully injured. The engine went over him, and he was much mutilated. He was put on a stretcher, and sent in a brake van, with an engine, to Leeds Infirmary, but he died on the railway, he heard, at Micklefield.

By the Coroner—There was a rule that shunters must not go between the waggons when moving. It was not a practice to do so, but sometimes it was done.

Mr Waterhouse pointed out the rules of the Company which said they must exercise proper care in going between waggons.

By Mr Kemp: He did no know why they Britton had a shunting stick.

John Tom Whiteley, platelayer, Gascoigne Wood Junction, said that when Britton rolled out from the four-foot he was badly injured. His left leg was cut off, and his right arm and right leg broken. The engine had gone over him. He was insensible.

By Mr Kemp—He did not see a shunting-stick.

By the Coroner—It had not been sticks lying about, and he could have got one if he had wanted one.

By Mr Waterhouse—It was not his duty to look after the shunters.

Edgar Shinburn, shunter, of Milford Junction, said he saw Britton injured, and he was taken to South Milford in a brake van. He went with him, and Dr Ridcliffe joined them, and told them to take him to Leeds Infirmary. Deceased did between South Milford and Newthorpe.

Witness said there were about half-a-dozen shunting poles about, and he could have got one by applying for it. Deceased should not have gone between the waggons whilst in motion.

By Mr Kemp—He had never heard the inspectors say anything to the men when they did this.

A verdict of "Accidental Death" was returned.

The Osmondthorpe Harmonic Society have just held their annual dinner and musical evening to mark the close of a most successful season. A collection made in aid of the Leeds Poor Children's Holiday Camp Association realised £2 13s.

INFANTILE MORTALITY IN THE DISTRICT.

"ENORMOUS WASTAGE OF CHILD-LIFE."

In his annual report, Dr. Hugh Stevenson, the medical officer for Rothwell urban district, makes [illegible] my mind one of the most important and significant, if not absolutely the most important, features in the history of a district [illegible] the infant mortality of it. [illegible] This matter has pushed itself forward more [illegible] every year for several years back, and it [illegible] attention in recent years from those engaged in public health work, whether as officials or as [illegible] than the question is the preservation of life.

It is [illegible] realised, with a steadily decreasing birth-rate, and with the [illegible] every child [illegible] is found in the [illegible] but, if possible, a still more [illegible] room for congratulation, as I feel that the infant mortality rate for 1913 was 139. [illegible] to say, out of the 214 deaths registered in this district during 1913, that 59 of them occurred in children under one year of age, thus giving us the proportion of 139 deaths under one year of age per 1,000 registered births, and it is also noted that the infant deaths in the district provided 27 per cent. of the total registered in the district, as against 14 per cent. for the previous year, with an infantile death rate of 58 as opposed to our 139 on this occasion, and I might add that the rate for the two years previous to 1912 were 116 and 133 respectively, while for the decade 1903-1912 the rate was 131, so it is seen that our rate for the present year is nearly in excess of the average for the previous ten years, though it might be pointed out that the excessively low rate for 1912, viz., 58, is largely responsible for thus bringing down the average.

The average infantile mortality rate for England and Wales was too, on the [illegible] our rate was below that of the country generally, on this occasion it is rather higher.

To be told that the infant mortality rate for the district is 139 may not convey much to the ordinary reader, but when it is pointed out what this really means, the significance of the figure becomes at once apparent. To put it plainly, it means that 14 per cent. of the children born in this district fail to reach the age of one year, or to put it in words that cannot be misunderstood by anyone, it means that almost every seventh child born in the district dies before it has completed the age of one year, and when it is [illegible] that this is not peculiar to our own district, but that pretty much the same condition of things prevails all over the country, it may be quite legitimately urged, and with perfect truth, that these deaths are practically unavoidable, but even that contention leaves a considerable balance of deaths to [illegible] from what might be termed "avoidable causes."

A consideration of the "causes of death" among infants reveals several interesting and instructive features, the first to find, one of a total of 214 deaths from premature birth that it took place within a week of birth, and we may assume that the degree of prematurity and the debility were such as to render impossible that the little mites could have lived, and these deaths [illegible] may, I think, safely be put down under the category of "unpreventable deaths." but the remaining five cases of death from premature [illegible] come under that heading.

Again, under the heading of "debility and wasting diseases" we find recorded 14 deaths under one year, and of this total 4 occurred within three months of birth, implying that the child at birth was exceedingly weak and debilitated, but the remaining six deaths occurred at ages between three and twelve months, and I think it might reasonably be urged that with proper advice and attention and supervision might have considerably assisted in saving many of these infants.

In the item zymotic diseases in infants apart from diarrhœa, have been singularly few during the year, so there is only one death due to this cause, namely, from measles.

Of the remaining causes of death shown in the infant mortality returns, two stand out prominently above all others, viz., pulmonary diseases and diarrhœa, which are conditions to gether were responsible during 1913 for 27 deaths among infants, or for 45 per cent. of the total infantile deaths. It is perhaps natural to expect such conditions as these to figure as a prominent cause of death in young children, but at the same time, I think we might legitimately [illegible] here, above all others, deaths which may be [illegible] timately by [illegible] preventable, or rather, we might say that the causes which lead up to them are preventable.

During the year 11 deaths, or more than one death in six of the total infantile deaths, were returned as due to either pneumonia or bronchitis, and what makes the matter more significant is the fact that most of these deaths occurred in children under three months old, and only three of these in children between six and twelve months old, the period between six and twelve months of age providing eight of the deaths. I would ask to show how [illegible] diseases of this kind [illegible] and closely child life. I may emphasise the fact that to the record of 11 deaths from pulmonary diseases in infants must be added no more than seven deaths in children between one and five years of age from the same causes, showing that a total of 21 deaths during the year, or one in ten of the total deaths of all ages and from all diseases, occurred in children under five years of age, and from either bronchitis or pneumonia.

The most significant and suggestive feature of the infantile death returns, however, in my opinion is undoubtedly the fact that so many infants have lost their lives during the year from diarrhœa and enteritis, 16 deaths having been returned as due to this cause, which is equivalent to 20 per cent. of the total infantile deaths during the year, and to show how great has been the ravages of this disease among very young children, it is only necessary to mention that the total of deaths at all ages attributed to diarrhœa during the year was 19, of which 18 occurred in children under two years of age, and to make this quite clear, I might explain that this includes that during the year 1913, one death in every 11 which occurred in our district was due to diarrhœa, and occurred in children under two years old. Surely it must be admitted that here is an enormous wastage of valuable human life, and here beyond all question is a large contributory factor to the causes of deaths which may rightly be termed as unpreventable. I have referred in this connection during 1913 so to be on a par with the general experience all over the country, and in most of course be aware that the [illegible] during the summer and autumn of 1913 were much more unfavourable for the development of diseases of this character than was the case during the year 1912, and it is to be feared that during the present year [illegible] and drought and [illegible] may [illegible] deaths from diarrhœa than do in 1913.

I propose on another occasion to suggest [illegible] that those responsible for the health of our district are [illegible] in the matters appertaining to the [illegible] community so far as [illegible] in this matter, but, if possible, [illegible] they must certainly [illegible] children under five years of age, so far as their circumstances permit, [illegible] in the idea of doing [illegible] in their own [illegible] and healthy citizens.

It has often been said of late that there is far too much grandiloquent talk [illegible] on the part of the general public by the [illegible] and other sanitary ruling bodies, and I am [illegible] this matter, but I am firmly of opinion that any effort which has for its [illegible] the preservation of child-life, and the [illegible] of the health and humanity with a healthy and vigorous child population, is sure to be the most warmly commended, and that the cost of such action should only be considered in the light of the probable benefit resulting from it.

In this district you have been well abreast of the times in dealing with this matter, and in the latter part of the year appointed a health visitor for the purpose, and I think great credit is due to the chairman and members of the Sanitary Committee, who have certainly borne the brunt and burden of this [illegible] and who [illegible] in this materialising what had been considered and discussed in a nebulous sort of manner, over many weary days.

The health visitor has been selected for such a short period that no estimate is at present possible of the benefit likely to result from her [illegible] presence, and those who expect, as a result of her appointment, to see any [illegible] mortality rate drop appreciably straight away will be disappointed. Her work is of such a kind that the future, and not the present, must show the benefit of it, and it will be quite soon enough if in a few years' time to look for evidences of the value of her work. Although the primary and the most important object of her work is in conjunction with infants up to a year old, there are many other opportunities open to her of doing most beneficial work. She has the opportunity at her visits in the homes of teaching mothers in a practical manner the elementary rules of domestic hygiene, of pointing out the advantages of not only of scrupulous cleanliness, but also of the inestimable benefit of fresh air and good [illegible] in the bedrooms and living rooms, of preaching the doctrine of the "open window" with the attendant horrors of [illegible] and the dangers of [illegible] and other important matters. She can advise on many matters appertaining to the healthy upbringing of children, and can [illegible] of doubt, both by personal intercourse and by correspondence with the children's welfare, due to what might be termed "ignorance," and in this matter is concerned, I am of opinion that during an [illegible] extraordinary work of this kind, which, in the course of time, ought to be reflected in the form of improved [illegible] statistics. There are diseases such as whooping-cough, measles, and diarrhœa, which, though forming a serious menace to child life, are yet, by virtue of their being non-contagious, liable to defy all the efforts of any public health official, and here I think would be an excellent opportunity for utilising in a most beneficial manner the services of the health visitor. Consider for a moment the good she could do in an outbreak of epidemic summer diarrhœa by visiting homes where cases existed, and advising personally on the many points which ought to be taken [illegible] precautions which ought to be taken. She could preach many an eloquent sermon on the text provided by the handbills so many of summer epidemics, especially with regard to the [illegible] and the protection of food, particularly the milk with which children are fed.

I could [illegible] the services of a health visitor might be utilised in such cases a system of voluntary notification of the occurrence of [illegible] cases of diarrhœa would result, and [illegible] be [illegible], and I think if parents realised the many advantages likely to accrue from the [illegible] of such skilled advice, they would [illegible] only [illegible] it should [illegible] necessary, show [illegible] in this [illegible] be done, they would [illegible] no grudge the trouble entailed in voluntarily notifying the occurrence of [illegible] in their homes. It is perfectly obvious that without such notification these cases must remain unknown from the knowledge of the [illegible] officials, who consequently [illegible] to render any help to their remarks on infant mortality, there can be no [illegible] to me to [illegible] valuable child life [illegible] annually, some of which at any rate might have been saved by assistance of the kind I have just discussed, and I notwithstanding [illegible] of economy, the money [illegible] which visitor might do much towards grappling in a practical manner with this evil of child mortality, and I look forward confidently to the good arising from it, although there are other points relating to healthy housing and home surroundings that might be dealt with when discussing tuberculosis, which [illegible] also have a strong bearing upon this question of infant and child mortality, and with our [illegible] of which the whole of all the health visitors in the world will be fruitless.

MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee while under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or pain ful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence. Many sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 on Alternate Saturdays, May 16th and 30th. Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION.
ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s.
SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
SPECIAL NOTICE.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

AVIATION AND AGRICULTURE.

In view of the scheme for the establishment of aviation works in Barkston Ash the future of the industry will have an increasing interest for residents. Workshops for the construction of aircraft are to be erected at Barlow, and in a comparatively short time this rural district will be transformed into a busy industrial centre. The employment of aeroplanes in war has now passed the theoretical stage, and Lieut.-Col. F. H. Sykes, of the Royal Flying Corps, in an article in the "Quarterly Review," makes the prophecy that "in the European campaign of to-morrow, aerial supremacy will probably prove the dominant factor." The air-craft, although a wonderful machine, is not yet capable of playing the part of a fighting unit, but almost every day brings some improvement. A device has been invented to keep aeroplanes automatically stable, but whether stability depends upon the success of the invention or the skill of the pilot has not yet been fully proved. The aeroplane has to advance a great deal before it can become an effective weapon, for even bomb-throwing is an uncertain and difficult operation when moving at a speed of anything up to sixty miles an hour. The value of aeroplanes in war is their adaptability for purposes of reconnaissance, and it is by bringing this to a fine art that airmen are going to turn the tide of battle. In Tripoli, the Balkans, and on numerous occasions, the possibilities of scouting by air have been demonstrated, but the inexperience of the observers and their ignorance of the essentials have detracted from their success. But Lieutenant-Colonel Sykes thinks many changes will yet be made, and the evolution of aircraft is still in its initial stages. "We may soon," he says, "have to consider such problems as the types of craft best suited for work with the cavalry, with headquarters of the Army, and with flashing divisions; the type best adapted to the requirements of a battle squadron, of a lumbering armoured destroyer, of a scout flotilla, and possibly of transport, convoy, and repair craft. The forerunners of these fighting aircraft are 'already with us.'" He also gives the assurance that, in the matter of design and construction of aeroplanes, in peace and organization, Great Britain undoubtedly leads. The construction of air-craft is, therefore, likely to become a great industry, employing many men, and the new undertaking in Barlow will bring many changes in that district. When the works are in full working order, the appearance of an aeroplane flying over Barkston Ash will probably be an everyday occurrence, and the inhabitants generally will have more than ordinary interest in the evolution of aircraft.

"Let us take a leaf out of the Labour Party's book as regards organization," suggested a member at the last meeting of the Yorkshire Union of Agricultural Clubs and Chambers of Agriculture, with which the organizations at Tadcaster, Wetherby, Selby, and Sherburn are affiliated. This would indicate that the farming community are beginning to realise the value of organization and combination, and with every legitimate movement in this direction no sensible person will find any fault. A demand has been put forward by agriculturists for increased representation in Parliament, and, in their own interests, they would be very foolish, indeed, if they did not avail themselves of every opportunity to enforce this demand. Farmers are entitled to adopt whatever measures they deem prudent and wise to conserve and protect their interests, just as agricultural labourers are within their right in forming trade combinations, or demanding direct Parliamentary representation to improve their position. Farmers are fighting their own battle by forming trading societies, by which commodities are obtained for them at a cheaper rate, and Chambers of Agriculture, through which they seek to influence legislation in the interests of their own industry, and farm hands, in various parts of the country, have formed themselves into unions with the avowed object of forcing up wages and improving living and working conditions. It has frequently been asserted that the interests of farmers and labourers are the same, but recent movements have given a contradiction to that assertion, and in the future it will probably be discovered that the two classes will take independent action. It is easy for people to delude themselves for a time, but the truth will eventually be forced upon them. Some farmers have serious objections to agricultural labourers combining for their own protection, but it is based on purely selfish grounds, because if the agriculturists themselves have the right to organize in their own interests, the same principle cannot be wrong when adopted by another class. One farmer advocated following the example of the Labour Party, who are supposed to stand for the aggrandisement of a class, and it is interesting to know that the Workers' Union, which so many agricultural labourers have joined, is affiliated with the Labour Party. Great movements have a way of permeating every class, and the country population must inevitably come under their influence. It was advocated that farmers "must sink politics and go in for agriculture," but this is easier said than done. Political feeling is as intense in the country as elsewhere, and it would probably be very difficult to get any considerable number of electors to support a candidate who differed from them on all questions save agriculture. It is not impossible, under present conditions, to form a group to act together on agricultural questions, but the formation of an Independent Agricultural Party is a dream. Farmers are not strong enough to return candidates without the support of the political parties, but there is no reason why they should not use the electoral power they possess to securing the return of men in sympathy with their aims and objects. In many constituencies farmers, by voting one way, might manage to get representatives to suit them, but they could not return them without support from other sections of the community. These members would be allied to some political party, but on agricultural questions they would act together. That seems to be the only way by which farmers could obtain their ends. What agriculturists, however, should do first is to strengthen their local organizations. The great majority of farmers are at the present time unconnected with these organizations, and the whole class must learn the value of unity before it realizes its strength.

The West Riding County Council have issued formal notices under Section 8 of the Education Act, 1902, that they propose to provide a new public elementary school for about 750 children at Selby.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Hon. R. E. Kitson, Col. A. M. Sugden-Murray, and Mr W. Lupton.

LIBERALISM.—At the annual Council meeting of the Normanton Division Liberal Association at Wakefield on Friday night, Mr J. H. Goodson was re-elected president, and Mr J. H. Johnson re-elected secretary. Mr Johnson, who has been secretary for many years, resigned that position owing to ill-health.

HOUSING.—On Saturday seventeen members of Rothwell Housing Society sang a birthday ode to complete the first year's tenancy of Ambergate, (47 miles). Results:—A. Hodgkinson 1,542 and 1,500, W. Dobson 1,530 and 1,451, G. Ward 1,525, T. Kellet 1,469, Pte. Dyson 1,458, T. Nurse 1,429, E. Bulmer 1,450.

MAINTENANCE OF PARENTS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Patrick Gilliard, of Hunslet, was summoned by the Hunslet Guardians for non-maintenance of parents. Arrears to the amount of £7 6s. An order for payment was made. Defendant, who said he could not pay, was told that if he thought the amount too much, he must apply to the Bench in the usual way.

GUARDIANS.—Of the four Rothwell representatives on the Hunslet Board of Guardians, Mrs Dickenson had the best attendance at the Board meetings, last year. Out of a possible twenty-seven times she made twenty-five attendances. Mr J. Butterick ranked second with twenty four attendances, and Mr W. Lunn and Mr W. Stead made eighteen and seventeen respectively. Mr Stead had the best attendance of the members of the Children's Homes Committee, having been present thirty times out of a possible thirty-one.

THE LATE MR G. BARKER.—There was a large gathering at the funeral of the late Mr George Barker, of Rothwell, which took place at the Rothwell Churchyard, on Friday. The deceased, who was a partner in the firm of Messrs A and G Barker, painters and decorators, Rothwell, was well-known and highly respected. He was a member of the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, and Workingman's Club, the Bowling Club, and the Oulton and Woodlesford Friendly Society. Mr Barker died after a comparatively short illness, and he leaves a son and a daughter. A large number of friends of the deceased walked in front of the coffin, and the employés, both past and present, followed behind. All the blinds of the houses in Commercial Street were drawn as the cortège passed through. The service both in the church and at the graveside was conducted by the vicar of Rothwell (the Rev. G. W. Bence), assisted by the curate (the Rev. Wrenche). The principal mourners were:—Mr Chris Barker and Miss Maggie Barker (son and daughter), Mr and Mrs Andrew Barker (brother and sister-in-law), Mrs Marriel and Mr Tom Barker, Mrs Birkett, Mr and Mrs Archie Batty, Mr and Mr T. P. Whiteley, Mr and Mrs A. Binks, Mr and Mrs W Bennett, Mrs Jarvis Batty, Mr and Mrs Batty, Miss Mr and Miss J. R. Senior, Mrs W. Batty, Miss Bennett, Mr and Mrs John Dobson, Miss Alfred, Mr and Mrs W. Wright, Mr and Mrs J. Hirst, Mr and Mrs H. Clark, and Nurses Barker and Hague. Among others present were Mr Norman Elliott, Mr J. B. Hindle, Mr J. Armitage, Mr W. E. Richardson, Mr B. Wood Higgins (Oulton), Mr T. Wilson, Mr B. Wood Higgins (Oulton), Mr H. Newsome (Oulton), Mr W. Lockwood (Oulton), Mr T. Cooper (Oulton), Mr A. Marshall, Mr T. Stainer, sen., Mr T. Young (Carlton), Mr H. Worsnop, Mr J. Harrison, Mr J. Morton, Mr Wm. Ward, Mr W. BOWERS ALLERTON

WESLEY AND HIS TIMES.—At the Mission Hall Bible Class on Friday evening Mr Barton, of Castleford, gave an interesting address on John Wesley. He said Wesley brought his great influence to bear on social life in England during the time of the French Revolution. Wesley's father was the rector of a small parish with a small income, but he believed in high thinking, and he, therefore, sent his sons to Oxford University. While there John Wesley founded the Holy Club, which did much social work. He afterwards went to America, but his mode of conducting services proved a transgression of the American ecclesiastical law, and he had to leave hurriedly. Opposition also dogged his preaching in England, one by one the doors of the Nonconformist churches were closed against him, and he became a "field" preacher. He, however, secured a great following, and his services sometimes began at 5 a.m. John Wesley's marriage was a failure, his wife leaving him shortly after the wedding, and he never heard of her again until some time after her death. A short discussion followed, and Mr Robinson asked, seeing John Wesley was a field preacher, how it was that when the chief founder of Primitive Methodism, who was a Wesleyan, wanted to be a field preacher, he was turned from the Wesleyan body. Mr Barton answered the question by saying that most churches got what he would call too respectable.

THE BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT.—Mr W. M. Martin, of Chestnut Avenue, who is District Scoutmaster for North-East Leeds, has agreed to take charge of the Crossgates Troop, and as he is an excellent officer, and is on good terms with the lads, the movement will probably continue to make progress. Mr Hall, who has been the popular Scoutmaster for several years, intends to devote his energies and time to other work, and he resigned, but he will always be ready to assist the troop when he is required. Mr Martin will receive the loyal support of eight young officers, and the troop, with "Silver Wolfs," and the flag, which has six "Cordons" of 55. Is fortunate in obtaining the services of an experienced and enthusiastic Scoutmaster. The troop is splendidly equipped, having a fire service, signalling section, pioneer section, and ambulance section, while at least four members have wireless telegraphy installations. At the present time the Scouts are trying to raise money on behalf of the blind in the district, and several lads have already earned something for this purpose. They work for anyone who will employ them, and the remuneration for their labour goes to help the blind.

FERRYBRIDGE

FARMER'S DEATH.—Major Arundel, coroner, held an inquest at Ferrybridge on Saturday afternoon, touching the death of Mr Thomas Atkinson, farmer, residing at Bubwith House, Post-fract, who died on Friday, aged 71. Deceased was in his yard on Tuesday when a pear tree in his orchard last September, and he had been bedfast since. The jury returned a verdict that death was due to a broken thigh caused by misadventure.

GARFORTH

Garforth W.M. bowlers have been drawn to play Holbeck in the Yorkshire Consolation Cup Competition on May 30th.

A GARFORTH MAN.—Mr. J. P. Houlton, J.P., Mansfield, managing director of the Hobsover Colliery Company, has been asked to become Liberal candidate for North-East Derbyshire, when Captain Donner and Labour candidates are already in the field. Mr Houlton, who is a son of the late Mr Charles Houlton, of Garforth, was formerly president of the Division Liberal Association.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Excellent programmes continue to attract large audiences at the Garforth Picture House, and the enterprise of the management is appreciated. Some good things are promised for next week. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights Gaumont's great masterpiece "The Curse of Greed," which, it is stated, introduces the most marvellous storm scene ever produced, will be the feature. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday will be the beautiful scenic film "Picturesque Spots in Yorkshire." For the second half of the week the thrilling and sensational drama "The Dead Man's Child," in which there is an exciting leap from a bridge on to a moving train, will have pride of place. "Grandad," a pathetic little study of a civil war veteran, and the amusing picture "Our Bab" will improve sure draws, and other films of interest will complete the programmes. For times and prices see advert.

MOTORIST'S OFFENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Andrew Hodson Anson, farmer, of Hamble-ton, was summoned for driving a motor car at Garforth, on Saturday, April 19th, without a red rear light. P.C. Beevor stated that about 9.45 p.m. he saw the defendant drive past in a motor-car, which had no red rear light. The defendant pulled up at the Miners' Arms, where he was seen by the officer. When told he would be reported he said he hoped it would not be necessary. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

KIPPAX

PARISH CHURCH.—There was a good attendance at the women's service held in the Parish Church on Sunday afternoon, and the Vicar gave an interesting short paper on "Prayer."

MOTOR ACCIDENT.—Whilst fetching his child from the middle of the Leeds and Selby Road on Thursday, Mr Thomas Collinson met with a serious accident. A motor car came along and knocked him down, causing serious injury.

POLITICS.—In connection with the Castleford and District Labour Association, an open-air meeting was held in Mount Pleasant, Kippax, on Sunday afternoon, when addresses were given by Mr G. Goodenough and Mr E. Hough. The Labour and Socialist policy was briefly outlined by the speakers.

BOWLING.—A meeting of the Rivers Board, the report of the Domestic Sewage and Solid Refuse Committee, which was adopted, recommended that the Todcaster Rural Council be approached with a view to a scheme for the extension and improvement of their Kippax sewage works were submitted to the Local Government Board without further delay, application for permission for non-compliance with the order of the court in force against them would be considered.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—Special services were held in this church on Sunday, and the preacher was the Rev. J. Comber Naftrass, B.A., B.D., of Haworth. In the afternoon the Micklefield Wesleyan choir, assisted by friends, gave a creditable rendering of the sacred cantata "Day of Rest," under the direction of Mr W. Sutton. The solo parts were efficiently sung by Mrs W. Sutton (contralto), Mrs Roe (soprano), Mr G. W. Taylor (tenor), and Mr W. Ladyed (bass). Mr H. Summerson was the organist. Mr B. Plows presided over a fairly large and appreciative congregation. A public tea, kindly given by Mr J. B. Hobbs, was provided on Monday in the Sunday School. The collections were for the Trust Fund.

KIPPAX DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.—The monthly meeting of Kippax District Education Committee was held on Tuesday, at Kippax Council Offices, Mr E. Bentley (Chairman), presiding. The other members present were Messrs Isaac Robinson, S R Silverwood, J Farrant, E Parker, (Newton), W. Mellor, J. Crowell, J. Harding, and Mrs Eastwood with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell). Accounts which totalled £59 12s. 1½d. were passed for payment. Questions were asked as to the seeds purchased for use in the school garden at Bond-end-Alberton, and as to whether there was any return for the outlay. The Clerk: We sell the garden produce, and the gardens are self-supporting. The attendance scheme was deferred at the last meeting pending inquiry relating to the possible working of it in connection with the one in operation in Castleford, and this was again deferred after a brief explanation had been given by Mrs Lowther. Mr T. Booth wrote with reference to the charge of £1 2s. which was paid to Mr Lockett (Sutton), for repairing a harmonium that took place just recently, and he applied for the return of 2s. 6d. It was intended, to make this an annual event, and he asked if the Committee would agree to their paying the charge. The Council School next Easter. The committee agreed to give the use of the Council School next Easter, but decided not to return the 2s. 6d. Mr Howell to return the 2s. for increased remuneration for his work as head teacher in connection with the evening classes held at Kippax Council School. It was agreed to defer consideration of the matter. Mr Farrant raised the question of teachers' fees for concerts and balls and he asked who they were paid. The Clerk: They are paid quarterly. A public tea, kindly given by Mr Parker: It is better to have a definite time. There was some discussion in regard to this matter. Mr Robinson asked in what district the children who resided at Hollinhurst were. The Clerk: In Castleford. Mr Robinson said he thought that a circular ought to be sent to the children's attendance at school in regard to matters in that particular locality. It was decided to write the county authorities on this matter.

RATES.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday a man was summoned by the Kippax overseers for non-payment of the poor rate and sanitary rate to the amount of 15s. 6d. and 3s. 7½d. respectively. A warrant was granted.

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—Special services were held in the United Methodist Church on Sunday, and Mr James Redpath, of Castleford, was the preacher. The service of song "In His steps," was given in the afternoon, under the direction of Mr J. Radcliffe. The solos were sung by Miss Holliday, Mrs Irving Goodall, Mrs Townend, and Miss Alice Goodall. Mr F. Smith and Mr J. Farrant. The special soloist was Madame Carter, of Leeds, who contributed the solos "Come unto Me" and "The Lord is my shepherd." The consecutive readings were given by Mrs H. Denton, while Mr Alexander Plows presided. At the evening service the choir sang "And the glory" (Handel), while "Return, O wanderer" (from mighty Kings) were finely sung by Madame Carter. The organ and pianoforte accompaniments were played by Mr Wilfred Holliday. The afternoon's public meeting provided in the church, and this was followed by a social in the evening. The young lady members of the choir, who served the tea, also looked after the refreshments at the social. The collection and the proceeds of the tea, which were for the Choir Fund, were in excess of last year's, and realised over £5. The Rev. H. W. B. Chubb, the circuit superintendent minister (Castleford), was the preacher at the Thursday evening service.

MIDDLETON

Mr T. Thomas, of Middleton, the chairman of the Hunslet Board of Guardians, was present at twenty-one meetings of the Board out of a possible twenty-seven.

METHLEY

Mr Thomas Illingworth, of Garden Cottage, Watergate, Methley, whose death occurred on the 25th February, has left property to the value of £7,242 gross, of which the net personalty is sworn at nil.

A RAID ON A DUCK POND.—Two Methley miners, named Christopher Robinson and Harry Moores, were charged at Wakefield on Friday with stealing three ducks (value 12s.), the property of Messrs Hy. Briggs, Son, and Company (Limited), on Wednesday, 8th April. Detective-sergeant Edward Barham gave evidence that he heard a gun report on the day in question, and saw some men running away from a pond, with the ducks. He followed, and they dropped the ducks and gun away, but he could not recognise the men. Suspicion fell on the defendants, and Robinson admitted borrowing the gun, along with Moores, but they denied shooting any ducks. A fine of 21s., or one month, was imposed on each defendant.

OULTON

In aid of the trust funds of the Oulton United Methodist Church a number of song entitled "Little Abe," was rendered on Sunday by the married people's choir. Mr Williams was the organist and conductor.

Chubb, the circuit superintendent minister (Castleford), was the preacher at the Thursday evening service.

HUNSLET RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL.

CHAIRMAN AND THE YEAR'S WORK.

LEEDS AND THE DISTRICT.

TEMPLENEWSAM AND A NURSING SCHEME

The annual meeting of the Hunslet Rural District Council was held at the Council Offices, Leek Street, Hunslet, on Thursday afternoon. Mr Thomas (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Mr P. S. Marsden (vice-chairman), Mr G. Armitage, Mr D. W. Hargreaves, Mr W. Verity, and Mr J. Flanagan, with the Clerk (Mr W. B. Pindar), the medical officer (Dr J. Buck), the sanitary inspectors (Messrs W. Whitehead and P. C. Higgins), and the surveyor (Mr J. Nuttall).

A vote of thanks to the Chairman for his services during the past year was carried on the proposition of Mr D. W. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr W. Verity.

LEEDS AND THE DISTRICT

Mr Thomas, in response, thanked the Council and said—"In some respects it was an eventful year, for at one period our continued existence as an independent authority was threatened, in common with that of many other districts, by the ambition of the City of Leeds to extend its boundaries. Needless to say, these proposals were met by the strongest opposition from the whole districts, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that the protests which were made were not with effect on the central authority at the Local Government Board, and the annexation schemes of the large cities were dropped like hot potatoes, or there is no doubt the promoters would have got their fingers badly burnt. The task of improving the sewerage disposal works at Halton was taken in hand, and a satisfactory scheme prepared at an estimated cost of £3,000. But here again I regret to say the Leeds Corporation have actively attempted to thwart and hinder the Council in the execution of their sanitary duties, bringing pressure to bear on the Local Government Board, to refuse their sanction to the Council's proposals. The Council stuck to their guns, as you know, and I am pleased to be able to inform you that the formal sanction of the Local Government Board to the scheme will be held before you at to-day's meeting. A considerable amount of time has been occupied in the preparation of the Templenewsam Nursing Scheme. The Council were authorised to propose this scheme in August last, and we have the satisfaction of being one of the first rural districts to undertake such work. It is hoped that the draft scheme will very shortly be submitted for consideration, but this is dependent upon the first portion of the work which, owing to its great importance, ought not to be hurried, but should receive our most careful consideration in all the different stages. Preliminary steps have also been taken for the preparation of a town-planning scheme for Bullerthorpe and Whitkirk, and in conjunction with the Rothwell Council we successfully resisted the application of the Tramway Company to abandon the promised line to Rothwell, and it is hoped that the Company will endeavour to complete the undertaking at an early date. The Leeds Corporation are seeking power to construct a tramway from Halton to Halton. Boggart Hill, but we consent the Council insisted on an undertaking from the Corporation that the line will be completed within two years from the date on which they obtain the powers. The house-to-house inspection of Middleton has been completed, and great progress made in Templenewsam, and Oulton-with-Woodlesford. These systematic inspections have proved most useful, for though no serious nuisances are to be found in the property in this district, a considerable number of small defects are brought to light, and remedied, with the goodwill both to the owner and occupier. Six private streets were made up during the year at a total cost of £490, and this branch of the Council's work is now nearing completion. Another important improvement, involving the stopping up of several useless footpaths, and the construction of a fine new thoroughfare in Middleton, to be known as Acre Mills Approach, has progressed for approval at the next Quarter Sessions. A satisfactory agreement has been entered into with the County Council for the treatment of the whole of the district for cases of infectious tuberculosis, whereby only one-fourth of the cost of such treatment will fall on the District Council. The question of the appointment of an administrator of a combined nursing scheme for the district is also under consideration. An arrangement has been entered into with the Rothwell Council for the provision of a joint cemetery for the use of the inhabitants of Rothwell and Oulton-with-Woodlesford. The lighting of Fleet Lane, Oulton, which appears from the minute books to have been a bone of contention for forty years, has been resolved on, and is expected to take effect during the present year. There are no signs yet of any revival in the building trade in the district." Mr Thomas moved a vote of thanks to Mr Marsden, who, he said, had been of good service to him as vice-chairman.

Mr Marsden replied, and said he was always a great pleasure to come to the meetings, because they met on friendly grounds, and they never had any axes to grind in any shape or form. They had not the power of taxation, and therefore they when considered some of the committees they had to attend.

Mr Thomas was re-elected chairman, on the proposition of Mr Marsden, seconded by Mr. Hargreaves.

Mr Verity and Mr J. Flanagan supported.

Mr Thomas returned thanks, and said if he could do anything to keep the rates as they were at the present time he would do it.

Mr P. S. Marsden was re-elected vice-chairman on the motion of Mr Verity, seconded by Mr Hargreaves.

Mr Marsden also replied.

Mr Thomas was appointed to serve as representative of the Council on the Wakefield and District Smallpox Committee.

The Chairman, vice-chairman, Mr Armitage, and Mr Hargreaves were elected on Lunacy and Sewage Works Committee. The representatives on Rothwell Hospital Committee are Mr Hargreaves and Mr Thomas, and on Templenewsam Nursing Brigade Committee, Mr Marsden and Mr Verity.

Mr Marsden said they would soon want a committee for Woodlesford.

HEALTH OF THE DISTRICT

The medical officer's report for the past four weeks showed that fourteen births had been registered in the district—seven in Oulton-with-Woodlesford, six in Templenewsam, and one in Middleton. During the same period fifteen deaths were recorded—three for Oulton-with-Woodlesford, seven in Templenewsam, and three in Middleton. Five cases of scarlet fever, all from Oulton-with-Woodlesford, were notified, and there had been one case of enteric. There was no diphtheria, and the doctor, and Oulton-with-Woodlesford was the only part of the district where there were any cases of scarlet fever.

LEEDS AND TEMPLENEWSAM

The Clerk reported that he had received formal notice from the Leeds Corporation of their intention to borrow the loan required for the extension to the Templenewsam Sewage Works. The sanction was for £1,000 for the first seven years, and a further £300 for future years. All that was wanted now was for the Council to give permission for the advertising of tenders, and to see to the raising of the loan.

Mr Pindar reported that a deputation waited on the Improvements Committee of the Leeds Corporation with reference to their town-planning scheme, which proposed the inclusion of the piece of land on which the sewage works were situated. Of course, the Council knew what the intention was, but the deputation seemed to destroy the works so that they would be dependent on Leeds for sewage disposal. The Council had, however, pressed their objection. A few days ago he had received a letter in reply from the Clerk to the Leeds Corporation stating "that the Corporation could not agree to the exclusion of the land forming the site of the Halton Sewage Works." He supposed, naturally the Council would have of expressing their objection would be at the Local Government Board enquiry into the scheme.

TEMPLENEWSAM AND NURSING

In connection with the county nursing scheme a party of ladies met the Templenewsam district attended the meeting. Before the ladies arrived the Clerk said the nursing scheme arose in this way. The County Council had adopted the Notification of Births Act, which, he believed, came into operation on the first of June. The County Council would be responsible for the medical inspection of school children, and in connection with these two duties they had resolved to establish a nursing service throughout the whole county. They thought it would be of advantage, and would lessen the cost of nursing if the District Council would combine with them in appointing and paying nurses where the District Council could derive advantages from any scheme the County Council rendered. They also thought it would have the same effect of, in the case of nursing associations maintained by voluntary subscriptions, the nurses would likely be employed in carrying out the duties which the County Council wanted them to perform in their district, subject to a grant being made by the County Council in the district where the nursing association funds. The proposed scale of grants was at the rate of £100 for every 15,000 population so that the grant for Templenewsam from the County Council would be £200. It was estimated that the inclusive salary should not be less than £100, which would mean that £80, would have to be found locally either by subscription or the Council.

Dr Buck said it would be much better if they could get the nurse at Templenewsam to do the whole work. There was a clause in the Midwives Act which she could perform, and he looked upon a nurse as being better than a health visitor. She could report upon insanitary houses, and could inspect the workshops in which women were employed.

Mrs Fisher, live in number, Mrs P. S. Marsden, Mrs Ashbury, Mrs Crosthwaite, Mrs Carr, and Nurse Harrop were then called into the room. Some amusement was provided at the humorous remark of Mr Armitage, who asked the Chairman if he had the assurance that the ladies were not suffragettes.

The Chairman, in his introduced the ladies, said there were some valuable pictures on the walls, and he hoped they would not use their hatchets (Laughter).

Dr. Buck asked if the nurse was sufficiently trained to take up the duties?

Mrs Marsden said the nurse had a great deal of secretarial work to do, which kept her occupied when she got home at night.

In answer to a question, Dr. Buck said the birth-rate of Templenewsam last year was 63, an average of one a week.

Mrs Crosthwaite said that if the nurse took up additional work her own work would have to suffer.

The Clerk: If she was desperately busy she must leave the least important work to some other time.

The Chairman said the feeling in Templenewsam was to keep out the County Council.

Mr Armitage: We are not afraid of that, but we don't see why they want to interfere with us.

Mr Thomas said it would probably do away with the care of children committee.

Dr. Buck said the most formidable work would be the school medical inspection.

The deputation expressed the opinion that the voluntary subscriptions would be stopped.

Mrs Marsden said the ladies were going to have a meeting the next day, and they could then thrash out the question and give an answer later.

The Clerk said if they had a meeting they should come to a decision.

Before the ladies left the Chairman said the Council were in sympathy with the cause, and anything they could do would be done.

OULTON AND WOODLESFORD AND NURSING

A letter was read from Mrs Lowther, of Swillington, with regard to the proposed scheme for Oulton-with-Woodlesford. She stated that three nurses they had could take up duties at Oulton, Woodlesford, and Swillington respectively.

Dr. Buck said the nurses could not be called trained nurses in any sense, as they had only had a few weeks in slime London maternity hospitals and could only act as a help during the time of confinement and help in looking after the home. If they were going to take up school work they would have to be trained nurses, and if they could not supply a nurse the Coutny Council would do so.

It was moved by Mr Armitage that the Clerk write to Mrs Lowther stating that the County Council could not recognise the nurses they had at the present time employed in their district, and the Council would leave it in the hands of the County Council.

Mr Hargreaves seconded, and the resolution was carried.

Primitive Methodist Synod.

CHURCH AND NATIONAL LIFE.

The proceedings of the Leeds District Synod held by the Primitive Methodists (reported elsewhere) were brought to a fitting conclusion at Tadcaster by the holding of a "great public meeting," at which the subject of "The Church and National Life" was the theme to which the speakers directed their attention.

Mr F. Laughton presided, and the vice-chairman was Mr F. Sainter.

The Rev. E. H. Pickwood (Castleford) said he had tremendous interest in the questions that touched social and industrial life at every point. There was to-day a new humanism that was opposed to materialism. Materialism as a theory of life was a bankrupt doctrine. The outlook of the Christian Church was to seek its own emancipation. The new attention which the Church was giving to the questions that affected our religious, social, and national well-being did not mean the surrender of their evangelical ideals, but was rather a response to the great work and call of Christ to-day. It was the Church's duty to find that vision of reality and revelation in the first obligation of life. It must at all costs consolidate those principles for the guidance of its life. They had always had great ideals which in their minds pulsed and throbbed, leading in their minds them more upward in the grand march of existence. Brotherhood was destined to be supreme and was spreading its roots in the earth. The great question of peace was becoming one of the most important international affairs. The time would come when the world would not think at its ideal. To promote this great time was the mission of the Christian Church. They could not tolerate the contrast between poverty as they knew it and riches was one of the abominations of modern life that in the immediate future would need drastic treatment, which it was bound at all costs to receive. The great industrial unrest needed consulting. When men received the minimum wages, oftentimes the price of commodities of life rose simultaneously. What was the use of a national guarantee when they were always left huddled together in one room? The duty of the Church was to hear the cry of the poor. They must not only minister to their needs, but to their souls. They must teach them to live for service and duty. They must strike the note of hope so that the future would be theirs indeed. (Applause).

Rev. R. Barber, of Harehills Avenue Church, Leeds, said they recognised a tendency in every age which might be termed the spirit of the ages and which determined its needs. In the first great work of the Christian era was by the light of history. Their position in the nation's life would be tested by their adaptation to the needs of the present time. The average man had a profound contempt for sensational matters. The Church must not attempt to keep up with the Hippodrome. There was a tendency to lag to put a cargo of coke into the lighter and consider class distinctions. There must be no Lunacy.

ACCIDENTAL FISHER LOSES HIS TACKLE.—His Honour Judge Greenwood gave judgment in the Otley County Court on Wednesday in a case of interest to farmers and cattle dealers. Joseph Hastings, of Burley, claimed £40 15s. from Ernest Todd, farmer and cattle dealer, Burley, for damages for the loss of tackle and alleged breach of warranty on the sale of a cow, or, in the alternative, for damages for alleged fraudulent representation. Plaintiff's case was that he purchased the cow at a public auction Mart by the defendant, who, prior to its being offered for sale, called the plaintiff aside and told him that the animal had been a good cow in every way. He explained its thinness by saying that it had been put in a poor place. When the cow was offered for sale the auctioneer turned to Todd, and said, "Is that correct?" and Todd replied in the affirmative. A few days after the purchase, the cow developed a cough, and later was found to be suffering from tuberculosis, and had to be slaughtered. Defendant's contention was that he had bought the cow a couple of days previously, and there was then no sign of disease. His Honour held that there was an expressed warranty, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff for the full amount.

RESERVIST KILLED.—Frederick John Finley, of Wood-end Observatory, Armley-park, employed as a labourer, at the Ordnance Oil and Cake Mills, Stourton, was killed on the Selby Cottage Hospital on Monday evening, when he was knocked down by shocking injuries received while on the jetty of the mill near the river Ouse. It appeared that he was about to put a cargo of cake into the lighter with the hydraulic crane.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.—Mr Percy Barker, of Cross-street, Castleford, was knocked down by a motor-cycle and sidecar driven by Mr Arthur Hall, of Wakefield, on Saturday night, and died from his injuries on Sunday morning. Mr Hall was driving at a moderate speed, and was not to blame for the accident.

WETHERBY CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

LIBERALS' CONFIDENCE—A BOAST TO BE IGNORED.

SPEECH BY CAPTAIN BOYD CARPENTER

The annual dinner of the Wetherby Conservative Association was held on Tuesday night in the Town Hall, Wetherby. About a hundred members sat down to an excellent repast. Mr. J. S. Clarke-smith (chairman of the association) presided, and supporting him at the table were Capt. Boyd-Carpenter, Harrogate; Mr. W. H. P. Ivey, Mr. K. F. Severs, Mr. J. Harrison-Broadley, Mr. J. Thompson, Mr. J. P. Allen, and Sergt. and Mrs. McGregor (hon. secretary). Mr. G. Lane Fox, M.P., being absent, was unavoidably absent, partly due to ill-health, and partly to the fact that he was having a meeting at Lincoln by his Parliamentary colleague. Letters were also received from others who were apologies for their absence were Lord Helmsley, Lord Esher, Major Dent, Mr. Brodrick, Dr. Dalton, Mr. H. C. Wilson, Mr. E. Lane Fox, Mr. J. Bolton, and others.

TOASTS AND SUCCESS

In the course of the loyal toasts had been duly honoured, submitted the toast of "The Members—Mr. G. Lane Fox," the motion to which he came was the signal for an outburst of enthusiastic applause. The Chairman said he was sure glad all would agree with him when he expressed regret at the absence of their member. (Applause). This was doubly regretted, because one of the reasons of his absence, but they were because of that doubly proud of him that in spite of ill-health he remained where his duties as his constituents lay, namely, at his desk. He was detained in London by his Parliamentary duties. Mr. Fox had taken a leading part in maintaining the integrity of the Empire, and as a Unionist like the present it was only right that he should be helping at headquarters. But they had obtained a gentleman who was well-known to them all—Captain S. Boyd-Carpenter, to address them. Referring to the statements recently made at the annual meeting of the Barkston Ash Liberal Association, that they (the Liberals) were confident of winning the seat at the next election, the Chairman said that it was a boast all Conservatives in the division might well ignore, for they were confident Mr. Fox would be returned not merely with a majority, but with a majority larger than his last. (Loud applause). Nevertheless they did not mean to rest on their laurels. As Mr. Redmond would put it, they were going on full steam ahead. Mr. Fox had addressed meetings all over the division, and that his personal popularity and the popularity of his cause were growing there could be no doubt from the enthusiasm evinced at those meetings.

SPEECH BY CAPT. BOYD CARPENTER

Captain Boyd Carpenter said that some might think that an election would come very soon, but whether it came soon or late they could be assured of one thing, and that was that the Government would not face the country on the cry of Appeal. There was, too, every reason to believe that the Court of Appeal would uphold the decision already given. That would mean had the £3,500,000 collected illegally from the landowners of this country would have to be restored to them, and the total result of the land policy would be that the burden of taxation had unnecessarily been forced on the country, and without any good result. This was not all the Government had done from the point of view of national burdens. They had increased the expenditure on the civil services from £29,000,000 pounds to £34,000,000 in 1914, and there was a permanent increase of £5,000,000, most of which was due to the enormous increase of officials and offices in this country.

"NO ONE IS SORRY."

When one considered that the Government had created 5,253 new officials, most of them without examination or with any other apparent qualification, it would be seen that they were drifting towards a system which Mr. Gilbert in Sullivan described in one of their comic operas as a condition when "Everyone is somebody, who from no one is nobody." (Laughter and applause). They had expended £4,750,000 on Insurance Stamps—a large part of which was to cost £600,000 to distribute. £4 insurance medical benefits. The only reason why this sort of thing went on was because the Government thought there was an unlimited supply of money to be drawn upon. But that was not so. He had the British people were taxed to-day heavier than any of the great countries of the world except one, and in the long run the greatest burden of taxation fell upon that portion of the people least able to endure it. (Hear, hear). The poorer classes of the country were those who were badly hit by increased taxation because their resources were smallest, and the part upon which they had to draw was less than in the case of the rich. He was sure that the time must come to hardship and reduction of their small comforts of life. It belonged to the Unionist party to see that there should be no waste of public money, and that the taxpayers received their full value for every penny they paid. (Applause). He was sure that could be done. It would be a splendid thing if they got rid of a large number of the non-productive officials which the Government had created, and of their large salaries and such useless expenditure as shone up by the land clauses in the Budget.

WORK FOR FRIENDLY SOCIETIES

The question of the cost of the administration of the National Insurance Act must also be an object of the Unionists. (Applause). The existence of four separate commissioners to administer the Act led to friction, delay, and expense. That should be got rid of at once, and by securing the cost of administration would be reduced. There must be more intimate working with the great friendly societies, who would be glad, if given more assistance with the working of the Act, to reduce the cost of the Act by removing the chief objection to the Act. (Applause). And, said Captain Boyd-Carpenter in conclusion, their aims were the restriction of financial expenditure on unnecessary officialism, and to use all the resources of the State to develop agriculture by giving opportunities to the agriculturists to become owners of the land in areas where there seemed now to be difficulty in obtaining possession of it by a system of land banks and co-operation. The same principle would be pursued in towns where they were wishful of seeing the small man own the property he lived in or gained his livelihood in. He pressed for less of shortness of cottages in the country and business in industrial districts, and for more of it. If such a power of possession (Hear, hear). If such a power of possession were placed within the reach of the small man it would give a stimulus to the building of cottages and houses, and it would be bound to have the effect of assisting the social mind, and forever silencing the cry of progress. (Loud applause).

After the Chairman and visitors had been toasted, a thoroughly enjoyable musical programme was rendered during and particularly during the evening and brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

PRIMITIVE METHODISM AT TADCASTER.

ANNUAL SYNOD

At the opening services in connection with the Leeds District annual synod at Tadcaster, the Rev. E. W. Challenger, G.E.D. (Pontefract) preached the official sermon. A large congregation listened appreciatively to his discourse.

The Synod services created great interest locally. Four young men (candidates for the ministry) came to take their written examination for the ministry. They were Mr. J. Saxton, Barnsley second; Mr. F. E. M. Kelley, Leeds second; Mr. E. Banks, Castleford; and Mr. F. Kellett, Morley. The Rev. E. Barrett conducted the examination.

The Synod opened its session on Saturday morning, and appointed as its chairman the Rev. Wm. Younger, of Harrogate; secretary, the Rev. Wm. Hullington; assistant-secretaries, the Rev. W. G. Scaffby (Bradford), and the Rev. C. T. Bissell. The preachers were the Rev. F. W. Norris and the Rev. R. H. Auty.

The various departmental committees were dealt with: Sunday schools, chapels, and the training of ministers within the district for the next connexional year. Special cases of stationing were the Rev. B. Hershaw (Leeds 1), fourth year; the Rev. F. W. Norris (Leeds 11), fifth year; the Rev. J. Henderson (Leeds 11), fourth year; the Rev. C. T. Bisbell (Leeds VI.), fourth year; the Rev. E. W. Challenger (Pontefract), fifth year; the Rev. J. W. James (Dewsbury), fourth year; the Rev. W. Pulley (Horbury), fourth year; the Rev. W. Younger (Harrogate), ninth year; the Rev. E. Lacey (Otley), fourth year.

The ministerial delegates to the annual conference at Middlesbrough are the Rev. E. W. Challenger (Pontefract), the Rev. S. Hershaw (Leeds), and the Rev. E. H. Pittwood (Castleford). The next place fixed for the next district meeting is Pontefract.

At the early morning service the two candidates—Mr. F. M. Kelly (Leeds) and Mr. E. Banks (Pontefract)—preached their trial sermons for the ministry.

In the evening a missionary demonstration was held, when the speakers were the Revs. Wm. Younger, E. W. Pope, and W. J. Tristram.

The Leeds District Primitive Methodist Synod resumed its sessions at Tadcaster on Monday, with Mr. Younger in the chair. The Rev. Wm. Younger, of Harrogate, Ministers were stationed by the Synod for the ensuing year as follows—Leeds (Quarry Hill), Rev. Samuel Hall; Leeds (Primitive Hall), Rev. Fredk. W. Norris and Joseph Henderson; Leeds (Rehoboth Central Mission), Rev. Christopher Roberts; Leeds (Stationing of ministers within the district for the next connexional year. MEETINGS AT SELBY

At the Hull District Primitive Methodist Synod, held at Selby on Saturday, the Rev. Fred Firth, B.A., of Hull, was elected chairman of the district, and Mr. W. Townend vice-chairman. The Rev. F. Winterburn was appointed secretary.

Delegates were elected to the conference. The ministerial members were the Revs. J. H. Hirst (Hull), A. J. Bull (Selby), and W. Swailes (Hull); Mrs. Ingleby (Goole), and Mrs. Jackson (Hull). Those among the lay delegates appointed.

A long discussion took place on the relation of the Sunday School to the church. A closer relationship of the two organisations was generally urged.

The Sunday School report showed a decrease of 280, but the percentage worked out at a very minor figure.

It was decided that next year's district meeting be held at Beverley.

A more substantial decrease was noted in the temperance committee's report as to the bands of hope, the membership being less by nearly 700.

In the evening a social service meeting was held in the chapel under the chairmanship of Mr. Colin Fisher. There was a large attendance. The principal address was given by the Rev. J. C. Firth on the subject of "The relation of the Church to the Manse."

The services on Sunday included a large camp meeting on the Bowling Green, at which several ministers delivered addresses.

BARKSTON ASH CRICKET COMPETITION.

QUALIFICATION OF KIRK DEIGHTON, CROSSGATES AND GARFORTH PLAYERS

A meeting of the Executive of the Barkston Ash Cricket Competition was held at the Hotel Metropole, Leeds, on Tuesday evening—Mr. W. B. Pardar (President) in the chair. Other members present were the hon. secs. (Mr. E. D. Pawson), Messrs. E. Umpleby (Crossgates Wes.), W. H. Smith (Crossgates), E. Lumb (Barwick), K. Ward (Great Preston), A. Flowith (Sec. county), H. Mosley (Barwick), W. Dawes (Hollin Wesl), A. Johnson (South Milford), E. Taylor (Shadwell), A. D. Garton (Church Fenton), Richardson (Seacroft), F. Heaps (Hallow), (Church Fenton—Scott-Lee), F. Heaps (Hallow), R. Hall (Aberford), H. Townend (Micklefield), and J. Grimshaw (Ledsham).

A letter was received from Kirk Deighton asking for the reinstatement of J. Allatson's club to the competition. It was stated that the players on our Micklefield ground had been transferred to the Micklefield Rugby club, and practically all his men.

The President: How do you say how long it is going to be played as a professional?

The Hon. Sec. said he had inquired, and he had been told that he played for Micklefield season, but that was engaged more as a groundsman than anything else.

The President: It seems to me as if he will have to wait until next season before he is reinstated as an amateur.

The Hon. Sec.: That is according to rule.

Mr. Morley asked what the man was to do this season. Was he to have no cricket?

The President: No League cricket.

The hon. sec. said that according to the rules they could not reinstate Allatson.

Mr. Ward said the rule was revised last season, and the rule in question was a good one.

The President said it might be a hardship in some cases, but it was a good rule.

Mr. Morley inquired why the rule was passed.

The President: So that men may be genuine amateurs.

It was agreed to inform Kirk Deighton that Allatson could not be reinstated according to the rules, which state that "the committee may reinstate any player as an amateur if he has not played as a professional for a period of twelve months."

Mr. Smith (Crossgates) applied for the reinstatement of Southwick, who is employed as a gardener at Templenewsam. He stated that in season 1912-13 he was employed by Mr. Claude Leatham at Wembridge, and he was paid for playing cricket. Mr. Leatham died, and Southwick was kept on as a gardener, and he was not paid for playing cricket. He did play with Worthridge last season, but not as a professionals.

Mr. Ward said that Mr. Leatham died at the end of last season, so Southwick must have been paid last year.

Mr. Smith said that Southwick stated he was not a professional last season.

Mr. Flowith said it was rather hard on the man if he could not play League cricket. Was he not eligible?

The President said that on the statement made he doubted it.

Mr. Flowith: If he has not played as a professional for twelve months he can be reinstated.

It was decided that the hon. sec. make enquiries regarding Southwick's eligibility, and also to intimate that he is qualified, he will give him permission to play.

Saxton asked permission to re-arrange their fixture with Crawood for June 13th, the date of their sports, and the matter was left with the clubs to arrange.

It was decided that the appointment of umpires for the season be left with the hon. sec.

Mr. Garforth) said that they had a player named Fordham, who worked in the colliery offices during the week, and went home to Wade field at the week-end, and they wanted to know if he was eligible to play in the League.

The President said he thought he was. His home was more in Garforth than in Wakefield.

Mr. Smith proposed that Fordham be declared eligible, and this was seconded.

Mr. Lumb: He may leave his work in a month.

The President: Then he would lose his qualification. What we have to consider is whether or not the man is a bona-fide resident.

Mr. Mackey: If he is not a resident of Garforth he is not a resident of anywhere. It is childish to argue otherwise.

The resolution declaring Fordham eligible was passed.

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

BARKSTON ASH COMPETITION.

The first meeting of the Executive for the season was held on Tuesday, and there was a very large attendance of members. No matter of prime importance was discussed, but the flagship of three men directed the attention of the members to the revised rules. Two cases concerned the reinstatement of players, and one was about a man's residential qualification at Garforth. If a man works and lives in a place two days a week he is, in my view, a bona-fide resident, and this was the opinion of the committee. Every case has to be judged on its merits, but the ruling consideration should be a bona fide resident.

The Barkston Ash League season opens on Saturday, and an excellent programme will receive the attention of enthusiasts throughout the Division. Church Fenton will be at home to their near neighbours, Saxton, and the game should be an interesting one, as my own the list, Church Fenton Steamore are at home, too, and their opponents are the strong Tadcaster team, so that Featherstons have splendid fare provided them. South Milford journey to Cawood, and should prove a profitable outing.

In division two, three doughty rivals, Garforth and Seacroft, will try conclusions on the Garforth ground, and Micklefield, at home, will have an opportunity of measuring their strength against Great Preston, who have shown themselves an improving team. Halton, who were very successful in the Junior League last season, go to Barwick, and they will probably make a good show.

In division three Crossgates, at home, have a stiff task against Halton Wes., and Whitkirk will find a strong opposition at Old Manston, where Crossgates Wes play. Shadwell will go to Collingham, and the homesters expect to do well. It is impossible at present to say much about the competing clubs, but by the end of the month cricketers will be able to form some idea as to their relative strength. What all want is good sport, good feeling, and good weather.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Several new clubs have entered the Junior League, and their progress will be closely watched. Kirk Deighton, who once got into the Senior League final, play Tadcaster A., and Ulleskelf, who distinguished themselves in the days of Herbert's captaincy, have returned, and will open against Barkston, while Milford A. will try their luck with Bramham. In division two Seacroft A. tackle Barwick A., Halton A. are at home to Micklefield A., and Garforth A. will trek to Preston, In division 3 Halton Wes. A. play the Senior League team, and Garforth Wes. have a game with Swillington and Colton, and Whitkirk A. will be at home to Crossgates Wes. 3.

MOORTOWN DEFEAT WHITKIRK.

Whitkirk came a cropper on Saturday afternoon, when their opponents were Moortown. The match was at Whitkirk, and Moortown excelled in batting form, sending up the creditable total of 78. Milford contributed 25, Loveday 15, and Arthur Shepherd 11. Their bowling, however, was very weak, and Moortown had to play for the necessary runs for a loss of only four wickets. Fraance compiled 31, and Wilson 23, while Barnfather made 13. Whitkirk seem to have a good team, and they should have a successful season.

SHERBURN v. CHURCH FENTON S.

These teams met at Sherburn, the homesters being put on to bat, and Church Fenton won by 19 runs. Sherburn were dismissed for 41 (J. Potts 11 and J. Batty 10), and their opponents replied with 60 (Wilkinson 18, and Moore 23). Batty travelled effectively for Sherburn, securing five wickets for 17 runs.

SEACROFT DEFEAT SHADWELL

Seacroft proved greatly superior to Shadwell at Seacroft, and the visitors were sent back after scoring 49, Metcalfe (16) and W. Burnett (10, not out), being the only players who made any show. J. W. Pickersgill bowled remarkably well, his 4 wickets costing only ten runs. Seacroft won handsomely with only wickets down. T. Toft making 21 and G. Thompson 23 (not out).

COLLINGHAM OPEN WELL.

On Saturday afternoon Collingham were at home to Bramham Park, and the homesters won by nine runs. Scores:—Bramham Park—Martin 15, Harland 3, Rillor 0, Simpson 0, Pearson 4, Holdsworth 1, Roberts 0, Booth 10, Barkes 2, Callaghan 1, Saynsbury 2, extras, 12; total 56. LOVE'S CROSS ROADS.

By MRS. L. T. MEADE

Author of "The Orchid Room," "The Medicine Lady," "From the Hand of the Hunter," "His Mascot," "Little Wife Hester," &c.

CHAPTER XII.

It was after dinner on that same night that Miss Patricia had an opportunity to speak alone with Paul Colthurst. The young people went out. Where else could they expect to be? There was a glorious full moon riding majestically in the sky, and the weather was perfect at Connop Grange. They wanted to walk on the soft, delicious night, they wanted to talk of those things which engaged couples imagine they have discovered for themselves alone, and always will go on imagining as long as the world lasts.

Mrs. Colthurst was very kind to Miss Patricia. She took her guest into one of the drawing-rooms, put her in an easy-chair by the open window, and, sitting not far from her, took out her knitting and began to make herself busy. In all Mrs. Colthurst's life she was commonplace. She was fond of giving utterance to little saws.

"Now," she said, just as though she were stating a fact which had never before been revealed to the world, "I think it wrong to be idle a moment. I keep my knitting for odds and ends of time. You can't imagine how much I get done by this means."

"It's an excellent plan," said Miss Patricia; "but doesn't it hurt your sight?"

Mrs. Colthurst laughed. "Of course not," she said. "I could knit with my eyes shut."

"It must be very pleasant," said Miss Patricia.

She leant back in her chair, and gave a little sigh. It was so slight it did not reach the ears of Mrs. Colthurst. Patricia was thinking of No. 10, James-street, and the people who were now most probably assembled in the Perkins' drawing-room. She thought of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, of Clara and of Jane, and their terrible musical instruments; then of the Oswalds, who did not know one musical sound from the other, pretending to admire, and flocking to hear the innumerable quartettes. She wondered what Mr. Oswald had tried to get out of Mrs. Luck and Hattie with regard to herself. She hoped it not much. She had taken very great care not to breathe to him that she was going to Connop Grange, and she had begged Mrs. Luck and Hattie not to give her address to those two persons, lest, by some means, they should quickly, all too quickly, avail himself of it. His object was, of course, to prevent the marriage of Peter and Pamela. He was clever enough to invent all sorts of schemes to help him in this direction, and Patricia was the sort of man who would not hesitate to stoop even to crime to carry out the great wish of his heart.

"You look tired," said Mrs. Colthurst to Miss Patricia.

It was just at that moment that Paul came in. He had stayed a little longer than usual in his study. He wanted his wife and his guest to become acquainted with each other, he knew well the vast difference that lay between them. He knew well that Miss Patricia and Mrs. Colthurst could never be real friends. As it was, however, his great desire to give poor Miss Patricia as good a time as possible, and to extend that time over as long a period as possible, it made it essential that his wife should at least like her. He came in now just as Mrs. Colthurst was about to suggest that Miss Patricia should retire to bed.

"You are tired," she said. "The young people may be out for some time longer. Pray don't dream of sitting up, Paul dear, for I have discovered that Miss Ransome is very tired. Do you object to her going to bed?"

"What I should like best," said Miss Patricia—she stood up as she spoke; she turned and faced Paul Colthurst—"what I should like best would be to go out for a little. The air outside would revive me far more than anything else."

"Why didn't you say so?" exclaimed Mrs. Colthurst. Her tone was one of very slight annoyance. "I'd have gone with you with pleasure."

"I will take you now, Patricia," said Paul. "I should like to," he added—"I think you will come too, won't you, dear?" He turned to his wife as he spoke.

On the whole, I think not, Paul. Miss Ransome is your old friend, and you will look after her. But please don't be tempted to sit down while you are out, for if Miss Ransome is as tired as she looks she would be very apt to take a chill in the night air. I have a few words I want to write for the mail, and will take the opportunity while you are out."

"Come," said Paul, his voice very eager. The eagerness in those tones penetrated even to Mrs. Colthurst's somewhat dull ears. She paused for a minute as though she wanted to think about something. A puzzled expression swept over her comely face. Then, shaking herself as though she would shake away a disagreeable sensation, and smiling, she sat down and began to write her letters. Before she had finished the first page of her long letter she had forgotten all about Paul and Miss Patricia Ransome.

Meanwhile, Colthurst and his guest paced up and down on the terrace. Miss Patricia was glad. This was her opportunity, and she must use it. She did not mind who saw her, but she could not bear to have her words overheard. On the terrace, no one could approach without being seen.

"I am not really tired," she said, when she got out. "but I wanted to speak to you."

"I saw that. Patricia. What is it about?" asked Paul.

"The children—Pamela and Peter."

"Colthurst gave a happy laugh. "I, too, want to speak of them," he said. "I think it wonderful, Patricia, how you have taken to you, and don't you think our little Pam is one of the sweetest girls in the world?"

"I do, most truly; she is the sweetest girl, and—Peter——"

"Yes, what do you think of Peter?"

"He is the son of my dreams. He is all that I hoped for. Paul, you give me such pleasure, such rejoicing, when I come to you to stay for a short time in the house with him, that I can find no words to thank you."

"Don't trouble to thank me," said Colthurst; "it is a pleasure to have you here. I have always had an affection for you, Patricia, you know that very well."

"We hold a secret together," said poor Miss Patricia.

"I thought," said Colthurst, speaking rather slowly, "that when you came here as my guest we had mutually made up our minds not to touch on that subject."

"I find it necessary to touch on it, Paul. But, first of all, please tell me when the child-Pamela—first knew that she loved Peter."

"Think of being married!" said Colthurst. "They are barely engaged. I don't know when they will marry. Perhaps in a year; perhaps in two years. There's time enough. According to the will, Peter must have for long years touched the evil thing—he touched it so often that I have got accustomed to it. You are here, and it seems terribly terrible to you. If you were in my shoes, you would have got over that feeling which now upsets you. Peter and Pamela are engaged. Peter is what I have made him, Patricia, there's no use looking back on the past. No one guesses it. If you and I are wise, no one will ever guess it. I have persuaded myself by now that the wrong is right. I shall risk it all hazards. I'll tell you what I said to that dying man shall remain the guide of my life, and I am not afraid. I have done well. I don't believe—I don't believe in the fact that I have what is called sinned. Peter and Pamela are following out the wishes of my life. They love each other. Circumstances would indeed be very different were it my cruel mission to force matrimony upon them. It is not necessary. They love each other. They would, under any circumstances, marry. But to force immediate marriages on them is a different matter. Besides, the old house must be put into perfect repair, and that alone will take time."

"What old house?"

"Brabazon Hall. They will live there; I have long made up my mind on that point. During Peter's minority the house has been let from time to time, but for the last few years it has been without a tenant. It is a magnificent place, and I shall give Peter an income large enough to keep it up as it ought to be kept. Money to me is only interesting as far as it helps my children to be happy. You know that, don't you, Patricia?"

"I do, Paul; I do. How long will it take to get Brabazon Hall into order?"

"It is my intention to go over and see it. It cannot possibly be ready for the children to occupy under several months—the greater number of years, I should say. The roof is badly out of repair, and some parts of the house have fallen, more or less, into ruins. They will have to be put into the hands of paperers and painters and decorators. Then I mean to have a certain part newly furnished. I was talking to Pam's mother last night on the subject, and she says the child should have modern things around her, so that Pam used to be called the nursery wing is to be completely redecorated and got up in the modern way. The rest of the house will be left much as it was—everything in keeping, but, of course, in splendid condition. By the way, Patricia, you must have never seen Brabazon Hall. You would like to come with us to pay a visit. That would be an excellent idea. It will make a little party and go there. I could wire to the housekeeper, Mrs. Goodenough, and she would prepare beds—and rooms for us all, and you, my dear friend, with your excellent taste, could give advice with regard to the redecorating of the place. What do you say?"

"I should like it; I should like it well. When can we go?"

"There is no special hurry, but we can go as soon as possible, and to-morrow is the first time is, therefore, at the disposal of those who want it. I must, of course, speak to Mrs. Colthurst, and find out what her plans are. It will take us the greater part of a day to get to Yorkshire, for we shall have to go from here to London, and then take train direct. But we can easily manage. Yes, that will be a splendid plan."

"You couldn't, I suppose," said Miss Patricia, "by any chance, Paul, go to-morrow?"

The moonlight fell full on her thin and anxious face. It seemed to accentuate the lines which trouble and care had left in it. Those lines which trouble and care had left in it gave her a sort of ghastly appearance. She was so thin as in the early light to look almost ghostly. Paul felt a strange thrill of fear, unaccountable fear, rushing through him as she turned abruptly and looked him in the face.

"You couldn't, by any possibility, go to-morrow?" she repeated.

The first impression of her words were off when she said them again. He uttered a light laugh.

"My dear friend," he said, "this sort of thing can't be done all in a hurry. We can't not by any possibility go to Brabazon Hall until the end of the week. I can, of course, wire to Goodenough, who will prepare the rooms and get in the extra beds from the village, and also provide the necessary food; but I must give her at least two days' notice, or the poor old body would be distracted; she would think us most unkind if we invaded her without warning. We must give her time, Patricia; it is only fair. There is no sense in our going to-morrow."

"There is every sense," said Miss Patricia. Again that curious feeling of unacknowledged and yet very perceptible fear took possession of the man. The figure of the young woman was heard in the distance—Pamela's pretty voice was heard in the distance—Pamela's gay laugh, Peter's reply. Then there was silence. They were not coming up on the terrace, but had gone down them? Doesn't it make your heart rejoice?" said the father. "They are going to leave us alone. They only want to be together just now."

"Paul, if you want them to be together always you will have to go to Brabazon Hall or somewhere—you will at least leave here—to-morrow."

"Now, my dear friend, you must explain yourself."

"I will. The Oswalds—you know they came into the room when we were having tea?"

"What of them? As things stand at present, I have nothing to fear from Oswald or any of his people."

"I beg you, Paul, that he had read the will."

"And even that does not disturb me. Peter and Pam will marry, and Oswald will be out of the running for ever and ever. I have seen him, and I am glad of it."

"He knows a very long time," said Miss Patricia, "he knows a very long time," only one part speaking to the other, but I there is any of our secret. I do not think there is any possibility of his learning the other, but I must warn you, Paul, that he is an exceedingly sharp and determined man. I must also tell you that he discovered who you were, who Peter was; and he did this Pamela was, who Peter was; and he did this in the most apparently innocent way in the world. Poor Peter, little knowing what mischief he was doing, came back to No. 10, James's-street for Pamela's parasol. Thomas Oswald opened the door for him, and asked him baldly who he was. The poor dear boy saw no reason to hide his name, and frankly told him. not only who he was, but who Pamela was, and who you were. Thomas Oswald then asked him where he lived, and he mentioned Connop Grange, in Surrey. Peter went away light of heart, little guessing the mischief he had done. In the course of the evening Thomas Oswald saw me, and told me that he knew that Pamela and Peter were engaged to one another, and that his one determination was to prevent the marriage. He said that he would prevent it—that he would take every one sure unturned to effect this purpose. He further suggested—dear Paul, it seems too awful even to repeat!—that his son, should marry your dear little Pamela, and that his daughter should marry our Peter, thus bringing into his family at once the twenty thousand pounds which you would have to hand over to the young people if they married without your consent.

"And the old scoundrel thinks that by just talking of these things he can arrange them?" said Paul.

"There is no doubt whatever, Paul, that he is a dangerous man. Our great object is to keep him from getting even the slightest clue to the real secret of Peter's birth. If that reaches his ears, all is lost. Now, my plan is this. Don't waste time over getting Brabazon Hall into order. Let the young people go there as they be married at once—by special licence, if necessary. Afterwards they can go away. They can spend a year if they will be husband and wife; they will be safe. The terms of the will are then fulfilled—Brabazon Hall, Connop Grange, all the property belongs eventually to Peter. During your lifetime you can make him a splendid allowance. Let them be married at once. Thomas Oswald will be sick with disgust. He will give up following you. He will consider the case quite hopeless. He will not be close by to pry out further and more terrible secrets. Oh! Paul, believe me, I am wise; I am right. Let us go to Brabazon Hall, or anywhere. Don't allow Thomas Oswald to come here and poke about the place to find you out, to find Mrs. Colthurst. Keep him away from here. Don't be at home. Oh! I speak earnest myself," continued the poor lady, "but I beg of you to follow my advice."

IN THE SICK-ROOM.

Here are a few hints for the sick-room.

Keep all medicines bottles out of the reach of the patient, and as far as possible out of sight.

Never leave an unfinished meal in the room, even if it is only a basin of bread and milk. Nothing looks worse in a sick-room, and the effect of it is likely to have a bad effect upon the patient's appetite.

Keep fruit and flowers out of the room. The scents and the other exhausts the air; especially is the former the case where ripe apples are concerned.

Do not hold a whispered conversation with another person either in the sick-room or by another person either in the passage. Sick people have strange fancies, and the patient may think you are whispering about her; and quiet is absolutely essential in the sick-room.

DYSPEPSIA AND CHANGE OF AIR.

When a person is given to dyspepsia, as many people are by inherited constitution and many more from acquired habit, a great variety of circumstances may lead to recurrent attacks, says a writer in the Family Doctor. With some people an impure atmosphere or hot, sunny, and exhausting weather, or to extremely cold and chilly weather, will be quite sufficient to encourage the approach of the enemy and to throw wide the doors for him to enter. If a confirmed dyspeptic fails into a lower than ordinary state of general health, his one particular for has it is change of air, and makes life a perfect misery. Bad air, and makes life a perfect misery. Bad air, distressing symptoms it is not for the robust, is very far from purity, cannot make the blood pure for the system to get rid of the waste tissues of the body so completely as they should be got rid of.

THE COOL HOUSE.

Houses need never be so hot and stuffy as many are in the summer if the following hints are put into practice.

In the morning, as early as possible, open every door, house and room, back and front, and draw up all blinds and curtains. The earliest riser should do this. Bedrooms, as vacated, should be seen to by their occupants. This ensures the house of foul air.

After breakfast, pull down all blinds on the sunny side, and close the windows with the exception of two or three inches at the top. Leave, however, the attic or upper story windows and doors wide open, and arrange that a draught of air from front door is also open, so that there can sweep through the house a current of fresh air.

The brick readily sown up in felt maker an excellent door stopper. As the sun moves pull down other blinds and open the windows in the shade, until as the evening comes on in the shade, until as the evening comes on everything can be opened again.

TENDER FEET.

Anyone who does much walking, and suffers with tender feet, will find the following very effective. Take a small portion of common soda in a p. 32 of vinegar, and when dissolved bathe the feet once or twice a week with the lotion.

Baked Tomatoes.—For this purpose the tomatoes should be fairly large and firm. Cut a small round opening at the stalk end, and with a teaspoon scoop out a little of the pulp. Then fill the cavity with a little butter to obtain away all excess of moisture, and remove as many seeds as possible. For four or five tomatoes mix with the pulp about a good tablespoonful each of the drained pulp a good tablespoonful each of grated or finely-chopped cheese and fine bread-crumbs. Flavour with a little nutmeg and powdered mixed herbs, season generously with salt and pepper, and moisten with liquid butter. Fill the mixture inside the tomatoes, piling it rather high on the top. Bake them for about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. They make a nice little supper dish. Chopped mushrooms may replace the cheese.

Bees have already swarmed at Witherby this year.

HUNSLET GUARDIANS AND RELIEF.

PROPOSED INCREASED ALLOWANCES.

The Permanent Relief Committee of the Hunslet Board of Guardians have had under consideration the regulations for the "administration of out-door relief in the Union," but at several of the meetings not more than half of the members were present. Most of the resolutions were arrived at on a small vote, and by very slight majorities, and it is not intended to suggest that they all command the approval of a majority of the committee.

They recommended that the scales of relief should be increased, as follows (the figures within parenthesis being the present scale):—

	Living with
	Living alone.	relatives.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Single or widowed men or women	5 0	(4 0)	4 0	(3 4)
Married couples	9 0	(7 0)	7 0	(5 0)
Other cases—
Men or women	5 0	(3 6)	4 0	(3 0)
First child	4 0	(2 6)	3 0	(2 0)
Each other child	3 0	(2 0)	2 6	(1 6)

It is stated that the foregoing scales represent increases of from 25 to 75 per cent., and that under them relief of 9s a man and a wife and six children (apart from a possible 5s. weekly from other sources) would be 29s. weekly irrespective of whether or not the man would be able to earn that sum if seeking.

To enable recipients to receive greater benefit from their own or their children's earnings the scale of maximum income was revised to be close by to pry out further and more terrible secrets. Oh! Paul, believe me, I am wise; I am right. Let us go to Brabazon Hall, or anywhere. Don't allow Thomas Oswald to come here and poke about the place to find you out, to find Mrs. Colthurst. Keep him away from here. Don't be at home. Oh! I speak earnest myself," continued the poor lady, "but I beg of you to follow my advice."

The following tables of maximum weekly incomes were recommended for adoption:—

	Living with
	Living alone.	relatives.
For one adult person.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Without children (in family)	10 0	(5 0)	9 0	(4 0)
With one child (2 in family)	14 0	(8 0)	12 6	(7 0)
With 2 children (3 in family)	17 0	(11 0)	15 0	(9 0)
With 3 children (4 in family)	20 0	(14 0)	17 6	(12 0)
With 4 children (5 in family)	23 0	(17 0)	20 0	(14 6)
With 5 children (6 in family)	26 0	(19 6)	22 6	(16 0)
For each additional child	3 0	(2 0)	2 6	(2 0)
For two adult persons.
Without children (2 in family)	15 0	(10 0)	13 0	(8 0)
With 1 child (3 in family)	19 0	(12 6)	16 6	(10 6)
With 2 children (4 in family)	22 0	(15 0)	19 0	(13 0)
With 3 children (5 in family)	25 0	(17 0)	21 6	(15 0)
With 4 children (6 in family)	28 0	(20 0)	24 0	(17 0)
With 5 children (7 in family)	31 0	(22 6)	28 6	(19 0)
For each additional child	3 0	(2 6)	2 6	(2 0)

The committee recommended that the proviso to rule 14 be amended so as to read:—"Provided that in any case where there is a sick allowance from a Friendly Society or any benefit under the National Insurance Acts, the Relief Committee shall be empowered as they necessary in allowing relief to exceed the maximum herein provided for."

The increased estimated cost per annum is £3,771.

At the last meeting of the Board the report of the Committee was referred back, and it will come up for consideration in three weeks.

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

IV.—TELLS OF A FAMOUS EXPERIMENT IN FEATHER-DYEING.

"I'm not a confident woman," said Patty, "and never shall be. So when it came to keeping my promise about helping Mrs. Hendry Diamond-dye her feathers, and sash-ribbon, I fair trembled within myself. So I asked her if she minded my practising on her own feathers and ribbons, and told them out on the parlour table, and who do you think should come in but Mr Garrett, the minister? And I had to tell him all the story—he was that curious. I brought down my skirt and showed him, and told him about Mrs Finch's silk blouse, and Mrs Bridges' linen, and I don't believe he ever enjoyed a cup of tea better.

"All my fears went out of the door along with him, and I just set to work with the feathers and the Diamond Dyes, and told him how I ran along to tell Mrs Hendry that the feathers were done all but curling. They were two beauties—and I tell you they did look nice and the ribbon and all of them exactly. We were making merry over our success when back came the minister and, "Mrs Dye," said he, "Mrs Garrett wants to know if you will come up to the Manse on Friday, and have a Diamond-dyeing day with her."

TEMPLENEWSAM RATEPAYERS' ASSOCIATION.

HALTON AND WHITKIRK AFFAIRS.

The monthly meeting of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association was held at the Wesleyan School, Halton, on Friday night—Mr Tindale Rippon (vice-president) in the chair.

The Hon. Sec. (Mr Wilkinson) said that he had been done in regard to acquiring a playground for Whitkirk, as reported at the Parish Council meeting. The question is now in the hands of a committee consisting of members of the Parish Council and the Ratepayers' Association. He stated that the position of the field and the rent had not been decided upon.

Mr Martin said they could not discuss the question then.

Mr Wilkinson said that they could do nothing until Mr Marsden stated the position of the field and the rent.

Mr Martin: Before it becomes an accomplished fact will we have an opportunity of discussing it?

Mr Wilkinson said that it would be dealt with by the Parish Council, who were accepting the responsibility.

The Chairman said they might congratulate themselves that a playground was practically assured at a nominal rent. The arrangements were at that stage that they could not say anything more about them.

The question of the allotments came up again, and Mr Young said that at the parish meeting it was suggested the Parish Council should decide what was a safe balance to keep in hand and then arrange to do something with the remainder. The matter was no doubt having consideration.

Mr Rhodes said the balance in hand was £9 os. 1d.

Mr Young: As practical men they ought to keep a good balance in hand.

The Chairman said the matter did not affect the ratepayers and they would have to leave it.

In regard to the proposal of Leeds to "include Halton sewage works in their town-planning scheme, Mr Verity said that a deputation of the District Council had met the Leeds Improvements Committee. They hoped to drive a road through the sewage works, which would be destroyed, but the Council considered that the road arranged for further up the hill was better. The road proposed by Leeds would be practically no good to the district.

The Chairman said that all this looked as if Leeds were manoeuvring for the best position. There was no doubt Leeds people meant business.

Mr Rhodes said that his attention was called after last meeting to the fact that there was a "plague" of rats in Hollyshaw Lane. A member intended bringing the question up, but the meeting was closed abruptly. It seemed that drains in Hollyshaw Lane were open, and there was an idea that the rats had come from them.

Mr Rhodes said he could not say.

Mr Wilkinson said that a ditch had been piped and filled in, and that some places had been left for the water to run down. He thought there were four or five openings.

Mr Young asked if it was right to call it a "plague." They had rats in Wellington Road, Hallam, but they had not a "plague." They did not want to get into a panic over a small thing that should be dealt with by individuals. On that ditch the drains of the house had taken steps to rid himself of rats, and that had been the cause of sending them further up, and some of them had got down. Certainly they could not call it a "plague," however, unless they were over-run.

The Chairman: Was it not brought before the Council?

Mr Young: Yes.

Mr Cousins: If there is one rat in a house there is more than there ought to be. Plague, he said, had come from Asia.

Mr Morton said that one resident had had rats in both his greenhouse and house.

Mr Cousins said that in another case rats entered the house and carried bacon off a plate into the coal cellar.

Mr Rhodes said he thought there ought to be gratings put over the open drains.

Mr Morton suggested that they should endeavour to find out whether they were sewer rats or field rats.

After further discussion it was decided that the hon. sec. write the sanitary inspector on the matter.

Mr Coulter brought forward the question of danger to the public at the tram terminus at the Swan and Halton Hill.

Mr Young said the jury at the inquest on the body of Mr Taylor, farmer, made a recommendation that the tram-cars should be run down the hill in the direction of Whitkirk, which would be a run of at least one road clear.

Mr Verity said the jury recommended that the tram-cars should go as far down the hill as possible. They had acted on the recommendation already.

Mr Cousins said that when a cyclist was pitched through a window at the weigh-house they put the trams further down, but the arrangement lasted for a few weeks only.

The Chairman said it was a very dangerous spot.

Mr Morton suggested that they should send a resolution to Leeds Tramways Committee supporting the jury's recommendation.

Mr Young said they were carrying the recommendation out, and it seemed like in the day to pass such a resolution.

After further discussion Mr Morton proposed that they support the jury's recommendation to the Leeds Tramways Committee to see that it was carried out.

Mr Cousins seconded, and this was agreed to.

HALTON

THE LATE MR A. BENNETT.—On Monday afternoon the remains of the late Mr Abraham Bennett, J.P., were interred at Bramley. Deceased, who was 49 years of age, was for many years landlord of the Woodman Inn at Halton, and was well-known in the district. He was keenly interested in Halton Cricket Club, and at one time he was a member of the Executive of the Barkston Ash Cricket League.

DISTRICT BREVITIES.

Rather out of season! A fancy dress ball has been held at Boston Spa.

The Rev. R. Hemsworth's zoo at Monk Fryston Park has been enlarged.

Another landmark going! The mill chimney at Garforth is to be razed to the ground.

New tramway shelters are to be erected in Prince's Avenue, Roundhay, and at Moortown.

The letting of Corporation grounds at Roundhay for cricket pitches brings in a revenue of £200.

Some does not come with age apparently. A septuagenarian has been sent to gaol at Wetherby for drunkenness.

Mr "Abe" Bramett, of Halton, whose passing is chronicled this week, was well-known to cricketing enthusiasts in Barkston Ash.

The Hon. Edward Wood, M.P., of Temple-newsam, has been confined to his room with a chill, following on a recent attack of influenza.

The Aberford youths who smashed the windows of an empty house at Scholes have been dearly for their mischievousness. Why not join the Territorials?

By the roadside at Monk Fryston, there is a dilapidated seat. So it appears that Wetherby, Boston Spa, and Halton are not the only places where seats are damaged.

It is stated by the medical officer that in Rothwell there is a scarcity of houses "due to a great extent to overflow from colliery development outside the Rothwell area."

A new stained glass window has been placed in Bahwith Parish Church near Selby, by Mrs Hampden, as a memorial to the late Sir Henry Mervyn Vavasour, Bart., and his wife.

Mr James McInnes, who is well-known to people in Rothwell district, has resigned the secretaryship of Normanton Division Liberal Association. At one time he was a newspaper man.

With reference to the scheme for building a new Abbey Institute at Selby, the Vicar (the Rev. De Soliway) has received from the Archbishop of York a letter commending and supporting the scheme.

Mr R. Crosland, who has been appointed Chairman of Paddington Guardians, is a brother of Mr Walter Crosland, J.P., of Bath House, Milford, who is one of the oldest members of Tadcaster Board of Guardians.

Much of the success of the Yorkshire Choral Competitions is due to the energy and enthusiasm of Ald. E. C. Brooksbank, hon. sec. and manager (Chairman of Tadcaster District Council). This is one of his hobbies.

The very severe frost of Friday night did an immense amount of damage to fruit in the Wetherby district. When the sun came out on Saturday morning the ground beneath the trees was covered with the ravished fruit.

Motor-car responsibles. At the Wetherby Show it is intended to drop most of the classes for hackneys. Horse-flesh, however, might prove useful in connection with motors. It is suggested that it is a "cure" for cancer.

In the Halton Wesleyan School premises the following excellent motto is displayed:—

To keep your lips from speaking guile,
Eye things observe with care,
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how and when and where.

With those in authority of the district of Barwick-in-Elmet, writes correspondent, see that the disgrace and nuisance of old carts and ladders placed in the lanes of the district no longer remain. Such old conveyances should be broken up and the wheels passed over the bicycle. What did the officer up there he saw of the ruins?

Ripley's postmaster escaped. A perambulator containing a child was left unattended on the platform at Ripley station. Just after it left Leeds express had passed through the station, the wind got under the hood, and the carriage moved along the platform. A gentleman opened after it, but could not reach it before it toppled over the "pitch" and the baby child was uninjured.

A well-known Walton potato grower said the frost on Friday night was the most severe local growers had experienced for many years. Some growers had looked to spud for the first time of the year. "And now," he said, "they are just like fallow fields, you cannot see a bit of potato left. Without doubt the whole crop will be practically ruined, and even then the crop will be irretrievably damaged."

The attendance returns for the Wetherby education district for April show a decrease as compared with March and also to March, and of 87.86, compared with 89.05 in April of last year. No school has the full 100 per cent., but eleven have more than 90, and only one school falls below 80 per cent. The figures are as follow:—Long Marston 97.36, Wighill 96.66, Linton 96.15, Harewood 95.34, Bardsey 93.54, Sicklinghall 92.85, Clifford Council 92.10, Little Ribston 91.06, Thorner Council 91.41, Wike 90.99, Tockwith Church 90.74, Thorner Council 89.65, Wetherby Church 88.97, Bilton 88.46, Clifford Roman Catholic 86.60, Wetherby Council 86.53, East Keswick 86.53, North Deighton 86.51, Thorparch 85.24, Bramham 84.65, Tockwith Wesleyan 84.37, Spofforth 83.16, Collingham 82.45, and Boston Spa 79.19.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

"Coal and the Miner," by William J. Claxton, should be of especial interest to any one engaged in coal-mining, which is the greatest industry in the area. Thousands of men and boys are employed at the Micklefield and Lofthouse Colliery, Garforth, Allerton Bywater, Bowers Row, Allerton, Micklefield, Rothwell, and Robin Hood Collieries, and in Barkston Ash Division there is evidence of greater activity, inasmuch as the Micklefield Coal Co. recently bought from Col. Gascoigne a large acreage of coal in the Newthorpe district. Many miners now reside at Aberford, Sherburn, and Milford, and probably were houses available many of the men who live in Leeds would make their homes in the country. That, however, is by the way.

The little book "Coal and the Miner," written in interesting style, tells us all about the black diamond and the great industry it has brought about, and is should be read by every boy and girl in the district. Describing the formation of coal the author says:—

Probably at the time known as the Coal Age the climate over a great part of the earth was warmer and much moister than it is now, and plant life flourished. There were enormous forests, but these were not of oak, elm, or pine. We should have marvelled could we have seen the plants of that period; they were mostly of the moss and fern kinds, but growing to the height of great forest trees. It is believed that the plants which formed the coal grew in large swamps or marshes at about the sea level. As the climate was very warm and moist, these plants grew very rapidly, and also died quickly. They sank into a tangled mass, and in time were buried up either by rivers spreading mud over them, or by the land sinking below the sea level, so that the sea washed over it. As years went by, the sea bottom became filled up, and new plants grew. These in turn were buried, and the process was repeated over and over again."

The explanation as to the different kinds of coal will bring enlightenment to many. The author says that at first the trunks of the trees and leaves of the ferns and mosses decayed and were changed into a brownish-black mass much like peat.

Peat may be said to be the first stage of coal. As it sank lower and lower, and greater pressure was put upon it by the layers of earth above, it became harder, and was changed into a substance called "lignite," which is often called "brown coal" or "wood coal." Thousands of years passed by and the "lignite" was buried deeper still, until it was so compressed that it was almost like stone. It had now become the common coal which we use in our grates. When the common coal in turn sank, by added layers above, it was turned into an even harder rock, and this we know as "steam" coal, or "anthracite," the hard as coal of all.

The book deals with boring, pit-sinking, coal-getting, etc., and it is excellently illustrated.

Once more the diminished popularity of the agricultural show is being discussed, but in Barkston Ash Division I don't think we have very much to complain about. In recent years the Cross-gates Committee, who offer prizes for horticultural exhibits as well as horses, have dropped a tidy sum of money, but it has been largely owing to bad weather, which has deterred Leeds people from venturing into the country. The principal shows in the district are held at Selby, Tadcaster, Wetherby, Sherburn, Monk Fryston, Cross-gates, and Thorner, and, on the whole, they are well supported. "Nearly every town in Yorkshire," says a contemporary, "has its show of horses and cattle." If one excepts the Smithfield Show, Leeds has no such exhibition, but it now probably claims Cross-gates as its own.

What is the opinion in Barkston Ash agriculturists? In connection with the decline of certain shows, one secretary says that "the difficulty is to get the ordinary farmer to exhibit at all. He possibly has a good horse or cow, but his one and only fear is that it he goes he will be beaten." This is an attempt to prove that the farmer is a bad "sport." My own view is that he cannot be bothered. Mr Crossley, of Wetherby, thinks there are too many shows, and while he believes that the old-established shows will be continued, he says that "if in place of the many shows which are popped up by professionals, I should like to see in every village a little afternoon exhibition for a three-mile radius, where farmers and small holders could exhibit the result of their year's handiwork." That is what we all desire to see, but if farmers won't bother to send stock to shows now, they will hardly support smaller meetings?

Bunkum! In connection with the Cross-gates town-planning scheme, a worthy alderman told the City Council that the Hunslet Rural Council had protested against the Halton sewage works being established in the area, but the Improvements Committee considered that the Council had the very best site on which a main road could be made and through the sewage beds. When the Local Government Board inspector held an inquiry in connection with the Templenewsam town-planning scheme Leeds people had no scheme of their own ready, but they urged that a road should be made through the sewage works instead of further up the hill. The inspector would not listen to the suggestion. The road proposed by Leeds would be of very little value and would be very costly, and its object is simply to destroy the sewage works in order to compel the local authority to send the sewage into the Leeds sewers. The City officials, I admit, are "cute, but this dodge is too smart by any means. When an inquiry is held in connection with the Cross-gates scheme the Hunslet Rural Council will oppose the city authorities making any encroachments in their area which would involve the destruction of sewage works on which thousands of pounds have been expended, and on which £3,000 will be spent shortly. This new expenditure has the sanction of the Local Government Board, who are not likely to do anything that would cause a huge waste of the ratepayers' money.

After certain property-owners had failed, on request, to repair two of the private streets, the Garforth Urban Council decided to put the Private Street Works Act in operation, and they at once engaged a surveyor, and advertised for tenders. Tenders were sent in, and then the Council declined to accept one of them. The reason given for this action was that the work was too costly. One property-owner has kept his part of one of the streets in good repair, but the others have done little or nothing, and it is certainly hard fines that the only man who has done anything should have to pay heavily for his enterprise. It was so at Crossgates and elsewhere, and the best plan, in my opinion, for obtaining the streets after they are made. In any scheme which may be adopted care should be exercised, if at all possible, to give property-owners who have given their tenants a decent road to walk on value for what they have done.

Towcon very rarely furnishes a case for the magistrates to deal with, the residents are so well-behaved, but they have "blotted their c.c.'s book," as the saying goes. A young woman appeared before the justices on Monday on a charge of using language which could not by any stretch of imagination be called polite, but the magistrates took a merciful view of the conduct and they allowed her to go. It must not, however, be imagined that because Towton has only had one slip that it is not liable to fall again, and a word of caution was uttered by the Chairman. The Chief of Police said to a girl, in an interrogative way, that she did not hear bad language at Towton, but she was compelled to say "Sometimes." "And when you do hear it," suggested the Chief, "You get out of the way?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. So it all Towtonians make themselves scarce as soon as any one chooses to use words which are not to be found in any standard dictionary there will be no fear of the ancient place having its fair record spoilt.

I understand that the bonus scheme instituted by the directors of John Smith's Brewery at Tadcaster has met with wonderful success. The firm, out of pure goodwill, have decided to pay to each man over 21 years of age in their employ £1 per quarter, and to every youth whose conduct and work are satisfactory, and who has been with the firm on April 1st, every year a bonus. The idea of the firm is to encourage the men to give good, honest work, and the bonus is an appreciation of it. Of course, the scheme is a source of great satisfaction to the men, because it is something they never expected, and the money will come in very handy. Nowadays some workmen, when receiving payment from employers, simply fritter time away, or, as it is put, they simply "put time in," and this is neither fair nor honest. If a man can be induced by a employer to give certain service he should fulfil his engagement. A little appreciation sometimes goes a long way, and the example of the great Tadcaster firm will probably be copied by other employers.

Tadcaster Guardians have a difficulty apparently in obtaining the services of women to act as officials, but there are many other Boards in the same plight. Although they have advertised twice, the Tadcaster Board cannot get applications for jobs, and it appears to me that they will have to raise the scale of salaries before they manage to secure the servants they require. As I have before pointed out, the Poor Law service offers opportunities for capable, intelligent young men and women, and all they have to do is to make themselves efficient by training.

Do the people of Garforth know how much infectious disease is costing them? The Urban Council have an agreement with Tadcaster District Council whereby the latter take cases from Garforth into the isolation hospital at the Cliff, and the charge made is, I believe, two guineas per week per patient. At the meeting last week the Urban Council passed an account for £327 in connection with hospital charges for six months, and it was stated that for the corresponding six months the account was £413, equal, I believe, to a fivepenny rate. Scarlet fever has been the worst scourge, and it may be well to point out that it has no connection with insanitary streets. It is spread by infection, and people should be more careful. Negligent parents cause no end of suffering and expense. Personally, I should give these people no quarter, and one prosecution is worth a hundred letters of warning.

Another Barkston Ash man to the fore! A good many years have elapsed since Mr J. P. Houlton, J.P., of Mansfield, a son of the late Mr Charles Houlton, manager of Micklefield Colliery, left the district, but he has kept in touch with it, and he has many friends in and around Garforth who will follow his fight in Derbyshire to enter Parliament with great interest. Mr Houlton, who, like his father, is a prominent member of the Wesleyan Church and has a sister married to a Wesleyan minister —Rev. G. H. Armitage, formerly of Rothwell—has been eminently successful in his profession as a mining engineer, and he is now at the head of the prosperous Bolsover Collieries. Apparently he has been a keen politician for many years, for at one time he was President of the Division Liberal Association, but it was not thought that he had Parliamentary ambitions. He has the reputation of being a good speaker—I heard him speak at Garforth, but it is no long ago that I have forgotten about it—and it is thought that he will make a good show. There are, however, other two candidates—Conservative and Labour —in the field, so that his failure to secure first position would cause no surprise.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace "Irish and Proud of It" is the title of a revue presented this week, and it has more merit in it than many revues seen in Leeds so far. It depends for its success not at all upon dress, or undress, and there is not a joke that is remotely risky. The plentiful Irish humour is much more palatable, and songs and dancing characteristic of the country pass the time very pleasantly. All things Irish are introduced, including a jaunting car and an eviction scene, and Paddy's indifference to rent paying, and partiality for poaching, and delight in dodging the Excise are given a fine study of an Irish carman, and Jamieson Dodds, whose singing is very good. Other good items in the bill are provided by Fitz Olracts, George Newburn, the mimic, Madame Lucie Gillespie and Miss Kathleen Kingsmore are Ben Albert.

A very interesting engagement at the Leeds Empire on Monday next will be Eugene Stratton, who will revive several of his favourite songs during his stay. He finds that new songs which can compete with the old ones are practically impossible to obtain, in addition to which by least one old one is generally demanded by his audience. Mr Stratton, who has been blacking his face for forty-three years, is the man who introduced the coon song into the music-hall. Before he went on the variety stage, in 1892, he was Moore and Burgess's principal corner man. Other turns of exceptional merit include the popular May Moore Duprez. A visit from Miss Duprez is always a popular event with the Empire habitues, for apart from her clever assumption of a Dutch girl role, apart, too, from her fund of humour and sparkling wit, she possesses, as few variety artistes do, the capacity to infect her hearers with her own vivacity. Bubbling over with merriment, bright in everything she does, she brings to Leeds next week a budget of new "business" to charm old friends and captivate new ones. The remainder of the programme includes the Paris Trio; The Gascoignes; Edwin Lawrence; Arthur Sutcliffe; Alfred Wellesley; Eddy Martyn; Lizzie Glenroy; and Miss Florence Turner in a Vitagraph scene play, "Under The Make-Up." Miss Turner will appear in person next week.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Leeds Hippodrome the revue "A Year in an Hour" is submitted this week, and the scenes depict the four seasons, with the addition of the "football season," a clever burlesque. It abounds in topical jokes, coon-tains some new and haunting melodies, provides the usual picturesque dress parades, and is free from anything of an objectionable nature. One of the most amusing scenes represents a schoolroom, where a reincarnated edition of the famous political celebrity or other notability. The picture palace craze is also singled out as the object of a skit which is very funny. The revue is staged by Mr Gus Sohlke, the producer of "Come Over Here," and is presented by a clever company. Included in the general programme are "The Kebbles," clever duettists and dancers; Alice Hollander, who possesses a fine voice; "The Three Orlocks," a singing and dancing trio; and Silbon's performing cats.

Next week at the Hippodrome Bert Coote and his company will present "A Lamb on Wall Street," being an episode of the New York Stock Exchange, and the Four Ascots, described as the greatest dancers ever seen in this country. Mignonette Kokin will appear. "A Day at the Races" will be presented by Galetti's Baboons, and other turns include Harry Blake, in his comedy scena, "The Man from the Moon"; Mignonette Kokin, described as the new smart girl; and Ivor Vinter, the little surprise. Two of the leading turns will be given by Morny Cash, the Lancashire lad, and Alexandre and Hughes, whose crosstalk is a delight. Pictures will be shown on the bioscop.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week Mr Stanley Carlton's company are appearing in a Venetian drama, entitled "The Little Fortune Teller; or An Italian's Revenge." It is the old story of love, hatred, and revenge, wherein no less than three suitors are keen antagonists for the hand in marriage of a young and beautiful fortune teller in an English country fair. Before the favoured one reaches his ambition, however, his fiancee emerges successfully from a keen knife duel with her adversary, and to keep up the excitement participates in another pistol duel with one of her lover's rivals. Miss Rubie Maude is the outstanding figure in the play, and as Cynthia, the fortune teller, she goes through a fairly heavy part in praiseworthy style. Mary Elton is also prominent as Cynthia's rival, as is Mr Ernest Outrim as the hero.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Miss Henrietta Schrier (from the Lyceum Theatre) and Mr Lodge-Percy and Co. will appear in their two most recent successes. On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday the amusing and interesting play "The Laughter of Fools" will be staged, and on Thursday and Friday the celebrated Corsican romance "Mr Barnes of New York" will be played, with Miss Schrier as "Marina" and Mr Lodge-Percy as "Mr Barnes."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week a popular "turn" is an entertaining sketch, entitled "What A Sport!" which tells how a well-made man asserts a noble lord and his son out of financial difficulty, although he himself is somewhat ungenerously treated. The cast includes Mr Herbert Landeck, Mr F. Brook Warren, and Miss Lily Grammonde. Albert Joyce creates a good impression with his "newspaper song," and it is followed by judicious moralising which never fails to appeal. He is a comedienne with a pleasing voice, has one or two good songs, and Andre Romanoff, who adopts the guise of an Apache, contributes violin solos. "A Doctor's Romance" and "His Majesty the Baby," two cinematograph films, are also shown.

Next week at the City Varieties the principal turns will be given by Cullen and Carthy, the renowned comedians; and Rowland, the brainstorm juggler, assisted by Kitty Grenelle; Dick Evans and Poppie Holland, the comedy couple introducing the cinema engine and cinema motor. Others announced to appear are Stevanos, acrobatic eccentrics; introducing the most original comedy tricks; Phil Bransby, Cockney character comedian, and Jack Baxter, dancing comedian. The films to be exhibited are "On a great steel beam" (drama) and "When the hurricanes took up farming" (comic).

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Leeds Theatre-de-Luxe "The Bucking Trial" was the principal film screened in the early part of the week. Gems of beautiful love scenes and the powerful dramatic situations Miss Florence Turner, the famous picture actress, is highly successful, while the film itself is a sterling quality, strong in plot, introducing many sensational incidents, an excellent cast, and well-chosen backgrounds.

Three strong dramas are the attractions for the week-end. "The Man of Destiny" tells a fine story of Napoleon's early days, "Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter" introduces an old favourite, and the "Throw of the Dice" is a very novel drama.

On Monday next, "The Black Spot," a thrilling Russian drama, is to be screened.

HOUSING AT SPOFFORTH.—The Public Health and Housing Committee of the County Council have reported with regard to the housing at Spofforth that an inspection of the village of Spofforth points to the need for drastic action being taken. The principal property owner in the village has done good work, but there are about 20 houses unfit for habitation. Several other houses are not kept reasonably fit for habitation. There are no empty houses in the village for tenants who may be displaced. There does not appear to be any possibility of private enterprise meeting the demand. The District Council are fully aware of these conditions, and have therefore failed to exercise their powers.

FORMER WETHERBY RESIDENT.—Mr Berthold Robert Stansfeld, who formerly resided at Wetherby, died at Scarborough on Tuesday night. Mr Stansfeld, who was highly esteemed for his geniality, ability, and fairness, was revising barrister for Scarborough, clerk of the peace for Wakefield, and for some time was assistant stipendiary magistrate for Leeds. He received his appointment as revising barrister for Scarborough in 1903, and his conduct in that position was always such that he was held in the highest esteem by both political parties, who had implicit confidence in his decisions. He was called to the bar at the Middle Temple about 35 years ago, had chambers at Leeds, and regularly practised on the North Eastern Circuit. He had appeared on many occasions at the Scarborough Quarter Sessions, and such was the opinion held of him by the Bench and Bar Record is that Charles Haigh, that on two occasions when illness prevented Mr Haigh from sitting at the Quarter Sessions, his position was taken by Mr Stansfeld. The deceased gentleman, who was 65 years of age, was the son of the late Mr George Stansfeld, of Settle, who was a barrister and banker. After taking up residence at Scarborough Mr Stansfeld became a member of the Ganton Golf Club. He was a Freemason and a Conservative, although of course he took no active part in politics. His eldest brother was the late Colonel George Stansfeld, of Field House, Sowerby Bridge. He leaves a widow and a daughter, the latter being the wife of the Cavaliere Varo, of the Italian Legation, who after a stay of two years at Pekin had only returned from China with her husband and children a fortnight ago, and was on a visit to her father and mother.

WINDOW GARDENING.

Flower lovers who dwell in a town, and have no garden, may derive much pleasure from the cultivation of a few plants in a window box or hanging basket. This phase of gardening is carried out extensively in some districts. Visitors to the annual gala held at York in June must have noted the beautiful effects obtained in all the main thoroughfares by the use of hanging baskets. In arranging window decorations aspect and position are two important considerations. In a sheltered, sunny position, almost any kind of sun-loving bedding plant may be used. In bleak, shady positions, the choice of plants is naturally much narrowed. Another important point, often overlooked, is the provision of a box capable of holding sufficient soil to satisfy the requirements of the plants. A suitable size is 8 inches in width and 9 or 10 inches in depth. If possible, the box should be fixed immediately under the window in preference to placing it on the window sill as is usually done. By this means, the plants get the benefit of more light, air, dew, and rain, and they do not darken the room to the same extent as when grown on the sill. Cover the box with rough cork to give a rustic effect, and to shade its front. This will reduce the necessity of watering. Fill with good soil and press it firm. At each end of the box a climbing plant should be put in. This may be trained around the window. Sweet peas do well in a sunny position and in partial shade canary creeper or nasturtiums may be substituted. Strong strings should be fixed for the plants to climb to. Along the front of the box a few plants of drooping habit may be planted. Japanese honeysuckle is suitable, or if a flowering plant is wanted, campanula hoopkyla alba may be used. These will grow in almost any aspect. A few plants of blue lobelia should also be included in the front row. In sunny aspects the remainder of the box may be filled with geranium Paul's Crimped, centaurea, candidissima, Sutton's Golden yellow, petunias, salvia patens, ivy-leaved pelargoniums, or marguerite Mrs Sanders, according to taste. For a shady aspect fuchsias, calceolarias, tuberous begonias, stocks, ferns, and marguerites may be given as suitable subjects to select from. In any case two, or at most three colours should be relied upon. A mass of mixed colouring is gaudy and never proves satisfactory. A hanging basket should be suspended well away from the window. This should be filled with similar plants to those used in the box. Watering must be attended to about every second day and when the plants get thoroughly established they should be assisted by weekly applications of liquid manure.

SWEET PEAS.

All sweet peas should now be in their flowering quarters. The provision of suitable supports is the next matter for consideration. Special trainers like the Simplicitas Netting are remarkably good and easy to fix. These may not be available, fresh cut bushy tree branches may be used, or even posts and strings. The tendrils of the peas cling freely to any of the above, and very little hand training will be required if they are used. Whichever supports are used should be placed in position immediately the plants are put in. This removes the risk of root injury and the plants get away quicker as soon as the tendrils commence to cling.

Plants from pots or boxes should be well watered immediately after being planted. Those of our readers who followed our advice and sowed seed in October should now have strong plants showing flower buds. The mild winter has favoured the steady growth of sweet peas, and on May 1st we noticed several varieties showing bud. Plants in pots, under glass, are flowering splendidly. These should be fed twice a week with farmyard liquid manure. If the flowers are cut as fast as they open the plants will continue to bloom for a long time. No cutting should be done at mid-day. Cut early in the morning, while the flowers are fresh and firm, and they will keep in a vase longer than they do if cut later in the day. Keep a look out for green fly.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS.

Perpetual-flowering carnations are now largely used as bedding plants. It is not advisable to plant them in a conspicuous position, as their rather leggy habit detracts from their beauty. A sheltered, sunny position suits them admirably, and it is really wonderful the amount of bloom they will produce when planted out in the open air. Young plants just commencing to bloom are the most suitable, but these are not available for the purpose old plants that have been blooming under glass may be hardened off and used. Cut away any straggling growths, and stake the remainder securely. If placed in the cold frame now, they may easily be hardened off in time to plant out the first or second week in June. When planting, tread the soil firmly around the roots.

VEGETABLES.

SCARLET-RUNNER BEANS.

Considering the prolific cropping properties of the scarlet-runner it is remarkable that its cultivation is not more extensively carried out. To obtain the best results it is necessary to thoroughly prepare this soil before sowing the seed. Deep digging and liberal manuring are essential details, especially on light soils, where it is advisable to prepare a position in the same way as is done for celery. The seed should be sown about six inches apart in drills three inches deep. The seedlings grow rapidly and should be provided with suitable supports as soon as they make their appearance. If available, 8 or 10 feet poles should be used, and these should be lined with strong string to keep them in position. Dryness at the root must be avoided, and this is best accomplished by giving a good mulch of rotten manure when the plants are about 3 feet high. In very dry weather an occasional soaking of water may be given, and overhead syringing is very beneficial in gardens where full supports are not available. For exhibition purposes the practice of stopping is often practised. The leading shoot is removed when about a foot high. This encourages the production of side shoots, which are stopped in turn when a few inches long. They are then allowed to grow naturally, with the exception of removing a few gross shoots which show a tendency to "run." There are numerous good varieties, some of which do not develop the coarseness so noticeable in old varieties. Sutton's Prize winner is exceptionally good, and Hackwood Park is good in every way. The pods should be gathered when quite young, as they are then at their best, whilst early gathering encourages the plants to continue cropping.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

INSECT PESTS.

Greenfly, thrip, red spider, and other garden pests are very troublesome at this time of the year under glass. It is false economy to postpone fumigating because only a few insects are visible. They become in such a rapid rate that a few days' delay may be sufficient to cause the ruin of a house full of plants. All fumigating should be done in the evening, after sunset. As a means of preventing the insects gaining a firm foothold, it is advisable to use a spray insecticide once or twice a week. A decoction of quassia chips, or some other bitter preparation, is best for the purpose. Spraying must not be practised on plants bearing flowers.

HARDENING BEDDING PLANTS.

The hard-ning off process as regards summer-bedding plants is simple when understood. Plants reared in the congenial atmosphere of a warm greenhouse are naturally tender. To harden them sufficiently for bedding purposes, it is necessary to gradually reduce the heat until they will withstand outdoor conditions without suffering injury. This is done by placing them in a cold frame, which must be kept closed very carefully for a few days. More air is then given, gradually increasing the amount daily until the lights can be removed every morning. About the middle of May a few inches of air may be left on in the evening, and again the amount is increased nightly until the lights may be dispensed with altogether, unless frost threatens.

IMPATIENS SULTANI.

The branching perennial balsams, known as Impatiens, have thick, fleshy stems, and are of pyramidal bloom-ess. During recent years a variety known as I. Holsti has been introduced. It has bright red flowers and is extremely useful for warm-house cultivation. Hybrid forms of Holsti vary considerably in colour and may easily be raised from seed. I. Herdogi is a comparatively new variety and bears beautiful glowing salmon coloured flowers. There are also several other varieties, all resembling the old I. Sultani to a greater or lesser degree. Cuttings root freely in a propagating frame and will thrive in any ordinary potting compost. They flower almost continuously throughout the year.

CYTISUS RACEMOSUS.

This dense-flowering subject is now going out of bloom and should be encouraged to make free growth. Prune into shape and place in a temperature of about 60 degrees. Syringing on bright days will help the plants to make strong growth. When the young shoots are about an inch long repotting may be done. Slightly reduce the ball of soil and place in rather larger pots, using a compost of two-parts fibrous loam, one-part peat, and a sprinkling of sand, bone-meal, and wood ashes. Grow on in the greenhouse until the end of July, and then place the plants in a sheltered position outdoor. Young plants may be raised from cuttings. Sever the shoots from the parent plant with a "heel" attached and dibble them into sand in a propagating frame. Put off when rooted and grow on in a warm greenhouse. Stop occasionally to encourage bushy growth.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

[Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January, and to obtain their full value, the earlier articles should be read in conjunction with the current one].

REGULATION BEFORE COMMENCING INCUBATION.

It is most important to ascertain that your machine is perfectly regulated and properly level before placing your eggs in the egg-chamber or drawer. Every machine has its own specific instructions for regulation; these should be closely followed, and it is an error to use right from the machine to run at the required temperature, empty, for three or even four days, rather than fill it with eggs immediately it is ready.

Mention may here be made that in the case of a new machine, or the first time an incubator is used during the season, it is really essential to run it empty for a few days. It requires thoroughly warming; damp to a greater or lesser extent has got into the machine, and it is advantageous to dry it out in order to secure even running.

CARE OF THE LAMP.

Readers must almost be wearied by my continued insistence on the necessity of attention to detail, yet without it success cannot be expected.

The lamp must receive attention daily. I grant you many will burn for forty-eight hours or even more, but my advice is: see to it daily—it will not then be forgotten—and, further, have a regular time for attending to it.

Personally, mine are always trimmed in the morning. If they are done at night time, to my mind there is a danger of them increasing their flame, and, owing to the operator having retired, this might escape attention; the danger, however, is remote.

Trimming a lamp is quite a science; the first particular to remember is scrupulous cleanliness. Never overfill the lamp no-even, never cut the wick, rather push it up, if necessary, a particle of burnt material. Employ only a high-grade American oil; cheap oils are disastrous and even constitute a distinct danger. Use a new wick for every hatch, remembering it is advantageous to purchase special wicks rather than the common material frequently sold by Italian warehousemen.

In good machines the consumption of oil is very small—this is more noticeable still in hot-air machines—this implies that a small flame only is necessary. So after attending to the lamp, see that it is burning brightly and clearly, and just sufficient to keep up the required temperature.

Carelessness in this direction, employment of inferior-grade oil, neglect in trimming, and draughts are the principal causes of chimneys smoking; a smoky chimney means an accumulation of soot, and, in turn, the presence of soot implies the inability to keep up the required temperature. If the trouble should happen by any cause, I cannot too strongly advise you to cease operations until the soot is removed, for, apart from the fact that soot is also a menace it, safety, sooner or later it will fire, and such a danger, perhaps in the middle of the night, is a serious one. The obnoxious effluvia from a smoky chimney or dirty lamp is only of secondary importance, none the less it frequently appeals to one before the more serious reasons here detailed. A final word on this subject: the attention the lamp receives should be such that the incubator could remain throughout the hatch in your living room, or even bedroom, without causing annoyance.

SELF-FEEDING LAMPS.

I have used them, and willingly concede that great improvements have been made in them during recent years; at the same time I greatly prefer to use the ordinary lamp. A self-filling lamp may act perfectly for years, but sooner or later it will fail, and that failure probably involves the loss of the hatch. Yes, there is also the attendant risk of an ordinary lamp, but as much as that risk is, I consider, every twenty-four hours, against twenty-one days on the other hand, that risk is greatly minimised. Naturally, opinions differ on this point, and should you determine to use a self-feeding lamp, be careful to buy a good one, and from a reputable firm.

WHARFEDALE AGRICULTURAL SHOW

LOCAL PRIZE-WINNERS.

The 16th annual show of the Wharfedale Agricultural Society was held at Otley on Friday. The entries were very satisfactory; over the whole show the pleasing increase of 476 was recorded, but the total of 3,510 was still many short of the "record" of 1912. Unfortunately, however, the satisfactory figures were entirely due to an increase of some 200 in the exhibit sections, and it is an error that the right side to allow the machine to run at the required temperature, empty, for three or even four days, rather than fill it with eggs immediately it is ready. In both cattle and horses both showed a decrease; while in the dairy produce classes the numbers were considerably short of the usual.

Mr J. Leake, of Aberford, was one of the judges of sheep, and Mrs W. R. Holgate, of Scarcroft, of butter and bread. Local prize-winners were:—

Farmers' Cattle—Bull calf, under 12 months —2, Mrs Cass, Ribston, Bull calf, 1 year and not exceeding 2 years old—1 and 2, Mrs Cass; Bull, 2 years old and upwards—1, Mrs Cass; Heifer calf, under 12 months—3, G. Lax, Cowthorpe, Wetherby. Heifer, over 1 year and not exceeding 2 years old—1, G. Lax. Cow or heifer, 2 years old and upwards—2 Mrs Cass.

Horses—Draught and Agricultural—Yearling colt, gelding or filly, bred by tenant farmer (2no m'hs' ruling): 1, E. T. Parker, Ledsham; 2 and 3, J. W. and A. Pollard, Moor Allerton. Entire colt, foaled in 1913: 2, E. T. Parker. Gelding or filly, foaled in 1913: 1, J. W. and A. Pollard; 2, T. Harrison, Kirkby Overblow; 3, G. W. Hardcastle, Carlton. Gelding or mare, any age: 3, J. Harper, Kirkby Overblow. Hackney stallion, any age: 1, Mrs Fletcher and Sons, Angram.

Sheep—Wensleydale shearling or aged ram: 2, G. P. Wright, Ogthorpe, Tadcaster. Three gimmer hoggs, Wensleydale: 2, G. P. Wright.

MOTORISTS' OFFENCES IN THE DISTRICT

HADDLESEY AND CAWDLESFORTH.

At Selby on Monday Harold Edwin Powell, automobile engineer, London, was fined £5 and costs for driving a motor-car beyond the legal speed limit of 20 miles per hour on the Selby and Doncaster road at Chapel Haddlesey on April 22nd.

Evidence was given by the police that defendant was timed over a measured mile, and it was found that he was travelling at 34 miles an hour.

Mr W. T. Silvester, of Goole, who defended, said that no damage to anyone was incurred, and it was unfair that traps should be laid in a rural district.

Three were three convictions against defendant for exceeding the speed limit in the London district, but Mr Silvester stated that those were special limits of 10 miles an hour in particular districts.

Dennis Moss, cloth finisher, of Morley, had to pay a fine of 5s. and costs for driving a motor-car at the rate of 25 miles per hour on the same road.

John Withers, a manufacturer, of Duffield, Derbyshire, was summoned for driving a motor-car at the rate of over 25 miles an hour at Cawdle-forth, on April 24th, and he was fined 10s. and costs.

It was stated that there were four dangerous bends in the road, and a day school had to be passed.

BOILER EXPLOSION AT ROBIN HOOD QUARRIES.

THORPE YOUNG MAN'S DEATH.

An inquest was held at the Leeds Town Hall on Friday on Harry Crowther, aged 25, of Oakley Street, Thorpe, who was killed in a boiler explosion at the Robin Hood Quarries, of Messrs Goorg Armitage and Sons, on May 1st.

Crowther, who was unmarried, and lived with his parents, died in the Leeds Infirmary on Thursday, from shock, following the scalds he received.

Crowther had charge of the boiler, and there was no one except himself near at the time it exploded. A fellow workman heard the noise of the explosion, and saw the boiler lifted into the air. He found Crowther lying about ten yards away from where the boiler had been standing.

Joseph Horner, of Thorpe, manager of the firm's quarries, said the boiler was used for drawing water from a quarry into a reservoir. The boiler, which was a cylindrical one, was examined in June last by the insurance company, and their report stated that no repairs were necessary.

The boiler was blown 40 yards away, and subsequent examination showed that some of the inside plates had been rivited round by the explosion, while one of the cross-tubes had been forced through the outer shell.

Crowther could not account for the explosion. He saw inside the boiler quite recently, and it then seemed to be in a perfect state of repair.

A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

A Morley Case of Tuberculous Glands Cured.

(Copy). 57, Commercial Street, Morley, Near Leeds.

Mr Crosswaite,

Dear Sir,—I beg to write you a Fee to express our thankfulness for the splendid cure you have worked in our son. We had almost given up in despair the idea that his face would ever be right again, but thanks to your treatment, during the time he has been under your care, we could see such by week a gradual improvement, and now the wounds have completely disappeared.

I am sure we are more than satisfied, and our only regret is that you did not come to you twelve months sooner. I shall a ways feel proud to recommend any similar case to you.

Yours truly,
WM. D. HOLROYD.

Another point is that the infective power of this scarlet fever germ is very persistent, and may be dormant for months in clothing which has been in contact with a scarlet fever patient, only to fight up into activity when the articles of clothing are again brought out and used.

We must again recollect that our district is an industrial, and not a residential one, which implies that the houses are not large, and that in few working-men's homes is there opportunity for having spare rooms. It is obvious that in a working-class home with a number of children, it is necessary for several children perhaps to sleep in one bedroom, and in few cases indeed has a bed only one occupant It is obviously impossible in such circumstances for a child who starts to be ill to be properly isolated, and it is an every day occurrence to find that a child who is confined as suffering from scarlet fever or diphtheria has spent at least one night in bed with other children, and this with an intimate knowledge that one of the family for a shorter or longer period after the commencement of the illness. The opportunities here for spreading infection are infinitely greater than would be the case in a house where a child could have been efficiently isolated from the moment it began to show signs of illness.

Discussion of this question of limited accommodation in working-men's houses recalls to one's mind the fact that in many instances in which a case of scarlet fever or diphtheria occurs in a house, especially during the winter months, a child spends the period prior to its removal to hospital in the kitchen which in many cases abuts upon a public highway, thus again enormously increasing the risks of the infection being passed on to others, as the presence of the infectious child really renders the kitchen for the time being into a fever ward opening on to the highway. This state of affairs necessarily implies that other members of the household are for the time being in intimate contact with the infected child; some children from this house may be attending school and the dust going to work, while the danger here from "neighbouring" cannot possibly be exaggerated. Such instances may to a considerable extent be unavoidable in working class homes, but surely the Otley Show scene lights on the the persistency of scarlet fever in our midst.

In this connection it might be mentioned that one of the most important features in checking the spread of a disease like scarlet fever occurring in houses where there are no facilities for proper isolation, is the removal of such cases to hospital as the earliest possible moment, followed by prompt disinfection of all clothing and also of the house. Our experience during 1913 shows conclusively the value of school closure in such outbreaks.

A perusal of the list of notifications for 1913 is most suggestive in showing the astonishingly large number of children between two and five years of age, who figure in the list, many of whom are school attenders. I know quite well in working-class homes with large families there are many advantages in having even the youngest children at school (I should say what is wanted in this connection obviously is a crèche rather than a school), but as to whether the sending of such children to school is a wise course is certainly a matter for discussion. My own view is that in the case of children under five years of age they are better at home, and in fact I much regret that the legal age for commencing school is not six rather than five years.

DIPHTHERIA AND SCARLET FEVER IN THE DISTRICT

ROTHWELL MEDICAL OFFICER'S INSTRUCTIVE REPORT.

HOW DISEASE IS SPREAD.

In his annual report Dr Stevenson, medical officer of health for Rothwell district, has some interesting remarks on diphtheria and scarlet fever. Last year there were 40 cases of diphtheria and membranous croup in Rothwell district. He states:—

There are certain circumstances which seem to me to have an obvious bearing on this question, and a consideration of them shows the difficulties in the way of eradicating a disease like diphtheria. In the first place it is no unusual thing to find a child with quite an appreciable amount of membrane on the throat when (contrary to the usual observer) may not appear to be at all serious, with the consequence in some cases, that either no doctor is called in at all, or is not called in until a later stage, with the result that an infectious child is allowed to have free communion with other people and is allowed to use feeding utensils common to its household.

A second point bearing on the difficulty from a public health official's point of view of dealing with diphtheria outbreaks is the fact that a child with no "throat" evidence whatever may have—and often has—the diphtheritic bacilli present in discharging ear or nose, and that such discharge may persist for indefinitely long periods during which the child contracts the power of infecting other children, especially when it is remembered that such children may, by contamination of their own fingers by the discharge, transfer the bacilles in question on the inside of books, and the same remark of course applies to cases in which children, with a possibly infectious discharge from nose or ear, use handkerchiefs which may thus become a very obvious source of danger to others.

A third point of difficulty arises from the fact that the specific germs of diphtheria are present, sometimes, and are most difficult to destroy, even when a case is under treatment under the most favourable circumstances. I mean that in some cases of diphtheria the germs may be found in an active state in the throats from which all traces of membrane have long since disappeared. It is no very unusual thing in fever hospitals for diphtheria patients who have recovered, and who are to all appearances perfectly well, to have to remain in hospital for a further period, sometimes of weeks, until bacteriological examination shows the throat and nose to be free from infection. If this be so in hospital, how much more must it be so in cases nursed in their own homes?

I might here take the opportunity of putting forward publicly one or two points observed by others, and no such child should be allowed to return to school until a medical man has declared it safe to do so.

In the second place, a child with discharging ear or nose should always be subjected to medical examination, and should be rigidly excluded from school until, as in the former case, a medical man has declared it safe to return.

What I have said previously in this report will show the danger of allowing children with discharging noses or ears, in whom there may be no the slightest cause for infection, to use pocket handkerchiefs, and it is obvious that the use of pieces of rag which could be immediately destroyed by burning would be a much safer course to adopt, and at the same time care should be taken to prohibit the use, by the child, of words common to the household. Were these points attended to, I feel sure that many children now away from school would have the fact discovered at a much earlier period and would not have been allowed to go about as "infection carriers," though at the same time I am not unappreciative of the importance of health, thus unwittingly adding to the worries and troubles—sufficiently great at any time—of those concerned with the public health.

SCARLET FEVER

Last year there were 145 cases of scarlet fever notified. Our experience in having such a heavy scarlet fever rate towards the latter part of the year coincided with that of the West Riding generally, the disease being overwhelmingly more prevalent in the West Riding during the latter months of the year than in the earlier months.

It might be remarked here that, regrettable though an outbreak of any zymotic disease be, an outbreak of scarlet fever has not the same significance, nor costs the same reflection upon a district as an outbreak of, say, typhoid or diphtheria would. In the case of an outbreak of either of the two latter diseases there may possibly be grave reflection cast upon the sanitary conditions of the district, as disease like that fever bears no relationship whatever in its incidence to the sanitary, or otherwise, condition of a locality. That is the one ray of comfort to be extracted from an influx of scarlet fever such as we were subjected to in 1913.

In endeavouring to find some explanation of the exceptional scarlet fever rate during 1913 one is faced with difficulties. To begin with, scarlet fever stands almost alone among the more common epidemic diseases so far as tracing a connection between one case and another, or in tracing the original case of cases in any given outbreak, is concerned. We cannot, in scarlet fever, as we can for example in diphtheria and typhoid summon bacteriology to our aid, and until we can do so the history of scarlet fever will be discovered (as has been done in the two above-mentioned diseases), thus enabling its presence to be proved or otherwise in suspected cases, so long will scarlet fever remain a disease difficult to eradicate. Again, in scarlet fever, after the first acute signs have passed off as in mild cases they do in a few days, it is impossible to say whether the child is clear of infection or not, unless by waiting for peeling, which, in mild cases may not show itself for three weeks or longer, during which suspected period it is impossible to ensure absolute isolation in the majority of cases.

A Selby Reservist's Funeral.—The funeral of Frederick John Pinter, Army Reservist, who met with fatal injuries at the Selby Olympia Rink while assisting in loading a boat with oil cake, took place at Selby on Friday, in the presence of a very large gathering. The Olympia Mills were closed for the funeral, and some hundreds of the employees, who are chiefly ex-Army men, formed the cortege, led by the Olympia Military Band, which played Chopin's Funeral March and Beethoven's Funeral Marche on the way to the Selby Cemetery. The hearse was drawn by the deceased's comrades. The Rev. E. C. Illingworth (Selby Abbey) conducted the funeral service. The closing hymn "Rock of ages," was sung at the graveside by the assembled people, the Olympia Band accompanying. Wreaths were placed on the grave by the directors of the Olympia Oil and Cake Company (Limited), the directors of the Selby Wagon Building and Transport Company (Limited), the "engineers" department at the works, and from other fellow-workers at the mills.

Killing the fatted calf: Mr. H. Crossley, of Wetherby, who is a farmer, says it is ridiculous to kill veal at the present time. He considers that for the highest profit, Mr Crossley says, "then undoubtedly the calves should be earmarked, and not allowed to be killed under a year old unless suffering from disease." He must talk to Mr Runciman about it.

FORMER TADCASTER CURATE SCANDAL.

HEARTLESS CONDUCT TO A GIRL.

£400 DAMAGES.

An extremely painful story of the perfidy of a clergyman, who under the cloak of friendship took the father, betrayed his daughter, was tried before the Under Sheriff (Mr Edwin Gray) at the County Town Hall, on Monday, when £400 damages were assessed against the Rev. Percy Reper, a curate, formerly of Sheffield and Wigan, for his seduction of Alice Kendrick, an eight-en-year-old girl, of 29, Oakdale Street, West Bar.

In some quarters of his conduct, defendant, who did not put in an appearance, and is said to have gone abroad, has been deprived of his living.

Mr A. Neal, of Sheffield, who appeared for the plaintiff, said that Mr Joseph Kendrick, the father of the girl, was the manager of a large business in Sheffield, and brought the action to recover damages for the seduction of his daughter by the defendant, a Church of England clergyman. The defendant had been allowed every facility by Kendrick, and the only question was to assess the damages. The proceedings which led up to the occurrence were of an extraordinary and disgraceful character. Alice Kendrick, who was now in her 19th year, was the eldest of seven children. For seven or eight years plaintiff's family were worshippers at St. Peter's Church, Abbeydale Sheffield, and some four or five years ago defendant became curate at that church. He was naturally admitted to the friendship of his client's household, and at that time the girl Alice was a boy at a boarding-school, where defendant and Mr Kendrick sometimes visited her. She left school in May, 1912, and she was then in years of age, becoming 17 two months later. Almost immediately she came home the defendant began to make advances to her, and a month or two after he was allowed to be outside her father's house. The girl, quite a child, made what resistance she could, and she was very much upset. Familiarity ripened into a number of other occasions, the last time being about the month of June, 1913. The whole of the time defendant was keeping up an apparent friendship with the father of the girl and her parents had not the slightest idea that the cloak of friendship was only the cover for wickedness. In July, 1913, he got notice to leave his curacy, and went to a church at Wigan. In order to show the duplicity of defendant Mr Neal read a letter sent from Wigan by defendant to Mr Kendrick on October 21st, 1913, in which he wrote:—"Dear Mr Kendrick, It was a great treat to hear you on the telephone yesterday. . . . I am a bachelor now. I have a spare bed, and I shall be quite delighted to put you up when you next come over and see me."

Mr Neal went on to say that the condition of the girl Alice was found out in the early part of this year, and as a result of this discovery Mr Kendrick went over to Wigan on the 17th January, taking his daughter with him. He happened to see defendant outside Wigan Station with a lady, and Mr Kendrick said: "I want to see you at your house on very important and serious business." Mr Kendrick then hired a cab, and on reaching defendant's residence Mr Kendrick told him what had happened. Mr Kendrick remarked: "This is a horrible, rotten piece of business on your part. I thought better of you. I had treated you as a friend." Defendant replied: "I quite understand your position." Mr Kendrick replied: "I don't have no money." Mr Kendrick replied: "It's not your money I want. It's my daughter's honour I'm thinking about." Defendant turned to the girl and said: "Will you marry me, Alice?" She replied: "I was too much overcome, and did not look at him. Defendant and Mr Kendrick then went out for a walk to talk the matter over. Defendant said he would have to resign his Church and had no money, and Mr Kendrick replied that he would help to start him in business. Defendant said he would think about it, and promised to let them know within fifteen days. He ignored his promise. Mr Kendrick then made a communication to the Vicar, and a communication was also sent to the Bishop. On the 3rd of February defendant wrote an extraordinary letter. He consulted a Leeds solicitor, who wrote to the plaintiff's solicitor about the matter, and said: "I shall be pleased to know whether you are prepared to apologise." The defendant went over to Sheffield unknown to his solicitor, no doubt, and in a telephone communication made suggestions against this young girl which had not the slightest foundation. Mr Kendrick declined to discuss them with him. Plaintiff took no further step in the matter, and the next thing they heard was from defendant's solicitor, who said he had now nothing to do with the case, and he was credibly informed defendant had gone abroad.

Until now was then given by Alice Kendrick, a tall, big-boned, refined sort of a girl, neatly dressed in a blue serge costume with a Peter Pan blue collar. She sat beside her mother, who escorted the child.

She said she would be 19 in July next. She spoke to being at a boarding-school, when defendant occasionally came along with her brothers. About two months after she came home something took place between her and defendant.

On one of those occasions of intimacy her mother was out, and the defendant and she were in the dining-room. The child was born on the 3rd of March this year.

The girl's father then gave evidence, and a detailed account of the interviews between him and defendant at Wigan. "When I saw him," said Mr Kendrick, "I said 'And you professed to be a friend of mine.' I asked him what he was going to do with her. He said, 'Well, my parents have cheated me. What can I do?' I said 'My daughter's here. It's my honour I'm thinking about.'

"He replied, 'I've no money' and I retorted again 'It's my daughter's honour and mine I'm considering.' He turned round to me and said, 'Will you marry my daughter?' but she was so overcome," said Mr Kendrick in a bewildered voice "that she could not look at him.

"We eventually got outside, when I said, 'It's a most rotten piece of business on your part,' and he replied, 'I ought never to have been a curate. I shall have to leave the Church.' I replied, 'I should think so, too.' He said, 'If I kept it that will do me no good, and possibly acid that will do no good either.'

"I then said 'If you will marry my girl I will find you fifty of a hundred pounds to set you up in business?' He replied 'that he would think it over and let me know.'

In addressing the jury the Under-Sheriff described the case as an extraordinarily painful one. In assessing damages the jury were entitled to take into consideration the grief of the parents and the aggravations of the case in view of the relation between Mr Kendrick and the defendant and also the defendant's position.

After not more than two minutes' deliberation the jury assessed damages as mentioned.

The Rev. John Roper went to Sheffield from Tadcaster, and on leaving last Whitsuntide, he went to a curacy at Wigan. He was an extreme High Churchman, and it is said that his teachings were not in accord with the congregation there or St. Peter's. During his stay at Sheffield he lived in apartments near the church. It is further said that after his misconduct had become engaged in another lady, but this was broken off before the disclosures became public. The Bishop of Liverpool has, of course, refused him of his office.

TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL

KIPPAX, ALLERTON, MILFORD, AND SHERBURN AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at Tadcaster —Mr J. W. Richardson (vice-chairman) presiding. Other members present were Rev. Canon Greenwood (terms-up), Col. Cocqhill (Garforth), Messrs W. A. Young (Alberforth), T. P. Fawcett (Ansborough), H. Sykes, H. P. Clerch, T. H. Ingleby, J.P., and J. Nettleton (Tadcaster), G. Webster (Huddleston-cum-Lumby), T. H. Prater (Darlington), J. W. Dobson (Newsharpe), W. Simpson (Lead), R. Wordsworth and H. H. Lowe (Great Preston), R. Wright (Barwick), J. E. Cawkhan and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), J. Peck (Ulleskelf), J. Lailey (Kirkby Wharfe), H. Sayles, F. Phillip, and Pearson (Allerton Bywater), J. Harding and W. A. Dickinson (Kippax), B. Braham and H. Green (Garforth), E. Parker (Ledsham), White (Barkston), W. Cleasby, J.P., and A. Johnson (South Milford), A. Chippendale (Scholes), J. Y. Wheatley (Appleton Roebuck), and E. Mildgley (Colton), with the Clerk (Mr G. A. Simpson), the relieving officer (Mr Scott), and the inspectors (Messrs Driver and Wood).

The treasurer was reported to have a balance of £3,870 in hand.

It was reported that Mr J. Wordsworth had been appointed chairman and Mr J. H. Scholefield vice-chairman of the Relief Committee. The committee had under consideration the question of mental deficiency, and it was decided that the Clerk write to Wharfedale Union with regard to the proposed joint scheme.

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been three admissions and three discharges from the workhouse. The inmates numbered 109 in the workhouse and 17 in the children's home—107 against 103 at the corresponding date of last year.

The tramps relieved during the two weeks were 91 and 42 against 22 and 20 for the corresponding weeks of last year.

Mr Prater was appointed chairman of the Finance Committee and Mr Dobson vice-chairman.

Mr Parkin was elected chairman of the Boarding-out Committee.

At a meeting of the House Committee it was reported that Canon Greenwood had been appointed chairman and Miss Bethell had been elected to the vice-chair. The master's application for an increase of 10s per week was adjourned. No application had been received for the posts of assistant nurse and general assistant and laundress.

At a meeting of the Ulleskelf House Committee Mr Wheatley was elected to the chair and Miss Bethell to the vice-chair. Miss Webster and Miss Garbutt, the matron and assistant matron, had given in resignations, and Miss Hetty Robinson was advertised for a master and matron at £45 per annum. The thanks of the Board was given to Mrs Peters and Mrs Brooks-bank for gifts to the children.

Messrs Wordsworth and Nettleton were appointed to attend the Yorkshire Poor Law conference at Bridlington.

It was reported that no overseers had been appointed for Colton and Towton, and appointments were made.

The Clerk was instructed to get out the annual statement of accounts.

DISTRICT COUNCIL.

At the District Council meeting it was reported that the treasurer had a balance of £2,039 in hand.

LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee for consultation, treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 on Alternate Saturdays, May 16th and 30th. Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.

SATURDAY, MAY 16th, 1914.

How is it, when so many people have a knowledge of music, that interest in the competitions which are arranged at York and Pontefract is confined to certain well-defined districts? These competitions have had a wonderful effect in stimulating the study of good music in the villages, and the singers have profited thereby, but it is somewhat discouraging to find that the field of influence is not being steadily enlarged. Life in the country villages is frequently condemned as being dull and depressing, and excursions are made to the towns at intervals in search of pleasure and enjoyment, the young people completely ignoring the fact that they themselves possess the ready means of entertainment. Every person is not gifted with musical talent, but a good many in each village community are capable of taking a part in a musical organization, and, if they would only realize it, a great deal more satisfaction is derived from association with musical societies than can possibly be obtained from wasting precious hours lounging about street corners and getting into mischief, or going to the towns at nights. They not only learn something—their knowledge is extended—but the mixing of all classes in this way tends to improve social relationships and brighten rural life. Certain movements can be traced to their sources, and the influences which inspired them can be named, and in villages the personal influence is a great factor. It would be easy to show how individuals have turned opinion, tastes, and recreations in particular directions; they have had sufficient character to take an independent line, and, knowing their own mind, they have speedily turned others to their way of thinking. These are the people who exert an influence in rural communities, and they are the means of making life more profitable for others. In regard to musical organizations, the individual can do much, and there is no doubt practically every large village in the district could turn out a creditable choir were the attempt made. It is perfectly true that many musical associations have been started in the district only to collapse, but presumably had they undertaken competitive work interest would have been stimulated, and failure would not have to be written down.

A few years ago, after the regulations had been relaxed, and Sunday play was permitted on a golf course in the district, the residents were very angry, and to show their indignation they gathered on a footpath and hissed the men who had the temerity to indulge in sport on the first day of the week. They were unaccustomed to such a spectacle as men playing games on Sunday, and it ran counter to their notions of what was right, but now, although their opinion may have undergone no modification, they think nothing about what was termed a desecration, because they have become accustomed to seeing men on the links on Sundays. Those people condemned the practice as being wrong, although they had probably given no thought to the morality of the question, and they were ready to sit in judgment on their fellows. The Bishop of Knaresborough, the other day, said "I am not prepared to say that it is a sin to play golf on a Sunday any more than it is to take a walk." Of course, this is no new attitude for the clergy to assume, because many years ago cricket was played all over England on Sundays, and it is recorded that one vicar used to open the season, after morning service, by sending the first ball down. Moreover, cricket is a legalised game. Apparently the old customs died out, and in comparatively few places is the great summer game now played on Sunday. It, however, provides many illustrations in sermons, and if the cricket field is silent, the game is not forgotten in the pulpit. Cricket stands for everything that is straight and true in English life, and it exercises its influence in a wonderful way. That it would be advisable to reintroduce the playing of it on Sundays, however, is another matter. Sunday recreation is a question for the individual himself or herself to decide. Some persons advocate it, and few condemn it, although they may deplore its effect on church attendance, which is quite another question. The playing of golf on Sundays has become so common that it causes little or no remark, and many wonder what it will eventually lead to. If it is right to play golf, many argue, it is not wrong to play tennis, cricket, or football on the first day of the week. The games of the masses are cricket and football, and it is possible that in years to come the working people, following the example of the leisured classes, will spend their Sundays on the cricket or football fields. The responsibility assuredly rests with the people who set an example; they cannot escape the result of their own actions; and if spectacular games became popular on the first day of the week they would probably be the first people to bow to the inclination. Most people say they desire to limit the field of Sunday labour, but neither their pleasure nor their convenience demands changed conditions. Labour is employed on the tramways and railways entirely to meet the demands of the public, and how many hundred are engaged every Sunday catering for pleasure parties in one way or another. Things have a way of growing, and if the public recreation needs labour there will not be any great objection to its employment. People have a right to ask themselves what Sunday sport will lead to. It does not concern themselves alone; it concerns multitudes, and for that reason it deserves the consideration of every serious-minded man and woman. The craze for pleasure, to the exclusion of questions vitally affecting the happiness and welfare of the people generally, has a firm hold on all classes, and there is no need to give encouragement to any movement that will extend it.

IN DARKNESS.—On Saturday at the Eastern Airedale Petty Sessions at York George Woodhouse, labourer, of Aconber Malbis, was summoned for riding a bicycle without a light. Police Constable Bradley, of Bishopthorpe, proved the case, and the defendant was fined 5s. and costs.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL.

On Wednesday at the Leeds Wesleyan Synod Mr William Stephenson, of Rothwell, was appointed to attend the Representative Session of the Conference.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. A. M. Sugar-Macgregor, Mr F. M. Lupton, Mr C. Holliday, Mr R. H. Foster, Mr J. Hirst, Mr H. Evans, Mr Pickard, and Mr G. Wilson.

AMBULANCE.—In the preliminary round of the Miners' Ambulance Competition the results for Normanton Division were:—At the Church Institute, Wakefield, 1, Pope and Pearson's, 303; 2, Newmarket Silkstone, 1843; 3, St. John's Colliery, 1791; 4, 5, 6, and 7, Mines from Wakefield Colliery, whose marks were 1644, 1561, 1316, and 1173 respectively.

Patent List compiled by John E. Walsh, Chartered Patent Agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and 5, Crossley Street, Halifax:—Application—Joseph Rafferty, Dewsbury, improvements in means for communicating on trains. Patent accepted—H Walsh and A. Pybus, Queensbury, improvements in regenerative furnaces. Patent renewed—D. W. Freeman, Hunslet, improvements in chain couplings.

AGRICULTURAL LABOURERS' WAGES.—A conference was held at York on Saturday of all the branches in Yorkshire of the Agricultural Labourers' Union, Alderman R. Morley (Halifax) presiding. Mr C. Duncan, M.P. (general secretary), and Mr H. Schlosser addressed the meeting, and it was decided to modify the demand for advances in wages to an all-round increase to 22s. per week, instead of 24s. as previously demanded. It was hoped that by modifying the demand friction would be avoided with the farmers, who regard the demand of 24s. as excessive. The conference expressed the strong opinion that the increase should take effect before June 5th.

THE FIRE BRIGADE.—During the past week-end brass plates bearing the word "fireman" have been fastened on the doors of the houses of members of the newly-formed fire brigade. The first fire practice and drill took place on Wednesday night, under the direction of Mr. J. Southwart, who had been appointed captain. The operations were carried out in the grounds of the Council offices and also in Commercial Street, where the movements of the men were followed with no small interest by a large crowd. Everything passed off satisfactorily with the exception of the wetting of some clothes which had been hung out in the neighbourhood to dry. In future hose pipes should be on the lookout whenever the brigade are practising in their district.

HOUSING.—On Saturday Mr Westwood liberated 523 birds from the clubs in the Leeds Federation, and the following are the Federation winners:—E. Linley, Crossgates, 795; A. Bedford, Rothwell, 707; Harland and Mottershaw, Carlton, 707.

MR HOUPTON AND HIS FATHER.—Mr J. P. Houlton, J.P., the Liberal candidate for North-East Derbyshire, is a son of the late Mr Charles Houlton, of Garforth, who was manager of Micklefield Collieries. In his election address Mr Houlton says to the miners of the constituency that he is proud of the fact that he is the son of a man who was a working miner, and who, by hard work and perseverence, raised himself to a position of eminence in the mining world. He (the candidate) is of the same flesh and blood as the miners, and descended from the same stock, and though he may have risen in life, he claims to be one of them, and to be able to represent them in Parliament better than a man who would be bound hand and foot to the Labour party, and who would be compelled to obey its behests regardless of their desires and wishes.

The Yorkshire Miners' Association Council at their meeting at Barnsley on Tuesday decided on account of the recent strike no demonstration should be held this year.

ALLERTON BYWATER

HOMING.—On Saturday nine members of Allerton Bywater Homing Society sent 118 birds to take part in the race from Ambergate (48 miles). Results:—Booth Bros 834-07 (wins 6d. pool), Hutchinson 833, Barrett 825, Booth Bros. 821, Collinson Sep. Townsend 802.

LABOUR CANDIDATE FOR OSSOLDCROSS.—At Goole, on Saturday evening, the Osgoldcross Labour party held a conference, Mr George Lodge, of Castleford, presiding, over seventy delegates, representing twenty thousand members of the Miners' Trade Union and four thousand members of other Trade Unions in the division. It was decided to run a candidate at the Labour interest at the next election, and Messrs. John Potts, of Hemsworth, Edward Hough, of Featherstone, and Isaac Burns, of South Kirkby, were nominated. Mr Potts was ultimately selected as the prospective candidate.

AMBULANCE.—The preliminary rounds in the Wood Shield Competition of the Yorkshire Miners' Ambulance League took place on Saturday at various centres. The following are the results for Castleford Division.—Seventeen teams competed, and the first two in each subdivision go forward. Sub-Division 1.—Allerton Bywater No. 1, 229 points; Hemsworth 2, 208; Allerton Bywater 2, 205; Hemsworth 1, 190; Allerton Bywater 3, 102; Hemsworth 3, 188; Whitkirk Silkstone, 176; Whitkirk Deighton, 104; Whitkirk Warmfushaw, 153. GARFORTH

At the annual meeting on Friday in Leeds Mr C. R. Baker, of Garforth, was elected a director of Messrs Joseph Watson and Sons, soap manufacturers.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday three Garforthians were summoned for non-payment of the poor rate, and the usual orders were made.

Mr J. J. Wallis, of Garforth, won third prize in the tenor solo contest at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Wednesday.

The treasurer of Leeds Infirmary acknowledges receipt of £57 5s. 6d. from the officials and workmen at Garforth Colliery, per Mr J. W. Dobson.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Hamilton, miner, of Garforth, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on May 2nd, P.C. Jackson stated that about 9.40 p.m. on the day in question he was on duty in Main Street, Garforth, when he saw Hamilton in a very drunken condition and making use of obscene language. He stopped him and gave him a warning, telling him to go home. Defendant took a bottle from his pocket and threw it in the middle of the road, where it broke. He refused to pick up the pieces of glass when told to do so by the officer. Defendant, who did not appear in answer to the summons, but wrote to the Clerk apologising for his absence, was fined 10s. and costs.

PICTURE HOUSE.—Excellent entertainment has been provided at the popular Picture House this week, and the large audiences have shown every appreciation of it. For to-night and Saturday the films screened will include "The Dead Man's Child," a thrilling and sensational drama, and "Grandad" and "Our Baby," pictures with much of the fun of their own. For next week splendid programmes will be provided. On the first three nights the chief films will be "The Escape of Jim Dolan," an exciting and sensational drama of the Wild West, and "The Diver," a powerful vitagraph photo-play which was produced at Niagara Falls. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the great attraction will be the racing drama "Kissing Cup," depicting the exciting scenes on the race-course, and culminating as the finish for the big race. It is stated that this film stands above all the finest racing picture ever produced for the motion picture camera. Other good films will be exhibited. For times and prices see advt.

KIPPAX

On Saturday Halton bowlers had a League match with Garforth Conservatives, and Halton won by 202 to 129.

NO CONTROL.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Herbert Dawson, a carrier, of Bradford, was summoned for having no control of a horse and waggon under his charge. P.C. Taylor stated that about 5 p.m. on April 30th he was at Whitkirk, when he saw a horse and waggon standing about halfway across the road. The animal had to be moved in order to allow a motor-car and other traffic to pass. Witness stood by it for about five minutes before the defendant came up. Defendant denied that he was away from the horse two minutes, and said it was only left three minutes. A fined of 10s. and costs was imposed.

Second prize was awarded to Misses Edith and Rhoda Dunning, and Messrs Burton and P. Hardcastle, of Church Fenton, with 70 marks. These singers are members of Church Fenton Wesleyan Choir.

RECTOR OF KIRK DEIGHTON.—Lieut. year Canon Goddart, whose death is noticed in another column, as a thanksgiving for 30 years' appointment to the living restored and enlarged the organ, which was erected in Kirk Deighton Parish Church by public subscription in 1872. In 1900 he gave land for the site of the vicarage of Deighton. He took his field, and mowed the grass each week, and provided a marquee for the cricket club; he built a church institute, and allowed the trustees to purchase it for the parish. He built a rectory, and supplied papers for the reading room. Although Canon Goddart did not often follow the hounds he was very fond of riding, and contributed a month to the funds. The parish church was much improved during his incumbency, and the beautiful peal of bells installed by his father were repaired.

POLO.—The Leeds Polo Club have opened their season on the ground at Alwoodley with the brightest prospects. Several new players have joined the club, and as most of the clever and experienced members who have figured in the matches in past seasons are also on the thusiastic list, the committee are in a happy position of having a list of eighteen playing members. Mr Edward Lane Fox is again the President, and is supported by an influential list of vice-presidents. The players have already had some successful practice in members' games. Two attractive home and away fixtures have been arranged with the Clitheroe Polo Club, and the first is to be played on the Clitheroe ground on May 23rd, and the return game at Alwoodley on June 6th. A members' game was played on Saturday afternoon.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Guardians' Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon, the Chairman (Mr T. Thomas) presiding. Other members present were:—Mr J. Atkins (Conservative), Dr. G. Brown, Father T. Cody, Messrs J. Butterick, W. Schofield, T. G. Conyers, D. W. Hargreaves, G. Armitage, W. Verity, J. Flanagan, J. R. Chappell, J. Bannister, H. I. Pullan, W. A. Appleyard, E. B. Pickersgill, W. Stead, and J. W. Welby, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Mey).

The minutes of the Children's Homes Committee held on April 29th showed that Mr J. R. Chappell was elected chairman and Mrs E. A. Dickinson was elected to the vice-chair. The minutes of a subsequent meeting showed that the tender of Messrs James Batty and Sons for boys' suits, etc., at £47 19s. was accepted; and the tender of Mrs Rawding for girls' hats at £10 13s. was also accepted.

A letter was received from the Rothwell Urban District Council stating they do not propose to grant any permission or concession to the Guardians so long as their account for water supplied remains unpaid, and that if the same is paid they will arrange an appointment to meet a deputation. The Clerk reported that the account was returned to the Council in November last after waiting 5 months for a reply to the application for a supply by rent, and that he had arranged with Mr Marshall, collector, to furnish another copy.

A letter was also received from the superintendent with reference to corrections of the outdoor account. It was resolved that the Guardians be recommended to pay £15 on account, pending the proposed interview, and that Messrs Bennett, Chappell, and the Clerk be appointed to meet the representatives of the Council.

It was ordered that the absence of a further reply from the Bishop of Ripon in the matter of the prayer taught the scholars in the Rothwell Church Sunday School be put on the agenda for the next meeting.

The minutes were passed.

At a meeting of the Workhouse Committee held on April 29th Mr T. G. Conyers was elected chairman of the committee for the ensuing year, and Mr W. A. Appleyard was elected vice-chairman for the same period.

Four applicants for the position of female assistant relieving officer were seen by the Board, and it was decided that Miss Hilda Conyers, of Hunslet, be appointed to the post.

WEST RIDING EXPENDITURE

Apropos of the outcry against the increasing expenditure, and alleged extravagance of the West Riding County Council, an important letter was read at the meeting of the Thorne Guardians, from the county treasurer at Wakefield, Mr John Coppock.

The letter was in reply to a vigorous protest from the Thorne Board. Mr Coppock wrote:—

The recent increase in County Council expenditure has been practically thrust upon the county ratepayers by Parliament.

The growing disparity between the amounts provided by the Imperial Exchequer and the county rates has become more pronounced year by year, and although the Government admit that the grievances of the county ratepayers (more particularly in the growing expenditure upon education) is a real one, no further assistance has been given from the National Exchequer.

After pointing out the heavy burdens imposed by the Board of Education, the Insurance Act, and the Standing Joint Committee, the county treasurer concludes by expressing the hope that the "grants in aid" promised in the report of the Departmental Committee upon local taxation may be speedily realised, and the burden of semi-national services, now placed upon the county ratepayers, considerably lightened.

COLLIER STEALS A PURSE CONTAINING £43.

Alfred Smedley, collier, was remanded at Doncaster, charged with stealing a purse, containing £43 from Joseph Swain, another collier.

Prisoner lodged with the prosecutor at 4, Rose Road, Carcroft, and slept in the same bedroom, where there was an unlocked oak chest, in which the purse and money were placed. On Wednesday the prisoner left his lodgings and said he was returning to Manfield. Prosecutor's sister became suspicious, and on looking into the oak chest found that the money had gone.

To the police, who had been informed, the prisoner admitted the offence and handed over the £43.

Monk Fryston Choral Society secured third prize in the male voice choir contest at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Wednesday. There were seven entries.

In the boys' solo competition at Pontefract Musical Festival on Tuesday the winner secured 93 marks, and Harry Hodgson, of Monk Fryston, who scored 88 marks, shared the second place with a Normanton lad.

HORSE LEAPING.—On Saturday at Otley Show William Bros. were second for leaper, to Jeep Hill Farmers' Sheriffs, best in hunting style, and they shared first and second prizes for leaper, any age or height, over three hurdles. They secured first for leaper, any age or height, over plain hurdles, single pole, broad-out jump, limitation show wall.

THE LATE MR T. H. HEY.—On Saturday the remains of the late Mr T. Hough Hey, of Hill House, Sherburn, were laid to rest in the churchyard. The deceased was one of the best-known residents of the ancient village, and was held in the highest esteem by the people of the district. He was of a very generous disposition, and gave liberally to every deserving cause. He had been president of the Sherburn Farmers' Club since its formation, and was most regular in his attendance at the meetings, displaying a very keen interest in the success of the organization. He was also president of the Choral Society and a member of the Sherburn Conservative Association. Deceased, who owned a considerable amount of landed property in the district, was a great lover of music, and he could play both the piano and violin. He was a prominent member of the Choral Society Orchestra. Mr Hey had served both as a churchwarden and sidesman at Sherburn Church, and there was a large gathering on Saturday to pay a last tribute to a kind and generous friend. Many beautiful wreaths were sent, including floral tributes from relatives, friends, the Conservative Association, the Choral Society, and the Farmers' Club. Mr Hey, who was a widower, leaves no family.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BELLRINGING AT ROTHWELL.

To the Editor.

Sir,—On perusing the pages of the Rothwell Parish Magazine for May, I see that the Vicar (Mr Birney) has allowed the correspondence which passed between he and myself on the above subject to be published in it. Although I myself have not the slightest objection to this being done, I think that every gentleman might at least have informed me of his intention before doing so; this would, in my opinion, have only been fair to me.

Some people I have spoken to had partly formed the opinion that we (the old ringers), not having a full company of eight men, but still holding out for the £100 per year, were making something in excess of previous payments. This is not so, as, since I joined the company in the year 1894, it has always been £100 per year, paid at Easterlde, and never, to my knowledge, has the question of how many ringers had we, been asked. During my time of service the company has varied in number greatly; sometimes composed of six, sometimes seven, and, again, eight members, but I can safely assert that the six bell-ringing has greatly exceded the eight, that is, for Sunday services. As one man has left, we have always endeavoured to train another, and kept as near full strength as possible. The Vicar, in his letter to me, says that if we could regularly ring the eight bells, then the £100 would be unhesitatingly paid. Let me point out that to be able to guarantee eight bell ringing regularly, you must have at least nine members, as it is well-known that casualties arise through various causes when a man is unable to fulfil his obligations with regularity. Now suppose we had nine members, (the above alike) the regular attender would be required to put in over one hundred appearances at church for Sunday service ringing (I will omit practices on week nights) and at the end of the year, when we pay day arrived, he would receive the munificent sum of £1 14s. 5d.; that is, slightly under fourpence for each attendance of an hour's duration. Of course, I do not consider the extra remuneration paid to the steeple-keeper. During the major portion of the hour he is there he is working both with body and brain in the belfry, both for the church itself, and his interest in the art of change-ringing. This, I am afraid, receives scant consideration at the hands of the authorities, who, as Mr Bruce states, would like the ringing to be voluntary. But why, I should like to ask, are the ringers alone asked to forego their slight remuneration. All I can say to this is that when other parts of the church's organism are willing to make their work a labour of love alone, then I for one will willingly throw in my little mite, and do my share with the best. In concluding this remarks in the magazine, Mr Bence states that, having received no reply, he concluded that the ringers did not wish to continue. I did not think his letter needed any reply, as it simply told me his final decision on the subject.—Yours, etc.,

G. W. STELL.

A ROUNDHAY STORY.

A young gentleman residing Roundhay way found a five-pound note (says a writer in the "Evening News.") Now, although he lived at Roundhay he was a square man, and he did not go and cash that fiver, but neither was he fool enough to take it to the Town Hall.

He didn't want to have his own little bit of tramway profit appropriated to the relief of the rates, as they have a way of doing behind Queen Victoria's back, so he put the note in his pocket and his eye on the "Lost and found" advts., wherein he presently saw its loss notified, with the vague and cryptic reference to the finder being rewarded.

The day after the advt. appeared he repaired to the address given, which proved to be that of a tailor's shop, and after satisfying himself that the proprietor of it was the rightful owner of his treasure trove he handed it over. The resulting "snip" was loud in his admiration of the finder's honesty, but didn't seem anxious to come to business touching that little matter of the reward, so he had to be reminded about it.

"Ah, yes," he said, "the reward. I've been thinking about that. Well, I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll make you one of my fifty shillin' suits, as advertised, for thirty bob."

By the gathering of the Primitive Methodist District Synod, at Selby, £65 has been raised on behalf of local church and circuit funds.

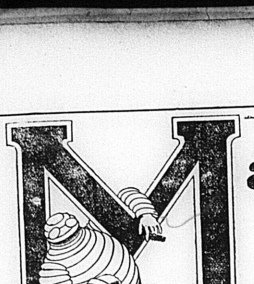
A movement, which is receiving considerable support, has been started for the erection of a memorial hall in Selby Abbey, with which he was intimately associated for over fifty years, to the late Mr William Litthewood, who died suddenly a short time ago.

CRICKET.—The opening match on the new ground, which has been leased for the Rev. B. Hemsworth has generously provided to the members of the Monk Fryston Cricket Club, took place on Saturday. The visiting team was Mr H. S. Lyon's Hillam Hall Club, and there was a good muster of spectators. The home team batted first, and on a very wicket they fared badly before the bowling of Mr. Heyman and Sunley, they were dismissed for 27 runs. Hillam Hall responded with 58 runs, Morley being top scorer with 30. The hero of the match was J. Long, of Monk Fryston, who took all the wickets for 25 runs, performing the "hat trick." After the match the President entertained both teams to tea in the Concert Hall, and about 80 were present. Mr. Heyman presided, and he was supported by Mr H. S. Lyon, Mr W. C. Heyman, and others. The Chairman, proposing the toast "Monk Fryston Cricket Club," said that Mr Monk had been for a long time at a low ebb. He had made inquiries about the state of affairs, and, after serious thought, he had taken the club on new ground, etc. He was sorry Monk Fryston had lost their first match, but he thought they were short of practice, and he was looking forward to better things in the future. Mr T. E. Foster, on behalf of the Monk Fryston Club, responded, and said they were all greatly thankful to Mr Hemsworth for what he had done.

Mr. Sunley said he had given away 30 wickets, and there was a large gathering on Saturday to pay a last tribute to a kind and generous friend. Many beautiful wreaths were sent, including floral tributes from relatives, friends, the Conservative Association, the Choral Society, and the Farmers' Club. Mr Hey, who was a widower, leaves no family.

Lord Harewood paid 600 guineas for a horse that won a race at Newmarket on Tuesday.

Viscount Lascelles has been elected on the Grand Council of the Primrose League for the county of York.



A sum of £2 5s. has been sent to Leeds Infirmary by Mr. T. H. Davison, being the proceeds of the annual smoking concert at the Fox Inn, Thornet.

Receiving orders were made on Tuesday at York, on their own petitions, against David Robertson, 14, Westfield Avenue, Selby, and carrying on business at 60, Wide Street, Selby, as a watchmaker and jeweller; and John Ernest Chew-brough, Hambleton, near Selby, butcher.

CRICKET.—Aberford entertained Harrogate Nomads on Saturday and had a very interesting game. G. Connell took 7 wickets for 25 runs. Scores:—Aberford—J. Binkey 8, T. Abbott 0, O. Griffin 1, J. Parkinson 0, A. Connell 1, F. Walton 14, J. Connell 2, A. Lupton 3, A. Nutton 5, H. Jakeman 5, W. Dickenson (not out) 0, extras 8; total 49. Harrogate—Pleasg 0, J. Mutrie 6, H. Downs 0, P. Jennings 3, E. Barrett 2, G. Mutrie 8, C. Storey 2, Chippendale 1, Voukes 16, W. Mart 3, W. Roberts (not out) 4, extras 5; total 59.

TWO SURE THINGS.—Dr. E. P. Pickersgill, of Sherburn, who was assisted by Mr J. Potts, of Sherburn, was examiner in the eighth ambulance competition for the Rowden Church Lodge Shield at Leeds on Saturday. Clarence Iron and Steel Works won the trophy for the third consecutive year, and it has been passed to their property. A vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Pickersgill for his services, and, in reply, the doctor said he had given the competitors two simple tests—a remark which was greeted with loud laughter from the competitors. Mr J. W. Dee, of Crossgates, is hon. secretary of the competition.

SUCCESS.—Aberford Choral Society won third prize in the choral sight reading contest at the Pontefract Musical Competitions on Wednesday. Mr E. Wilson, Mr W. Harrison, Mr G. Webster, Mr W. H. Pettinger, Mr G. Bromley, and others. The Chairman proposed "Agriculture" Last year and the year before it fairly good one for the farmers, and he hoped this year would be a better one. There, on the whole, he thought, had not much to complain about. Referring to the lot of the farm labourers, he was glad to see that a movement had been made to give them higher wages. In some parts of England they were certainly very badly paid

BARKSTON ASH COMPETITION—ITS GROWTH.

Barkston Ash cricketers may well congratulate themselves on the steady headway which the Competition has made during the last two or three years, and they ought, as sportsmen, to be proud to belong to such an organization, linking up every part of the district in the furtherance of the great summer game. The League is no small proposition now-a-days. The season was opened on Saturday afternoon, and there were nearly 200 players out in connection with the eighteen matches on the card. It may be assumed that twenty persons on the average were interested in each match—a modest estimate, I think—so that there were many people following League cricket in the Division. The day was very cold, and, while some good scores were made, it may be accepted that the conditions prevented some of the teams doing full justice to themselves. There were some unexpected results, but they will only tend to intensify interest in the Competition.

SENIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Sexton made a bad start, for they journeyed to Church Fenton with only nine men, and, although they were beaten, they nevertheless made a very plucky fight. Church Fenton were in good batting form, and they registered the respectable total of 88. Thompson was top-scorer of the match with a meritorious 37, and Mosby (14) and W. D. Foxton (15) backed up his effort splendidly. J. Sissons bowled with effect for Sexton, his five wickets costing only 18 runs, and P. Lawn secured second honours, with 4 wickets for 41. Sexton made a very creditable show with the willow, and their score of 67 was good in the circumstances. Sissons contributed 17, Lawn 14, and J. Finn 13. Mosby had the best bowling figures of the day—6 wickets for 17—and Cawood secured 2 for 10 runs. Church Fenton's victory should be an encouragement to them.

South Milford came a cropper at Cawood, and the result must be attributed to the fine bowling of the homesters, although the Milford outlook was almost as good. Intending to field to the contest with the modest score of 52, and towards this Stockdale and H. Lund contributed 13 each, while C. O. Lund had no less than four runs. A. Dyelley secured 3 for 18 runs, and H. Chilton 3 for 26. If Cawood did not gibe a strong batting exhibition, South Milford showed greater weakness, for they were trundled out for 46. Bob Sutton making 14 and Hodgson 10. S. Lund's deliveries were very difficult to negotiate, and his record of five wickets for no runs was an excellent one. C. O. Lund secured four wickets for 23 runs.

Church Fenton Seamoner, at home, were completely outclassed by Tadcaster, who, fancied, would prove too strong for their opponents. It was assuredly a depressing start for the homesters, but it will not dishearten them. Tadcaster had great use of the wicket, and they batted magnificently. For a loss of one wicket they rattled up the big score of 150, and Mason gave a masterly exhibition, his contribution being 70 runs out of Harry Todd's total top-score of 84 before Bessrell the ball into Moore's hands, and Baker registered 30 (not out). Church Fenton tried no fewer than seven bowlers, and E. Poulter was the only one to meet with success, his wicket costing 35 runs. Harrison batted pluckily for his score of 18, but he received little support from the others, the Church Fenton innings realising only 96. Baker was in great form with the leather, and his figures—7 wickets for 17—speak for themselves.

Halton, who played in the Junior League last season, made a promising start at Barwick, where the homesters were well beaten by five wickets. Barwick did not show anything like their usual form, the batting being unworthy of the team, and they were all out for the meagre score of 30. T. Robshaw making a dozen. Credit must, however, be given to the bowlers, and C. Sunter, with 7 wickets for 12 runs, had the best figures obtained in the match. It was a remarkably fine performance. Benson secured 2 wickets for 3 runs, and W. Smales had 1 for 13. For a loss of five wickets Halton put on 52, and H. Cowell had 11 to his credit. Bowers captured 2 wickets for 5, Hartley 2 for 11, and Fred Lumb 1 for 16. The Halton team also fielded better than their opponents, and frequently it is smart work in the field that wins games.

Micklefield made a good start against Great Preston, who did not fulfil the promise of the previous week. The losers were dismissed for 90, and J. Green (12) and P. Firth (11) were the only players to get double figures. While Munro (4 for 15 runs) and A. Smith (3 for 16) handled well, J. H. Townend did better, and annexed three wickets at a cost of one run each. Micklefield's score was 99. Hobson, including 20, Munro 18, and A. Smith 17 (not out), and the form of these players should be some satisfaction. For Preston A. Thompson captured 3 wickets for 10, J. Green 3 for 21, and Blackburn 2 for 11.

The match between Garforth and Seacroft furnished a splendid contest and a close and exciting finish. For once in a way, several of Garforth's best batsmen failed, and the first five men had nineteen among them. Wilson (10), however, improved matters, and Balland (15), Firth (10), and Mosby (12 not out) formed a "stiff" that wagged to some purpose. The total was 81. Pickersgill secured the bowling honours for Seacroft, with five wickets for 26, while Dennis Burton had 2 for 20, and C. Johnson 2 for 18. On going to bat Seacroft soon lost Dennis Burton, but G. Thompson (35) and Tom Toft (15) offered a stout resistance, and, in fact, it may be said that they made victory possible. After Johnson had made 8, there was a collapse, and Garforth looked like winning, but the two last men managed to make Seacroft secure, and they won by a wicket. Wilson had the bowling honours for Garforth—5 for 13 runs—while Bellamy secured 3 for 20, and G. Read 2 for 18.

Crossgates Wesleyans and Whitkirk met at Old Manston, and the visitors won comfortably by 55 runs. Whitkirk, who batted first, opened well, Milford (21) and J. Shepherd (34) setting the team a capital example, and their efforts were worthily supported by Lowerday (16), Wainwright (15), and Pawson (24). It must be confessed, however, that the Crossgates men were in a measure responsible for the good batting put on against them, and they should give a little more attention to the fielding department. Ted Clough trundled well for the losers, taking 7 wickets at a cost of 7 each. Crossgates Wesleyans found the fast bowling of Fred Wainwright, who, at one period of the game, had actually six wickets for 2 runs, and it was fortunate for them he did not maintain his figures. D. Umpleby and Verner Beaumont, however, batted well, having no luck, and Ted Clough (17 not out) and V. Thompson (17), coming in at the end, trounced the bowling merrily. Their efforts, however, did not compensate for other failures, and the innings closed for 91. Fred Wainwright's final figures were 6 wickets for 26, while E. Ingle had 2 for 24, and E. Pawson 2 for 12. Whitkirk's fielding was good, and they will do well if they keep up this form.

Crossgates and Halton Wesleyans had a well-contested game, and the former proved themselves slightly better than their opponents, and won by 14 runs. The winners made an excellent start, Burnell (23) and Sykes (21) batting well, and to them was due a large share of credit for the win. The total was 85, and Spivey contributed a dozen. The Bell and Sykes bowling honours for Halton, G. O. Bell scoring 6 wickets for 34 and C. Bell 3 for 18. The losers were dismissed, after a stern tussle, for 72, and Kilburn made 12. J. W. Popplewell, G. O. Bell, and Powell 10 each. Burwell again proved the most useful man on his side, capturing 8 wickets for 23 runs.

The defeat of Collingham at home by Shadwell must be put down as a personal triumph for Arthur Heaton, who was in irresistible form with the leather. Shadwell had first knock of the wicket, and they registered 68, of which Barrett had a well-played 19 and Chapman 12 (not out). Heaton captured 3 wickets for 11, and Newsome 2 for 6. Emmerson 2 for 13, and Sutton 2 for 24. Collingham were soon dismissed for 30, Heaton securing no fewer than 8 wickets for 13 runs—four clean bowled.

Ulleskelf's Matches.

Nine matches are down for division on Saturday. Tadcaster will be at home to Cawood, and, while I fancy the homesters, they should take no liberties with their opponents after South Milford's surprise packet. South Milford, at home, will be expected to succeed against Church Fenton, and Saxton, with choice of ground, have an advantage over Church Fenton Seamoner. Barwick will create a surprise if they succeed at Seacroft, and Halton have a hard task against Micklefield, while Garforth will be careful at Great Preston, where they have had their calculations upset before now. Whitkirk, if they maintain their form, should account for Collingham, and Shadwell will be at home to Crossgates, who can most assuredly be relied upon for runs. A keen game will be seen at Halton, where the Wesleyans try conclusions with their Old Manston friends. Both teams lead on Saturday, so there will be a race for the points.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Ulleskelf celebrated their return to the Competition by gaining a victory in their first match. Barkston were their opponents, and they were sent back for 31 (Hoyston 14). Stronach captured six wickets for 8 runs—a performance that will be hard to beat. Ulleskelf won with five wickets down, Lacy scoring 12. For the losers J. White had 2 wickets for 5 runs.—Kirk Deighton were at Tadcaster, and they made a really good fight against the homesters, who are a smart lot. Tadcaster batted first (G. Oxley 20 and C. Oxley 10), and A. Shrasenith captured five of their wickets for 15, while Kettlewell had 3 for 12. Tadcaster replied with 61 for 8 wickets (Atkins 18 and Garland 17). For the losers H. Oxley bowled finely, taking 6 wickets for 12 runs.—Bramham gave South Milford a sound drubbing, being supreme for every department of the game. The visitors started splendidly, and the first wicket fell with the score at 52. Cass knocked up 33, Gibbons 28, and Dawson 20, and the total was 144. Ally Lindley bowled out four Milford's scoring eight wickets for 36, while Brown had 2 for 18. Milford's score was 34, and Shaw obtained five of their wickets for 18, and Dawson 4 for 12 runs.

In division 2 Garforth had an easy victory over Great Preston by seven wickets. The match was at Preston, and the homesters were got rid of for 46 (Colley 10 and Cooper 13). Hancock captured six wickets for 16, and H. Pickersgill 3 for 12. Garforth scored 49 for 3 wickets (J. Pickersgill 15 not out, G. Fretham 14 not out, and W. Hemsworth 13). The Preston bowling was weak.—Halton accounted for Micklefield by nine wickets. The losers put together 44, and Mealkin contributed 19. Hezel trundled well, having 6 wickets for 23, while Longden had 4 for 17. For Halton H. Dobson (20 not out) and B. Nicholson (17 not out) soon made victory secure.—Seacroft beat Barwick by 10 wickets. The feature of the Seacroft innings was the batting of E. Gause, who compiled 83—the largest score got on Saturday—while P. Taylor made 21. Dervish (6 for 30) and Lindley (5, Smith 13, and B. Johnson 10. The score was 186 or 7 wickets. Beswick put on 44, of which Walton had a dozen, and J. Lindley captured four of their wickets for 15 and W. Lindley 5 for 25 runs.

In division 3 Crossgates A defeated Halton Wes. A by nine wickets. The Wesleyans were dismissed for 38 (S. Sunter 11), and Brooks secured five of their wickets for 10 runs and Wilkinson 5 for 18. For a loss of one wicket Crossgates made 42, and Wilkinson and Brooks (not out) had a down each.—Garforth Wes. met in excellent form, and their Swillington friends had cause to know of it. The Garforthians rattled up 133 for 6 wickets and declared, and V. Silberry made 40, H. Goodall 29, H. Ward, 21, and Johnson 20 (not out). T. Barraclough was the best of the Swillington bowlers, his two wickets costing five runs, with A. Dobson had 3 for 25. Swillington batted well, scoring up 63, and A. Dobson made 28 and G. Barraclough 13. Ward's six wickets cost 25 runs, and F. Gent's 3 cost 20.—Whitkirk A were not strong enough for Crossgates Wes. A, who won by over 50 runs. The winners scored 115, and the batting of H. Thompson (39) and H. Brook (33) was a feature of the game. Bruce did good work with the leather for Whitkirk, securing seven wickets for 36, and H. Nowell took 3 for 38 runs. Whitkirk's total was 52, and Cuttle contributed 17 by good cricket. Thompson captured 4 wickets for 3 runs, and E. Beaumont had 5 for 14.

YORKSHIRE CENTRAL LEAGUE.

Middleton Park, playing in the Yorkshire Central League on Saturday, defeated Kirkstall Old Boys by 6 wickets. Scores:—Middleton Park—Barraclough 1, Spink 1, Speak 10, J. W. Place 3, Goldthorpe 21, Clarkson 8, Rhards-on 11, G. H. Place 11, Ramsden 6, Butler 8, Coley (not out) 2; extras, 2; total 90. Kirkstall Educational—Stables 1, Kaye 8, Crowther 6, Gill 12, Barrett 8, Lee 11, Gomes 4, Hirst 6, Wright 3, Hall 2, Kelly (not out) 2, extras 4; total, 61.

ROTHWELL CRICKET LEAGUE.

Rothwell fires eleven were decidedly off form on Saturday, when they played Carlton at Carlton. They batted first, and the sum total of their efforts amounted to eighteen runs. Illingworth and Sykes bowled throughout for Carlton, and made short work of their opponents. Illingworth secured seven at a cost of nine runs, and Sykes got two for seven. The Carlton eleven had sadly passed the Rothwell score at the fall of the third wicket, and won easily. Rothwell batted eleven, although defeated by Carlton second, made a better display, being dismissed for 70. Five of the wickets fell to J. Ashton at an average of 2.8 per wicket, Falkner and Nelson did well for Rothwell, making seventeen and eighteen respectively. Carlton, who won by three wickets, registered 82, G. Dixon being the chief scorer with thirty runs. Wilson obtained six fours. W. Parish for Rothwell claimed five wickets for sixteen runs.

On Saturday Oulton first eleven were at home to Outwood, and they were defeated by the narrow margin of one run, the scores being 132 and 133 respectively. For the Oultonians P. L. Butler and H. J. Butler made a long stand, and the former was not caught out until he had secured 32. H. J. Butler's wicket fell just when he had knocked up thirty. Outwood had four good batsmen in J. W. Lamb, D. Whitley, Colley, and A. Hargreaves, who, with the exception of the latter (19), made over twenty each. For Oulton, Hutchinson took six wickets for 48, and R. V. Higgins three for thirty. The second team of Oulton were defeated by Outwood. The homesters declared at the fall of the seventh wicket, when the score stood at 159. H. Lees, who went in first, made 77. W. F. Jones was also in grand form and totalled 44 before being bowled by Parkinson. Oulton were got rid of for 57.

Stanley Church defeated Altofts United by 85 runs to 40, and Stanley Church A overcame Altofts Wes. by 87 to 41.—Robin Hood A were greatly superior to Robin Hood B, who went down by eight wickets. The losers made 59 (Hare 19 and Morton 14) and Robin Hood replied with 53 for 2 wickets (E. Wormald 26).

ELTOFTS WIN.

On Saturday afternoon Eltofts played the Old Leedsensians, and the former won by five wickets. The visitors scored only (Rigby 30 and Turner 32), and Turner secured five of their wickets for 12 runs. Eltofts replied with 102 for eight wickets, and Turner made 35, Pickersgill 28, and Hudson 20.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Oswalds and the Perkinses were great friends. They found they had many things in common. What delighted the Perkinses so much with regard to the Oswalds was the fact that their musical ears were so bad that they did not mind when the four instruments were out of tune. They sat and listened, and expressed immense admiration, and Thomas Oswald was beside himself with glee when he insisted, notwithstanding Mrs. Luck's prohibition, in waltzing round the room with his arm round Mrs. Perkins's waist. But he did not often venture on this amusement. He did not often venture on this amusement. He liked to talk to the Perkinses; they made the place very bright and agreeable to him. They were sufficiently in the musical world to be able to get tickets for good concerts, and occasionally for plays, and these they shared with the utmost good nature with their neighbours. They all, with the exception of Jane, loved the Oswalds; but that young lady still refused to play the piano when Tom Oswald was in the room.

On the day after Miss Patricia had gone into the country, Thomas Oswald went downstairs and interviewed Mrs. Luck. He existed to have a busy and active day before him. But he wanted to see Mrs. Luck before he undertook anything else.

"Can I have a word with your mother, Miss Hattie?" he said, as Hattie brushed past him.

"I'm afraid mother's very busy just now, Mr. Oswald. Can I take her place?"

"No, you can't. I want a woman like your mother—one soft and yielding; one who will see the reason of things—in fact, a reasonable lady still refused to play the piano when Tom Oswald was in the room.

"And you think I won't?" said Hattie, laughing, and then looking very grave.

"I don't think you will. You're a sharp 'un, Miss Hattie."

"Well, if you'll go into the dining-room, Mr. Oswald, I will tell mother that you want to see her."

"And tell her not to keep me, please. I am a busy man. If it is her intention to fill her house check-a-block with P.G.'s, she's got to see to their comfort. Now then, hustle away, and ask her to be good enough to come to me immediately."

Oswald entered the dining-room. The cloth was already laid for the hot midday meal. The windows were shut. The room felt very fusty. It had a smell of stale food about it. Oswald went to one of the windows and flung it open. Immediately a shower of smuts came in. He shut down the window again with a bang of disgust.

"Horrid place, London!" he said to himself. "I could wish myself back in South Africa, and if it were not for the important business which has brought me over—the stopping of that marriage—I wouldn't stay an hour longer in this beastly hole. Ah! sorry to trouble you, Mrs. Luck."

"It's no trouble, Mr. Oswald; that is, if I can do anything for you," said Mrs. Luck, as she was pulling down her sleeves as she spoke. She had been busy making pastry for the early dinner when Hattie summoned her.

"The old beast wants you and you must go, Mum," said Hattie. "Here, I'll finish this pie. You wash your hands and go. He's up to all kinds of devilment, I'll be bound he was."

"You are prejudiced, Hat; I wish you wouldn't be," said her mother.

Hattie smiled, took her mother's place at the pastry-board, and Mrs. Luck went upstairs.

"Yes?" she said, turning to her paying guest.

"We are all going out for the day," said Mr. Oswald.

"Indeed!" answered Mrs. Luck.

"Yes. When I say all, I mean we four Oswalds and the four Perkinses. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins have been kind enough to invite my son Thomas and my daughter Laura and my good wife to join them on a little river expedition. They are taking the banjo with them, and will sing some negro melodies. They often do that sort of thing, and, in consequence, get their trip for nothing. It's very plucky of them, I think. It's a charming day to be on the river. What I wanted to say to you was that as there won't be any lunch required, nor any afternoon tea, nor some of the party will be here until late for dinner—you will, of course, make a reduction in your weekly bills."

"Oh—excuse me," said Mrs. Luck. "I charge extremely little as it is. It isn't my fault if my guests choose to go away for the day. I have already provided an excellent dinner for you all; I have to pay for that dinner whether you eat it or not. I am sorry, but I really cannot be obliging."

"Please yourself," said Mr. Oswald. "I simply mentioned it. It's what is universally done. I just alluded to it to Mrs. Perkins, and she said, of course you would be quite certain to allow us at least a shilling a head off our principal meal—two meals, indeed, early dinner and tea; but if you don't choose to do it, there is always a remedy, you understand."

"The pastry is finished, and there's no remedy," said Hattie, coming in at that moment.

"Miss Luck, I did not ask to see you."

"We can't do it, can we, Hattie? It does seem hard," said poor Mrs. Luck.

"It is not to be thought of," said Hattie. "Those who wish to leave us can leave us. Our terms are remarkably reasonable—ludicrously so; and we can let—sell—easily; so you can please yourself about going."

"Well, I call it extremely disobliging, of course, and I shall give notice at the present moment; but it isn't likely we will any of us stay long. I say as well tell you, Mrs. Luck, that, lucky as you consider yourself, your luck may not last."

"Oh, please don't pun on mother's name!" said Hattie. "It is such bad form."

"I don't want you to teach me what I ought to say and do, Miss Hattie Luck. However, you will doubtless enjoy the pleasant meal which you have provided for eight people who will not be present, and we shall expect a very first-rate supper to-night."

"You shall have a good supper; I will see to that," said Mrs. Luck, a relieved expression coming over her face.

"By the way," said Oswald, "you are really wanting, my dear madam, in Eve's attributes."

"Eve's attributes!" said Mrs. Luck.

"What do you mean?"

"You have shown no curiosity. You haven't asked me where I am going to spend the day. The rest of the party are going on the river—a delicious day for the river—but I——"

"Yes; where are you going?"

"How do you know that I will tell you?"

"If you don't wish to, sir, I think I can survive," said Mrs. Luck.

"Mrs. Luck, you're not the sort of woman to suspect a house full of paying guests to let me tell you that frankly. A woman who fills her house with P.G.'s ought to mother them. She ought to be full of devotion to them; she ought to know how to treat them. She ought to pet them; she ought to be interested in their lives; she ought to sympathise."

"As to mothering," exclaimed Hattie, "poor mother can't be the parent part to a person a great deal older than herself."

Here she stared boldly into Thomas Oswald's face.

"Thank you for nothing, my lass. Dear, dear! Well, I've no time to lose. You're a bad woman to have P.G.'s, Mrs. Luck; and as to you, Miss Hattie, you're as pert as they're made. If I see our house empty before I leave England, and, let me tell you, it will give me no small pleasure—no small pleasure, Miss Hattie—no small pleasure, Mrs. Luck. Well, as you don't ask me where I am going, I'll tell you for the fun of the thing. I'm going hunting up that old lady from Yorkshire—Miss Patricia Ransome. Queer name—Patricia Ransome. Queer name—Patricia Ransome—and I guess pretty well where I'll find her. I'll find her with her grand-friends at Conmop Grange. I'm a cousin of Mr. Coldhurst of Conmop Grange. I intend to spend my day there. I am going by the very next train. I think that is about all. I may not be back to supper, but if I am, I expect something good, and hot—hot, do you hear. Good, and hot. Now, good-bye."

Thomas strolled out of the room. He went upstairs to the drawing-room. "It's no go," he said to the Perkinses. "She's as stingy as the rest of Perkinses can possibly offer. It's the only house in London where they'll put up with the piano, the banjo, the mandoline, and the guitar. We've tried and tried, and Mrs. Luck is the only woman who will bear it. We'll have to stay whatever happens."

"Then nothing will induce us to leave you," said Mr. Oswald. "You make life so cheery. It's almost as nice since you have come as it was in South Africa. Mrs. Perkins, let me get in a word—my wife is a hopeless chatterbox. Whenever you come to South Africa you'll have a welcome from us. You shall be taken in—yes, in, madam—into our family, and not a penny will you have to pay. We don't like paying guests—that we don't. Thank you, Mr. Perkins, for the treat you are giving my son and my daughter. I'm off now on important business. I may as well mention, however, that I am extremely likely to be a man of enormous wealth. I have expectations. When a man has expectations, you never know where you may find him. He is on the top of the ladder, or at the bottom of the ladder, there's a warm corner for you, Perkins, for you, Mrs. Perkins, and you, Miss Jane, and for you, Miss Clara."

"You've spoken very beautifully, pa," said Laura, when all this time had sat silent (she was generally a silent sort of girl) on the sofa in the Perkinses' drawing-room, "but if you will be me, I want to say a word to you."

"Isn't she a dear, cuddling little thing?" said Oswald, turning round and taking hold of his arm. "Ah, I'm a whale on my girl—I'm a whale on her. There's nothing I wouldn't do for her. Come along, then, Laurie, my little pet, come along. What does 'oo want to say to little pa?" he continued, in imitation of a father and daughter retired on to the landing.

"You mustn't be cross with me," said Laura, "but we are the only go on this expedition without some money in our pockets."

"Money! The Perkinses are taking you," said Oswald, in a puzzled voice. "I can't expect the Perkinses to pay for everything."

"Most certainly they'll pay for everything. We'll pay everything for you when they come to see us in South Africa."

"Oh, but, father, you know we may not be in South Africa for years."

"We may never be there again," said Oswald, with a laugh which nearly reached a roar; "that's the fun of the joke! But they'll think no end of the invitation all the same. No, my dear little Laurie, not a penny do I give."

"Then, father, neither mother nor I will eat anything."

"What folly!"

"And then very likely I'll faint."

"You really are the most disagreeable girl."

"You praised me so frightfully before the Perkinses!"

"Of course I did. I like to pose as an affectionate pa. It suits my character. But there—I'm in a good humour, and there's no withstanding a pretty child. Some day, perhaps, you'll have dresses as smart as that nice young lady you met yesterday."

"Oh, father! Do you think I ever shall?"

"If you ever do, you will owe it to your dear cute old dad. Well, I just want a little money you must have it. How many of you are going? Three? Here's a shilling. Bring back sixpence. Twopence each will be plenty for your food. You can have a glass of milk for a penny, and a bunch of bananas for a penny, and a penny for yourself, you're got indigestion. That's all I've got to give, and I expect to get sixpence back."

"Where is the shilling, father?"

Oswald very reluctantly let it drop into his daughter's hand. She clutched it tightly and dropped it into her pocket.

"I'm going to spend every farthing of it," she said.

"You wicked child, you are not! Give it back to me."

"No, daddy, I want it all, and you're miserably stingy, but you won't see a farthing back."

Oswald might have pursued Laura, and even fought with her, had not at that moment Mr. Perkins—tall, thin, and enhavemount Mr. Perkins—tall, thin, and enhavemount taking—appeared on the landing.

"You little duckie duck!" exclaimed Oswald, changing his tone at once. "Father's got you, and you refuse you nothing. She's been getting the chink out of me, Perkins; just like them all. Like—them—all. Ha, ha! Now there's no refusing her."

"This is my feast, you mustn't forget that, Miss Laura," said Perkins.

"Perkins, my good fellow, you mustn't spend your money on my family. Laura is richly provided for, I assure you, richly. Now then, I must be off; I am going to see my wealthy relation. I'm going to open a fountain; I'm going to open a barrel full of goodly treasure. My child—my pretty one—don't keep me. Perkins, take care of her. She is so the apple of my eye."

A MISTAKE RECTIFIED.

SHORT STORY

Rue Wilbeck had just struck when Major Alexander Lindsay of the Royal Artillery, main his slow way through the crowded hall-room of a certain mansion in Mayfair. Though he was neither slashing nor brilliant, his reputation was that of a gallant, fearless soldier, and his unerring tact and kindly nature endeared him to all who knew him.

Suddenly his whole face lit up as his eyes rested on a slim girl of nineteen, Lady Norah, she youthful beauty of this brilliant scene, and the only child of the major's old friend and fellow-Horrokian, Sir James Nolan.

All at once she met his intent gaze, and the next he gave her such a big wave of colour chase the white across her cheeks, and linger there.

"Can it be possible that she, so young and fair, loves me, a grave, stern soldier of forty-seven?" he asked himself. "And yet my heart tells me she does. Before the night grows old, I will learn the truth from her lips. My hope, my very life, are centred in her."

He remained for a while wrapped in pleasant musings. The whole scene had cast a glamour over him. It was all so fairy-like and bright. Everywhere was life and colour, the enlivening music, the gorgeous display of flowers.

A smart tap on the shoulder broke his reverie. He wheeled round to encounter the humorous glance of his young and handsome brother, a man of nine-and-twenty years.

"Mick, I want a word with you. Come into the conservatory. We shan't be missed in this crowd."

"Well, what is the matter cow?" the major enquired.

"The matter is," in an embarrassed tone, "that I am in the hands of a money-lender pressing me for enormous sum of money that I can't possibly meet."

"The same old story, Rodney. A man so poor he cannot afford to be as recklessly extravagant as you are. Times without number I have helped you, but on the last occasion I warned you not to expect another penny-piece from me."

"Then I am a ruined man. Before God, I Mick, I swear to turn over a new leaf, if you will side me over this difficulty."

"You have broken your word on more than one occasion," replied the major quietly. "How can I be sure that you are in earnest?"

"I will tell you what. I have an incentive now. I hope soon to win Norah for my wife."

Major Lindsay drew a difficult breath.

"And Norah, does she love you?" he asked with an unnatural composure.

"I have every reason to hope that she does, at any rate, I am quite certain that there is no other man in the case."

"Then I refuse the honour of your liabilities, Rodney, and I will settle them for you."

The kind tone in the voice touched the younger man, and all his best feelings responded to it. "Mick, you are the best fellow in the world. Mick, I am a selfish brute, quite undeserving of your generosity."

"Put, tut, let us change the subject. Suppose you join the dancers. I will come presently."

A minute later the major was alone.

He rose stiffly from his chair and moved hesitatingly to the window. There he stood with his head bent low, and the cool air breathed upon his fair head.

"I feel 4 ars older than I did an hour ago," he muttered thickly.

Just then came a light footfall, the swish of a skirt, and Lady Norah laid a white-gloved hand on his sleeve.

"A penny for your thoughts," she said in a mischievous voice.

He turned a pale, but composed face towards her, and gave a sad little laugh.

"They are too valuable for sale. Will you let me have yours instead?" he asked.

There came no reply.

She sat down and drew her white draperies aside to make room for him.

"I am going to-morrow," he began, "to Crimea to-morrow," he informed her quietly.

"You?" she said with a little catch in her voice.

"Yes. I have only had a few hours' notice."

"Oh, that terrible war. I wish it was over, and you were safe home again," she said with an irresistible touch of feeling.

A pause that followed, he wondered. "Did she mean those words, or was she merely playing a part like so many of her sex."

Then he rose and spoke again, "Our paths lie in opposite directions, mine to work and duty, yours, I trust, to love and happiness."

The words struck her as incomprehensible and strange. And her heart felt hot and pained. What had caused this sudden change in his manner?" she thought.

She strove for utterance, but speech seemed impossible.

He bent and kissed her hand.

"Goodnight and good-bye," he said, and was gone before she could answer.

* * *

Two years had passed.

In a pretty, white-panelled room of a house on Campden Hill, two girls sat facing each other beside a big fire.

Without the sky was grey and dull, the day cold enough to heighten the pleasure of a warm room.

"Tigo and Jerry are always on their best behaviour when I allow them into my sanctum," said Mrs Rodney Lindsay, gfancing at two Scotch terriers that lay curled up side by side on the Persian rug.

"Why are the sky decorated with ribbons?" enquired her cousin, Lady Norah Nolan, slowly sipping her tea.

"In honour of their master's return. He will be here this evening."

"I did not know Major Lindsay had returned," said Lady Norah with a catch in her voice, which did not escape her cousin's notice.

"Did you not? I thought I had mentioned his return in my note to you yesterday. He has been in town a few days."

There was a pause.

"He—he is," she went on. "What do you think? Until he received Rodney's last letter, Mick thought you were to be his sister-in-law."

"But why. What made him think so?" exclaimed Lady Norah in a bewildered tone.

"I will tell you. First, Do you remember this hall at your house two years ago?"

"Yes," answered Lady Norah, toying with the dark velvet on her waist. "It was the night before Major Lindsay left for the war."

"Exactly. Well, in the conservatory that evening, he and Rodney had a long tete-a-tete. Among other things, Rodney remarked, he hoped to win Norah for his wife."

"But he meant you," said Lady Norah, looking helplessly at her cousin for further explanation.

"Of course, he did," she replied with a becoming blush. "But, you goose, can't you understand the rest? Mick simply took it for granted that there was but one Norah in the world—and she," in a dry tone, "was your ladyship."

In the silence that followed, Mrs Rodney glanced at the clock on the mantelpiece and saw that the time was a quarter past five. "You won't mind my leaving you for a few minutes," she said rising from her chair. "I want to try on my new dress."

Shortly afterwards Major Lindsay entered the room.

"Norah," he began in the old quiet voice, "when I left England, I thought you and Rodney cared for each other. Have I found out my mistake too late?"

She whispered almost inaudible "No," and her fingers trembled in his grasp.

In a moment, with a stifled cry of rapture, his arms were about her, and his lips pressed passionate kisses upon her face.

"Say the dream of my life is to be realised after all," he said presently. "Tell me, dearest. Have you always loved me?"

"You were my hero from the time I wore short frocks," she answered simply. But her heart spoke through those words, and he knew he had gained that love which passeth all understanding.

HINTS FOR THE HOME.

EVIDENCE OF INDIGESTION.

Coldness of feet and limbs is almost invariably an evidence of indigestion. The coldness is due not to the weakness of the heart or feebleness of circulation, as is generally supposed, but to the contraction of the small arteries, preventing blood from entering the parts, says Health. There is generally an irritation of the abdominal sympathetic nerves, which hinders and retard the circulation of the lower extremities. This difficulty is not to be removed by exercise—or by any special application to the limbs, but by removal of the causes of irritation. This may be a prolapsed stomach, chronic indigestion, a blotted and cold foot-baths are valuable. These act not simply on the feet and limbs, but by reflex action they benefically the abdominal sympathetic centres, which are in a diseased condition.

DELICIOUS GINGERBREAD—Beat six ounces of butter and six ounces of sugar together in a basin until creamy; add three eggs and eight ounces of golden syrup; then add eight ounces of flour, into which has been thoroughly stirred a teaspoonful of ground ginger and a tea-spoonful of bicarbonate soda; add four ounces of blanched and shredded almonds. Pour into a greased and papered baking-sheet, and bake about three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. Turn on to a pastry-board to cool, and cut into fancy-shaped pieces of tea.

APPLE JELLY.—A delicious jelly can be made from the parings and cores of apples that have been used for tarts, &c. To each lb. of parings allow one pint of water and a thin strip of lemon-peel. Bring to a boil, and let it simmer about half an hour. Then strain through a piece of flannel, and take the kernels from the stones. For about two pounds boil together for twenty minutes the juice, over closely and quickly, a half-teacupful of water. Add this syrup and the kernels to the juice, pour closely into a little pan about an hour, or till it sets in a little in a plate. It will be quite firm, and will keep for any length of time if properly made. Put in glass jars and tie down like jam.

MACARONI AND OYSTER PUDDING.—Divide four ounces of macaroni into short lengths, and boil in a saucepan of boiling water. Boil drop into a saucepan of boiling water. Boil until tender. Then butter a fireproof dish, line with some of the macaroni, and cover with a layer of shelled oysters. Season with pepper and salt, place small pieces of butter here and there; cover with some of the macaroni, and oysters, and repeat the layers until the dish is full. Pour a little more butter over the top, sprinkle with fine breadcrumbs, and brown in the oven.

A NICE COLD SWEET.—Halve and stone a pound of apples

Disappearance of a Stourton Relieving Officer.

STATEMENT AT HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

BOOKS IN GOOD ORDER

On Wednesday at the meeting of Hunslet Board of Guardians—Mr T. Thomas (Chairman) presiding—the members considered the following item which appeared on the agenda, "Letter from Mr V. Sharp, relieving officer. Absence from duty."

It appears that Mr Vincent Sharp, who lived at Haigh Park Terrace, Stourton, left his work last week without notice, and has not since been seen in the district. Mr Sharp, who is a married man, 42 years of age, carried out his duties up to Wednesday. He had been employed by the Board about seven years, and his books had been left in good order.

The Clerk said he received a letter from Mr Sharp on Friday morning, and it had evidently been posted in Leeds at 8 p.m. on May 7th. It was dated, like all others written by Mr Sharp last week, "May, 1914," without any day. The letter said:—

"Enclosed please find keys of my safe. You will find £4 10s. less postage. Should be pleased if you will have cash checked by yourself. I am going away for private reasons."

Mr Mee said he had balanced up the cash and found that Mr Sharp had a balance in his favour. This intimation came to him (Mr Mee) as a shock, and, after verifying his cash, he went out to see his (Mr Sharp's), wife, who had received a letter on the previous day saying that he was seeking fresh employment. The letter also intimated that he might write to her at the end of the week. As a matter of fact, she received a further letter on Sunday morning, which had been posted from Skipton on Saturday. The first letter she had received was posted at midnight, or rather, 12.30 a.m. on Thursday morning. The cash was right, and there was no obligation for him (the Clerk) to find out what had become of Mr Sharp, but he thought it would be essential if he acted for the Board to find out what had become of him, and he had made inquiries, and if the Board desired it, he would be willing to give information.

Mr Bennett moved that the Clerk give all the information he could, and this was carried.

It appeared, said the Clerk, that this was only the end of something which had been going on for months. He found that Mr Sharp had been going about his work in a slovenly way. Mrs Sharp had told him that some of his books, instead of being done at the office, had been taken home on Sunday, and he had told her that he had been so hard worked at the office that he had no time to do them there. He had also told his wife that he had been kept regularly at the office until ten o'clock at night, and by way of proof he had submitted documents—which he (Mr Mee) had handed to another officer of that Board—which showed that he had been sent to Northallerton to make enquiries on behalf of the Guardians. That, of course, was not true. He added that in this matter Mr Sharp was not alone.

At this juncture Father Cody asked if such allegation might be left out.

Mr Bennett: It is information the Board has asked for.

The Clerk said it was a very difficult task for him to give further information regarding Mr Sharp's relations with his wife without bringing in others.

Mr Bennett said they had put the task to the Clerk, but they did not want him to give information which would jeopardise him.

Mr Butterick moved that the remainder of the discussion be taken in committee.

Mr G. Armitage, who agreed, called attention to the "half-score" reporters who had come for the "spicy" bits, thinking they (the Guardians) were going to fill up their papers.

Dr. Groves asked what the Board was to do. Could they claim anything from him? Was there any salary to claim from him?

The Chairman: There is nothing of that kind.

Dr. Groves: Then it is waste time going any further. We ought to advertise for another.

The Chairman: He has been an officer for whom we have been responsible.

Father Cody: Why not leave it to the Permanent Relief Committee?

Mr Schofield asked if there would be any liability on the Clerk were he to read on. If there was no danger then the Clerk ought to read on and the public should know.

The Clerk said so far as nce nearly the Board should know.

Upon a vote being taken ten voted for the matter to be taken in committee, and eight against.

In the end the Board decided to dismiss Mr Sharp. The question of appointing a successor was left to a sub-committee.

Wetherby Orpheus Male Voice Choir won second prize in the male voice choir competition at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Wednesday.

Mr Jack Wormald, who is leaving Spofforth Hall in a few months' time, has purchased and will take up his residence at Foston Hall, between York and Malton.

E.C.U.—A series of services and meetings were held on Wednesday in connection with the 40th annual Commemoration of the West Leeds Branch of the English Church Union. At Woodhouse the Rev. Cyril M. Cowdrey, chaplain at Stockeld Park, preached on "The Catholic Religion and Life."

Bowling.—On Saturday Hollhe Travellers had a League match at Lancaster, and the scores were:—Lancaster 205, Travellers 123. Details (Lancaster names first)—A. Blamires 21, W. Adams 18; T. Dodd 21, G. Mosby 13; T. Hitchcock 16, R. Dickinson 21; E. Waller 21, H. Archdale 14; C. Moverley 21, T. Booth 4; D. Hill 21, J. Hebden 8; J. H. Hull 21, A. Gilbert 7; N. Rhodes 21, J. W. Dixon 5; W. Milsom 21, A. Mosby 10; R. Rycroft 21, H. Bowers 17.

Wesleyans and Sunday Closing.—At the York Wesleyan Synod on Wednesday the following resolutions were passed with regard to temperance legislation:—"That this Synod of the York District of the Wesleyan Methodist Church desires to express regret at the rejection of the 9 o'clock closing of the English Sunday Closing Bill, and urges the Government to provide early facilities for the passing of the Bishop of London's proposed Bill constructed on similar lines, and for the purpose of furthering the same great object." "That this Synod of the York District of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, in view of the alarming increase in the National drink bill reminds the Government of their repeated promise to introduce and pass through all its stages a comprehensive measure of licensing reform." It was resolved that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the Prime Minister and the Home Secretary.

A Change.—Consequent on York having decided to hold a market for the sale of store stock every Thursday, instead of alternate Thursdays, the Wetherby Markets Committee have decided to hold its sale of store stock on alternate Mondays, on the same day as the fat stock sale, instead of on alternate Thursdays as in the past. The change will take effect from next Monday.

Wetherby Golf Club.—In the Scaled Medal Competition on Saturday the scores were:—R Lee (14 handicap), 34 nets; W D Pearson (16), 35; S Pollbigg (16), 35; W Graydon (11), 36; H Heap (18), 37; J A Willans (8), 38; J Pearson (10), 38; R L Bath (22), 38; W H Platts (6), 39; J A Hudson (24), 40; Rev. Brayley at Ulleskelf.—The Castleford Amalgamation of Anglers did honour on Saturday night at the Star and Garter Hotel, Castleford, to Mr Fred Morrell, one of their members, for gallantry displayed in saving the life of a youth named Brooke, also of Castleford, while fishing at Ulleskelf last year. Mr Morrell was made the recipient of a gold medal. It appears that Brooke was seated on the river bank with rod in hand when the ground gave way and he slipped into the river. A treacherous current was running at the time, and Brooke was speedily carried into the middle of the stream. Seeing the youth's great danger Mr Morrell dived in and held the lad up until a boat in charge of Mr J. Atkinson, of Dewsbury Road, Leeds, came to the rescue. Artificial respiration was applied by Mr Atkinson, and the youth's life was saved.

SHERBURN PETTY SESSIONS.

At Sherburn Petty Sessions on Thursday the magistrates present were Col. Gascoigne, D.S.O. (Chairman), Rev. B. Hemsworth, Mr Walter Crosland, Mr William Crosland, and Mr F. G. Lund.

Geo. Wm. Poole, railway porter, Ferrybridge, was charged with riding a bicycle without a light on the 4th inst. at Brotherton. Fined 1os. and 7s. 6d. costs.

OTTER HUNTING AT COLLINGHAM.

A FINE HUNT.

On Tuesday at Collingham Bridge there was a meet of Mr W. Thompson's otter hounds. Notwithstanding the adverse conditions of a bitterly cold north-westerly wind, and water that felt as if it consisted mainly of the melted snow from the hills at the head of the valley, good sport was obtained. There was a fair-sized field assembled when the Master arrived with twenty couples of hounds, and proceeded to draw up stream. Hounds first ogrked at a small fragging pool on the north bank of the river, and spoke to a drag intermittently until nearing Wood Hall, when they "marked" at a small rood, and put their otter away at once. They drove him down stream until he reached the first shallow, when he turned back, and, feeling himself master of the situation in this deep pool, swam leisurely from one root to another, frequently raising himself out of the water and looking around. Scent was fairly good, and hounds began to hustle him, but after an hour's good swimming he went through the shilds at the shallow at a great pace, finding refuge in a long deep, under the shadow of Langwith Wood, known as "Dead Man's Hole." Here scent was very poor, and for two hours it was a slow game. Then once again the otter made off down stream, and for an hour or more the hunting was much brighter, as hounds were very keen, and on more than one occasion, with the least bit of luck, would have caught their game. But the icy-cold water told on the young hounds, and they were getting slack after five hours' swimming, and when this otter gave up its "sticky" tactics, and boldly made a dash for liberty, gaining the comparative safety of the mile of deep water, with its abundant cover, above Linton Bridge, hounds had to acknowledge themselves beaten. It was a fine hunt, under adverse conditions, of six hours from find to finish.

HOW SHE PAID THE DEBT.

Mrs Isabella Fyvie Mayo, the novelist, whose death was announced on Wednesday, had a hard struggle in her early years. Her father died when she was quite young, and the family found themselves under a debt of £100. She bravely determined to clear this off. She began with her needle, and she and her eldest sister using all their spare time earned 1s. 6d. a week between them. Next she addressed envelopes at 3s. per day, later earning better wages as a copyist for lawyers and others. Her early literary efforts met with little success; but at last she was asked to write a series of articles which ultimately took the form of a novel, for the "Sunday Magazine." This procured plenty of literary work for her at good pay, and the debt was cleared off at last.

On Saturday a cricket match between Wetherby and Clifford ended in a "tie." The scores were 84.

Mr R. J. Foster, of Stockeld Park, won third prize for hunter, gelding, or mare, any age, at Otley Show, on Saturday.

In the girls' solo contest at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Tuesday Elsie Allen, of Ulleskelf, was placed fourth.

Tadcaster Burials Committee.—At the first meeting of the Burials Committee held at the office of Mr W. H. Green (Clerk) the members present were:—Messrs J. J. Shilleto, Jos. Shilleto, J. Jennings, J. T. Kettlewell, W. Crossley, J. Smith, J. A. Grimston, and J. Nettleton. The Clerk produced the names of the persons appointed to represent the Parish Councils on the Burials Committee as follows:—Tadcaster West, Messrs J. Jennings, J. T. Kettlewell, J. Nettleton, and J. J. Shilleto; Tadcaster East, Messrs W. Crossley, Jas. A. Grimston, and Joseph Shilleto; Oxton, Mr Jas. Smith; and Stutton, Mr Jas. Brown. Mr Grimston was appointed chairman and Mr Crossley vice-chairman for the coming year. The whole of the committee were appointed a General Purposes Committee, and the same members were appointed a Visiting Committee as last year. The rules were adopted for conducting the business as before. The committee were requested to view the footpaths at the cemetery and report at the next meeting. The Clerk reported that the Local Government Board auditor had audited the accounts for the year ending March, and the same were satisfactory.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Until recent years the importance of good streets and yards and their relation to the public health were not discerned, and Dr. Hugh Stevenson's remarks in another column should be perused by every house-holder and property-owner. Dealing with the question of consumption he says:—

It is evident that this question is not limited to one merely of housing, but that the outside of the houses are of almost equal importance. It is little use having a house brought up to a habitable standard unless the outside surroundings are at the same time brought up to a similar standard.

It is to be feared that sometimes people who live in good houses amid nice surroundings do not appreciate the conditions under which many people live, and the ratepayers, too, are not without blame, because in every case they could return men who would insist upon healthy conditions being provided in every district.

In the Templenewsam district the Rural Council, by their enterprising policy, have within the last few years turned quagmires into excellent streets, and it has been accomplished without any fuss or trouble. When Tadcaster Rural District Council had jurisdiction over Crossgates they carried out a splendid scheme, and property-owners have reaped enormous advantage from it, because now their property is well let. Moreover, Crossgates is a remarkably healthy suburb, and it may be safely assumed both at Templenewsam and Crossgates the public health has benefitted greatly from the improvement in the yards and streets.

Apropos of the making-up of private streets at Garforth, in his last report Dr. Stedman stated that Helena Street, Kippax, and Robinson and Victoria Streets, Allerton Bywater, would have been better dealt with under the Private Streets Works Act "than allowing the owners to do the work themselves. The two former already require further attention." Where is the saving to the owners? These streets are still repairable by the property-owners, who will soon be called upon to make another outlay, whereas had they allowed the District Council to do the work they would have had no further liability. Again, I say it does not pay property-owners to tinker with streets; they invariably lose money by it.

For the none farm hands in Barkston Ash have ceased from troubling, but I suppose the men were represented at the conference at York at which a demand for a minimum wage of 22s. per week by Jun. 5th was adopted. It will be observed that the men have modified their demand, which was, in the first instance, for 24s., and in asking for 22s. they cannot be accused of being particularly greedy. In the district farm hands are receiving 24s. and over, but there are others working for less than the new minimum, and it is patent that a certain class of farmers will not concede it until they are forced. My contention is that if one farmer can pay the wage his competitor should be in a position to give equal rates to labour. Were those neighbour extravagant in the men's demands one would soon hear of it, but numerous farmers have told me that they remunerate men at a rate equal to 24s. a week, and that is considerably over the industry can afford at better wage than certain employers are disposed to give. Farmers resent combined action on the same courses together, and nothing pleases him more than if I managed to beat him in the examinations." The work of Charles Hatton has certainly borne good fruit.

In those early days, however, there were some fine men among the mining population of the district. I have heard the late Mr Charles Bickerdyke, one of the old officials at Allerton Bywater, who was no mean mathematician—he was a member of Tadcaster District Council for several years—relate how he and the late Mr Christopher Hick, probably the most popular man in Kippax in his time, used to conduct an evening school, and among the pupils—many grown to manhood—was the late Mr Bee Pickard, M.P. No kindly Education Authority encouraged the aspiring youth of those days, and the school was conducted on very humble lines, indeed. The pupils, I was told, had to bring their own candles to guide them through the mazes of arithmetic, etc., but some of them made their mark. It is doubtful that the young men value the great educational advantages they now have, otherwise the evening classes would be better attended.

When the fatality occurred on the railway bridge at Church Fenton several months ago there was an agitation for the erection of lights on the road in order to provide protection for the public. The N.E.R. Co. declined to light the bridge, and the District Council stated that it was not their duty, so the responsibility was thrown on the ratepayers of Church Fenton. A parish meeting was convened for the purpose of considering the question of adopting the Lighting Act, and the ratepayers, by an almost unanimous vote, declined to support public lighting. It is possible, however, that the question will be thoroughly understood. Had the meeting adopted the Act, it was not compulsory on the Council to light the streets of the village, but they would have had power to come to an arrangement with the N.E.R. Co. for the erection and maintenance of lamps on the bridge. This expenditure would have amounted to only a few pounds annually, and it would have been no burden on the parish. As it is, the Council cannot spend a farthing in this direction, otherwise they would be surcharged. If it is desired to bring the question up again a year must elapse between the dates of the meetings.

Apparently it's no joke being a publican. At Tadcaster ample illustration of this was given recently. A man, who, it was stated, had been drinking, entered a pub., and soon there face had cause, presumably for his own protection, to inform him that his absence was preferred to his company. The would-be customer, however, did not take the warning in the proper spirit, and the licence-holder had to forcibly eject him—a rather stiff job, it was, too. Quietness was no sooner restored than the ejected keeper, who had returned to the house, heard a sound of broken glass, and, on going out, he discovered that his visitor had smashed his windows. To add to the licence-holder's worries, his wife fainted, and the window-smasher was left in possession of the street. It is seldom that licence-holders require as much protection as other people, for they have to deal with all sorts of customers.

A Rothwell Colliery Owner's Speech.

MR J. HARGREAVES AND MINERS' WAGES IN THE OLD DAYS.

The third annual dinner of the members of the Yorkshire Coal Exchange was held at the Hotel Metropole, Leeds, on Tuesday, when the principal guest was Mr C. E. Charlesworth, the High Sheriff of Yorkshire and head of the firm of J. and J. Charlesworth (Limited), colliery proprietors, Rothwell.

Mr James Hargreaves, of Moor Allerton (formerly of Rothwell), presided, and was supported by a large company including Mr J. S. Charlesworth (ex-president of the Exchange), Mr F. J. Kitson (President of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce), Mr J. Robinson (President of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce), Mr C. Scriven, Mr Johnson Shaw, Mr J. W. B. Wilcock, Mr Williamson (North-Eastern Railway, Hull), Mr R. Morby, and Mr E. J. Addley (Hull Coal Exporters). Mr T. Whittaker (Leeds Coal Trade), Mr Brown (N.E.R. Co., Leeds), Mr Llewellyn Jones (Askern Main), Mr H. Sandy (Allerton Bywater), Mr J. W. Dobson (Garforth), and Mr Lee (Rothwell Haigh Collieries).

In replying to an invitation from the President, Mr C. E. Charlesworth first addressed the members. He announced that after fifty years' connection with the coal trade he proposed shortly to retire. In the past, he said, the coal trade had suffered from too much legislation which had crippled it in many ways. A great deal of it was absolutely useless. He could not supply a better illustration than the introduction of electric safety lamps into the mine. The other day he gave an order for £7,000 worth of these lamps, which was a serious item in the cost of coal production, when he had many thousand pounds worth of other safety lamps on hand, and he had to send down these lamps to see whether the others were safe or not. The electric lamps gave a better light, but he doubted whether the collier would find it an advantage to use them. This led him to speak, he said, of another question which would have to be taken up by the capitalists of the country. They as colliery owners, had no chance of getting into the House of Commons. If they stood in the districts where they were known, and, he hoped, respected, the organisation of the miners' unions was brought against them by agitators who had the cleverness to poison the minds of the electorate, and thus secure the return of their own nominees to Parliament. This had a deleterious effect, because all the laws he had referred to had been thrust upon them by agitators who had no sense those who were paying them, and who had to bring forward grievances for their own aggrandisement.

Proceeding, Mr Charlesworth said he wanted to see if it was possible for capitalists of every trade to combine and ask that a committee should be formed of business men who should assist in the work of the Second Chamber. Lord Rosebery made an exceeding suggestion when he said that they ought to have in the Second Chamber men who knew the requirements of the different trades. These men would be able to act as a brake on the coach which, he believed, was fast travelling to destruction. They were told that they were going to have considerable relief in the rates. They ought certainly to have some relief in the matter of education. Too much money was spent in the effort to find genius, with the result that youths never took to labour afterwards. Youths ought to be taught to read and write, to become good workers and good citizens. His complaint was that they did not get the results they were entitled to.

GARFORTH DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

The monthly meeting of Garforth District Education Committee was held on Wednesday evening at Garforth—Mr John Wordsworth (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were the Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn (Aberford), Messrs J. M. Rayner and J. Pemberton (Scholes), W. Y. K. Young (Lotherton), J. B. Bread, H. Gascoigne, H. Chappel, F. Richardson, and T. S. Slater (Garforth), with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell).

It was reported that the County Authority had advanced the salary of Mr W. Freeborn, of Aberford, by £5.

The Committee decided to recommend that the salary of the head teacher of Garforth Parochial Infants' School should be advanced £5.

The Clerk reported that last month the percentage of attendance in Garforth district was 91.91, but Sherburn district was higher with 93.06. The Chairman said it was very satisfactory.

It was reported that the Scholes School had been closed owing to an epidemic of measles, and would not be re-opened until June 8th.

The Clerk submitted the report of the medical inspection of the schools, and stated that at East Garforth there were three defective children, at Garforth Parochial School, mixed, 3, and infants' department, 5, Garforth R.C. School 2, Garforth Council 9 (seven cases of defective vision), and infants' department 6. At Aberford there were five cases of defective children and at Barwick 3.

Mr Rayner inquired if there were any cases at Scholes?

The Clerk said there were none.

Arrangements were made for looking after the cases reported upon.

An excellent report on East Garforth Council School was made by the county inspector, who remarked on the decreased numbers in recent years.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn inquired the reason for the decreased attendance.

The Clerk said the school population had fallen in Garforth.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn asked if the population of Garforth had grown.

The Clerk said it had, but he did not know how much.

The Chairman said the decreased attendance was due to people having smaller families.

When the county nursing scheme came up for discussion, the Clerk inquired if the members on Garforth Urban Council had anything to report.

Mr Slater: I don't think they have.

The Chairman: At Tadcaster they have formed a committee to deal with the question, but it is difficult to say at present who will be the authority.

Mr Gascoigne said he thought it was the intention of Garforth Council to join with Tadcaster.

The Chairman: We have not had a meeting at Tadcaster yet.

Mr Gascoigne said that Garforth Council were waiting to see what was done.

The Clerk, in answer to a question, said that if it was decided to have a full time nurse, she Disappearance of a Stourton Retiev g Officer.

STATEMENT AT HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

BOOKS IN GOOD ORDER

On Wednesday at the meeting of Hunslet Board of Guardians—Mr T. Thomas (Chairman) presiding—the members considered the following item which appeared on the agenda: "Letter from Mr V. Sharp, relieving officer. Absence from duty."

It appears that Mr Vincent Sharp, who lived at Haigh Park Terrace, Stourton, left his work last week without notice, and has not since been seen in the district. Mr Sharp, who is a married man, 42 years of age, carried out his duties up to Wednesday. He had been employed by the Board about seven years, and his books had been left in good order.

The Clerk said he received a letter from Mr Sharp on Friday morning, and it had evidently been posted in Leeds at 8 p.m. on May 7th. It was dated, like all others written by Mr Sharp last week, "May, 1914," without any day. The letter said:—

"Enclosed please find keys of my safe. You will find £4 10s. less postage. Should be pleased if you will have cash checked by yourself. I am giving away for private reasons."

Mr Mee said he had balanced up the cash and found that Mr Sharp had sixpence in his favour. This intimation came to him (Mr Mee) as a shock, and, after verifying his cash, he went out to see his (Mr Sharp's), wife, who had received a letter on the previous day saying that he was seeking fresh employment. The letter also intimated that he might write to her at the end of the week. As a matter of fact, she received a further letter on Sunday morning, which had been posted from Skipton on Saturday. The first letter she had received was posted at midnight, or rather, 12.30 a.m. on Thursday morning. The cash was right, and there was no obligation for him (the Clerk) to find out what had become of Mr Sharp, but he thought it would be essential if he acted for the Board to find out what had become of him, and he had made inquiries, and if the Board desired it, he would be willing to give information.

Mr Bennett moved that the Clerk give all the information he could, and this was carried.

It appeared, said the Clerk, that this was only the end of something which had been going on for months. He found that Mr Sharp had been going about his work in a slovenly way. Mrs Sharp had told him that some of his books, instead of being done at the office, had been taken home on Sunday, and he had told her that he had been so hard worked at the office that he had no time to do them there. He had also told his wife that he had been kept regularly at the office until ten o'clock at night, and by way of proof he had submitted documents—which he (Mr May) had handed to another officer of that Board—which showed that he had been sent to Northallerton to make enquiries on behalf of the Guardians. That, of course, was not true. He added that in this matter Mr Sharp was not alone.

At this juncture Father Cody asked if such allegation might be left out.

Mr Bennett: It is information the Board has asked for.

The Clerk said it was a very difficult task for him to give further information regarding Mr Sharp's relations with his wife without bringing in others.

Mr Bennett said they had put the task to the Clerk, but they did not want him to give information which would jeopardise him.

Mr Botterick moved that the remainder of the discussion be taken in committee.

Mr G. Armitage, who agreed, called attention to the "hellsecret" reporters who had come for the "spicy" bits, thinking they (the Guardians) were going to fill up their papers.

Dr. Groves asked what the Board was to do. Could they claim anything from him? Was there any salary to claim from him?

The Chairman: There is nothing of that kind.

Dr. Groves: Then it is waste time going any further. We ought to advertise for another.

The Chairman: He has been an officer for whom we have been responsible.

Father Cody: Why not leave it to the Permanent Relief Committee?

Mr Schofield asked if there would be any liability on the Clerk were he to read on. If there was no danger then the Clerk ought to read on and the public should know.

The Clerk said so far as nee mary the Board should know.

Upon a vote being taken ten voted for the matter to be taken in committee, and eight against.

In the end the Board decided to dismiss Mr Sharp. The question of appointing a successor was left to a sub-committee.

Wetherby Orpheus Male Voice Choir won second prize in the male voice choir competition at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Wednesday.

Mr Jack Wormald, who is leaving Spofforth Hall in a few months' time, has purchased and will take up his residence at Foston Hall, between York and Malton.

F.C.U.—A series of services and meetings were held on Sunday in connection with the 50th Annual Commemoration of the West Leeds Branch of the English Church Union. At Woodhouse the Rev. Cecil M. Cordroux, chaplain to Stotfield Parish, preached on "The Catholic Religion and Life."

BOWLING.—On Saturday Hilton Travellers had a League match at Tadcaster, and the scores were:—Tadcaster 205, Travellers 123. Details (Tadcaster names first)—A. Blamires 21, W. Adams 18; T. Doyle 21, G. Mosby 13; T. Ellerbeck 16, B. Dickinson 21; E. Waller 21, H. Archbold 14; C. Moorcroft 21, T. Booth 4; D. Hill 21, J. Hebden 8; J. H. Hull 21, A. Calvert 7; N. Rhodes 21, J. W. Dixon 5; W. Milsom 21, A. Mosby 19; R. Ryecroft 21, H. Bowers 17.

WEDDINGS AND SUNDAY CLOSING.—At the York Wesleyan Synod on Wednesday the following resolutions were passed with regard to impending legislation:—"That this Synod of the York District of the Wesleyan Methodist Church desires to express regret at the rejection of the second reading of the English Sunday Closing Bill, and urges the Government to provide early facilities for the passing of the Bishop of London's proposed Bill constructed on similar lines, and for the purpose of furthering the same great object." "That this Synod of the York District of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, in view of the alarming increase in the National drink bill reminds the Government of their repeated promises to introduce and pass through all its stages a comprehensive measure of licensing reform." It was resolved that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the Prime Minister and the Home Secretary.

BRAVERY AT ULLESKELF.—The Castleford Amalgamation of Anglers did honour on Saturday night at the Star and Garter Hotel, Castleford, to Mr Fred Morrell, one of their members, for gallantry displayed in saving the life of a youth named Brooke, also of Castleford, while fishing at Ulleskelf last year. Mr Morrell was made the recipient of a gold medal. It appears that Brooke was seated on the river bank with rod in hand when the ground gave way and he slipped into the river. A treacherous current was running at the time, and Brooke was speedily carried into the middle of the stream. Seeing the youth's great danger Mr Morrell threw off his coat and left the lad up until a boat in charge of Mr J Atkinson, of Dewsbury Road, Leeds, came to the rescue. Artificial respiration was applied by Mr Atkinson, and the youth's life was saved.

OTTER HUNTING AT COLLINGHAM.

A FINE HUNT.

On Tuesday at Collingham Bridge there was a meet of Mr W. Thompson's otter hounds. Notwithstanding the adverse conditions of a bitterly cold north-blowing wind, and water that felt as if it consisted mainly of the melted snow from the hills at the head of the valley, good sport was obtained. There was a fair-sized field assembled when the Master arrived with twenty couples of hounds, and proceeded to draw up stream. Hounds first ogried at a small fregging pond on the north bank of the river, and spoke to a drag intermittently until nearing Wood Hall, when they "marked" at a small rout, and put their otter away at once. They drove him down stream until he reached the first shallow, when he turned back, and, feeling himself master of the situation in this deep pool, swam leisurely from one root to another, frequently raising himself out of the water and looking around. Scent was fairly good, and hounds began to hustle him, but after an hour's good swimming he went through the sedge of the shallow at a great pace, finding refuge in a long deep, under the shadow of Langwith Wood, known as "Dead Man's Hole." Here scent was very poor, and for two hours it was a slow game. Then once again the otter made off down stream, and for an hour or more the hunting was much brighter, as hounds were very keen, and on more than one occasion, with the least bit of luck, would have caught their game. But the icy-cold water told on the young hounds, and they were getting slack after five hours' swimming, and when this otter gave up its "sticky" tactics, and boldly made a dash for liberty, gaining the comparative safety of the mile of deep water, with its abundant cover, above Linton Bridge, hounds had to acknowledge themselves beaten. It was a fine hunt, unlike adverse conditions, of six hours from find to finish.

HOW SHE PAID THE DEBT.

Mrs Isabella Fyvie Mayo, the novelist, whose death was announced on Wednesday, had a hard struggle in her early years. Her father died when she was quite young, and the family found themselves under a debt of £100. She bravely determined to clear this off. She began with her needle, and she and her eldest sister using all their spare time earned 18. 6d. a week between them. Next she addressed envelopes at 3s. per day, later earning better wages as a copyist for lawyers and others. Her early literary efforts met with little success; but at last she was asked to write a series of articles which ultimately took the form of a novel, for the "Sunday Magazine." This procured plenty of literary work for her at good pay, and the debt was cleared off at last.

On Saturday a cricket match between Wetherby and Clifford ended in a "tie." The scores were 84.

Mr R. J. Foster, of Stockeld Park, won third prize for hunter, gelding, or mare, any age, at Otley Show, on Saturday.

In the girls' solo contest at Pontefract Musical Competitions on Tuesday Elsie Allen, of Ulleskelf, was placed fourth.

TADCASTER BURIALS COMMITTEE.—At the first meeting of the Burials Committee held at the office of Mr W. H. Green (Clerk) the members present were:—Messrs J. J. Shillito, Jos. Shillito, J. Jennings, J. T. Kettlewell, W. Crossley, J. Smith, J. A. Grimston, and J. Nettleton. The Clerk produced the names of the persons appointed to represent the Parish Councils on the Burials Committee as follows:—Tadcaster West, Messrs J. Jennings, J. T. Kettlewell, J. Nettleton, and J. J. Shillito; Tadcaster East, Messrs W. Crossley, Jas. A. Grimston, and Joseph Shillito; Oulton, Mr Jas. Smith; and Stutton, Mr Jas. Brown. Mr Grimston was appointed chairman and Mr Crossley vice-chairman for the coming year. The whole of the committee were appointed a General Purposes Committee, and the same members were appointed a Visiting Committee as last year. The rules were adopted for conducting the business as before. The committee were requested to view the footpaths at the cemetery and report at the next meeting. The Clerk reported that the Local Government Board auditor had audited the accounts for the year ending March, and the same were satisfactory.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Until recent years the importance of good streets and yards and their relation to the public health were not discerned, and Dr. Hugh Stevenson's remarks in another column should be perused by every house-holder and property-owner. Dealing with the question of consumption he says:—

It is evident that this question is not limited to one merely of housing, but that the outside of the houses are of almost equal importance. It is little use having a house brought up to a habitable standard unless the outside surroundings are at the same time brought up to a similar standard.

It is to be feared that sometimes people who live in good houses amid nice surroundings do not appreciate the conditions under which many people live, and the ratepayers, too, are not without blame, because in every case they could return men who would insist upon healthy conditions being provided in every district.

In the Templenewsam district the Rural Council, by their enterprising policy, have within the last few years turned quagmires into excellent streets, and it has been accomplished without any fuss or trouble. When Tadcaster Rural District Council had jurisdiction over Crossgates they carried out a splendid scheme, and property-owners have reaped enormous advantage from it, because now their property is well let. Moreover, Crossgates is a remarkably healthy suburb, and it may be safely assumed both at Templenewsam and Crossgates the public health has benefited greatly from the improvement in the yards and streets.

Apropos of the making-up of private streets at Garforth, in his last report Dr. Stedman stated that Helena Street, Kippax, and Robinson and Victoria Streets, Allerton Bywater, would have been better dealt with under the Private Streets Works Act "than allowing the owners to do the work themselves. The two former already require further attention." Where is the saving to the owners? These streets are still repairable by the property-owners, who will soon be called upon to make another outlay, whereas had they allowed the District Council to do the work they would have had no further liability. Again, I say it does not pay property-owners to tinker with streets; they invariably lose money by it.

For the more farm hands in Barkston Ash have ceased from troubling, but I suppose the men were represented at the conference at York at which a demand for a minimum wage of 22s. per week by Jan. 5th was adopted. It will be observed that the men have modified their demand, which was, in the first instance, for 24s., and in asking for 22s. they cannot be accused of being particularly greedy. In the district farm hands are receiving 24s. and over, but there are others working for less than the new minimum, and it is patent that a certain class will not concede it until they are forced. My contention is that if one farmer can pay the wage his competitor should be in a position to give equal terms to labour. Were there anything extravagant in the men's demands one would soon hear of it, but numerous farmers have told me that they remunerate men at a rate equal to 24s. a week, and that is conclusive proof that the industry can afford a better wage than certain employers are disposed to give. Farmers resent combined action on the part of the men, but why should they do so? Agriculturists in modern are combining for the purpose of protecting their own interests, and the employers have a right surely to do precisely the same thing.

How is it that at some collieries the relations between masters and men are nearly always good and at others there is frequent trouble? A reason must exist for it. At Allerton Bywater the management and men are on excellent terms, and in these days when there is so much criticism of workers and their ways, it is refreshing to read the words of commendation uttered by Mr Drake and the manager, when a motor ambulance was needed, and the colliery-owners wanted to bear a share of the cost, but the men, determined for once to show what they could do, decided to pay every farthing themselves. It showed a fine spirit of independence.

Allerton Bywater, however, is one of those places which have a way of settling its own problems by the application of the collective principle. Miners, as a rule, are keenly interested in sport, and the Allerton Colliery possesses its own cricket, football, and athletic club, which has a good ground. For the maintenance of this institution every miner, I believe, pays a penny per week, and everything works smoothly. It will be remembered that last season the Allerton team, with whom the manager plays, made a bold bid for the Hepworth Cup, and they annexed other trophies. The team is undoubtedly the strongest in the district.

While on the subject of collieries, and miners, I am reminded of a little story related by Mr J. P. Houlton, son of the late Mr Charles Houlton, of Garforth, who was manager of Micklefield Collieries, and who did not seem to have any difficulty in preserving good relations with his men. Mr J. P. Houlton, although he is a very wealthy man, had his early struggles, and, whether one agrees with his political principles or not—and I am a North-East Derbyshire—everyone is bound to admit that it is an honour to his profession. "I left school at 13," said Mr Houlton, "and started work, but my father did his utmost to encourage me to attend night classes and study every subject connected with mining. I studied geology, mine construction, engineering, and a lot of other subjects, and to encourage me my father attended the same classes. We went through the same courses together, and nothing pleased him more than if I managed to beat him in the examinations." The work of Charles Hilton has certainly borne good fruit.

In those early days, however, there were some fine men among the mining population of the district. I have heard the late Mr Charles Bickerdyke, one of the old officials at Allerton Bywater, who was no mean mathematician—he was a member of Tadcaster District Council for several years—relate how he and the late Mr Christopher Hick, probably the most popular man in Kippax in his time, used to conduct an evening school, and among the pupils—many grown to manhood—was the late Mr Ben Pickard, M.P. No lordly Education Authority encouraged the aspiring youth of those days, and the school was conducted on very humble lines indeed. The pupils, I was told, had to bring their own candles to guide them through the mazes of arithmetic, etc., but some of them made their mark. It is doubtful that the young men value the great educational advantages they now have, otherwise the evening classes would be better attended.

When the fatality occurred on the railway bridge at Church Fenton several months ago there was an agitation for the erection of lights on the road in order to provide protection for the public. The N.E.R. Co. declined to light the bridge, and the District Council stated that it was not their duty, so the responsibility was thrown on the ratepayers of Church Fenton. A parish meeting was convened for the purpose of considering the question of adopting the Lighting Act, and the ratepayers, by an almost unanimous vote, declined to support public lighting. It is possible, however, that the question was not thoroughly understood. Had the meeting adopted the Act, it was not compulsory on the Council to light the streets of the village, but they would have had power to come to an arrangement with the N.E.R. Co. for the erection and maintenance of lamps on the bridge. This expenditure would have amounted to only a few pounds annually, and it would have been no burden on the parish. As it is, the Council cannot spend a farthing in that direction, otherwise they would be surcharged. If it is desired to bring the question up again a year must elapse between the dates of the meetings.

Apparently it's no joke being a publican. At Tadcaster ample illustration of this was given recently. A man, who, it was stated, had been drinking, entered a pub., and soon Bonifacc had cause, presumably for his own protection, to inform him that his absence was preferred to his company. The would-be customer, however, did not take the warning in the proper spirit, and the licence-holder had to forcibly eject him—a rather stiff job, it was, too. Subsequently there was no sooner restored than the inebriate, who had returned to the house, heard a sound of broken glass, and, on going out, he discovered that his cycle had been damaged by the window. To add to the licence-holder's worries, his wife fainted, and the window-smasher was left in possession of the street. It is evident that licence-holders require as much protection as other people, for they have to deal with all sorts of customers.

Will Garforth win the ambulance shield presented by the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., of Templenewsam? They came out first in the competition at the Leeds centre, and they are very hopeful of success in the next stage of the contest. In Garforth's case persistence has had its reward, for, although ambulance work has been studied for several years, the workers did not secure high honours at the outset, and it ought to be an encouragement to the teams at other collieries to persevere. Allerton Bywater are going ahead, too, and they will make their mark if they do not weary in the work.

KICKED BY A MARE.—As a result of a kick from a mare of which he was in charge, at Woodside Farm, Scarcroft, John Brown, a groom living at North Street, Wetherby, sustained a fractured Pitt thigh and had to be removed to the Leeds Infirmary on Saturday.

WETHERBY GOLF CLUB.—On Saturday a competition took place between Ladies and Gents. Parkinson (handicap 9) 2 up. Darcy P. A. Gray (18) 2 down, J. Pearson (20) 2 down, C. E. Whitaker (24) 3 down, C. Fraser (20) 5 down, W. H. Platts (9) 7 down, C. S. Sykes (9) 1 down, G. Williams (8) 7 down.

LADIES' GOLF MATCH.—A match was played at Wetherby between Rufford Ladies and Wetherby Ladies. Scores:—Wetherby Ladies, 5, Rufford Ladies 2. Details (Wetherby names first):—Mrs Dalby v. MR LANE FOX AND EDUCATION RATES.—In the House of Commons on Monday Mr Lane Fox asked the President of the Board of Education whether the new grant to local education authorities would be paid in respect of parishes where the amount to be met by rates for elementary education exceeds the produce of a rate of 18d. in the £ even if the produce of the rate for elementary education of the local education authority in whose area a parish of the above description is situated was less than the produce of a rate of 18d. in the £.—Mr Pease: If the area as a whole is not recessitious, i.e., if the expenditure as a whole falling upon the rates does not exceed the produce of an 18d rate over the whole, then no grant will be paid even though the area contains parishes which are obliged, through the operation of Section 18 of the Act of 1902, to raise rates exceeding 18d.

A Rothwell Colliery Owner's Speech.

MR J. HARGREAVES AND MINERS' WAGES IN THE OLD DAYS.

The third annual dinner of the members of the Yorkshire Coal Exchange was held at the Hotel Metropole, Leeds, on Tuesday, when the principal guest was Mr C. E. Charlesworth, the High Sheriff of Yorkshire and head of the firm of J. and J. Charlesworth (Limited), colliery proprietors, Rothwell.

Mr James Hargreaves, of Moor Allerton (formerly of Rothwell), presided, and was supported by a large company including Mr J. S. Charlesworth (ex-president of the Exchange), Mr F. J. Kitson (President of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce), Mr J. Robinson (President of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce), Mr C. Scriven, Mr Johnson Shaw, Mr J. W. B. Wilcock, Mr Williamson (North-Eastern Railway, Hull), Mr R. Morby, and Mr E. J. Addeley (Hull Coal Exporters), Mr T. Whittaker (Leeds Coal Trade), Mr Brown (N.E.R. Co., Leeds), Mr Llewellyn Jones (Askern Main), Mr H. Sandy (Allerton Bywater), Mr J. W. Dobson (Garforth), and Mr Lee (Rothwell Haigh Collieries).

In replying to an invitation from the President, Mr C. E. Charlesworth first addressed the members. He announced that after fifty years' connection with the coal trade he proposed shortly to retire. In the past, he said, the coal trade had suffered from too much legislation, which had crippled it in many ways. A great deal of it was absolutely useless. He could not supply a better illustration than the introduction of electric safety lamps into the mine. The other day he gave an order for £7,000 worth of these lamps, which was a serious item in the cost of coal production, when he had many thousand pounds worth of other safety lamps on hand, and he had to send down these lamps to see with her the others were safe or not. The electric lamps gave a better light, but he doubted whether the collier would find it an advantage to use them. This led him to speak, he said, of another question which would have to be taken up by the capitalists of the country. They, as colliery owners, had no chance of getting into the House of Commons. If they stood in the districts where they were known, and, he hoped, respected, the organisation of the miners' unions was brought against them by agitators who had the elevens to go down to the polls of the electorate, and thus secure the return of their own nominees to Parliament. This had a deleterious effect, because all the laws he had referred to had been thrust upon them by agitators who had to serve those who were paying them, and who had to bring forward grievances for their own aggrandisement.

Proceeding, Mr Charlesworth said he wanted to see if it was possible for capitalists of every trade to combine and ask that a committee should be formed of business men who should assist in the work of the Second Chamber. Lord Rosebery made an excellent suggestion when he said that they ought to have in the Second Chamber men who knew the requirements of the different trades. This seemed to him would be a check to act as a brake on the coach which, he believed, was fast travelling to destruction. They were told that they were going to have considerable relief in the rates. They ought certainly to have some relief in the matter of education. Too much money was spent in the effort to find genius, with the result that youths never took to labour afterwards. Youths ought to be taught to read and write, to become good workers and good citizens. His complaint was that they did not get the results they were entitled to.

The question of the maintenance of the roads (he went on) was like that of education, an Imperial matter. As a holder of coal royalties and one who leased a great deal of coal, he thought it was unfair that the lessor should sit in his comfortable home and not pay towards the cost of local burdens when he was receiving the benefit. In his own district, for instance, he paid two-thirds of the rate for the local drainage scheme, when he did not put a spoonful of matter into the sewers. Such things needed looking into, and if they could form some good working committees which would go up London and, without any hardships to Cabinet Ministers they would do good. He congratulated the Exchange on its appearance of prosperity. They had, however, a serious position to face. He did not know how, when a slump in trade came, they were going to bear the taxation which had been put on them.

"The Coal Trade and the Yorkshire Coal Exchange (Limited)" was proposed by Mr J. S. Charlesworth, who said he hoped they would soon day have a building of their own, and be housed together with the other trades in Yorkshire. They had had a good time in the coal trade with the exception of one upheaval which might have led to serious trouble.

In responding the President (Mr James Hargreaves) referred to the price of coal compared with what it was forty years ago. He could remember, he said, men underground getting from 3s. 6d. to 4s. a day, and topmen from 2s. 6d. to 3s. These figures to-day had more than doubled. He would not like to see the day come again when the miner's wage would go down to 4s. a day. No man in the world was more worthy of his hire than the miner, and no man took a greater risk. (Hear, hear). He sometimes wished that the British working man would get it out of his head that they in England alone had coal to sell, and that whatever price was asked for it, both at home and abroad, people were bound to give it. In view of the foreign competition which they had to meet this was an altogether mistaken idea. With regard to the opening out of a colliery by a German syndicate in the South Yorkshire coalfield, Mr Hargreaves said that it was nothing new to have foreigners engaged in the English coal trade, and there was no need to fear that such competition would re-act to the detriment of Yorkshiremen.

The other toasts included "The City of Leeds," proposed by Mr C. Scriven and responded to by Mr F. J. Kitson. "The Railway and Canal Companies," proposed by Mr Johnson Shaw and responded to by Mr J. W. B. Wilcock (Hull).

A vote of thanks to the retiring President was proposed by Mr Joshua Smith, and the vote was carried with the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow."

GARFORTH DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

The monthly meeting of Garforth District Education Committee was held on Wednesday evening at Garforth—Mr John Wordsworth (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were the Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn (Aberford), Messrs J. M. Rayner and J. Pemberton (Scholes), W. Y. K. Young (Lotherton), J. B. Breed, H. Gascoigne, H. Chappel, F. Richardson, and T. S. Slater (Garforth), with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell).

It was reported that the County Authority had advanced the salary of Mr W. Freeborn, of Aberford, by £5.

The Committee decided to recommend that the salary of the head teacher of Garforth Parochial Infants' School should be advanced £5.

The Clerk reported that last month the percentage of attendance in Garforth district was 91.91, but Sherburn district was higher with 93.06. The Chairman said it was very satisfactory.

It was reported that the Scholes School had been closed owing to an epidemic of measles, and would not be re-opened until June 8th.

The Clerk submitted the report of the medical inspection of the schools, and stated that at East Garforth there were three defective children, at Garforth Parochial School, mixed, 3, and infants' department 5, Kippax Council School 2, Garforth Council 9 (seven cases of defective vision), and infants' department 6. At Aberford there were five cases of defective children and at Barwick 3.

Mr Rayner inquired if there were any cases at Scholes?

The Clerk said there were none.

Arrangements were made for looking after the cases reported upon.

An excellent report on East Garforth Council School was made by the county inspector, who remarked on the decreased numbers in recent years.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn inquired the reason for the decreased attendance.

The Clerk said the school population had fallen in Garforth.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn asked if the population of Garforth had grown.

The Clerk said it had, but he did not know how much.

The Chairman said the decreased attendance was due to people having smaller families.

When the county nursing scheme came up for discussion, the Clerk inquired if the members on Garforth Urban Council knew anything to report.

Mr Slater: I don't think they have.

The Chairman: At Tadcaster they have formed a committee to deal with the question, but it is difficult to say at present who will be the authority.

Mr Gascoigne said he thought it was the intention of Garforth Council to join with Tadcaster.

The Chairman: We have not had a meeting at Tadcaster yet.

Mr Gascoigne said that Garforth Council were waiting to see what was done.

The Clerk, in answer to a question, said that if it was decided to have a full time nurse, she could do the school work and also the work under the Girls' Notification Act.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn said there was a probability of something being done at Aberford.

The Clerk: Of having a nurse for Aberford?

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn: Yes.

The Clerk: Then it would be better to leave the matter over for full time.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn: Yes, because I think the scheme will mature.

It was agreed to leave the matter over until next meeting.

Mr Chappel inquired what the grant would be to Garforth were they to employ a full time nurse.

The Clerk said the grant from the County Council for the work in connection with the schools and Notification of Births Act would be £28. The Urban Council had power to make a grant towards paying a nurse, and if they did so there would not be a great amount to be raised by private subscriptions if they decided to employ a full time nurse.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn asked what the county grant to Aberford, Lotherton, Parlington, and Sturton would be.

The Clerk said it would be £9 or £10 but if they took in Barwick it would be more.

Mr Rayner asked what the County Council contribution would be for Barwick.

The Clerk said it would be £10.

Mr Rayner asked if it would be possible to co-operate with Aberford in a nursing scheme.

The Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn said they thought the Aberford district was large enough for a nurse, but if Barwick had any suggestions to make they would be considered.

Mr Rayner said that Barwick was a rather small place to appoint a full time nurse.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

FLOWER GARDEN.

The weekly routine work of the flower garden will occupy a considerable amount of time from now onwards. The value of a tidy appearance is very high, and it is a remarkable fact that tidiness often makes an otherwise indifferently cultivated garden look better than an untidy one, even when the latter is filled with healthy, vigorous plants.

The lawn should be mown twice over each week, that is, the machine should be passed forwards and backwards over each part. Grass edging should be regularly trimmed with the shears, and on no account must weeds be tolerated on walks, beds, or borders. Free use of the hoe or rake will keep the surface soil fresh and neat.

Delphiniums, pyrethrums, and many other herbaceous plants will require staking and tying, and spent flowers should be cut away as soon as they begin to look untidy.

In the case of tulips, daffodils, etc., going out of bloom, there seems to be considerable doubt as to the best means of preserving the bulbs so as to ensure a shoot of bloom the following year. Much has been said and written about the "drying" and "ripening" of these bulbs. Personally we do not think it necessary to subject them to such unnatural treatment. Nature is the best teacher, after all, and the treatment of these bulbs should be as nearly natural as possible. If their present quarters are required for the bedding out of summer flowering plants, the bulbs may be lifted with a fork and transferred straight away to the borders in some position not required for the other plants. The leaves of the bulbs are performing an important function in the building-up of next year's flowers. To take them up and dry them off now is courting failure. Under natural conditions the bulbs remain in the ground all the year, and a little thought will show how unreasonable it is to expect them to do well the following year if they are subjected to the harsh treatment of baking them in the sun. We have some tulips in bloom at the moment of writing that have flowered for five years without a miss, and they have never been disturbed since we first planted them. It may be argued that to leave them in the ground must leave a blank space during the summer months. This difficulty may be overcome by sowing seed of a few quick-growing annuals amongst the bulbs as soon as the foliage of the latted commences to shrivel. The May-flowering tulips will live and do well for many years if left undisturbed, and the same remark applies to the Parrot or Eye narcissus, and the beautiful double white narcissus, Alba-plena Odorata.

VIOLAS.

For garden decoration the violas are more popular than the useful Viola. They possess many virtues, not the least of which is their extreme hardiness. There is, in fact, to be had in almost endless variety of shades, the individual flowers last a long time, and their flowering period extends over a long season. The ground intended for their reception should be deeply dug and well broken up. They are grass feeders and must have a generous supply of old manure, and if available, a sprinkling of soot must may be added. Their adaptibility to circumstances make them very useful. Sun or shade seems to make comparatively little difference to them, although it is advisable to select dwarf varieties for planting in shaded positions. Dryness at the root is a condition which the viola objects to, and on light land it is no uncommon thing to see the plants die off while-side during the dry weather. Handwatering is a hopeless kind of task where huge quantities are grown, and under these circumstances it is advisable to resort to mulching with manure. This is often objected to because of the unsightly appearance, but if the mounds is lightly covered with fine soil, the difficulty would be overcome. There are so many varieties now in commerce that it is very difficult to give a selection without omitting a number of really good ones. For garden decoration, however, the following are all well worth a place:—Fred Williams, Lady Chichester, Edina, Maggie Mott, White Swan, G. C. Murray, Maddy Perfection, Primrose Dame, Amy Burt, Hector Macdonald, Kitty Bell, and Cream King.

CALLA LILIES.

These outdoor-loving plants are now passing out of bloom, and may be placed in a sheltered position outdoor. Some growers keep them perfectly dry for some weeks after flowering, but we prefer to keep them moist. In our gardens they are planted out in trenches for the summer, and lifted and repotted again early in autumn. We have tried various methods of dealing with them, and find the following to give the best results:—Stand outdoor after flowering as suggested above, until the middle of June, then shake them out of the pots and remove a good portion of the soil. Repot into as small a pot as will hold them, using a mixture of 3 parts loam, 1 part rich leaf mould and thoroughly rotten manure, and a sprinkling of sand and bone meal. Pot firmly and stand the plants in a shaded position where they will be sheltered from strong winds. Water should be given them when required but not before. The old leaves will gradually turn yellow and die and when new growth commences it will be found to be strong and healthy. By the end of August repotting will be necessary and a similar compost may be used again. Even this point the advantage of keeping the plants in pots will manifest itself. Those that have been planted out suffer severely after being lifted, whereas the ones grown in pots grow away freely and may easily be had in bloom at Christmas time. If an increased stock is required the plants may be divided into single crowns at the June potting. Single plants invariably produce finer and larger spathes than the clump-ed.

TOMATOES.

The fruit of the tomato is as popular as ever, and it is fairly safe to assume that no plant is more likely to find its way into the amateur's greenhouse than this one. Its cultural requirements are very simple and are often understood. The first essential is a light, sunny position, although the variety known as Princess of Wales will give a fairly good crop in a comparatively shady house. The compost used for potting should be firm and fibrous, but only a small amount of manure should be used. A rich compost would cause the plants to produce thick, sappy growth at the expense of the fruit. Water should be given sparingly until the fruit commences to swell; afterwards copious supplies will be needed. About midday the roof may be gently shaken to distribute the pollen and ensure a good "set" of fruit. When two or three trusses of fruit are set liquid manure may be given without danger of causing sappy growth.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS—HARDENING OFF.

Chrysanthemums grow rapidly at this time of the year, and it will be necessary before long to put them into their flowering pots. Before this is done, however, they must be gradually hardened off so that they may be used in the open air. The sharp frost that occurred on May and gave a severe check to many plants that were standing outdoor. Undue haste in getting them outdoor is a dangerous proceeding in this part of the country, but if the ventilation of the frames has been given in gradually increasing quantities, it will be quite safe to stand them out the third week in May. There is more danger from strong winds than from frost after that time, and the plants should be stood in a position where they will be sheltered from the east and the west.

CINERARIAS.

Vast improvements have been effected during recent years in both the large-flowered and the cluster section of cinerarias. Colour, firmness of flower stalk, and general habit of the plant have all received attention, and today we have a type of plant immeasurably better than was available a few years ago. For conservatory decoration a batch of plants should be grown to flower immediately after the chrysanthemums. In many gardens bulbs are relied upon to succeed the "Mums," but it must be admitted that the cost of the bulbs is so high as to make one pause before purchasing sufficient to make a really bright display early in the year. A half-dozen packets of the choicest strains of cinerarias such as Suttons', will produce two or three hundred plants, sufficient to fill a fairly large conservatory. For such early flowering the seed should be sown not later than the middle of May. By placing the seed pan in a warm house rapid germination is secured but often at the expense of the stamina of the plant. A cool cold frame is quite warm enough even in the night-time, and during the day a little air should be given to prevent the temperature being run up by sun heat. Shade from bright sun is essential while the plants are small, but when they are a few inches high no more shade than is absolutely necessary should be given. The seed germinates quickly even under cool treatment, and as soon as the seedlings are large enough to handle they should be transferred to boxes filled with light loam and a little sand. No manure should be given to the young plants. Strong, robust seedlings often produce coarse, badly-coloured flowers, and if plenty of medium-sized and small plants are available the strong ones are discarded. The frame should be kept fairly close for a week or ten days after pricking the plantlets into boxes, and it is very important that a moist atmo-phere should be maintained. This will not only encourage the plants to grow, but will act as a deterrent to the development of their greatest enemy, greenfly. Under cool, moist conditions growth is very rapid, and in about three weeks' time the plants will be ready for potting into 3½ inch pots. It is still unnecessary to add animal manure to the soil, but a little clean leaf-mould and a sprinkling of boneymeal will prove beneficial. Pot firmly, shade, and repeat the shady treatment for a few days until the plants recover from the shock of removal. Subsequent repotting, etc., we shall deal with in due course.

PROFITABLE POULTRY CULTURE

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

[Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain their full value, the earlier articles should be read in conjunction with the current one).

WHEN GAS IS EMPLOYED.

Every season sees the use of gas for running incubators steadily on the increase. It is an economical as-el, at all events in large towns; it is certainly more cleanly, much labour is avoided, and in results it is equally successful.

When gas is employed, however, there is one very important detail to observe; the burner should have an automatic governor, otherwise when the domestic lights are turned out at night time the increased pressure on the incubator jet would cause increased heat, and possibly upset the regulation of the machine. There is no difficulty whatever in procuring these; every appliance manufacturer today handles them, and as the initial expense is only a matter of one or two shillings every operator who elects to run his machine by gas will do well to procure one.

TESTING THE EGGS.

When you are thoroughly assured that the machine is perfectly regulated and running at an even temperature, the eggs may be placed on the tray or in the drawers. My own observation is that the best results are obtained when the eggs lie flat and the tray is not overcrowded. You want the air to circulate round them; obviously if they are packed as tightly as possible this result cannot be obtained.

When the eggs are first placed in, the temperature will naturally fall. Don't let this worry you; the eggs have got to get warmed, and this process will take from two to eight or nine hours, according to the machine. A great error is frequently made here by operators immediately altering their regulator because of this fall in temperature; this upsets the regulation of the machine, and the practice is to be reprobated. As the temperature of the eggs gradually rises, so incubation commences, and immediately Fit are brought into existence animal heat is generated.

This practically means an increase of two to three degrees in the egg-chamber, so that after the eggs are heated it may be necessary to give your regulator fatal adjustment. The regulator of an incubator is a very delicate piece of mechanism; the slightest change is attended by great variation, so that this must be very carefully manipulated, and after this final regulation is made it should be unnecessary, with a good machine, to touch subject it. Rarely do more failures result from continually playing (no other word expresses it) with the regulator than any other cause.

THE THERMOMETER.

The importance of regulating the machine before entrusting it with eggs has already been noted, and, as a general rule, it will be safe to regulate it to 103deg. when empty. During incubation, however, the correct temperature will vary to a certain extent, according to the position of the thermometer. My own practice is to allow the bulb of the instrument to just touch two fertile eggs. In this position I consider a temp-rature of 103deg. will give the best results. The position of the thermometer in this case is generally about the second or third row from the front of the tray or drawer. In some incubators the position is provided for the thermometer so that it registers the air temperature practically on a level with the top of the eggs. Generally in such cases the thermometer is suspended from the centre of the drawer. Under these conditions a temperature of 102deg. will probably give the best results. Again with certain machines, owing to their construction, specific instructions are issued by the manufacturers, and in such cases I strongly advise operators to adhere to them rather than to employ knowledge which has been derived from their acquaintance with other machines.

My own experience is that failures in artificial incubation rarely result from the temperature question, excepting in cases of gross carelessness, but rather to errors in ventilation and moisture. There is little difficulty in managing a machine that will keep an equable temperature. Practice will, of course, however, be required to combat the two other difficulties just mentioned. Suffice it, then, to say all violent fluctuations in temperature are unnatural and injurious. A good machine, properly handled, if-machine has been originally purchased, and attention paid, as directed, to preliminary regulation, such a cooling may should never appear.

Local Authorities and the "White Scourge."

MEDICAL OFFICER'S SCATHING REMARKS.

WINDOWS WON'T OPEN—WALLS DAMP.

In dealing with the eradication of consumption—the "white scourge," as it has been termed—Dr. Hugh Stevenson, of Rothwell, says that at one time the idea that much could be done to cure a curable and certainly from an administrative standpoint was not seriously entertained, and the fact that such a person was suffering from an infectious disease and consequently had the liability of passing on his infection to others, it received in, was certainly seldom acted upon, but all that is now changed, and there is no infectious disease in the consideration of which so much time and effort and research are now devoted as is the case in tuberculosis.

Efforts are directed on the one hand to the question of trying to effect either a cure in the individual case or of so greatly improving his condition as to considerably prolong not only his life but his period of usefulness as a member of his society, and on the other hand—and this is very important—to the question of preventing as far as possible the afflicted person from being a standing menace to those around him.

Means of dealing with the ordinary mild, or at least non-advanced case is provided by sanatoria followed by domiciliary and dispensary treatment and supervision, but the question of dealing effectively with the advanced case, which is the type of case with by far the greatest potentiality for evil so far as the public is concerned, is a very difficult one, and is one which is giving a good deal of concern to those responsible for the control of tuberculosis. For such cases sanatorium and even dispensary treatment is out of the question, and domiciliary treatment and supervision are unable to touch many of the difficulties in the way of rendering such cases harmless to those living in the same house. It is self-evident that by the time a man reaches this advanced stage of phthisis and even for some time prior to this he has ceased to be a wage earner and may, as a result, have from stress of circumstances to live in'a house of the lowest possible rent and one which consequently has little room in it, or possess few, if any, opportunities for isolating such a case from the rest of the household. There can be little wonder then in such circumstances that the germs of tuberculosis find much fruitful soil to their development and propagation, and the day is far distant indeed when tuberculosis will be eradicated unless some effective means are found for dealing with these advanced cases.

The obvious remedy is the segregation of such cases as are beyond the stage of possible benefit by ordinary treatment, and which constitute such danger zones of infection. It is obvious that the removal, to some institution provided for the purpose, of this class of case would remove from the house in which he or she lived a great source of danger to others, but it is just as obvious that the compulsory removal from home of an advanced consumptive and compelling him to spend his remaining days in a workhouse or public institution has just a sufficient tinge of inhumanity about it to make the problem one bristling with difficulties.

It will have been noticed that those engaged in this work of tuberculosis investigation have not limited their efforts to the question of treatment or even to the question of infection, but have directed their attention to the question of causation of the disease and in this connection have decided that it is hopeless to attack consumption unless at the same time you attack and remove those conditions which most favour its propagation.

Not only is it necessary to give treatment to the individual suffering from tuberculosis, and not only is it necessary to take every precaution to prevent the spreading of infection, but the attempt must at the same time be made to ensure that people shall not live in insanitary houses and amid non-hygienic and unhealthy surroundings, that is to say, under conditions which are simply ideal for the propagation of tuberculosis.

In our district, while the newer property is good—some of it very good—the older houses are—as one would naturally expect—in many instances far from ideal, and in many cases require drastic treatment to bring them up to a possible standard for habitation.

This housing question is one full of difficulties, and these difficulties are only too well appreciated by the officials concerned in the matter, and no less by the Sanitary Committee as the responsible housing authority, but in common fairness it ought to be remembered, though their determination to improve the health and surroundings under which the people, for whose welfare as a Public Health Authority they are responsible, live, may possibly seem to inflict hardship on those who are in a position to spend no part considerable outlay on their property, it ought to be remembered, I say, that they are merely carrying out the law of the land, and that moreover if they did not deal with this matter themselves a still higher authority would intervene and take the work out of their hands. Apart from any question of this kind, however, it is obvious that the duty of the Council as authority to act as they consider the interests and welfare of the community demand, and if they fail to do so they would be unworthy of the position they hold.

It is little good mentioning about ventilation and fresh air when windows won't open, or of talking about the danger of fly infected food and milk, when the house is absolutely devoid of even any pretence at pantry accommodation, and it is futile indeed for a health visitor to attempt to teach mothers how to rear healthy children, when walls are damp, or to eloquently discourse on the manifold blessings of the presence of sunlight in a home when the windows are so small that unless carefully looked after their very presence may easily remain unnoticed.

It ought to be remembered that germs, like most other evil things, love to lurk in darkness and the fact also ought to be borne in mind that sunlight is one of the most germ destroying agencies we possess, and if we wish to have sunlight in our houses we must obviously provide a sufficiency of windows that can be easily opened, and to have a population of healthy children and on the other hand wish to stamp out such devastating diseases as consumption, then we must have people living in houses that are fit for human habitation, and not under those which by their very existence invite disease, and this, in short, is the motive underlying this question of housing reform.

It is evident that this question is not limited to one merely of housing, but that the outside surroundings of the house are of almost equal importance. It is little use having a house brought up to a habitable standard unless the outside surroundings are at the same time brought up to a similar standard. In these days when the only playground left to the children are the side streets and yards, it becomes increasingly necessary that such places should be made sanitary and not be left as quagmires as many of them undoubtedly are in wet weather.

If 1913 has been a year in some respects unsatisfactory from a zymotic point of view it must nevertheless remain a red letter day in the annals of this district, as having witnessed, by the establishment of a health visitor and a housing inspector, the inauguration of a system destined to play a not unimportant part in the work of the future in the direct battle for the health and sanitary.

SQUIRE OF TEMPLENEWSAM AND THE WELSH CHURCH.

CHURCH PARTY AND THE MONEY.

In the House of Commons on Monday, on the motion for the third reading of the Welsh Disestablishment Bill, Mr Hume Williams (Camborne) moved it as rejection.

The Hon. E. F. L. Wood (C., Ripon) seconded the motion for the rejection of the Bill, and said he would ask the House to consider two facts. He thought there was perhaps something more than an accidental routine in the arrangement of business by which that Welsh Bill was given precedence over the Home Rule Bill, and he suggested that Hon. Members opposite, when they were passing this Bill a third and last time, should divest themselves of party, for one or three years had been the powerful support of the Nationalist Members, and allow the Irish party to be in a position to vote on the merits or demerits of this Bill without adverse considerations. (Opposition, cheers). The second fact was that the Government were prepared to concede to force in the case of the Home Rule Bill what they would not even attempt to concede with regard to claims which were not put forward with force. (Hear, hear). He asked the House wherein was the relationship between Church and State unjust or inequitable to Nonconformists? Whether the Bill passed or failed to pass, whether the Church was endowed or disendowed, the Church would remain the same, and would continue to be inspired with the same doctrine and ideals as she had always been, and if Hon. Members thought they were going to alter the character of the Church they were under a delusion. He noticed that in "The Times" of Saturday there was a remarkable letter from the Dean of Ripon. The Dean of Ripon was one for whom he entertained the greatest possible respect, though on controversial matters he disagreed with him, and in the letter to "The Times" the Dean said that he had been a Liberal all his life, and a consistent advocate of all measures which would place Nonconformists in a position in which Episcopalian and non-Episcopalian members of our Church nation might unite in common work. But it seemed to him that the present Bill would increase the evils complained of instead of removing them. They had repeatedly asked in what respect the relationship existing between the State and the Church of England in Wales penalised a single Nonconformist. The Church party fought the battle of disendowment, not because of the money to be got, but because they thought that money enabled them to do. (Opposition cheers). Every Nonconformist sect was appealing for endowment funds; the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regard to the right of his support to one of the greatest of those appeals; and how in face of that the Government substantiated their plea that by disendowing the Church they were also making disendowment, he was quite unable to understand. What folly it was, at the very time when the grip of materialism was becoming tighter, to quarrel about a fund that ought to be the Government's greatest ally. The result of the Government's policy would not be confined, and he doubted whether anybody could contemplate without dismay the result of this policy, when the news reached many parts of the world where the battle of Christianity was being most keenly contested at this moment. (Opposition cheers). The diversion of funds from religious purposes would be very detrimental to the cause of Christianity in such countries as China. (Opposition cheers).

GARFORTH LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

A SERVICE LEAGUE MEETING AT CROSSGATES.

SPEECHES BY REV. G. HOOPER AND MR E. H. FOSTER, J.P.

Under the auspices of the Garforth Liberal Association, an open-air meeting was held at its Town End, Garforth, on Friday night, when addresses were given by the Rev. George Hooper and Mr E. H. Foster, J.P., C.C., the respective Liberal candidates for the Barkston Ash Division. Mr F. W. Sutcliffe, Chairman of the Barkston Ash Division Liberal Association, presided, and among those supporting the platform was Mr Martin Harvey. There was a highly satisfactory audience.

In introducing the speakers, Mr Sutcliffe said that some one had been telling him that Mr Foster was not advanced enough for Garforth people, and he had come to the conclusion that if Mr Foster had been a miner instead of a lawyer he would have been very much advanced. However, he could promise them that Mr Foster would do all he could for the working-men of the Barkston Ash Division. He had seen that at Crossgates they had had a meeting relating to the National Service League, and they were told it was non-political. Strange to say, the people who had a great deal to do with the meeting were connected with the Conservative Party, and all they clamoured for was compulsory service. The previous day, he said, he had along with Mr Foster, attended a meeting at Sheffield in connection with the Housing Scheme, and the matter in hand would be for the welfare of the working-men of the Barkston Ash Division. If they read the pamphlet which had been issued they would see that the Liberal Government had done more for them than any Government in the past.

Mr Hooper said he was pleased to be present that evening to support what he believed to be the cause—the Government of Mr Asquith. In his mind, the Government that was strong showed its strength by taking up the cause of those less able to defend themselves. (Hear, hear). If they were to judge the present Government in the best he had no doubt that if they did so with unprejudiced minds, they would all agree with him that it was the strongest Government. First of all, it had taken up the cause of the child, and child life was now protected and looked after as it never had been in the history of the country. (Hear, hear). Before he left London, he was chairman of one of the attendance committees for South London, and through that came into contact with the real condition of child life, and it was an appalling thing to find how much the child life was neglected in not what they might call Slumdom, but in better districts where they would expect to find nothing of the kind existing. He was also glad to see that the children of the schools to-day were not expected to go through their lessons without having food, and again he was speaking of something which Mr Lloyd George, because for over five years he had lived in East London trying to study its problems, and if possible to find a solution of them. There was no more touching thing to find one child and then another in the schools turn pale, and its hands go slower and slower until its head fell upon the desk in front, and upon making inquiry into the matter found out that the children had come to school without any food. Fifty-four thousand children of the schools of East London went there before having had food. It was simply a question of the sums of money on the education of children unless they were physically fit to take in the education provided. Some of his critics might say, "Now, you are letting away the sacredness of the responsibility of the parents." Parents, said Mr Hooper, were never looked after as they were to-day if they neglected their children. He never felt that they ought to make the child suffer because of its parents. If the natural parent neglected its child then the State, like a foster-mother, must feed the child and deal with the parents. (Hear, hear).

It was not at that end of life only for which the Government had done something. He was glad to know that a very different condition of things existed towards the aged people. He always felt that the Poor Law system was a premium on thriftlessness and a penalty on thrift. He was rejoiced to find that they were not dealing with the aged poor as they used. They no longer could call them paupers. He objected when they did so. He rejoiced in the Old-Age Pension Act. He had served on the Old-Age Pension Committee of South London, the largest committee in the country, and no one knew what a benefit it was unless they had sat upon one of those committees. Before the passing of the Act they were paying at the Camberwell Workhouse 14s. 3d. for every pauper they had—that, of course, included administration charges and everything else. Now, instead of the old people going to the workhouse they received a pension and were remaining outside. For instance, over two hundred old people came out of that workhouse when the Act was passed. Them, again, that money was spent loadily. He had been asked if the people were grateful. He did not care a button whether the people were grateful or not, it was a matter of justice, and he was confident that they were grateful.

He also rejoiced because they had a national system of insurance. He was a believer in it and he had to pay for his services just the same as anybody else. He had never felt like turning up his cards at having to pay sixpence a week for a woman when he paid 7s. 6d. a year for a dog. He objected to people sticking on national insurance licking stamps. Some women who did so did not object to kissing a poodle—(laughter and applause)—and while they thought it a degrade to push a perambulator down the street would carry a dog in their arms. When he reminded the great purpose Mr Lloyd George had in his mind when he tackled the great scheme of National Insurance, he rejoiced that it had lived to see the day when it has become not only a realised fact but a success. When he thought of the condition of the sick men they were called in today, he was proud to be a follower of the man who had produced those conditions. (Applause). He was a believer in the Liberal policy of Home Rule. He believed in it now just as much as he did before Carson kicked up his row. He believed in Home Rule as a Protestant and as a Nonconformist. A man had said to him "I am surprised that you, a Protestant and a Nonconformist, are in favour of Home Rule." He replied, "What does Rome Rule." He positively denied that it was so, as the facts were on the other side. They had to remember one or two things. First of all, the friends of Rome knew her failings as well as they knew theirs. When Home Rule was introduced by Mr Gladstone, the Pope of Rome sent a letter to all the churches against Home Rule. The English Catholic, said Mr Hooper, was an anti-Home Rule. English Church life in this country differed from that of recent years. He remembered as a boy how they had got a smack on the side of the head if they did not touch their hats to the clergymen. That had all changed. Why? First of all, they brought a new element into rural life. They gave the agricultural labourer a vote, and then he felt that he was some one, or rather he felt he had an interest that he never had before. Then they established rural district and parish councils and made them councillors, and then they put mufflers on one side and began to wear a wicker and collar. The Parish Council Act had brought a new phase into country life. A vicar had once said the Parish Council Act had not disestablished the Church, but it had re-established the vicar. He believed that when Home Rule became an Act of Parliament they would find the Irishmen coming together. There would no doubt be a bit of blustering, but what was being said had been said in '93. If they were to see the speeches of '93 they would think Carson had been making them during the past six months. He rejoiced that they were getting to the period when one man would have one vote. He was also glad that they were going to fight at the next election. They were not coming out just yet, gentlemen.

A voice: You very nearly did.

Mr Hooper: We are still twenty-one on the right side. (Laughter and applause).

In conclusion, Mr Hooper paid glowing tributes to the leaders of the Government. They were living in great times, he said; England had never seen a more noble man than he who leads the English Parliament in the House of Commons. Never had they had a man at the Treasury who so earnestly desired to benefit the people of this country as the present Chancellor of the Exchequer. He understood the struggles of the poor, and although he had got on in life he never forgot the conditions under which he had lived. At the next election greater things would be accomplished. If reforms were to strike deeply they had to travel slowly. He believed the best things were yet to come, and if the electors backed the Government they would be more than paid by the legislation which would raise life to a higher standard. (Applause). In proposing a vote of thanks to Mr Hooper,

Mr E. H. Foster said that the next election would not be fought on Home Rule, Welsh Disestablishment, or on Plural Voting. All these would have been dealt with before then, but it would be on the voting of millions of money for the public health.

THE LATE MRS WAINWRIGHT, OF MICKLEFIELD

AN APPRECIATION.

[CONTRIBUTED].

On Monday evening, May 11th, there passed away from earth one of the best-known figures in the part of Yorkshire in the person of Lucy Wainwright, at the ripe age of 81. Mrs Wainwright was born at Kippax, her father being farm-keeper to the late Mrs Bland of Kippax Park. In early life Lucy Field was in service at the Park, and it was there that she met her future husband, Mr George Wainwright, who was butler at the same period. On their marriage they came to Micklefield, to the farm now in the occupation of Mr J. H. Bramley; but on the death of Mr Pearson, they removed to the Bland's Arms, where Mrs Wainwright has lived ever since. Her Wainwright having died some 18 years ago.

Mrs Wainwright was known to everyone for miles round, and it may be said of her, what was said of one of Gallio, the brother of Seneca, "whom to know was to love." The Bland's Arms has the reputation of being one of the best conducted houses in England, and to make no sort of doubt that Mr Tom Field, Mrs Wainwright's brother—a well-known follower of the Bramham Hunt—will carry on the old traditions, now that she is gone.

Mrs Wainwright had a long and weary illness, lasting some eight-en months. There was no organic disease; it was simply nature worn out. The last time she went to church was on Good Friday year; when, although so old, she stayed all through the "Three Hours' Devotion." On Easter Sunday while dressing for the late Mass she was taken suddenly ill, and from that time has been more or less of a confirmed invalid. When the news of her death got about there was unusual sorrow. Perhaps the general verdict on her life was best expressed in the words of one who was told of her death on the Tuesday morning, "I am sorry, another good soul has passed away from earth."

Lucy Wainwright must have been very pretty as a girl, and even as an old lady she had a delightful face, full of kindness and benignity. She was a most regular attendant at the village church, and up to two years ago she never omitted to be present at Mass, no matter what the weather might be. In the beautiful church of Micklefield—a costly gift speaks for her generosity, though few knew it during her lifetime, for she loved to give in secret. Amongst her many gifts was the beautiful copy of a Medieval Crucifix, which stands on the altar, and her very last offering was the beautifully decorated font cover.

The end came very peacefully, and she passed away so quietly that it was difficult to say when the end came. She died in the arms of her devoted friend Elizabeth, who was to her more than a daughter.

The funeral was on Thursday of last week. The day began with a Requiem Mass, at which there was a large attendance. The actual interment was at 3.30. The hearse—out of seven to the house, and it was a most impressive sight to see the procession, headed by the Thurifer, the incense ascending in sweet clouds, followed by the Crucifer and Acolytes. Probably nothing like it has been seen since the days of Faith. The large crowds were deeply impressed, and showed every sign of reverence. Mr Burnley, churmaster of Garforth, kindly took charge of the singing. On the way to the church the hymns "Jerusalem the Golden" and "Jesu, Lover of my soul" were sung alternately. The Vicar and the Rev. Father Cyril Farrar, Vicar and Priest of St. Anne's, Leeds, who were in beautiful violet copes were the officiating ministers. On reaching the church gates the body was placed on the bier, the opening sentences being read by Father Cyril Farrar, as the procession entered the church the hymn, "Ora the Resurrection morning" was sung. Then followed Psalm 100, while the body was solemnly censed. Round the bier six tall tapers were burning, and the beautiful altar was a blaze of lights. Mr Arthur Whitaker was Master of the Ceremonies. Father Cyril and Father Farrar took the Lessons, and then the Vicar resumed the cope, and the procession left the church singing the "De profundis."

At the graveside, the Vicar censed the grave and the body before it was lowered, and said the rest of the Office. Immediately after the blessing, the choir sang "Jesu, Lover of my soul," and then we left our dear old friend waiting in sure and certain hope of the resurrection of the dead.

The church was filled with a crowd of genuine mourners, and many an eye was wet as the service proceeded. Among those present were:—Mr Bland and Mrs Hoste, of Kippax Park, Mrs and Miss Farrar, Mr and Mrs Ernest Farrar of Harrogate, Mr Miller (Kippax), Mr Lower, Miss Stopforth, Mr Walker (York), Mrs Craven, Dr. Abbott, Mr T. H. Bramley, Miss Telford, Mr and Mrs Ellis, Mrs Bramley, Mr Firth, Mr Sutton, Mr and Mrs Dalby, and a host of others.

The grave had been beautifully lined with ivy by Mr W. Lund and his men, and the wreaths sent numbered about 30, and when arranged by Mr Walker, after the grave had been filled in, resembled a magnificent carpet of flowers. "May she rest in peace, and may Perpetual Light shine on her."

A KIPPAX MINER'S ADVENTURE

HIS BICYCLE DISAPPEARS—REMARKABLE CASE.

MAGISTRATE SAYS IT WAS A "PASTARDLY PROCEEDING."

At Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday—before Mr J. W. Merkill and other magistrates—Clifford Gregory, a carter, of Hunslet, was charged with stealing a bicycle valued at £4, from William Gill, Kippax.

Supt. Symonds, in opening the case, said it was alleged that Gill was riding along the Leeds and Pontefract Road at Rothwell, when he was knocked off his bicycle, which was taken away from him.

Mr A. Willey appeared for Gregory.

William Gill, a miner, of Kippax, said that on Thursday, May 14th, about 10 p.m., he was cycling from Leeds to Oulton, along the Pontefract Road, and when descending the hill into Oulton, he saw a flat cart standing in the roadway and facing Leeds. As he approached he saw someone leave the cart and cross the road. He shouted and slackened down, but when on a level with the cart the man who had crossed the road stepped into the roadway and struck at him, catching him on the left shoulder and knocking him off his bicycle. The man who had done so used bad language, and Gill said "Nay, leave me alone, I have done nowt at you." As he was about to pick up the bicycle, three other men came from the cart towards him, and witness dropped the machine and ran back up the hill until he came across a miner, to whom he related the occurrence. A few moments later the cart came along, and when it was on a level witness shouted to the men and asked them for the bicycle. The only reply he got from them was a lot of bad language. Gill returned to the spot in search of the machine, but could not find it. From there he went on to Oulton and informed the police.

By Mr Willey: There appeared to be five men on the cart, they were making a lot of noise and he could not tell whether they were drunk or not. He did not fall from his machine but was knocked off by one of the men. The cart was standing at the proper side of the road.

James Sidbottom, the miner to whom Gill appealed for help, said he was near "Oulton Hill when Gill came up to him. He corroborated the story of Gill's effort to stop the men for his bicycle.

Mr Willey: It was what is now known as a joy ride, wasn't it?

Witness: Well, I don't know, but they seemed to be inebriated. (Laughter).

P.C. Abbott stated that he was on duty at Oulton about 11 p.m. on May 14th when Gill told him of the occurrence. The next morning, along with Sergeant Metcalfe, he went to some premises in Hunslet Carr, occupied by Mrs Wilkinson, whose daughter, they had approached the yard they saw Gregory, who ran away. The bicycle was found in the stable. Later Gregory was apprehended, and, in answer to the charge, said "I can't say anything. I am full. There were more besides me. I was not going to keep it. There were five of us."

Detective Sergeant Dunn said that Gregory said to him that Gill had run into them on the previous night, fell off, and then ran away.

Gregory, who is 21 years of age, gave evidence, and said that he was a carter for Mrs Wilkinson, Hunslet Carr. On Thursday night they set off for a drive. There were four men and a boy, and they had some drink. The first thing he knew of the bicycle was that one of the men had got off the cart and there was a man and a bicycle in the road. He put the bicycle on the cart, but previous to that the man had run off up the hill. They followed him up to the top, and Gill (who he (the boy) shouted to the driver to stop so that they could give him back the bicycle, but the driver took no notice. The machine was taken to the Nun Inn, Hunslet, where it was taken charge of by a man named Heaton. It was their intention to return the bicycle to the owner. The next day Heaton took the bicycle to the slaughter-yard.

Asked by the Chairman why he had run away when the officers came, Gregory said he was a "bit nervous."

John Wilkinson said he was driving the cart. He did not see the man run into the cart, but he knew something had happened to the machine.

Ernest Heaton, who was of the party, said it was their intention to return the bicycle and not to keep it.

Mr Willey contended that it could not be considered a case of theft, and no jury, if it was sent before one, would sustain it. Why were not the other men charged along with Gregory?

After a brief consultation the magistrates stated that they did not think there was sufficient evidence to convict on the charge. For that they were sorry as more distantly proceeding had never been before the Court. The case was accordingly dismissed, the Clerk intimating that there might probably be further proceedings taken against them.

HOW A GARFORTH MAN'S KINDNESS WAS REWARDED

SMART PUNISHMENT FOR UNGRATEFUL LABOURER.

A mean reward for a miner's kindness was related at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday, when Richard Chaplin, a labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with stealing a bicycle, valued at £2 10s., from William Thomas Wilson, a pony driver, of Beech Grove, Garforth.

Supt. Symonds stated that early in February the prisoner was found in a destitute condition by Wilson, who took him home. On Sunday, April 26th, he (prisoner) asked him to lend him his bicycle for an hour. The machine was lent, but prisoner was not seen again.

Herbert Parkin, manager of the Grantham Cycle Stores, Grantham, said that on Tuesday, 28th April, the prisoner came to him and asked him to repair a bicycle for him. He was told the cost would be 5s., but prisoner said he could not pay and asked witness to buy the bicycle for 25s. Witness told him he did not buy second-hand machines, whereupon prisoner asked him to lend him 5s. to get back to Bradford, promising to return the money. Witness let him have the money.

P.C. Bevoor spoke to receiving prisoner from the Northampton Police. When charged, he said "I begged it and did go for a ride; I sold it to a cycle dealer at Bradford. I asked him to pay 25s., but we came down to 5s."

Prisoner asked the Bench to give him another chance, but the magistrates declared he had a bad record for similar offences, and sent him to prison for four months with hard labour.

THE LATE CANON GELDART, KIRK DEIGHTON.

TRIBUTE BY BISHOP OF KNARESBOROUGH.

The Bishop of Knaresborough, as Archdeacon of Ripon, conducted the visitation of his archdeaconry on Thursday by delivering his charge to a gathering of clergy and churchwardens at the rural deaneries of Ripon, Boroughbridge, and Knaresborough, in Ripon Cathedral.

The Bishop said: I cannot commence my charge to-day without referring to the sad event of which we have so recently heard—the death of the Rev. Canon Geldart. He left England on May 2nd for a voyage to South Africa. He was somewhat out of health, but it was hoped that the voyage would fully restore him. On May 9th a message was cabled from Cornwall "All well." Two days later a wireless message came saying that he was dangerously ill, and on Tuesday last another message came telling us that he had passed away. He will be greatly missed in his parish, where he served first as curate and afterwards as vicar for 52 years. He spared no effort to promote both the spiritual and material wellbeing of his parishioners. He will be greatly missed also in the diocese. As Rural Dean he gained the confidence and affection of the clergy in his rural deanery, and as a prominent member of the Diocesan Executive of the C.E.T.S. he did much to promote the cause of temperance. We learn from him a lesson of the unspeakable value of quiet, patient, faithful work. Our deepest sympathy will be with his widow in her bereavement.

ENGINEERS AT ALLERTON BYWATER COLLIERY

MR PEAKE'S TRIBUTE TO THE MINERS.

A party of members of the Midland Institute of Mining, Civil, and Mechanical Engineers and the Midland Counties Institution of Engineers, paid a visit on Thursday to the Allerton Bywater Collieries and the Ledston Luck Colliery. Altogether some 160 gentlemen of the Institute were the guests of the New Silkstone and Haigh Moor Coal Company (Limited), and, owing to the fact that, in recent years the Allerton plant has been greatly modernised, the visitors spent a profitable day.

The shafts of the collieries were sunk about 40 years ago, and five years ago the present company decided upon a policy for modernising the plant generally, and developing new coal, with the view of increasing the output. The most interesting feature of the new equipment is the arrangement of power.

A system has been adopted whereby the colliery company generate their own electric power from exhaust-steam during the working hours of the colliery, and use the Yorkshire Electric Power Company's supply at week-ends, holiday times, when overhauling the turbine plant, and as a stand-by in case of emergency. The result arrived at is that, whereas five years ago the collieries were drawing between 9,000 and 10,000 tons per week, and had in use seventeen Lancashire boilers, they are now drawing nearly 17,000 tons per week (with the requisite increase in horse-power) with steam from five Lancashire boilers.

The visitors were entertained to lunch at Allerton Colliery, when Mr G. H. Peake, chairman of directors, presided. He was supported by Mr C. E. Rhodes, consulting engineer; Mr R. E. Hodgson and Mr F. J. Dundas, directors; Mr H. E. Smithson, agent and manager; Mr H. Sandy, secretary; Mr H. S. Childe, Mr P. Greaves, Mr Walter Hargreaves, and Mr Geoffrey Jackson, of Messrs Henry Briggs, Son, and Co. (Limited).

In proposing a vote of thanks to the colliery company and their officials for their courtesy towards the members of the Institute, Mr Walter Hargreaves commented upon the great changes that have taken place in recent years at Allerton Bywater.

Mr H. S. Childe seconded, and the motion, which was heartily carried, was responded to by Mr J. Peake, Mr Rhodes, and Mr H. E. Smithson.

Mr Peake observed that work at the colliery had always been a pleasure, because of the good spirit that prevailed among the employees. As an instance of this, he mentioned that a fortnight ago a motor ambulance had been purchased, not by the company, but by the men themselves. The company met the men's representatives and offered to share the cost of the ambulance car, but the men preferred to bear the burden themselves. In those days, when they heard so much about the unsatisfactoriness of working men, he had great pleasure in bearing testimony to what had been done at Allerton Bywater. (Applause). The company also appreciated the splendid spirit shown. Alluding to the charter which, he hoped, the Mining Engineers' Institutes would shortly receive, Mr Peake said he thought it was time the charter was given. (Applause). He trusted that when they met again he would be able to congratulate them on having acquired it. (Applause).

Mr Rhodes said the experiments carried out by the Institutes had done much for mining science. Those experiments had borne fruit which had resulted in legislation, and made for safety in mines. (Applause).

Mr Smithson, referring to the acquisition of the motor ambulance, said he regarded it as a great achievement, and made the comment that "money could do a lot, but mercy could not buy a motor ambulance." (Applause). The men had bought it "off their own bat," and they had set an example to the district.

THE ABBEY LIVING.—A quantity of valuable freehold property in the heart of Selby has been purchased by the trustees of the endowments of Selby Abbey, which adjoins. It is proposed to utilise this for the purpose of augmenting the benefice of the church, which is now under £200 a year. The scheme is on foot to raise £7,000 for parochial work, which includes the building of a central church institute at a cost of £3,000; the removal of an undesirable yard near the church; the provision of a district mission church; and the increase of the endowment.

A ROUNDHAY MOTORIST IN A COLLISION

HOW A MOTOR-CYCLIST WAS KILLED.

MR A. M. LUPTON'S EVIDENCE.

The fatal motor collision which occurred in Roundhay Road, Leeds, was investigated by Mr J. H. Milner, the Deputy Coroner, on Friday, when the adjourned inquest was held on the victim of the accident, Mr John William Ambler (32), a woollen merchant, of 60, Markham Avenue, Leeds.

It will be remembered that a motor-car, driven by Mr Arthur M. Lupton, of Springwood, Roundhay, down Roundhay Road, came into collision near the Olympia Skating Rink with a motor-cycle and side-car travelling in the opposite direction. Mr Ambler was riding the motor-cycle, and in the side-car was Miss Hetty Robinson, aged 21, of Ashton Road, Harehills. The eleven-year-old son of Mr Ambler was sitting on the carrier at the back of the motor-cycle. Mr Ambler was thrown on to his head and instantly killed. Miss Robinson sustained a fractured collar-bone, and the boy's legs and face were cut and bruised.

Mr E. H. Dodgson appeared for Mr A. M. Lupton; Mr R. C. Davies for the Mutual Union Insurance Company; Mr A. W. Wray for the relatives of Mr Ambler; and Mr G. Snowden for the Leeds Corporation.

Police-Superintendent Haddon produced a map of Roundhay Road. Asked by the Coroner how the road was used, he said that it was usually regarded as a double road, but it should not be so. Some people preferred the macadam side, and each half of the road was used for up and down traffic. So far as the authorities were concerned, the traffic regulations of Roundhay Road were not different from those of any other thoroughfare in Leeds. There was a by-law which enacted that slow going traffic must keep on the left or near side. The general way of using the road was wrong, and cyclists and men with horses were the worst offenders in going for the macadam.

Miss Hetty Robinson, the occupant of the side-car, said that Mr Ambler drove along Harehills Avenue into Roundhay Road, and kept on the left side of the road. The machine was between the "up" tramlines, and the side-car between the extreme near line and the causeway. "We were going up like that," she continued, "and I noticed the motor coming down about the middle of the road. About ten or fifteen yards away from us, it turned suddenly to the right, and I don't remember any more."

The Coroner: Are you sure you did not turn to the right?

The Witness: Oh, no, we kept straight up the left-hand side. I am sure of that.

Dr. Sims said Mr Ambler's death was caused by a fracture at the base of the skull and laceration of the brain. The fracture was at the back of the right side of the head. There was another wound on the left side, and the body was badly mutilated. Judging by the injuries, the motors must have collided with great force.

There was considerable confliction in the evidence of the various witnesses who saw the accident, said the Coroner, as to what was travelling at full speed, and the witness heard no bows sounded.

The next witness, Harry Brown, of Sholebroke View, Leeds, said that the motor passed him, opposite the Skating Rink, in the middle of the road, and it was turning to the right side as if to take the macadam. There were no lights on the cycle, but the lamps on the motor were lighted. Fred Parkinson, of Ashton Street, declared that the motor-cyclist swerved to the right as if to avoid a cart. He was going on the "up" tram track.

Mrs Moorhouse, of 78, Francis Street, Leeds, sister of the late Mr Ambler, said that she was walking with her husband near Gledhow Wood Road, when the motor-cycle came along. She watched the machine as far as she could, and noticed two lights coming down. The lights suddenly swerved, and then there was a great smash.

Mr A. M. Lupton said that his car was a 10-14 h.p. Austin. He had one wheel on the macadam and one on the down tram line as he turned into Roundhay Road. He saw the motor-cycle coming towards him quite close and at an angle. Immediately he put on his brakes. That was all he could do. There was not time for anything else. He was not going fast—probably about 15 miles an hour, and certainly not more than 18 miles. He had run down on a free engine. The motor cyclist came in nearly head on, and swung the witness round. The cycling fell in front, somewhere, and the girl in the side-car came right up, actually brushing the wind screen. The bicycle itself slewed half on to the tram lines, and fell in front. "I didn't run him down," added Mr Lupton.

Mr Willey: Do I understand you to say that you didn't see the cyclist?—Not until it was too close for me to do anything. It was dark.

Of course, he could see you because you had lights?—Yes.

And you say he ran into you, although you had lights?—Yes.

Is it not more than probable you ran into him?—I should have run right over him if I had run him down.

Is it not a fact that you instantly came upon something in the darkness, and you hadn't time to get out of the way?—Yes.

Do you suggest that this unfortunate man, with a boy and a girl, ran into the motor-car?

Mr Lupton made no answer, whereupon Mr Willey declared "I will pass on. I don't wish to pursue a man in your position, in a case like this. Do you suggest you were driving discreetly, with being on the tram-lines there, with the whole of the macadam on the proper side of the road for you?" Very difficult to answer. It is done by everybody.

I suggest you had no right to be there at all. You had to feet on your proper side.

In reply to Mr Dodgson, the witness said he had been driving a car for six years.

The Coroner, in summing up, said Roundhay Road was used in a very queer fashion. Mr Lupton was going down on the near side tramlines. He was doing something which one might see every day in the week, in coming down on the down tram-lines. "If you don't do so," declared the Coroner, "you would be far more likely to run a person down on the causeway edge than you would be coming down on the proper side."

Mr Willey: I hope that won't—

The Coroner: It is so, Mr Willey. There it is, and you can't help it, and no regulations made by the police will avoid it. The police have tried their best to do it, but until the tramlines are exactly in the centre of the road you will always find this difficulty.

Mr Willey: What would avoid it would be to extend the setts another five feet.

After a brief retirement, the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," and added a rider that, in their opinion, the police ought to extend on Roundhay Road being used as a single road.

The Coroner: Well, I am sure Mr Willey will see to it in his position on the Council.

OTTER HUNTING AT COLLINGHAM.

BITCH OTTER KILLED.

Mr W. Thompson's Otter Hounds, met again on Thursday at Collingham Bridge, the fixture being changed from Harewood Bridge. Hounds were first cast down stream as far as the railway bridge, but with no signs of game. Drawing up stream, there was no line until Langwith Wood—the scene of Tuesday's long hunt—was passed.

Nearly opposite Wood Hall hounds opened on a drag, which became stronger up to Carthick, hounds marking at the top island, and putting an otter away from a rock on the left bank. The otter took down the deep pool between the island and the bank, but before reaching the shallow tumbled back, and for some considerable time hounds were at fault.

Mr Mate made a long cast down stream, and then returned to the Carthick Islands, and proceeded to draw up stream nearly as far as Netherby. Here a clever "mark" on the part of a terrier old Beaud, hunted her, and the other's refuge in an old root well out of the water. A terrier was introduced, and hounds were held up to give the otter every chance to bolt, which they did in a few minutes, but only for two hounds got hold of him before he got across the river and gave him a shaking. While this was going on a second otter bolted from the island, and from

SATURDAY, MAY 23rd, 1914.

Interesting sidelights are thrown upon the life of the people in the West Riding by the annual report on the medical inspection of school children. When the system was instituted comparatively little interest was manifested in it by parents, who, perhaps, did not realize what it really meant for their children, but they are gradually coming round to the opinion that medical inspection is something that is of value to them. This attitude shows a commendable amount of caution; the people were not altogether ready to swallow what they were told; but they cannot withstand proof. When children are to be medically examined the parents are notified and invited to attend at the school when the examination is being made, and it is gratifying to know that increasing numbers are now availing themselves of the invitations. "The more intelligent and self-respecting the parents are," we are told, "the more they are likely to be present during the examination of their children." This is illuminating information. Parents are, by their own actions and outlook, ranging themselves into classes, and the authorities are now in a position to sift the self-respecting and careful from the indifferent and careless. Naturally, when greater interest is being exhibited in this matter, parents "are more and more appreciating the help and advice of the school medical inspectors." And in our own districts cases have come to light where that advice has proved of the utmost value. Defects which are not obvious to parents are revealed in children—defects which would cause a permanent handicap if not attended to, and remedial measures are adopted. Last year out of the 53,162 routine inspections 27,015 children were free from classified defect, and 26,147 were defective in one or more respects. In 17,094 cases advice was given to the parents, and in 1,564 cases to the teacher. It is to be noted that 49.18 per cent. of children examined were found to be defective in one or more respects. A large number of these defects were of a minor nature, and the figure shows an increase of 2.71 over that of last year. This increase is due mainly to (a) a slight increase in the figures for defective teeth, and (b) an increase in the number of enlarged tonsils, accounted for by the presence of sore throats during the past year. One satisfactory feature is the improvement in the personal condition of the children. The number of verminous heads has decreased, which proves that the work of medical inspection is gradually teaching the parents to pay more attention to the cleanliness of the girls' heads. Forty per cent. of defects have received attention—another advance. Only about one per cent. of the children come from bad homes, and we are told that the little ones who have been found dirty, ragged, and verminous come almost without exception from homes afflicted with poverty or drink, or both. Apparently in the mining districts the conditions are not all that could be desired, but there are mitigating circumstances, and the medical officer has a good word for the miners' wives. "The children of the mining districts," says Dr. Kaye, "are unquestionably not so clean and tidy as those in other areas, and this is no doubt due to the kind of work and general surroundings in the coal fields; the continued presence of dirt and grime and the irregularity of meals and working hours tend to make a struggle for cleanliness more strenuous in the mining districts than elsewhere, and it is a credit to the miners' wives that they do so well. There is perhaps in the factory districts a regularity and smartness inculcated by the mill training—a training that is missed in the mining districts where the girls on leaving school, too often remain at home learning careless habits as a preparation for early marriage." The inspection is revealing in rather a striking way the inefficiency in many homes, and it is doubtful that it arises altogether from lack of knowledge. Further investigation might show that in homes in the West Riding laziness among women is responsible for the state of affairs that exists. "It is disappointing that, though sewing has been taught for so many years in the schools," says the report, "the mothers and elder sisters seem to be incapable of doing the least bit of mending; clothes remain torn, unpatched, untidy, and unclean till they are almost falling from the wearer." Medical inspection, it is obvious, is bound to work out for the benefit of the children in many directions.

A few years ago enormous interest was aroused among local administrative bodies with reference to checking the ravages of consumption, and conference were held, reports made, and the necessity for decisive measures was accepted. Since then a county scheme has been launched, and the notification of cases of tuberculosis has been made compulsory, but the local authorities have ceased from displaying that active interest in the question which was so common when remedial measures were first proposed. It would be idle to criticise the work that has been done for consumptive patients in the county, because the period during which the scheme has been at work has been too brief to permit of people judging the results, but there is one phase of this important question which is not receiving attention, and until something is done it is hopeless to expect that tubercular disease will be eradicated. Remedial measures, as we have stated, have been adopted, but they only affect persons in the early stages of the disease, and it seems that nothing is being done in regard to the unfortunate people who are beyond cure. It was suggested at one time that two classes of institutions should be erected—one for persons for whom there was a chance of cure, and another for cases which were beyond medical aid, but up to now the second class has not received attention. To expect the disease to be stamped out when persons suffering from it are allowed to live at home is ridiculous; in fact, it if in this way that infection is spread and the number of patients augmented, and the authorities should be able to deal with these patients so that they may not be a danger to their fellows. Advice as to treatment and conduct is good, but unless these patients are removed to a home their power for evil in spreading the infection will not be materially decreased. A local medical officer suggests segregation, and this is a commonsense plan, although, as he says, it has a tinge of inhumanity about it to compel a person who is doomed to pass his few remaining days far removed from his family. But the same argument, so far as sentiment is concerned, could be applied to smallpox or to typhoid fever. No man nor woman would needlessly sacrifice family for sentiment, and if it were clearly pointed out that the fate of the consumptive would overtake others, owing to infection in the home, few of the unfortunate patients would hesitate as to their course of action. The public require education on this subject, and the local authorities should exhibit a little more interest in it, otherwise the results from the great expenditure of money will not be so satisfactory as they would have been had a thorough policy been adopted.

Nearly every great movement has had a small beginning, and it is not surprising to learn that the Boys' Brigade, which claims to have a membership of 70,000 officers and boys, was started in a mission hall in a dim Glasgow street. Its founder was Sir William A. Smith, who has just passed to the great majority, and what led him to start the Brigade was the difficulty of retaining a hold on lads after they had left the Sunday School—a difficulty which every church at the present time is called upon to deal with. Sir William saw that boys were fond of "playing at soldiers," and by eliminating entirely the combative element from his methods, he founded a movement which has accomplished splendid moral work throughout the whole country. Military in outward form, even in its uniform, the Boys' Brigade exists solely for religious training and the imparting of a manly code of behaviour. Its popularity shows its efficiency, and had it deserved the adverse criticisms which have been levelled at it, it would never have attained its present numerical strength. It was started in 1883 with the motto, "Sure and Stedfast," and the avowed purpose of "establishing Christ's Kingdom among boys, and promoting habits of obedience, reverence, discipline, self-respect, and all that tends to true Christian manliness." Its influence was seen in the formation of other organizations, and it is a living force in the nation's life. Then, look at the wonderful success of the Boy Scout movement. When General Baden Powell set out to educate the country along his own lines of thought, he introduced a novel scheme which in its first beginnings seemed to partake somewhat of the nature of a fad. But in a few months this illusion, natural as it was, was completely dispelled, and the Boy Scouts have become a part of the national life not only of this country but of almost all the countries of the world. Boys will be boys, and when an opportunity is given of turning their boyishness into proper channels, it is astonishing that the opportunity is let slip by parents. The Boy Scout movement is a game, yet not a game. Its methods are those of amusement, but its chief end is instruction. It is a solution to the problem of training boys to grow up good men without depriving them of the pleasures natural and necessary to their boyhood's days. In our own district the Scout movement has demonstrated its value, and, apart from the effect it has had on juvenile character—discipline must always count for something—it has been instrumental in imparting to boys knowledge which must be of use to them in after life. If it had done nothing else, it would have more than justified its existence. Probably the movement would make greater progress were a sufficient number of available men to act as Scoutmasters to volunteer their services, but this is self-sacrificing work which comparatively few well-equipped men will tackle, and it is understandable because it means that the work goes into inefficient or undesirable hands, or is not done at all. The movement, we are told, wants more good officers —men capable of influencing the lads in the right direction—and aspirants for service will be cordially welcomed by all.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL.

Owing to a breakdown the men employed at the Rose Pit, Rothwell, belonging to J. and J. Charlesworth and Sons, Limited, have been unable to work since Wednesday morning.

Sleeping Out.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Banks, a labourer, of no fixed above, was charged with sleeping out at Rothwell, and was sent to prison for three months.

Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr. J. W. Morkill (in the chair), the Hon. C. H. Wilson, Col. A. M. Sugar-Musgrave, Mr J. R. Cross, and Mr. Wm. Hall.

Homing.—On Saturday eighteen members of Rothwell H.S. sent 203 birds to take part in the race from Rugby (95 miles) Results:—Fox Bros. 12,357, A. Hodgkinson 12,201, J. Crossley 11,099, Thos. Hall 11,196, J. Armitage 11,196, W. Richardson 1,195.

Drink.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Beckwith, carter, of Rothwell, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Rothwell on May 9th. P.C. Womack proved the case, and a fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

Primitive Methodism.—In connection with the Primitive Methodist Church on Thanksgiving tea was held in the lawn behind the church on Saturday afternoon, and it was well attended. The goods which were unsold at the recent bazaar were for sale. In the evening a pretty cantata was rendered by the children of the Sunday School.

Wesleyan Church.—Rothwell Wesleyans had a visit from the Rev. J. W. Pearson (Leeds) on Sunday, who occupied the pulpit at both the morning and evening services, and drew good congregations. On Monday evening he delivered one of his popular lectures "Hugh Price Hughes," and there was a large audience, and the lecture was greatly enjoyed. Mr J. R. Seanor presided.

Aleep.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Cardiss, a carter, of Leeds, was summoned for having been asleep while in charge of a horse and dray. P.C. Bennett stated that about 11.15 p.m. on Monday, May 4th, he was on the Leeds Road, Rothwell Haigh, when he saw a horse attached to a dray coming along. The defendant, who was in charge, was fast asleep, and he (the officer) walked alongside the cart for about 70 yards before the defendant awoke. When spoken to by the officer defendant said that he did not know he had been asleep. A fine of 15s. and costs was imposed.

"A Nasty, Mean, Low Trick."—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Hales, a carter, of Wakefield, was summoned for having no control of two horses in his charge. It was stated by P.C. Bosomworth that about 4.30 p.m. on May 9th the defendant drove along the Pontefract Road at Rothwell Haigh in charge of two horses. He was seated on the shafts but did not hold the reins, which were coiled up and lying loosely on the shafts. When told he would be reported defendant said "Then it would be a nasty, mean, low trick if you did!" A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

A Farm Labourer's Offence.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Arthur Lever, a farm labourer in service at Rothwell Haigh, was charged with stealing a leather belt valued at 2s. 3d., John Michael Emmanuel Hoover, Rothwell Haigh, stated that the belt was in his possession in February last. On May 15th, when he was in need of it, he found it had gone. A search was made, in which Lever joined, but the belt was not discovered. The police were informed and the belt was found by P.C. Tait upon Lever. P.C. Tait stated that when spoken to about it Lever took the belt from his pocket. In answer to the Chairman, Lever said he knew Mr Gemmell had missed it; he was wearing it at the time and had been for some months, but did not like to own up to it. Lever was bound over and ordered to pay the costs.

CRICKET.—On Saturday afternoon a team representing the Rothwell Working Men's Club (Marsh Villa) played North Leeds Working Men's Club at Rothwell. The homesters, who batted first, made 98 and won by five runs, the visiting team scoring 93. Scores:—Rothwell W.M.—J. W. Fox 10, J. Parker 4, S. Pritchard 13, M. Naylor 4, E. Dacre (not out) 27, J. Hill 14, J. Tayloe 4, F. Lunn 3, H. Dacre 0, J. Barnett 0, T. W. Copley 0, extras 14; total, 98. North Leeds —H. Brownhill 0, O. Oddy 14, A. Gillon 1, G. Lancaster 1, A. Dobson 0, J. Russell 11, E. J. Walton 7, G. Topler 25, S. Grant 1, W. Ward 1, J. Booth (not out) 2, extras 25; total 93.

BOWLING.—The Rothwell Bowling Club entertained the bowlers from the New Farnley on Monday evening, and Rothwell lost by eighteen points, the aggregate scores being New Farnley 216, Rothwell 198. Details (Rothwell names first):—J. Harrison 12 v. J. Cowburn 21, G. W. Nodding 13 v. T. Drake 21, J. Oakland 21 v. F. Sharp 13, J. Chapman 21 v. P. Burgoyne 9, A. Chapman 21 v. A. Fletcher 13, J. Tiffany 5 v. E. Newton 21—W. E. Richardson 20 v. R. Thornton 21, O. Price 20 v. S. Barraclough 21, D. Barker 14 v. L. Alderson 21, A. Denton 21 v. G. Mountain 13, W. Ward 11 v. D. Normington 21, and E. Dobson 19 v. M. Simpson 21.

TRADESMEN'S C.C.—On Wednesday afternoon Rothwell Tradesmen's Cricket Club were to have played Hunslet, but the match, greatly to the Rothwell men's disappointment, had to be postponed. However, two sides, under the captainey of Messrs J. Newton and T. Hampson, had a match, and an enjoyable game was the result. The team captained by J. Hampson beat the opposing side by twenty-three runs. Scores:—J. Newton's Team—E. Tiffany 11, J. Newton 24, Parish 1, W. Copley 0, A. Lunn (not out) 0, S. Munteon 5, Nash 5, extras 3; total 55. T. Hampson's Team—B. Mathews 4, R. Firth 28, A. Womack 1, S. Baines 7, T. Hampson 20, O. Clarkson (not out) 0, Nettleton 2, extras 16; total 78.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.—The monthly meeting of the Rothwell Education Sub-Committee was held at the Robin Hood Council School on Friday evening—Mr J. Burfield Chairman—presiding. Other members present were Mrs Stoner, Mr S. R. Chadwick, and Mr Walton, with the Clerk (Mr A. Angus), and the attendance officer (Mr W. Steele). Applications for increases of salary were received from the headmasters of the Carlton, Robin Hood, and Thorpe Schools, and from an assistant at the Rothwell National School. The granting of advances was recommended to the authorities at Wakefield. The attendance returns for the past month were considered satisfactory considering the prevalence of illness in the district.

POLICEMAN'S COSTS.—At a meeting of the West Riding Standing Joint Committee at Wakefield on Wednesday there was a recommendation that the costs (£53) in the case of Willsey v. P.C. Ackroyd (formerly of Rothwell) be paid. The Rev. L. B. Morris stated that Ackroyd, who was stationed at Batley, was charged with indecent assault at the last Quarter Sessions at Wakefield, but he was acquitted, and his character was by no means injured. The costs were £31, and in view of the decision of the magistrates and the fact that the policeman had a good character the Finance Sub-Committee, after an interview with the Chief Constable, recommended that the money be paid. The recommendation was agreed to.

TEACHERS' MEETING.—The half-yearly meeting of the Rothwell and District Church Sunday School Teachers' Association was held in the Church Schoolroom at Kippax on Saturday, and representatives attended from the parishes of Rothwell, Woodlesford, Kippax, Allerton Bywater, Hook Lane, Oulton, Great Preston, Garforth, Swillington, and Methley. Tea was served in the schoolroom, and 150 persons attended. The tea was served by the following ladies, viz., Mrs Smith, Mrs Hall, Mrs Howell, Mrs Biscomb, Mrs Veitch, Mrs Jackson, Mrs A. Cripwell, and Mrs Gosling. Choral evensong was held in the church at 5 p.m., the choir leading the singing which was well heralded at the organ. At the conference which was held in the schoolroom in the evening, Canon Garrood gave a most interesting address on "Our Lord as a Teacher," dealing chiefly with His mode and use of illustration. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Canon for his address at the close.

ALLERTON BYWATER

Sir J. Compton-Rickett, M.P., addressed the members of the Leeds Luncheon Club on Monday.

HOMING.—On Saturday the members of Allerton Bywater Homing Society sent 140 birds, to take part in the race from Burton (69 miles). Results:—Hutchinson Bros. 1,252, 1,235, Atkinson 1,247, Simpson 1,231 (wins 6d. pool), Booth Bros. 1,230, Townsend 1,218, Biscomb 1,214.

ALLERTON BYWATER AND THE CUP.—An unfortunate dispute between the Rev. W. Warde-Aldam, of Frickley Hall, and the committee of the Pontefract and District Cricket League had a regrettable ending on Thursday night. The trouble has arisen as to the conditions governing the custody of the cup given by Mr Warde-Aldam for competition among the clubs in the League, and which was won by Allerton Bywater. Shirley last season. Mr Warde-Aldam's solicitors drew up an agreement which the League committee declined to sign. Mr Warde-Aldam thereupon wrote to the Frickley club: "The Pontefract League do not seem to have behaved very well in the matter, so I shall wash my hands of the matter, and now present the cup to the Frickley Athletic Club to do as they like with; withdraw it from the League if they like altogether. On receipt of this letter the Frickley Club wrote to the secretary of the League (Mr George Box) notifying that the cup was withdrawn and could not be competed for this season. The committee considered these letters at their meeting on Thursday night. The Chairman (Mr G. E. Gurst) said he considered the club had behaved very foolishly in the matter. The general impression was that when the cup was presented it was understood that the League Committee should have sole control. Mr Dixon, representing Allerton Bywater, the present holders, said the cup would take a lot of getting from them. The Frickley representative could give no further information as to why Frickley wished an agreement to be drawn up, and the committee decided to inform Mr Warde-Aldam that no satisfactory explanation of the matter could be obtained from the Frickley club. Unless oil is poured on the troubled waters all the ten clubs in the League will be without fixtures on the second Saturday in each month.

BOWERS ALLERTON

At Bowers Allerton School the percentage of attendance last month was 94·64 against 95·68 for April last year.

CROSSGATES

LEEDS INSURANCE GOLFERS' SOCIETY.—The qualifying round for the Challenge Cup and President's Prize was played over the Horsforth course, and among the sixteen who have qualified are Mr J. Simpson (Crossgates) 91, 4, 87; and Mr P. Cowling (Crossgates), 105, 16, 89. Mr E. Hawkesworth, of Crossgates, has been elected a member of the Council of the Leeds Philosophical and Literary Society.

HOMING.—On Saturday eleven members of Crossgates Homing Society sent 96 birds to take part in the race from Rugby. Results:—Barber and Limbert (special pool vase) 1,217, 7, E. Linley 1,189, H. Linley 1,178, H. Turner 1,174, H. Gladdiney 1,172, E. Linley 1,159, 1,164, and 1,167, Barber and Limbert 1,153 and 1,166, J. Middleton 1,146, A. Hornby 1,143.

CARLTON

HOMING.—On Saturday thirteen members of Carlton H.S. sent 130 birds to take part in the race from Rugby. Details:—A. Nunns 1,189 and 1,168, A. Ashton 1,186, Jackson Bros. 1,182, H. Lewis 1,168, E. Nunns 1,167, J. Charlesworth 1,163.

BILLIARDS.—During the week a handicap has been concluded at the Temperance Hall. The finalists were Messrs E. Brown and A. Tate. Brown was the scratch man in a game of 150 up, while Tate received 85. The result was E. Brown 150, A. Tate 110. At present a billiard tournament is in full swing.

FAIRBURN

HOMING.—Seven members of Fairburn Homing Society sent 95 birds to take part in the race from Barton on Saturday. Results:—Barker and Sons 1,175 (wins 3d. pool), Green Bros. 1,159, Fox 1,139, Lunt and Son 1,068, Powell 1,059, Barker and Grainger 1,056.

GARFORTH

In the first round of the Yorkshire Bowling Consolation Cup competition Garforth W.M. will play Holbeck at Ossett.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday afternoon an accident occurred to a man named Wilson, employed at Garforth Station. It seems that whilst unloading a waggon in the sidings he fell from the vehicle to the ground, slightly on his head, and suffered concussion. Dr. Sykes was sent for and attended to the injured man.

MR HOUFTON UNSUCCESSFUL.—Polling took place in North-East Derbyshire on Wednesday, and the result was:—Major H Bowden (U), 6,469; Mr J. P. Houfton (L) 6,155; Mr J. Martin (Lab.), 3,669. Mr Houfton said he had lost through the split in the Progressive vote. The result showed that through the Miners' Association pressure had been brought to bear upon Ministerialists which they found it impossible to resist.

I.W.T.A.—A meeting in connection with the Garforth Branch of the British Women's Temperance Association was held at St. Mary's Hall, and it was presided over by Captain Pakes, who gave a very interesting and well thought out address on temperance. Miss Piddock, of Garforth, was the soloist, and Mrs Cauldwell (President) invited those present to sign the pledge and join the Society. Seven pledges were taken.

EXCELLENT ATTENDANCE RETURNS.—Last month the percentage of attendance at the schools in Garforth area was 91·91, and Garforth R.C. were first in the division with 97·62, the figures for April, 1913, being 80·95. At Garforth Council, mixed, the percentage was 93·84 against 93·07, and infants, 86·62 against 90·63; East Garforth, 93·48 and 93·21; Garforth Parochial, mixed, 94·44 and 93·66, and infants, 90·28 and 88·76.

GOLF.—On Saturday afternoon at Garforth golf links the qualifying round for the West Riding Cup was played, the following qualified:—J. A. Taylor handicap 26, net 69; H. Sandy, 18, 70; H. Clark, 26, 70; C. Sixt, 18, 72; J. Prime, 26, 73; W. Tate, 18, 74; W. Bean, 21, 75; J. M. Wade, 30, 76; C. T. Denby, 18, 76; W. Simpson, 26, 76; W. J. Turnbull, 28, 76; G. H. Walker, 14, 79; J. Beevors, 26, 79; E. G. Smatt, 28, 80; H. F. Smithson, 8, 80.

AMBULANCE.—In connection with the Yorkshire Collieries Ambulance League, twelve teams competed on Saturday in the second round of the Wood Shield Competition at the Leeds Tram Exchange. The judges were Dr. G. Murray, of Scarborough, and Dr. Fell, of York. The results were as follows:—Garforth 268 points, Allerton Bywater 250, Pope and Pearson's 230, Acklam Hall No. 1 195, Grimethorpe 194½, Newmarket 188½, Stanley 188, Robin Hood 186½, Hemsworth 182, Acklam Hall No. 1 178½, Monk Bretton 173½, and Hemsworth Clough 122. The high-at number of points obtainable was 383.

PICTURE HOUSE.—In the early part of the week pictures of interest—"The Diver" and "The Escape of Jim Dolan"—were shown at the Picture House before good audiences, and to-night and Saturday "Kissing Cup," the finest racing picture ever produced, should attract crowded houses. For next week excellent films have been booked, and the leading features on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday will be "The Fruits of Vengeance" and "In Convict Garb," two-reel dramas. The first is a sensational story dealing with circus life, and the title of the latter gives an indication to the tale it describes. Other good pictures will be exhibited. For Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the sensational play "The Fortune Hunters" will be the principal attraction, and it will give satisfaction to everyone who likes exciting fare. During the week-end exciting flights by Mr Hedworth Havens, the American aviator, will be introduced, and a feature of the piece will be a fight in an underground water mill. Another fine film—"The Green Eye of the Yellow God," from the poem by Mr J. Milton Heyes—will be shown, in addition to pictures of interest and humour. For times and prices see advt.

GREAT PRESTON

At Great Preston School last month the percentage of attendance was 90·19 as compared with 91·02 in April last year.

ASSAULT ON THE POLICE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas Gibbons, described as a farm labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Little Preston and with assaulting Police-Constable Thomas, it appears, was spoken to by P.C. Eadon owing to his conduct, when he produced a poker and attempted to strike the officer. He became very violent and in a struggle which ensued he hit the officer on the left arm, making a serious wound. Fortunately P.C. Holmes was close at hand and came to Eadon's assistance, and together the officers succeeded in getting the man to the police station. P.C. Holmes also gave evidence as to the prisoner's conduct. Inspector Ramsden said the man was placed in a cell he kicked at the door throughout the night until about six o'clock the next morning. Defendant, said the inspector, had only been in the country about a month, having come from Ireland. For the first offence Gibbons was fined 5s. and costs, and for the assault was sent to prison for two months.

HALTON

BOWLING.—On Wednesday, in the Mosley Trophy Competition, Halton played Chapeltown on the green of the latter. Scores:—Chapeltown 236, Halton 168. Details (Chapeltown names first):—T. W. Wilkinson 18 v. J. W. Walker 21, A. Waring 13 v. H. Thomas 21, C. Moss 21 v. F. Vince 20, E. Briggs 21 v. G. Simpson 11, P. Oliver 21 v. T. Bedford 12, J. Jones 21 v. R. Morris 3, J. Boddison 21 v. C. Lambert 12, H. Crampton 21 v. R. Pinder 8, F. Ewing 21 v. G. Cowell 9, S. Warburton 21 v. W. Green 14, J. C. Dixon 16 v. A. Caine 21, J. Lewthwaite 21 v. A. Raye 6.

The Hon. E. F. L. Wood, M.P., was on Wednesday promoted to a captaincy in the Yorkshire Dragoons (Queen's Own) Yeomanry, in which he got his first commission as second-lieutenant in September, 1904. He was promoted lieutenant in May, 1908.

WHITKIRK AMATEUR OPERATIC SOCIETY.—This Society made a profit of £11 on the season, which terminated on Saturday last. The members, however, have given £3 to the District Nurses' Fund and £2 to the Crossgates and district medical charities.

HALTON SCHOOL BOYS' SUCCESS.—The Halton School Rugby Football team have finished their first season in the Leeds Schools Rugby League, and they have played 16 League matches, winning 10, losing 5, and one was drawn, while they have been successful in reaching the semi-final of all the trophies presented by the Leeds League, viz., Wynne Trophy, Goldthorpe Cup, and Championship Shield. The team are waiting anxiously for the opening of the next season, when they hope to do still better. They have also had a successful season financially. The income was £21 10s. 10d., made up as follows:—Gate collections £1 5s. 9½d., Hon. E. F. L. Wood £1, Mr P. S. Marsden 10s., Mr G. R. Lane Fox 5s., four friends 10s., boys' collection 2s. 3½d., proceeds from ball £16 8s. 9d. The expenditure was:—Goal posts, extra jerseys, knickers, printing, etc., £1 9s. 2d., travelling expenses £1 9s. 4d., set of 13 leather hand bags £6 3s. 6d., total £19 2s., so there is a balance in hand of 19s. 10d. A set of dark knickers and football caps have been ordered.

KIPPAX

The women's service which was held in the Parish Church on Sunday afternoon was well attended, and the Vicar gave an address on "The Ascension."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—In the Kippax district last month the percentage of attendance at the schools was 91·56 against 91·69 for April last year. The figures for the Kippax schools were;—Boys' School, 94·44 against 93·69; Girls' School, 91·12 and 90·78; and Infants' School, 87·91 and 89·61.

AN OVERSIGHT.—A motor-cyclist named Harry Prince, of Kippax Mill, Kippax, was fined 10s. and costs at the Leeds Police Court on Tuesday, for not obeying a policeman's signal at the corner of Briggate and Upperhead Row. Instead of going round the constable in taking the corner, he cut across on his wrong side of the road.

PROPERTY SALE.—On Wednesday evening at the Commercial Hotel, Kippax, Messrs Oliver, Appleton, and Kitchen offered for sale a freehold shop and house, and a through house. No. 2 and 4, Robinson Lane, Kippax, in the occupation of Mr G. W. Walker and his sub-lenant. The net annual rental of the premises is £26. and the lot was sold for £285. Messrs Bulmer, Lawson, and Ward were the solicitors.

KIPPAX LEADING.—The West Riding Cycling League are offering a trophy for their attendance competition, which the club has held for one year, and the conditions being the attendance of club members at Boston Spa and Selby during the season. The first month's attendances are:—Kippax Road C.C., Boston Spa 7, Selby 25, total 32; Castleford Wheelers 3, 22, 25; Stanley Wheelers 12, 7, 19; Alverthorpe C.C. 9, 2, 11; York Clifton C.C. 7, 3, 10.

SIR J. C. RICKETT, M.P.—On Sunday afternoon Sir Joseph Compton Rickett, M.P., was the principal speaker at the Lady Lane Central Mission, Leeds. He suggested a number of methods which could be used for church parlours to be thrown open to young people of both sexes, for music and entertainment. Was it not desirable, he asked, to provide an antidote to what could often attract evil. People needed amusement as well as recreation. God knew that people needed something of a light, easy, and amusing character in their lives as well as serious. Some people got gouty in their goodness, and were always denying themselves things until at last they lost their good temper.

ANNIVERSARY.—The Primitive Sunday School anniversary was celebrated on Sunday, when Mr Jas. Blackburn was the preacher morning and evening. The children's service in the afternoon attracted a large congregation, and special hymns were sung, under the direction of Mr Norman Wheatley, by the teachers and scholars, assisted by the following instrumentalists, viz., Mr G. Firth (organiste), Mr J. Prince, Mr F. Cripwell, Miss Ida Cripwell, Mr Haydn Hollyhead, Mr J. Wright, Mr P. Gummerson, and Mr H. Nelson (violinists), and Mr A. Denton (cornet). The children's choir also rendered, and did their parts well, and credit was due to Mr W. Cripwell, Mr H. Hobson, and Miss Edith Mosby, who had trained them. Mr J. E. Ogden, of Shepherdson Hall, presided. On Monday the teachers and scholars sang their hymns at various places in the village. The children's tea followed the parade, and was held in the schoolroom, which was well filled. The tea was attended, was served by Mrs J. Beckerdike, Mrs Beeston, Miss Jones, Mrs A. Firth, Mrs A. Denton, Mrs J. Willman, Miss Gertie Beeston, and Miss Evelyn Beeston. Subsequently the children marched to Kippax Park (by permission of Mr J. D. Bland, J.P.), the Kippax Old Band heading the procession. Games and amusements were conducted in the evening by the teachers, and dancing to music supplied by the band was engaged in by the young men and women. The collections, which were taken on the Sunday and the proceeds from the tea, were considered satisfactory.

LEDSHAM

At Ledsham School the percentage of attendance last month was 81·25 against 89·09.

MICKLEFIELD.

THE SCHOOLS.—The number of children on the school registers on Monday was 412. In the mixed department last month the percentage of attendance was 93·22 against 93·65 in April last year, and in the infants' department 90·24 against 91·20.

METHLEY

HOMING.—Six members of Methley Homing Society sent 50 birds to take part in the race from Rugby (94 miles) on Saturday. Results:—Wright 1,220, Simpson 1,207 and 1,187, Gallagher and Wilkinson 1,137 and 1,117, Armitage 1,063.

RECTOR'S ADDRESS.—The Rev. H. Armstrong Hall, of Methley, in an address at Richmond, referred to the falling off in the attendances at the ring services in schools, and asked if something could not be done to make those teachings more bright and attractive. Concluding, he said they lived in solemn times. New forces, political, social, and industrial, were continually arising and coming into play. All over the world men were alarmed. The troubles of Ireland, the disestablishment of the Church in Wales, the new Socialist democracy, the lower tone, as they thought, of political life, the thinly veiled immorality of much modern literature, the growing impatience at the restraint of old fashions and custom—that was what they saw. But he implored them to put their faith and trust in the Lord God Omnipotent at such a time, and rely upon Him to guide them aright and bring them to the eternal life.

OULTON

SCOUTS' CAMP.—A contingent of the South-East District of the Leeds Boy Scouts' Association held a district week-end camp at Oulton in the Vicarage grounds, under the charge of Divisional Scoutmaster Brining. On Sunday morning the lads attended St. John's Church, where the service was conducted by the Chaplain of the Oulton Troop of Boy Scouts, the Rev. H. T. Pattinson. On the afternoon a drumhead service was held in the vicarage grounds, and it was attended by a large number of the general public.

FATALITY.—Edward Fleming (28), a colliery bye-workman, living in lodgings at Oulton, has lost his life under circumstances which seem to point to suicide. About seven o'clock on Wednesday evening he left his lodgings in Bentley Square, Oulton, along with Michael Joyce, a youth of nineteen, and they walked as far as Swillington Bridge. On the way Fleming asked Joyce to exchange caps, and this was done. Arriving at the bridge Joyce sat down upon the low stone wall at the side of the road, while Fleming wandered down the river bank. A little later, upon looking round, Joyce saw his companion in the water. He shouted to him "Teddy," and Fleming replied "Good-bye, Joyce." Becoming alarmed Joyce appealed for help to some men who were passing, but when the party reached the bank Fleming was sinking. The police at Oulton were informed of the occurrence, and P.C.'s Coldwell and Abbott dragged the river until about 10.55 p.m., when the body was recovered. It appears that the deceased had complained during the last three or four weeks of severe pains in the head, both to his landlady and to his companions, but he had not been attended medically. An inquest was held at Oulton on Friday.

STOURTON

STREET BETTING.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday, George Pitts, bookmaker, of Stourton, was charged with street betting. Sergeant Mathews stated that about 12.10 p.m. on Thursday, May 14th, he watched the prisoner from a place of concealment, along with P.C. Sowray, until 12.45 p.m. During that time they saw various men go up to him and hand him slips. At 12.50 witness went up to him and asked him to go to the station, where he was charged. He was found to possess a number of slips relating to shilling and sixpenny bets up to the value of 15s. Some of the bets related to horses running in the Newmarket race. He also had a sovereign, £1 5s. in silver, and 14s. 8½d. in copper. Pitts said that he had been off work owing to a broken leg and was taking the slips for a friend. In imposing a fine of £5 and costs, the Chairman said he thought it quite clear that they were exposed to gambling.

SWILLINGTON

Swillington Common School had the best attendance of the schools in Kippax district last month, the percentage being 96·29, while at Swillington Parochial the figures were 90·69.

WOODLESFORD

HOMING.—On Saturday nine members of Woodlesford Homing Society sent 64 birds to take part in the race from Rugby. Results:—P. Higgins 1,211, T. W. Nettleton 1,198, 1,192, Hall and Thompson 1,189, Hall and Hall 1,169, H. Dickinson 1,157, A. Jackson 1,142, A. Bayliss 1,126, J. Nixbould 1,121, A. Jackson 1,105.

WHITKIRK

THE SQUIRE OF TEMPLENEWSAM.—The Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., seconded the motion for the rejection of the Welsh Disestablishment Bill in the House of Commons on Monday. The Western Mail and South Wales" (Liberal) says:—The speech in which Mr Hume Williams moved the Bill's rejection was manifestly too long, yet the last half hour was much the best, and of this effort, as Mr Wood's, which followed, one may say without reservation it presented the Church case with dignity and earnestness. Lord Halifax, who from the Peers' Gallery listened to his son must have felt, as the House felt, that the Church was well represented by these two laymen, and many points made by Mr Wood were cheered in all quarters. "The Church will be free," he said, "and under the same in doctrine and discipline—whatever laws you pass." It was a fine declaration of the spiritual supremacy of a spiritual communion—the very quintessence of the doctrine preached by Dr. Dale and Mr Silvester Horne. "Religion is a force that is underpinning society," was another loudly applauded sentence.

THE BISHOP OF NEW GUINEA.—The Bishop of New Guinea, who is at present on a visit in England, appealing for help in the work of evangelising the heathen Papuans, preached at Kirkstall Parish Church on Sunday morning. Speaking of the people of the Church work in New Guinea, he said the inhabitants had been cannibals and savages, and until the end of the last century no one ever went near them to tell them of Christ. Now all was brighter day was dawning, indeed, had already dawned, for them. The Church was being set up, and had become a spiritual force in the island. Cannibalism was totally dead, and it was not now a factor in their lives. Some people who take a superficial view said it would be better if the heathen were left alone in their benighted, but those who knew what heathenism really was could not possibly say that it would be better if they were left alone. No one could get on well without Christ. His Lordship mentioned that the Mission maintained a staff of 25 European and 45 native workers, 300 children as boarders, schools for 1,400 children, and 32 mission stations actively influencing the native. The missionaries, he said, were perfectly happy in their work. More money, however, was needed to carry it on. The Bishop said he would be glad to preach again in the afternoon, and on Sunday night preached at Bramley Parish Church. The Committee concerned in the Mission are appealing for £2,000 to enable the Bishop to open new stations and accept new workers.

MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE.—On Wednesday at a meeting of Leeds Parks Committee a resolution was passed authorising the Parks Superintendent (Mr A. J. Alsop), in conjunction with Dr. Mackenzie, of Leeds, a golf architect with a wide reputation, to prepare plans and estimates of cost for the provision of a municipal golf course on land situated at Roundhay, known as North Hill Fields. The Committee have been advised that at a comparatively small cost, probably less than £200, the tract of land embraced under the above term, with the woods and quarries adjoining, will form a golf course possessing quite remarkable properties.

OULTON DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

NURSING AT TEMPLENEWSAM AND WOODLESFORD.

The monthly meeting of the Oulton Education Committee was held at the Y.M.C.A. Buildings, Albion Place, Leeds, on Tuesday night—Mr G. M. Abbey presiding. The other members present were Mr S. H. Young, Mr H. E. Catton, Mr J. P. Allison, Mr T. H. Myton, Mr J. H. Tomlinson, and Mr B. W. Higgins, with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell).

A letter was read from the Clerk to the West Riding Education Committee stating that the plans for the extension of the Woodlesford School had been approved, so that the new accommodation would provide for 381 children in the mixed department and 200 in the infants. The accommodation, said the Clerk, had gone up from 400 to 581.

Mr Taylor, an assistant teacher at the Woodlesford School, wrote tendering his resignation to take place at the end of the present month. The resignation was accepted.

The Clerk reported that so far three had been seven applicants for the post.

It was decided that three of the selected applicants should be asked to attend before a committee of the Woodlesford members.

With regard to the combined nursing scheme, the Clerk said he had received anything further from the ladies at Whitkirk, and he could not say at what decision they had arrived. Mrs Lowther, of Swillington, had written stating that she had considered how she might be of use in the Woodlesford district, providing they could come to terms.

Mr Myton: According to the medical officer to the Hunslet Rural District Council they are not qualified.

The Clerk: Mrs Lowther had said that the remarks of the doctor were not as reported. Mr Powell added that it was a technical point which would have to be settled. With regard to the ladies at Whitkirk, they did not seem to want the County Council to step in.

Mr Catton: I think the ladies do not agree I suppose they will go on with their work, and the County Council will appoint a nurse for the children.

It was decided that the different parties be written to.

The attendance returns were considered highly satisfactory, especially with regard to the infants' departments in the district. One member suggested that the weather might, in a degree, have been responsible for it. The percentage for the whole district for the month of April was 90.62 as compared with 89.07 in the same period of last year. Oulton St. John's (mixed department) had the highest percentage in the district, being 94.14. The infants' department was next highest with 92.73. The figures for the respective schools were as follows:—Woodlesford Council (mixed), 91.30; Woodlesford Council (infants), 87.59; Halton Council (mixed), 89.53; Halton Council (infants), 84.6; and Colton Council (mixed), 90.76.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GRAMAPHONE NUISANCE AT COLTON AND ELSEWHERE.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—You are incorrect in stating that there is no way of suppressing the gramaphone nuisance, as your correspondent states, makes the walk to Colton and Templenewsam Park hideous to visitors, however it may appear to the natives.

There are two remedies. One is to seek an injunction in the Law Courts, and the other is for villagers and visitors to petition the landlord to remove the offenders. That has been done before in the case of those who delight in making themselves obnoxious to villagers and visitors alike.

In travelling about I find that the easy payment system has caused a multiplication of these nuisances, and the poor deluded owners often throw wide their doors, so that passers-by may know they are the proud possessors of a gramaphone. But passers-by do not admire; they silently curse, and as they behold the children on the steps, often say to themselves "The money would be better spent on clothes for the children, and in rending (a larger house, so that the members of the household could at least sleep under modest and healthy conditions."—Yours truly,

HAREHILLS.

May 20th, 1914.

The percentage of attendance at Aberford School last month was 93.10 against 86.69 for the corresponding month of last year.

At Saxton School the percentage of attendance last month was 93.13 against 86.30 in April last year, and at Barkston 94.74 against 91.07.

Mr J. Brabbs, assistant gas manager to the Selby Urban Council, has been appointed gas manager to the Bollington Gasworks, near Macclesfield, at £200 per annum.

Playing with Mr H. B. Snell on Saturday at Adel, Mr Edward Platts, the hon. secretary of the Headingley Golf Club, did the third hole (150 yards) in one stroke.

Miss Nellie Stubbs (Saxton) was successful at the recent examination in obtaining the diploma of Associate of the London College of Music in pianoforte playing.

The Rev. H. B. Greeves, vicar of Bromsdale with Fenwall, in the Yorkshire Dales, owing to of the veteran vicar of Wistow (the Rev. Henry Greeves) has been offered, and has accepted, the living of Denaby Main.

Scholes School, which has been closed owing to an outbreak of scarlet fever, had the second best attendance in Garforth district during last month. The percentage was 96.77 as compared with 86.84 in April last year.

RAILWAYMAN'S RETIREMENT.—After forty-two years' service with the North-Eastern Railway Company, at Selby, Mr William Hanley, of Barlby, is retiring this week on pension. Mr Hanley, who is sixty-six years old, is one of the original members of the local branch of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants.

SELBY FIRM WIN.—Lord Justices Buckley and Kennedy and Mr Justice Scrutton in the Court of Appeal on Saturday delivered judgment in the plaintiffs' favour in the action of Produce Brokers Co., Ltd., v. Olympia Oil and Cake Co., Ltd., of Selby, against a judgment of Mr Justice Pickford sitting without a jury. There was a counterclaim for damages for alleged wrongful dismissal. The question now in dispute was whether or not there was a concluded contract between them respecting a large cargo of soya beans. The Court without calling on counsel for the respondents, held that Mr Justice Pickford was right, and that there was no concluded contract. The appeal was dismissed with costs.

At Barwick School last month the percentage of attendance was 86.62 against 90.68 for April, 1913.

BROKEN GLASS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Walter Fields, a greengrocer, of Leeds, was summoned for throwing broken glass upon the highway at Kiddal on Sunday, May 10th. P.C. Simpson said there were many cyclists about at the time, as it was York Military Sunday. The defendant had been selling aerated waters. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

CRICKET.—On Saturday afternoon Boston Spa and Roundhay had a match, and the former won by six runs. Scores:—Boston Spa—Preston 6, Hartley 2, Smith 0, Glennie 40, Milner 8, Dearlove 1, Fleming 16, Allison 0, Wilkinson 0, Carlisle (not out) 2, Mountain 0, extras 15; total, 90. Roundhay—Hanmore 12, Bentley 3, Umpleby 32, Skirrow 0, Bowman 0, Craven 14, Watson 16, Brown 1, France 0, Oliver 1, Blenkinsop (not out) 0, extras 8; total, 84. On Saturday Boston Spa play Harrogate Nomads.

NATIONAL RESERVE UNITS.—In the House of Commons on Tuesday Mr Lane Fox asked the Secretary for War whether he was aware that a large number of former members of the Regular and Territorial Royal Army Medical Corps units have joined the National Reserve and had signed on either for general service or for home defence, and would the Army Council recognise them as a Royal Army Medical Corps unit entitled to wear the Geneva Cross under the Geneva Convention.—Mr Tennant: It is not the policy of the Army Council to recognise any medical or other unit in the National Reserve.

A BARWICK ACTRESS.—Perhaps some Leeds people have been in a dilemma over Miss Dorothy Hick, who has given such a brilliant performance as Lawyer in "The Question of Property," for, in truth, the make-up has been so excellent as to hide entirely the identity of the lady (says the "Evening Post"). She is not the pretty daughter of Mr Richard Hick, of Barwick-in-Elmet, who is exceedingly well-known in Yorkshire. Educated at the Leeds Girls' High School, Miss Hick has always had a leaning towards the stage, and it will be readily recalled, she came on tour with Mr Jame's Welch in "When Knights were Bold." She has been with the Manchester Gaiety Company quite little time now, and has appeared with them at the Court Theatre in London last year, where she played in "Prunella." Naturally she is some what nervous when appearing in her native town, but no one can deny that in the curtain-raiser and in "The Shadow" she has given evidence of possessing histrionic abilities which place her in the forefront of the younger actresses.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE.—The annual general meeting of the Bramham Moor Habitation of the Primrose League was held in the Trustees' Hall, Boston Spa, on Monday evening, but was only very poorly attended. Mr R. S. Markingdale, Ruling Councillor, presided. An expression of sympathy was passed with Mrs Wadeson, Bramham one of the wardens, in her recent illness and that of her husband, the Rev. E. G. Wadeson.—A vote of thanks was passed to Miss Hewitson for her past excellent services.—Mr M. Imeson read the annual report and the balance sheet, which showed a credit balance of £5 15s. 5d. against £8 13s. 8d. a year ago.—Mr Markingdale was re-elected Ruling Councillor, and Mrs Edmondson was appointed treasurer and secretary pro tem.—The members of the Executive Council and the wardens were all re-elected. The former are Miss Mildmay, Mrs E. Lane Fox, Mr Markingdale, Mrs Gosse, Mr Ingham, Mr Topham, Mr J. W. Adkin, Mr W. W. Bickerdike, and Mr Elvidge; and the wardens are Mrs Hafton, Mr Preston, Miss Johnson, Miss Bickerdike, Mr Bluett (Boston Spa), Mrs Edmondson (Thorparch), Mrs Wadeson, Mrs Lipscomb, Mr Walker, and Mr Harland (Bramham), Mr Kirby, Mr Wood, and Mr C. Carr (Clifford), and Mr A. Lister (Walton).

FOOTBALL.—The annual general meeting of the Sherburn-in-Elmet A.F.C. Club was held on Monday evening at the Oddfellows Arms—Mr W. A. Osborn presiding, and there was an excellent attendance. The club, which was only formed last September, has had a splendid season, both from a playing and financial point of view, there being a good balance to the club's credit at the bank. The following officials were elected for next season:—Hon. treasurer, Mr Allan Hodgson; hon. secretaries, Messrs R. Grice and H. Hodgson; captain, Mr W. Shepherd; vice-captain, Mr J. Cook. Cromack. A strong committee was formed of non-playing members, viz., Messrs R. Adamson, J. Rawnsley, J. Wilson, A. Hayes, P. Townend, J. Cromack, and J. Bramley. It was decided, in the event of the Barkston Ash Association putting the Junior Cup up for competition during the next season, that the club join the League, and there is every reason likely that the Templenewsam and Barkston Ash Association Cup Competitions will be joined. The hon. secretary was instructed to write and thank Mr G. Wheldrick for his kindness in allowing the use of his field, and this gentleman is to be asked to accept the presidency of the club. The club are anxious to encourage local lads, and it was decided that the entrance fee for those under 19 should be a nominal one.

MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Painful Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Every advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and who are unable to attend, have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday,

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

BARKSTON ASH COMPETITION.

A number of clubs competing in the Barkston Ash Competition are experiencing a difficulty in getting young players, but are they not themselves to blame? The clubs, as a whole, have persistently ignored the claims of the village boys to consideration, and, as there are few attraction grounds in the district where the youngsters may learn to play the game, their out-door interests have gone in other directions. What a good batting display, registering the 160 runs, Barkston made towards this K. Ward could have done! If, Wheatley 14, and G. Wiggles-worth 10. The bowling honours of the match went to T. Ballance, who captured six wickets for 18 runs, and he got valuable assistance from H. Gascoigne (5 for 13) and G. Reed (2 for 15). Harold Prime and Sidney Glover opened the Garforth innings, and they batted splendidly, delying the efforts of the five Preston bowlers to dislodge them. Prime made 54 and Glover 23, and there were 9 extras. If Garforth could keep up this form they would cause the other clubs some uneasiness.

Scarcroft had-risen well in the picture on Saturday, and made a fine exhibition, no fewer than seven claimed double figures. Their opponents were Barwick, who were completely outplayed, but the defeat will in nowise dishearten the losers, who are an excellent sporting team. Seacroft rattled up the huge score of 197, and G. Stead compiled 49. D. Burton 42, Pickersgill 28, H. Toft 26, F. Taylor 15, Thompson 12, and Hunter 10. For Barwick the best bowler was B. Robshaw, whose four wickets cost 55, while G. Bowes had 2 for 38 and W. Hartley 2 for 42. Barwick's innings produced 130, and Fred Lamb contributed 36 and Hartley 11. Stead, who captured 4 wickets for 8 runs, secured them all in the last over, and he performed the "hat trick." S. Simpson obtained 2 wickets for 8 runs, C. Johnson 2 for 10, and Pickersgill 2 for 23.

Crossgates gave a wretched account of themselves at Shadwell, and the boosters must be congratulated on winning when the outlook was black enough against them. Shadwell, it must be confessed, did not give an inspiring batting display, and the score 96 was quite unworthy of them. Heaton was the principal scorer with nine. Yates bowled with telling effect, as his record of six wickets for 11 runs shows, and Goodall had three for 17. The prospect of an easy victory for Crossgates was very bright, indeed, but they simply collapsed before the attack of Heaton and H. Smith, and were all out for 31. Smith secured four wickets for six runs and Heaton 5 for 11 runs.

Whitkirk have begun the season well, and one pleasing feature is the fine batting of some of the members. Arthur Shepherd, who did not do himself justice last season, compiled 73 (not out)—the highest score on Saturday in the League—and he did not give a chance until he had put on fifty. Milford, one of the most dependable batsmen, helped himself to 38 off the Collingham bowling, and Rombold scored 23, and Taylor and Pawson to each. The total was 171. G. Foster secured 4 wickets for 40, Gibson 3 for 62, and Newsome 2 for 17. Collingham made a disastrous opening, and the first five chosen side were among them Gibson (17), Smithson (10), Dawson (10), A. Dalby (12), and M. Dalby (0 not out) put a better complexion on the game, but they fizzled out badly, only 100 runs being added their opponents. Pawson was the best of the home trundlers, capturing 4 wickets for 17, and Wainwright secured 3 for 19, and J. Shepherd 2 for 19. The batting of the Whitkirk side shows a very satisfactory advance.

Halton Wes. and Crossgates Wes.—keen rivels—had an excellent match on the Halton ground, and the honours went to the homesters. Crossgates had first knse of the wickets, and they put together the respectable total of 85. Ted Clough and P. Coultas batted well for their scores of 25 and 19 respectively, and Withy made a very useful contribution of 13. Halton tried four bowlers, and G. Bell's figures were the best—5 wickets for 27. C. Batty got two wickets for 14, and Powell had 2 for 17. The feature of the Halton innings was the admirable display of Milburn, who had 38 (not out) to his credit, and he received substantial support from Stephens (18) and Muirland (12). Halton won by four wickets. In the bowling department Clough was the most useful man on his side, obtaining four wickets for 25 runs.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Bramham got away well in division 1, and their victory over Tadcaster A was a very creditable performance. The Calcarians, who are a good team, were dismissed for 29 (Kettlewell 11), and Bramham replied with 42 for the loss of two wickets (Dawson 26 and Cave 10). Dawson bowled finely, too, for he had 7 wickets for 18, and Shaw had 3 for 18.—Ulleskelf are forging ahead in division 2, and Saxton A by two runs. The winners rattled up 102 (H. Haigh and F. Nicholson 20 each, A. Sunter and S. Garth 14 each, Beard 13, and Longden 11), and Garth replied with 100 for 9. Pickersgill 38, Howitt 13, and F. Hancock 12).—For Halton H. Dobson secured five wickets for 22 and Longden 4 for 30, and for Garforth F. Hancock had 3 wickets for 22, Hewitt 2 for 16, Stead 2 for 16, and W. Hancock 2 for 34).—Micklefield A were defeated by Great Preston A by four wickets. The match was at Micklefield, and the home-sters made 76 (Dyson 19). Oldham had five of their wickets for 19 and G. Varley 3 for 10. Preston scored 71 for a loss of six wickets, and J. Cooper contributed 30 (not out). G. Varley 13, and Hutchinson 11. A. Moakes, with 3 wickets for 16 runs, was the pick of the home bowlers.

In division 3 Crossgates A came a cropper before Garforth Westeyans, the match being notable for the fine bowling on both sides. Crossgates were sent back for 23, and H. Ward captured five of their wickets for 10, and F. Lewis 4 for 11. The Wesleyans had not a difficult task set them, but they lost seven wickets before they completed it, H. Linley having five wickets for five runs.—Crossgates Wes. A easily accounted for Halton Wes. A at Old Manston. The visitors made 45, and J. Selman claimed 9 of their wickets for 20 runs. Crossgates for a loss of four wickets, registered 47 (C. Holliday 16 not out and A. Brook 17 not out). Taylor's two wickets cost 12 and H. Dewhirst's two 13.—Swillington and Colton lost to Whitkirk A by six wickets. The match was at Colton, and the homesters scored 52 (A. Dobson 11, J. H. Wainwright 10, and T. Barraclough 10, not out). R. H. Bruce took five wickets for 20 runs. Halton are a long way ahead of their wickets for 21, and W. Cuttle two for 14. For a loss of 4 wickets Whitkirk put on 53 (W. Cuttle 18 and C. Nowell 19).

HEPWORTH CUP—MIDDLETON PARK'S WIN.

Middleton Park were opposed to Burmantofts in the Hepworth Cup Competition, and the Park team had a rather easy win. Burmantofts scored 96, but they were weak in bowling, and their opponents responded with 97 for four wickets. W. Barraclough was top scorer of the match with 45, S. Goldthorpe made 22 and W. Clay 21.

ALLERTON BYWATER'S BIG SCORE.

At Allerton Bywater the homesters played Oulton in the Hepworth Cup competition, and the Allertonians gave a brave batting display. It is rarely that a local team scores 275—it is more in the county team's line—but that is what Allerton did, and some big individual scores were made. Nicholls registered 79, Allen 77, B. Atkinson 24, Carter 18, Buxton 17, and Bert. Wall 16. Walker captured seven wickets for 56 runs. Oulton's response was splendid, for they put together 95 for a loss of three wickets, P. N. Butler scored 38 before he was hurt and had to retire, and Percy Higgins made 16 and H. J. Butler 11. The match was not completed, and Oulton forfeit it, owing to their inability to again visit Allerton Bywater.

ROTHWELL AND DISTRICT LEAGUE.

Rothwell first eleven had their first victory of the season on Saturday, when they entertained the Stanley Church team. The visitors, who batted first, had to be content with a modest 49, which was soon passed by Rothwell, who scored 51 at the expense of three wickets only. Cawthorn was top scorer for Stanley with 14, and C. Butterfield was second with 11. Throughout the innings Rothwell put on only two bowlers, H. Banks and W. Bedford, and the former captured four wickets for thirteen runs, and Bedford had five for thirty-two. Rothwell opened the batting for the second time, and at the fall of the third wicket was still batting merrily, having obtained 32 runs. Stanley tried six bowlers, J. Balmer taking one wicket for one run, and J. Nolan one for five.

Carlton and Woodlesford had an interesting meeting, and the Woodlesfordians had to admit defeat by five wickets. They compiled 97, of which Harrison had 21, Wilkinson 12, and Homer 11. Carlton's score was by far the five wickets, L. Brown making 23 (not out), and W Brown and Illingworth 11 each. Carlton A also defeated Woodlesford A, who were got rid of at home for 79, Carlton, for the loss of 3 wickets, got the winning 15.—Lack of time prevented Allerton United from being beaten by Outwood Friends, who registered 195 for 9 wickets and declared. Allerton had four eighter wickets to fall when time was called, so the game was drawn.

Rothwell second team were at Stanley, where they upset the calculations of the homesters, winning by twenty-four runs. Rothwell batted first and the innings realized 97. W. Nelson was top scorer with 43. Kirkham captured 6 wickets for nine, and Mr. Matthewson took four for 32. Stanley could only reach the seventy-three mark, C. Poole obtaining 22, and L. Hargreaves knocked up 11. For Rothwell F. Stringer took seven wickets for 24.

Oulton A played Altofts A at Oulton. The homester-' efforts only realised twenty-three, Bailey being the highest scorer for the side with nine runs. Altofts safely passed the homesters' score at the fall of the second wicket.

MONK FRYSTON PARK V. LEDSTON HALL.

On Saturday afternoon Monk Fryston Park and Ledston Hall met at Ledsham, and the homesters won. Monk Fryston scored 51, and Pickering contributed 15, while Ledston Hall registered 68, of which G. Brown had 14 (not out) and H. Durant 13.

ELROTTS WIN EASILY.

On Saturday afternoon Elrotts were at home to Leeds Grosvenor, and the visitors sustained a crushing defeat. The homesters were in great batting form, and they registered no fewer than 187, and towards this Pickersgill made 50. Arrowsmith 34, E. Turner 23, Silverside 22, Hudson 15, Graydon 14, and Midgley 13. The two bowlers in the match were Cook for 38, and Turner captured six wickets for 13 runs.

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS.

By MRS. L. T. MEADE

Author of "The Orchid Room," "The Medicine Lady," "From the Hand of the Hunter," "His Mascot," "Little Wife Hester," &c.

CHAPTER XIV

Notwithstanding all Miss Ransome's words, she failed in her object. Paul Colthurst could not see the possibility of leaving his house and home, of taking his wife, his son, and his wife's daughter away with him on the following morning. The thing might be done later, but not at once. It was impossible. As he laid his head on his pillow he said to himself:

"The old lady is nervous, but the very worst that can happen is a visit from Thomas Oswald. I shall soon put Thomas Oswald to the right about face. He cannot guess the real secret, and as to the other, we will be careful to allow him no voice in the matter."

So Colthurst slept soundly, and it was, after all, poor Miss Ransome who lay awake thinking many and anxious thoughts, and wondering if that happiness might soon be theirs to have and to keep. Like many another woman, she felt certain that if her advice were only taken things would come right; also, like many another woman, she had to submit to the obstinacy of a man who could not see that he was in the slightest danger.

The next day dawned brilliantly over the world. Miss Patricia was down in good time to breakfast. During the meal the young people suggested several plans for enjoying themselves. They might go for a picnic; but there might be for a ride; they might motor; or they might go to a distant part of the country. They might take Miss Ransome and show her some of the most lovely parts of Surrey; or they might stay at home, and spend long hours in the boat, or sit together under the shade of the trees. Their love was new to them just then, and they found it all sufficient to their happiness to be together. Each plan that was suggested which meant the departure of the Colthursts to a distant part of the country on any pretext whatsoever was hailed with delight by Miss Patricia, who, try as she would, she saw after a time that they were determined to spend the day quietly at Copthorp Grange.

"For my part," said Mrs. Colthurst, "I rich relations. My dear Paul, you have not consider it far and away too hot to spend the day in the open air. Talk of picnics," continued the good woman, "I positively hate them. When one can have a well-cooked nicely cooked and properly served on one's own table, why take it away in baskets to eat and drink uncomfortably under the shade of trees, with gnawings running about it, and spiders, and all drinks, what I should like best would be some sorts of other abominations. Then I am sure always so frightfully tortgented by midges. They bite me so unmercifully. No, I am very partial to picnics, but, of course, if the young people wish it——"

"No, mother, we'd rather stay at home," said Pamela.

"Then this is how we'll occupy our day," said Mrs. Colthurst, looking at her watch. "You and I, Miss Ransome, will go round the gardens after I have seen my housekeeper and given her directions for the day's work. We will both rise early, and rest quietly in our rooms afterwards. You would like a novel? You shall have several new ones from the library room. We can have tea out of doors, and after tea we will take a motor drive together. What do you say to that?"

"It will be heavenly," said Miss Patricia. She knew, however, as she uttered the words, that there would in all probability be the invasion of a serpent into her Paradise. As to Colthurst, he avoided Miss Ransome that morning. He was mainly engaged over various matters in connection with the estate, and although he did not wish to be rude to her, the old lady he was not going to worry himself listening to what he considered the serious affairs of an elderly woman.

Miss Ransome went up to her room, and the morning passed quietly away. Lunch was on the table when Thomas Oswald put in an appearance. Thomas Oswald was really in as high spirits as Peter or Pamela. The gods seemed to be favouring him. The sun shone brightly on his path, and then, to make everything agreeable, and, as it were, just the right moment, Miss Ransome, the young Peter Colthurst crossing the lawn just as he was approaching the house. Thomas, who fully intended the Colthurst family to drive him back to the railway station, had walked to the Grange. When he saw Peter he at once stopped at once, took out his handkerchief, and mopped his forehead.

"Now, this is a pleasant meeting," he said. "How little we do we do, my dear young sir?"

Peter came forward, some astonishment on his face.

"I see I must reintroduce myself," said Thomas. "My name is Thomas Oswald. You met me the other day at Mrs. Leek's. You forget? Young man, I didn't give you credit for possessing such a very short memory."

"Of course, I remember quite well now," said Peter, his eyes brightening. "You were the gentleman who was so very kind as to fetch me Miss Lennox's parasol. I thought I knew you when I saw you coming up the avenue, but was not sure at first."

"Well, I am the gentleman—yes, I am the gentleman."

"Can I do anything for you, sir?" said Peter, who was hungry, and anxious to join the rest of his party at lunch.

"You can do a vast deal, my boy," Thomas Oswald slipped his hot hand inside the young man's arm. Peter felt a sensation of annoyance. He tried to shake off the hand, but the hand would not remove itself. "I must explain things," he said. "Your name is Peter Colthurst?"

"Yes," said Peter.

"And you are engaged to that most lovely girl, Miss Pamela Lennox?"

"It is my happiness," said Peter, "to be able to say yes."

"My boy, I congratulate you. You are, of course, the son of Paul Colthurst?"

"Of course," said Peter.

"Well, then, my boy"—here he gripped the young man's arm still more tenaciously—"you see in me a relation—yes, a relation."

"Excuse me," said Peter.

"My son, it is the case. You may be astonished, but it is the case. I am your father's cousin—far removed, it is true; but still, in his veins and mine the same blood flows. I come from South Africa, and whereas he is rich, I am poor; but, to judge from your face, young Peter Colthurst, you are the last sort of person to turn against a man because he is down on his luck."

"For my part I rather like poverty," said Peter. "I hadn't any idea you were a relation, Mr.—Mr.——"

"Oswald, my son, Oswald—Mr. Thomas Oswald. Now, I have come here to have a chat with your good father. Can I see him?"

"Of course you can, Mr. Oswald; and you are a relation—really a relation?"

"Peter, my boy, if your father, Paul Colthurst, turns me out of his house because I am not a relation, I will give you leave to horsewhip me—there. Now take me into your father's presence. I am hot and tired, and more hungry for my lunch than you are, young man. Come, Peter, my dear boy—my handsome lad—take me into your father's presence."

Colthurst was standing by the sideboard cutting some very delicate slices of pressed beef when Peter entered, accompanied by Thomas Oswald.

"Father," said the young man. "I am so astonished, more astonished than you can imagine, but a relation of ours from South Africa has just come, and I have brought him in to have some lunch with us."

Miss Patricia's eyes flashed an angry fire. Mrs. Colthurst turned her soft face and mild countenance, interrogative, to the visitor. Pamela said, in an excited voice: "Why, surely we saw you yesterday!" And Paul, without uttering a word, bowed, held out his hand.

"Thanks, Paul," said Thomas; "then you acknowledge me!"

"You are my distant cousin," said Colthurst.

"I know I am not welcome, but I mean no harm. It's rather hard for a poor relation to be so shabbily received by his rich relatives; but I bear no malice. Ah! Miss Ransome—dear Miss Ransome—my old, true friend! Why, you do not forget me. Isn't this a stroke of luck! I can't tell you how we miss you at Copthorp Grange. In the absence of the woman, Mrs. Luck; excellent woman—the best of her kind. But—well, you and I, Miss Ransome, know the difference between her meals and the sort that are served up to my cousin, Paul Colthurst."

"I rich relations. My dear Paul, you have not consider it far and away too hot to spend the day in the open air. Talk of picnics," continued the good woman, "I positively hate them. When one can have a well-cooked nicely cooked and properly served on one's own table, why take it away in baskets to eat and drink uncomfortably under the shade of trees, with gnawings running about it, and spiders, and all drinks, what I should like best would be some sorts of other abominations. Then I am sure always so frightfully tortgented by midges. They bite me so unmercifully. No, I am very partial to picnics, but, of course, if the young people wish it——"

"Thomas was not particular as to his style of eating. In notwithstanding the fact that he gulped his food. Pamela shrank a little away from him, while Patricia struggled with her feelings. Thomas Oswald's self-control, Patricia was, alas! accustomed to the way in which people ate their food. Thomas Oswald's sparkling, foaming ale, he held it up and pointed to it in the direction of Mrs. Colthurst.

"I drink to your good health, fair madam, and to the health of all my cousins at Copthorp Grange."

Mrs. Colthurst bent towards Peter.

"Peter, is he really a cousin of your father's? What a peculiar looking man."

"I suppose he is," whispered Peter, "as father doesn't deny it."

"Come, now," called Thomas. "I don't know many manners, we South Africans have few opportunities of acquiring them, but I've always heard that it was bad form to whisper in the society of others. Talk your little private auspicions about me when you are alone with your stepmother, Cousin Peter."

Peter coloured angrily. He said afterwards that it was with the utmost difficulty he could keep from kicking the man out of the house, but Pamela pushed her chair as near her cousin as she could. Paul Colthurst came and took his seat at the head of the table. Miss Patricia glanced at him; then her heart gave a wild leap of pleasure. He sat least was quiet. He looked as calm, as gentle, as firm and decided as usual. He began to eat his food. Notwithstanding the bottle of ale, he absorbed interest. Thomas drank more and more, talking as he did so more and more loudly, while Peter's manner became more courteous each instant. Suddenly he turned to his wife.

"Dear," he said, "if you have finished, and if Pamela has finished, do not on any account stay. I will take Mr. Oswald into the smoking-room and hand-bye. You, also, Patricia, would like to go."

"I am going too, dad," said Peter.

A minute later the room was cleared of four of the luncheon party.

Thomas looked after them. "Dear, dear!" he said. "I could have done with another helping of that excellent beef. I never get anything of that sort at No. 80, James-street, How they all have fled! I'm a bit rough for them, eh? But you, old chap, you at least recognise me as bone of your bone and flesh of your flesh."

"Just eat as much as ever you wish, Oswald," said Colthurst, in his most gentle tone. "Afterwards, we will smoke in my study."

"Then I will have some more roast beef," said Oswald. "Your pressed beef, Colthurst, is so tender and delicious—yes, quite delicious—and another bottle of ale, please, Colthurst. There's nothing, after all, like your English ale. We can't get it in our part of Africa—though we may be willing to export any price in reason. Of course, poor people like myself fair badly in South Africa. Even rich people have to rough it, so you can imagine what we poor ones have to live through."

"Yes, I can quite imagine," said Colthurst. The butler entered the room. "Not at present, Seaman; I will ring when I require you."

The man withdrew softly. Oswald went on eating. As he ate, he looked around him. He examined everything—the style of the room, the furniture, the glass on the table, the beautiful, crested silver, the fineness of the napery; there was nothing that did not meet his observant eye.

"Good—good; the very best," he said to himself.

His second helping of pressed beef was followed by fruit tart, then by a plateful of fresh fruit, which had just been sent in from the garden.

"And now I think I am about full," said Oswald, rising, "and I am ready for my pipe. You don't object to a pipe, do you, Colthurst, old man?"

"Certainly not. Will you come with me to my study?"

"With pleasure. I have come, as of course you know, to have a chat with you, Colthurst."

Colthurst made no answer, but conducted his guest to the study. The study was neatly kept; like every other room at Connop Grange, it showed the influence of a lady's presence. It was carefully dusted, the books were neatly arranged, the pipes laid out in trays, a jar filled with fragrant tobacco. There were different guns and revolvers hattened on the walls. There were trophies of the chase arranged here and there, some large stuffed animals which Colthurst during the wandering part of his life had killed stood about in corners of the room. The floor was covered with a thick Turkey carpet of the very best quality.

The day was a very hot one, and the windows of Colthurst's study stood wide open so as to admit the soft summer breeze. The men found seats by the open window. From there, they had a good view of the garden. In the far distance, Colthurst and his cousin caught a glimpse of a girl's white dress. It passed in and out, in and out amongst the trees. It was distinctly not one moment, and was lost to view the next. Then there came on the breeze the sound of happy laughter, the gay laughter of Pamela herself. Her heart was full of bliss.

Oswald smiled, even in the delicious fragrance of a brand of tobacco which he had not tasted for years, and enjoyed himself. His bitter feelings were, for the time, laid to rest. He was well fed; he was soothed. The tobacco, the charming view, the comfortable seat in which he found himself, all combined to rest him, to make him forget his own very different lot. But suddenly, like a flash, memory returned to him. This house belonged to Paul Colthurst; and the boy who walked with the girl in the white dress was Paul's son, Peter; and because of Peter, and because of this girl, Thomas Oswald was out of all the wealth was cut away from the goodly possession. It was his lot to live at No. 10, James-street when in London, and respectable to live with extreme economy, to deny, if not himself—for it was his nature to deny himself as little as possible—at least to deny all those who belonged to him everything but the barest necessaries of life.

If he was not specially invited to his son, Tom Oswald. Tom, he had to own to himself, was at his best a rough diamond. He had even sometimes to confess to his own heart that Tom was not even a rough diamond; he was not a diamond at all. He was a rough piece of coal, unlaked fire, which would polish him. Nothing would make him anything whatever but the solid good-for-nothing, bonstiful, worthless youth that he was. Nevertheless, he was Tom Oswald's own heir. Although he was not lone part of him and blood, we are scarcely human if we do not take a certain pride in them, and Thomas Oswald would have given a good deal to have his son if by so doing he could also help himself.

Between him and that help lay the marriage of Peter and Pamela. Peter was indeed the sort of young man whom any father would be proud of, but for such a perfect gentleman—so kindly, so sweet in his manner, so obliging to all those with whom he came in contact, and although he possessed extreme good looks and was highly educated, and had every prospect of the world's goods rolling before his young feet, he put on no side at all—not even as much as did Tom Oswald, the father of Pamela, the elder by years.

Yes, Tom Oswald was disappointing, but Laura was not. Laura was a nice little thing. Thomas would have her dressed in pure white on a summer's day. He would like to give her not three or four pence for her amusements, but at least as many pounds. As to his wife, well, she was a good creature, but he was not troubling himself about his wife just then.

He turned and fixed his eyes on Paul Colthurst.

"Well?" said Paul.

"I suppose, Paul," said Thomas, "you know what I have come about."

"I don't know that I do," said Paul.

"I am prepared to explain. A little bird has told me—no matter how—no matter when—that you son Peter—a fine lad, that boy of yours—has engaged himself to the fair young step-daughter, Miss Lennox. That is in accordance with old Walter Colthurst's will. Now, I am not quite fairly treated by you, Paul. I have watched Walter Colthurst from afar. There have been days—rough days, hard days, starvation days on the Veldt—when I have thought of Walter and his wealth, when the memory of it has sweetened all my brought back hope after hope. He died, and I was cut off. It was a mighty cruel shame—yes, I repeat it—here Tom Oswald stood up—it was a beastly shame, it was a rank injustice, and I don't mind saying it to your face, Paul Colthurst."

THACKERAY AND DICKENS.

In "Anthony Trollope," by T. H. Escott (John Lane), there is an interesting reminiscence of Trollope's membership of the Garrick Club:

"The details of facts and figures already given show that, during most of the sixties, Dickens, Thackeray, and Trollope were all members of the Garrick together. "We were, however," to quote Trollope's own words, "two years in it before we exchanged words with each other, and as selfmodest intermingling, as if we had been assembling at Dickens's writing, during which I never saw Thackeray and Dickens engaged in any regular conversation. Either of them entered a room and left the other and only one or two more, perhaps, were its occupants, he seemed to have no business to look for anything he had mislaid, and, if he did not make rather an abrupt exit, stayed only for a few words. I was a newspaper, in which I used to write articles, and I can recall Thackeray making a remark about Dickens's writing, during which I myself saw then it occurred to Armstrong that there was another possible danger which they had so far overlooked. Wolves! As the thought flashed through his brain there came out of the forest a long, sustained howl. Ivan, on hearing it, picked up one of the Cossack's rifles, and blessed the chance which had put those weapons in their possession. Nathalie shivered, and drew a little closer to her lover. Armstrong drove on steadily, but presently cast a glance over his shoulder.

"We shall have to make for Torshok after all," he called out.

In the gathering darkness the eyes of the wolves glowed like rubbed coalers. They turned in his seat, took steady aim, and fired. One of the brutes rolled over, and instantly the others had piled themselves on its carcase, snarling and tearing it to pieces in a moment. This occurred over and over again, so that for the better part of an hour the ravening beasts were kept at the rear of the flying sledge. Then Ivan announced that the good friend, the last cartridge from the three magazine rifles.

"Take my revolver," replied Armstrong. Then: "All serene," he cried; "the post-house is in sight."

The wolves slackened and paused, and finally gave up the chase, for their number had been thinned out considerably. A few minutes after the sledge drew up at the post-house, and the horses was flung open by the man in charge. He looked curiously at the foam-flecked horses.

"You travel quickly, little father," he said to Armstrong.

"The wolves hurried us," replied Armstrong, with a grim laugh. "Can you give us a change of horses, for we have far to go and no time to waste?"

Before the man could answer, two other figures appeared at the door. The first was the officer of the Cossack escort, who had—to safe his own convenience—remained behind at his post. He was followed by one of his men carrying a lantern. They both walked over to the sledge, out of which Nathalie had that moment stepped. Over her own clothes she wore a man's big fur overcoat, which Ivan had insisted she should put on, as the cold was so intense. By the light from the lantern shone full upon her face.

"The prisoner—Alexis Maraloff!" shouted the officer. "What does this mean? and who are you, Ivan Petrovitch?" he added, in the tone of one who has authority.

"Let me answer you, monsieur," said Nathalie, in a sweet, musical voice, which even the officer had to admit to himself could not be a man's, "that I am a woman."

"You are the prisoner who was handed over to my charge," persisted the officer, "whatever your sex may be; and I shall not allow you to proceed."

"Will you show me the written order authorising you to arrest this lady?" demanded Ivan.

"I have the necessary authority," stormed the officer, "for taking Alexis Maraloff——"

"We know nothing about that young man," said Ivan. "If he has escaped you it is not our concern. Nor does it concern us if you have made some foolish mistake. You will detain this lady at your peril. As it is, I may find it necessary to report your conduct to your superiors. Here is my card."

The officer read the name upon it, and gave in, puzzled, baffled, and savage.

Ten days later Armstrong met the officer of Cossacks at a restaurant in St. Petersburg. He greeted him politely.

"But you look worried," said Armstrong. "Are you still puzzled over that—eh—question of sex? If so you can set your mind at ease. The lady, our companion, was married yesterday to Ivan Sternberg. You will see an account of the ceremony in the "Gazeta." The fact that she has married a man may be regarded, I suppose, as sufficient proof that she is a woman?"

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

VI.—TELLS OF THE TREASURE HIDDEN IN THE BOTTOM DRAWER OF AN OLD BUREAU.

"Well," said Patty, "of all the pleasant takedes I ever had this never was one. I was quite came up to what I got on that Tuesday afternoon that I Diamond-dyed Mrs King's parlour curtains.

"When I got to the house I found the dear old soul muddling about with the curtains, trying her hardest to get them ready for me, and her poor old hands were all of a tremble with excitement. So I made her let me bring her armchair out into the washhouse, where she could sit and watch me—and I did everything; talking to her all the while and telling her how many millions of packets of Diamond Dyes are than the one-packet-for-everything dyes, and explaining all about the Diamond Dye Book of Directions which the chemist gives away with each packet.

"Old Mrs King's curtains were a beautiful quality pinky damask, most dreadfully faded, and I suppose with them till I had got them to a lovely deep crimson, and the dear old soul cried with delight over them.

"And then came the surprise. She opened the bottom drawer of the bureau and took out an armful of peach-blossom poplin—the rich lovely quality they used to make sixty years ago. "Twas my wedding dress, dearie," she said; "elegant widths in the skirt; and I've had it picked to pieces for years thinking of getting it dyed black. But now it's yours, and I'll love you to have it. The only thing I ask is that you Diamond-dye it in a light purple and let me come to your house to see you do it."

WETHERBY

A FORMER WETHERBY RESIDENT.—The funeral of the late Mr. Berthold Robert Stansfeld, formerly of Wetherby, revising barrister for Scarborough and Clerk of the Peace for Wakefield, took place at Scarborough Cemetery. The coffin, covered with many wreaths, was borne by Crossgate pall bearers. The body was enclosed in a shell, the outer coffin was one of oak with cast fittings, and bearing the inscription: " Berthold Robert Stansfeld, born April 22nd, 1849; died May 12th, 1914."

LADY CYCLIST'S NARROW ESCAPE.—Mrs Jeffreys, wife of one the metropolitan officers in the Barthy Powder Magazine, near Selby, while passing the Olympia Oil Mills on her bicycle was knocked down by one of the trains, which crashed into the machine. The cycle was badly damaged, but beyond a nasty shock the lady had a miraculous escape.

DISTRICT BREVITIES.

Not in Barkston Ash! The hay harvest has begun in Dyon.

• • •

Have the Garforth, Great Preston, and Halton Homing Societies fizzled out?

• • •

Boating on the river at Wetherby is "booming." A water carnival is to be promoted.

• • •

Will Garforth ever have a market? A beginning has been made with an auction mart.

• • •

In a wood near Wetherby a rook of a uniform grey colour, but not fully fledged, has been shot.

At last meeting of the Hunslet Guardians, when the question of the missing relieving officer was discussed, there were ten reporters present. As a rule, the "Courier" representative is the only reporter at the meetings. Sensation is in great demand news-days.

• • •

At Aberford (says a writer) I saw and heard my first cuckoo this year, a male bird which has as the centre of his courting ground a black poplar. The male bird follows the female along and about his own quarter, but not, as a rule, into that of another cuckoo. It has been put forward recently that cuckoos lay eggs in nests and tend their own young. The same story has been put about many times during the last century, but observation does not support the statement.

Do the Boston Spa "fathers" intend going in for the electric light?

At Whitehouse, of Aberford, showed me (says a writer in the "Evening Post") a marvellous ash tree. Its branches have been trained to wire frames to form arcades, under which one may walk. The full circumference is some 84 yards. In one part we were shown the entrance to the nesting hole of the kingfisher, and also the retreat of the otter, which Mr Whitehouse contends is not a sufficiently quick swimmer to catch trout and lives on eels.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week a popular turn is given by Eugene Stratton. His manner of imparting drama into the sentiment of a song is irresistible, be it in the role of the love-sick negro, the ill-starred horse-thief, or any other of the diverse characters he portrays. Withal he makes the most of the melody of his popular ditties, and nothing gives more pleasure to the audience than to hear, even though it might be for the fourteenth time, the time-honoured "Lily of Laguna," with its haunting chorus. Amongst the other turns on the bill are Alfred Wellesley and Company, whose comedy "Uncle's Courtship," contains some funny situations; and Edwin Lawrence, who is a clever and amusing exponent of the ridiculous, in his well-known role of the Scout. May Moore Duprez is one of the most vivacious of comediennes, and a graceful dancer into the bargain, and others appearing are the Paris Trio, in an aerial gymnastic display; Eddy Martyn, a clever American dancer; Arthur Sutcliffe, comedian; Lizzie Glenroy, Scotch comedienne; and the Gascoignes, in a juggling act.

The greatest cinema actress of the day, Miss Florence Turner, known as "The Vitagraph Girl," will make her appearance in person at the Leeds Empire on Monday next. Miss Turner specialises in character studies of every description, be they tragic, comic, melodramatic, or burlesque. According to American newspapers, Miss Turner is conceded to be the greatest actress of the day either on or off the stage. She will give a series of studies of her own conception. Paul Spadoni, the great Continental athlete, known as the modern Hercules, will present his new entertainment, entitled, "The Juggler in his Home." The Hanlon Bros., in a pantomimical novelty, entitled "The Haunted Hotel"; Jack Marks, the juvenile Hebrew comedian; Tennyson and Wallis, comedians; Park's Eton Boys, in a vocal and dancing act; the Miller Bros., comedy gymnasts and back-stage wrestlers, are other popular attractions. The greatest of all animal mimes, Mr Fred Conquest, and a full London company will present "What a Dog," the fareical absurdity in one act. In this Mr Conquest enacts the part of a Newfoundland dog possessed of human intelligence. He is the recognised animal actor of to-day.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Leeds Hippodrome this week the Four Ascots, a troupe of the finest dancers to be seen, are highly popular. The gentlemen are, in particular, extremely agile steppers, and with their charming partners work with a vigour which draws deserved applause from the audience. Their dancing, showing how the various tongues are danced, is interesting. Bert Coote and Company, in "A Lamb on Wall Street," are too well-known to Leeds audiences for us to say much about them; suffice it that the "episode" seems to be as fresh as when it was first produced. Monty Cash, the lad "through Lancashire," sings three songs. His latest song, "Poor, simple John" is full of humour, besides having a catchy refrain, and it will be heard of in the future. Alexandre and Hughes, a pair of persistent patterers, keep the house vastly amused with their jokes and songs. Harry Blake, in a comedy scena "The Man in the Moon" has some refreshing yarns; and Ivor Vinter, who is billed as the "Little surprise," is a capital little fellow, who should be heard of again. Galetti's Baboons, in a novel act "A Day at the Races," are exceedingly clever. One of the monkeys is a born comedian. Miss Mignonette Kelcie, comedienne, is also appearing.

Next week at the Hippodrome the company will include the musical comedy favourite, Marie Dainton, in selections from her repertoire of imitations and impressions of "stars" of the stage; Fay, Two Colleys, and Fay, in up-to-date nonsense; Rachel Walker, described as the Creole nightingale; Fred Colley and Minnie Scott, in comedy titbits; Tom and Vic. Collins' No. 1 Company in the farcical burlesque "Buying a Pub"; and the charming costume comedy "David Garrick," presented by Sinclair Neill and full London company, including Alec Miller; and B. P. Earle.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

At the Queen's Theatre this week the Lodge-Perey Company are appearing and they are old favourites. The piece staged on Monday was that delightful comedy-drama "The Laughter of Fools," which tells how a well-connected Society lady, who differ much scheming to get her daughter mated to a wealthy captain with an annual income of £15,000. It is ultimately successful. The company is one of all-round excellence, though Miss Henrietta Schrier's impersonation of Dot's Hetley, the once despised competitor in the race for wealth, stands out most prominent, while Mr Lodge-Perey, as the captain, also plays the part in his usual cool and confident manner. The play will be given on Saturday, while on Friday the celebrated Corsican romance, "Mr Barnes, of New York" is to be staged, with Miss Schrier as Marie Pardi, and Mr Lodge-Perey in the title role.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Miss Henrietta Schrier and Mr Lodge-Perey and Co. will again be the attraction. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the play "The Cracksman" will be staged, on Thursday "The Laughter of Fools," and on Friday and Saturday (for the first time in Leeds) "Fraud," or "The Romance of a Typist."

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week an excellent programme is submitted. At the head of affairs are Cullen and Carthy, assisted by a diminutive comedian. They cause endless laughter, and the reception on Monday night was deserved. Dick Evans and Poppie Holland (who, by the way, is forging ahead) bring a new act exploiting the cinema, and their turn is evidently to the liking of the audience. Jack Baxter, a Leeds man, is a first-rate dancing comedian, and Rowland, the "brainstorm" juggler, assisted by Kitty Grenelle, goes through a smart act. Others who help are Phil Brandon, a Cockney character comedian, and the Stevanos, acrobatic eccentrics.

Next week at the City Varieties the Vega Trio will appear in an original comedy act, and it is described as a wonderful show. Others in the bill are Tawakow Doughton, the renowned baritone, from Queen's Hall, London; Dancing Maddies, in their novelty dancing act; Billy Marsden, the comedian with the concertina; Vera Hind, comedienne; and Irvin and Morton, in a ritual singing, talking, and dancing act. Pictures will also be shown on the variescope.

LEEDS THEATRE DE LUXE.

At the Theatre de Luxe this week "The Black Spot," a story of Russian intrigue beautifully set in England and Russia, is a fine example of the British producer's enterprise. The acting is a remarkable feature, Miss Jane Gail, an imposing conspirator, and Mr Arthur Holmes-Gore, a powerful Grand Duke, being excellent. Mr G. M. Anderson is seen to advantage in "Broncho Billy's Conscience." "Love and Dynamite" is a capital Keystone comedy.

On Friday "Barnett Parker, Detective," will be introduced in the "Staircase of Death" and "Neath the Animal's Paw," a fine animal film, will be screened on Monday.

Next week Mr Davies is featuring Miss Florence Turner, who is appearing at a Leeds music-hall next week, in "She Cried," a delightful comedy, and a beautiful drama "Wanted, a Grandmother."

At South Milford School last month the percentage of attendance was 94·27 against 86·73 in April last year.

Miss Hilda Harrison (Church Fenton) was successful in the junior division, theory examination, of the London College of Music.

Mrs Fielden and the Misses Fielden and Mr John Fielden have arrived at 77, Cadogan Square, London, from Grimston Park, Tadcaster.

PROPERTY MARKET.—On Wednesday night at Collingham Mr J. B. Hindle (Messrs Howe and Hindle, Leeds) offereded for sale by auction 10,423 square yards of building land, part of the Langwith Park estate, situate at Collingham. Mr N. Elliott, Leeds, was the solicitor. The highest bid obtainable was 8d. per yard, at which figure the lot was withdrawn.

CRICKET.—On Saturday at Moortown the Thorner Mexbro' team were defeated. Scores:—Moortown—Wilson 24, M. Topham 2, France 6, Barnfather 6, Layton 3, Little 8, A. Topham (not out) 23, H. Ward 0, C. Wood 2, L. Wood b Boothman, 0; extras, 11; total 85. Thorner—Thompson 3, Flint 26, Adkin 2, Jarratt 2, H. Randerson 8, Hardisty 1, Revis 3, E. Randerson 0, Hanson (not out) 1, Jater 0, Dixon 1, extras 5; total 52.

CRICKET.—On Saturday afternoon Spofforth entertained Leeds (an eleven), and the home-team won. Scores:—Leed—Swift 41, Summerscales 0, Gray 14, Brown 19, Balkwill 1, Edwards 1, Garnett (not out) 1, Lewis (not out) 1, Smith 4, J. C. Town 2, extra 1; total 88. Spofforth—Smithson 1, King 10, S. H Hill 29, Odds 4, Proctor 0, A. Hill 15, Morrison 1, Darwin 2, Howard 6, Richmond (not out) 2, F. Thompson 0, extras, 10; total 88.

Patent List compiled by John E. Walsh, Chartered Patent Agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and Crossley Street, Halifax:—Applications—Walter Walsh, Morley, an improved stripper for carding machines; A. Wilkinson, Ilkley, tubular framed bodies for motor-cars and other vehicles; J. H. Micklethwaite, Dewsbury, automatic winding motion for self-starting mules. Patent sealed—J. H. Wilkinson, Doncaster, improved 12-jet carburettor.

CYCLING ACCIDENT.—While cycling down Church Hill, Thorner, on Saturday afternoon a girl of thirteen named Elsie Lanham, living at 40, Sholebrook Place, Leeds, lost control of her machine and could not turn the corner at the bottom. The machine ran into a house and the girl was thrown, sustaining injuries to the head, a bruise over the right eye, and several cuts about the hands. It appears that the girl only recently learned to ride and was cycling along with her brother. After receiving attention from Dr. Hargreaves, of Collingham, she was taken home.

TRAVELLING WITHOUT A TICKET.—On Tuesday at an Occasional Court at Sherburn Michael Moran, labourer, of Leeds, was charged with travelling on the North-East-rn Railway without having previously paid his fare, with intent to defraud the company on Monday. From the evidence it appeared the prisoner travelled by a "trace" train from Leeds, and on account of York Races, tickets were examined at Church Fenton Station. Prisoner was without a ticket, and had the appearance of having travelled under the seat, his clothes being covered with dust. He gave an address at Leeds, and the railway officials telephoned there and the address was found to be a false one. Fined 20s. and costs, or 14 days in default.

LORD HAWKE'S INFLUENCE.—Lord Hawke captained the Yorkshire team for many seasons, and a better sport I can never hope to meet (writes S. Haigh). Winning or losing, he was always the same genial fellow. If you did badly you were cheered by his hearty "Never mind," and if you did well you thought it was worth it to have him come and give you a smack on the back and an equally sincere "Bravo!" I have seen people ponder over the career of his lordship and decide that he was hardly worth his place in the side. Don't you believe it. Lord Hawke was a better bat than many give him credit for, but if he had never made a run he was worth a place in the Yorkshire side for his generalship. Above everything else he made the professionals his particular concern, he made it his business to see that they were well treated, he looked after them on the field and off, and their affairs were his affairs all the time.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE.—On Friday night the annual meeting of the Collingham Habitation of the Primrose League was held in the schoolroom at Collingham, and was presided over by Mr James Beaumont, Ruling Councillor. The Habitation now consists of 7 knights, 8 dames, and 127 associates, a total of 143, an increase of five over last year. The receipts had been £26 16s. 11d., and the expenses £16 7s. 2d., leaving a balance of £10 8s. 11d. Lady Gunter was re-elected Dame President, but Mr Beaumont intimated that he would be unable to continue as Ruling Councillor. No nominations were made for the vacancy. Miss Smith was re-appointed treasurer, and Mrs Foster was appointed hon. secretary in place of Miss Waddington (resigned). A strong executive committee was also appointed, with Mr P. Christie as auditor. Mr R. Ludge, Selby, gave an address on the questions of the Welsh Disestablishment and Home Rule Bills, and an excellent entertainment was given by Professor Cunningham. Mr Hamar presided at the piano.

TADCASTER LADIES' CHOIR.—At the Pontefract Musical Competitions this choir, conducted by Mr E. W. Herbert, was successful in gaining a second prize in the open competition for female voices. The test pieces were "Where is the Nymph" for four voices, unaccompanied, by Dr. Green, and "Gentle Spring," for three voices, by Holbrooke. The adjudicator was Dr. McNaught, whose remarks on the choir were as follows:—First piece—"Slow but still effective because of the sostenuto and purity of intonation. Admirable in contrast, some rich chords, and a constant appeal in the expression. Beautifully proportioned in force, and very effective treatment. (91 marks out of 100)." In the second piece the remarks were: "Pretty start, very shanty and subtle rhythm. A well-controlled choir, and the words were a feature. The tonal attack nearly always in the centre of the pitch. The chords were all good, and were full, rich, and pure. Here we had an elastic rhythm, and the natural accentuation of the words was good. The conductor knows his business. (89 marks out of 100)."

AN OLD ROMANCE.

One of the most successful disappearances on record was that of William Howe, the Daily Chronicle says. Howe was a successful tradesman in Jermyn-street. One morning in 1776 he left his wife, telling her that he had business in the City. He never came back, and all efforts to trace him failed. After some years his death was presumed, and an Act of Parliament was passed to enable Mrs. Howe to administer her husband's estate. Then, one evening in 1723, the "widow" received a letter from an anonymous correspondent, requesting an interview at the following day in Birdcage-walk. Mrs. Howe kept the appointment—and discovered her husband. He had been living in disguise in the same neighbourhood all the time, he explained, and keeping a close eye upon the movements of his wife. It is said that the reunited couple lived happily ever afterwards.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Following the letter in the "Courier" last week on the "Gramophone Nuisance at Colton," a Leeds evening paper has taken up the matter, and it is remarked that the poorer class of the working-class are the mainstay of the business. "This may well be believed by any one who has occasion to pass through an industrial artisan neighbourhood in what ought to be the quiet of an evening, and has heard the volumes of "tinned music" pouring forth through the open windows. Even the villagers round about the city—this is a reference to the letter in the "Courier"—have caught the craze badly, and there is talk by those who speak of the "gramophone nuisance," of a petition to the landlord to remove his tenants who make one popular and beautiful country walk "hideous to visitors." "It is quite true," said a dealer, "the poorer people spend far more on gramophones than those who could afford it better. And they do not, as a rule, want the cheapest machines, but are prepared to spend quite a lot of money. It is the working-class owner, too, who comes back regularly for new records."

In order to extend their knowledge the farmers of Wetherby district are talking of making a trip to the Continent, and they evidently think that they have something to learn from the Dutchmen. As everybody who takes an interest in agriculture knows, the Danes can teach Britons a lot with respect to our oldest industry, but apparently the Wetherby farmers do not propose to include Denmark in their itinerary. Of course, at one time Britons thought they had nothing to learn from anybody, but the old conceit has been knocked out o them in recent years, and it is well to recognise that there are other go-ahead nations in Europe besides our own.

In consulting the farmers as to the importation of store cattle from Ireland, the County Council have acted wisely, and the Wetherby agriculturists are apparently grateful to them. This question, while it affects the public, is of prime importance to agriculturists, and it is obvious that if they do not get supplies the markets in the Riding will be seriously affected eventually.

Crossgates and District Agricultural Club has not had a meeting for some time, and farmers may wonder what is being done, but I understand that the arrangements in connection with the registration of the organization have not been completed. It is evident that the activities of the club must this year be limited, but if the members are loyal they will gain very materially by it.

A number of places in the districts, including Seacroft and Kippax, have benefitted by the munificence of Mr Andrew Carnegie, the millionaire, and it is just as well that they send early applications to the great organ-giver, otherwise they might have been disappointed. Some time ago Mr Carnegie formed a trust to deal with organs and other gifts, and the trustees now announce that considering the heavy expenditure to which they are liable in respect of existing claims, they cannot until further notice consider any more applications for organs.

Crossgates, as a correspondent observes, has been deprived of public lighting, and presumably the new order of things will exist throughout the summer months. The residents thought that Crossgates would be dealt with in precisely the same way as other parts of the city, but the Lighting Committee seemingly think that, in addition to preferential ratings, would be too much to give to Crossgates. For annexing Crossgates, the City Council have been ordered to pay a substantial sum to Tadcaster District Council, and they are not likely to confer greater privileges on the suburb during the period of preferential rating than they can help. Had public lighting not been definitely promised at the inquiry, it is possible that Crossgates would not have got it during the winter.

One of the most popular Whitsuntide gatherings in the North, Wetherby race meeting on Monday will attract thousands of people to the old market town, where, it is said, horse-racing was engaged in during the Roman occupation. For the seven races on Monday splendid entries have been received, and the stakes, amounting to £586, are greater than those offered at any Whitsuntide meeting under National Hunt rules. Various improvements have been carried out on the course, and arrangements have been made for the accommodation of a very large crowd of pleasure-seekers, so, provided the weather is favourable, the outing should prove a very enjoyable one.

Kippax is described by a Leeds paper as "the little colliery village situated midway between Garforth and Castleford." It certainly is not a large place compared with Leeds, or with Castleford for that matter, but it has a larger population than Garforth, and when the time comes for counting heads again, I should not be surprised were the inhabitants to number 5,000—a tidy population for a "little colliery village." Kippax is the second largest place in Tadcaster Union, and at last census it had over 4,000 inhabitants.

Tadcaster district, according to one of the magistrates, is getting a bad reputation owing to persons using language of a strong flavour, but the assertion is, I think, a gross exaggeration. Comparatively few cases of this kind come before the Justices; in fact, the charges in Tadcaster district are a dwindling quantity, and I consider the people of the district, compared with the residents of some places I could name, are extremely well behaved. To put it another way, the inhabitants of Tadcaster petty sessional division are no worse than some folks, and they are better behaved than others.

Congratulations to Garforth Colliery ambulance team on winning the handsome shield presented by the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., for competition among the collieries of Yorkshire. It is a very high honour, indeed, and it is thoroughly well deserved, because the men have not spared themselves in any way to gain the efficiency that has landed them in the position of champions of Yorkshire. Garforth has become, under the direction of Mr R. Routledge, jun., one of the principal ambulance centres in Yorkshire, and it plays a very prominent part in the affairs of the Aberfordia League.

The Tadcaster Guardians have now the nucleus of a picture gallery, and, as Mr Prater suggested, the walls should be covered with the portraits of the men who have served the ratepayers in one capacity or another. The first portrait is that of Mr J. A. Bennet, who was Clerk to the Board for many years, and who is now living in retirement at Scarborough, and it is the gift of the Rev. Canon Greenwood, whose example will probably be copied by other members. Why should not the prominent men who have served on the Board—the Late Mr Hill, Mr T. B. Smith, the late Mr Addisell, the late Mr Serjeant, etc.—be thus honoured, along with the Chairman, vice-chairman, and other leading members?

Garforth's school population is declining, and, although the area has a much larger number of inhabitants than it had a few years since, the little army of children grows smaller every year. The Chairman of the Education Committee attributes this to people having smaller families, and assuredly customs have changed, for I could name old families in Garforth consisting of a dozen or more, whereas to-day parents are contenting themselves with two or three children. About a decade ago the birth-rate in the colliery districts was about 35, and now it has dropped to about 25. I have not the figures for Garforth, but I find that in 1877 the birth-rate in Templenewsam was as high as 46.2.

If the people in the district would act upon the good advice which is given them they would escape half their troubles. When typhoid breaks out, as it did at Garforth, the residents wonder who is to blame, but they do not get usually to know the cause of the outbreak. Sometimes typhoid follows the carelessness of householders, and the medical officer of Rothwell advises people, now that the warm weather is on us, to avoid throwing arsenal or vegetable matter into the ashpits, to be most careful never to leave milk or animal food uncovered during the hot season, and also to be careful never to leave crumbs and particles of food lying about upon the tables or floors, as flies will soon leave a house where there is no food to be obtained."

Unless the leading residents take up the question, there is little chance of a Nursing Association being started in Garforth, and, after the rebuff they received a few years ago from the working-class population, they may not feel disposed to do so. However, they should, for the sake of their suffering fellow mortals, give the matter further consideration. It is pointed out that the grant from the County Council for work done in connection with the schools and the Notification of Births Acts would be £28, and if the Urban Council gave £25 to the Nursing Association, it would leave less than £56 to be raised annually. The Medical Charities Committee would probably give £10, and employers of labour might come down handsomely. In no places is there greater need for nurses than the colliery villages, and, as I have pointed out, the Rothwell Council have, largely at the instigation of the Labour members, engaged a health visitor at a salary of £80 per annum, so that people are beginning to realize what can be done in this direction.

Every large village should, in my opinion, have a district nurse living among them, and the value of the work done by trained nurses is fully recognised in Barkston Ash, for associations exist at Tadcaster, Monk Fryston, Bramham, Sparkford, Wetherby, Templenewsam, and other places. These institutions do not seem to lack funds, and, although it must entail self-sacrifice on the part of the ladies responsible for their management, the work could give more satisfaction to a community. Aberford has a prospect of securing an association, and why should not Garforth come into line?

Miners, have, unlike some farmers, no yearning for a return of the so-called "good old days." Mr James Hargreaves, who was for many years associated with the great Rothwell colliery firm, and who was at one time one of the most prominent public men in the district, recalled, at the Coal Trade dinner the other night, the time when miners received 3s. and 4s. a day, but he has no wish for a return of low wages. No one knows better than he does the risks the miners run, and he thinks they should be well paid for their work. In the seventeenth century when the collieries in Garforth and Templenewsom districts were in full swing the price of coal was very low, indeed, and the wages of labour were equally low. In the Whitkirk churchwardens' accounts for 1662 it is stated that they paid "fivepence for a load of coal and bringing them." Of course, money had a much greater value in those days, but when all is said the price paid was not calculated to make either carters into wealthy men.

Tadcaster, Kirkby Wharfe, and Ulleskelf are beloved of the angling fraternity, and it is a beautiful district. Sunday matches are, we are told, very popular just now, and if they are not very attractive competitions, they furnish the anglers with an excuse for getting into the country. No doubt the men from the colliery districts enjoy themselves. The Vicar of Kirkby Wharfe, I believe, issued an invitation to the "fishermen" to attend divine service at his church, and I wonder if it received any response. Usually, like golfers, when the anglers are bent on sport they give little consideration to other matters, and on fine Sundays they probably prefer to remain outside church walls.

It is said that motorists are driving people off the roads, but it is evident that the district has fascinations for pedestrians yet. In the York paper a correspondent states:—Let the motorist be envied in his possession of the exhilaration of speed, but let him be pitied in his exclusion from the secrets of the country-side's sunshine and shade. He captures many dusty miles, but he misses many golden moments. How many and how golden one may measure by citing a stretch of country which forms a triangle with York as its apex, the River Wharfe as its baseline, and the main roads to Tadcaster and Wetherby as each of its sides. Within this fairly broad area the traveller may be careless where he treads, but he cannot lose the treasures. They are of infinite variety, of unending richness, of surpassing charm. By beauty no less than by history is the whole landscape hallowed and sacred. Its associations reach back far beyond the brave days when England was in the making. By its remaining relics the memory renews acquaintance with the deeds and the men who helped the nation to its modern maturity. The name of Fairfax alone suffices to suffuse it with glamour and greatness; but its immemorial treasures neither begin nor end with the great-souled Fairfax who sleeps in the cold shadows of Bilbrough Church. They are in all truth so many that they retard progress. The mind is taken back, when its more immediate purpose is to go forward. The imagination is illuminating the darkened recesses of history when all the while the sunshine is setting the verdant land aglow. Itinerancies in such circumstances are unnecessary and unoriginal. They are more often a hindrance than a help. The better plan is to wander where the fancy wills it. It may lead one through Askham Bryan and Askham Richard to the lodge-garbed village of Bilbrough, poised wonderfully on the eminence from which the eye greets the panorama of the unfolding Plain of York, or it may lead one still further afield to the seculsion of picturesque Healaugh, and then through avenues of trees and undulating landscape to the interesting village of Wighill. It has been a varied and glorious experience.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE

At the Empire Palace this week Miss Florence Turner, "The Vitagraph Girl," as she is perhaps best known, is giving the principal turn, and her character studies are as charming as her style is original. There is, of course, no doubt about her nationality, and her breezy little sketches of the American shop girl and the gum-chewing youth in the gallery, though perhaps a trifle exaggerated, present types that are readily recognisable. Miss Turner's wonderful mobility of countenance and her keen sense of humour are her greatest assets. The Hanlon Brothers, in their pantomimic absurdity, "The Haunted Hotel," have some very amusing business, and the clever juggling of Paul Spadoni is well supplemented by the antics of his assistant. "What a Dog!" is the title of a new farce presented by Fred Conquest and Company, and among the other turns are those of Miller Bros., comedy gymnasts; and Jack Marks, a precocious Hebrew youngster.

At the Leeds Empire Monday next the first performance of a new and original farcical sketch, in three scenes, entitled "Parker on the Panel," will be enacted. Mr Charles Austin, the popular comedian will not only create the title role, but take unto himself honours as part author with Chas. Ridgwell. Many remember him as Parker P.C., who eventually—on another visit—blossomed into a fully fledged detective. This time, by what might be termed a masterpiece of opportunism, he takes up, or rather drops into, the medical profession. As might almost be guessed, and as an assistant of a practitioner, he meets with a business to his liking; and if he does not cure his patients, he evidently achieves the rest of the adage—and kills them. It is a part which thoroughly suits Mr Austin. Other very attractive additions to the programme include The Viennese Trio, in their delightful music and quaint comedy act; Frank and Vesta, the famous American dancers who recently appeared by command before their Majesties, The King and Queen; Flora Cromer, the popular and brilliant contralto entertainer; The Griffiths Bros., in their new skit "Nero, Faro, Casino, and the Lion"; George Prince, comedian; Halma, the original crazy dancing juggler; Fred Poplar, comedian; Kitty Wager, comedienne; and the American bioscope.

LEEDS HIPPODROME

At the Hippodrome this week Miss Marie Dainton, gives some side-splitting imitations of many of our present-day leading stage artistes, her impressions of Miss Evie Greene and Miss Vesta Tilley being remarkably good. Quite a novel turn is supplied by Fay, Two Coleys, and Fay, rollicking fun being judiciously interspersed with excellent harmony. So-called humorous sketches are for ever with us, but Tom and Vic Collins' latest, "Buying a Pub," is one that keeps the audience amused the whole of the time it occupies the boards. A condensed version of the famous costume comedy, "David Garick," presented by Mr Sinclair Nott and company, is very highly appreciated. Mr Neill's portrayal of the hero and Miss Alice Miller as Ada Ingot being excellent. A refined entertainment is offered by Eva, Betty, and Wessell Gordon; and B. P. Earle does some daring feats with chairs and tubs. Rachel Walker sings a couple of songs in taking style. Fred Colley and Minnie Scott also create plenty of amusement in their comedy tit-bits.

Next week at the Hippodrome The Meymotts, supported by Miss Rochie Webshith, will submit "In the Future," described as one of the funniest and cleverest sketches on the stage. Others billed to appear are Coakley, Hanvey, and Dunlevy, minstrels, from the Oxford and Tivoli, London; Jimmie Pullin, character patter comedian; Gracie Graham, comedienne; Fred Curran, comedian; Flying Martins, sensational wizards of the air; Bell-Hattons, musical experts; Gaston Chevalier, Mdlle Etoile Le Noir, and Co. in an episode "On a Western Ranch," introducing the Mexican rebel dance. The race for the Derby will be shown on the bioscope.

LEEDS QUEEN'S THEATRE.

The patrons of the Queen's Theatre are fortunate in having another week of the Lodge-Percy company in repertoire, for the whole cast are artistes of more than ordinary merit, while the popularity of Mr Lodge-Percy and Miss Henrietta Schrier is sufficient guarantee for another successful week at the Hunslet house. The piece staged is a powerful and enthralling drama, from the pen of Miss Schrier, entitled "The Cracksweenan." It deals with the undying devotion of a mother towards her disreputable son, and to extricate him from financial difficulties she commits numerous thefts in high-class society houses where she is staying as guest. The authoress gave a fine impersonation of the title-role, while Mr Lodge-Percy was equally successful in the role of a barrister and M.P. Mr G. Leslie Buxton was also prominent as an aristocratic card-sharper.

To-night and to-morrow (Saturday) a new play, "Fraud," or "The Romance of a Typist," is to be presented.

Next week at the Queen's Theatre Mrs Frank Bateman and company, supported by Mr Fred W. Goddard, will be the attraction. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday they will play "Between Two Men," or "The Tale of a Rosary"; on Thursday and Saturday "From Washerwoman to Duchess" will be staged; and on Friday night "The Ticket of Leave Man" will be submitted.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES

At the head of the City Varieties bill this week are the Vega Trio, who give a combination of comedy, gymnastic feats, and balancing, all being cleverly presented. One of the trio is a lady of remarkable strength. Irene and Marton appear in a refined singing, talking, and dancing act. Tavalaw Doughton, a powerful bass-baritone from the Queen's Hall, London, is loudly applauded for his renderings of "The Storm Fiend" and "Soldier's Son." Other attractive items include The Three Dancing Middies, in a novelty dancing act; Vera Hind, in songs; and Billy Marsden, a comedian with a concertina.

Next week at the City Varieties Alix Lukos will appear in new songs and old favourites, and she will be supported by the Andersons, a comedy duo, in "After the Matinee"; Dainty Danes, duettists and speciality dancers; Harry and Mutch, trombone kings; Jack Walsh, comedian; Thorne and Leopold, in a speciality act, introducing singing, boxing, and dancing. Pictures will be shown on the Variescope.

SELBY PORTHOLME MILLS.—The Selby Portholme Mills, which have for a considerable time been carried on by Messrs Moss, Rimmington, and Co., Ltd., twine and thread makers, were offered for sale at the Londesborough Hotel, Selby, on Wednesday, by Messrs Hepper and Sons, auctioneers, Leeds. With the mills were offered the dwelling-house, cottages and market garden attached. There was a small attendance. No bid was made for the property, which was offered in one lot, and the auctioneers intimated that they would negotiate privately with any intending purchaser.

SOUTH MILFORD AND DISTRICT FANCIERS' SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the above society was held at the White Swan Hotel, on Wednesday, and Mr G. D. Cliff presided over a large attendance of members. The treasurer's statement showed a balance in hand of £14 3s. 8d., and it was unanimously adopted. The Rev. B. Hemsworth, M.A., J.P. (Monk Fryston Hall), was re-elected president by a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him for the great interest taken in the society, as evidenced by his attendance to open the show each year. All the patrons were re-elected with the addition of Messrs C. N. Goode (Bletsloe), Fletcher (Sherburn), J. Calrns (Church Fenton), J. Sykes, R. Batty and J. R. Batty (South Milford), J. Carr and T. Pettinger, and J. T. Jackson. Mr G. D. Cliff (Lumby Hall) was re-elected chairman, and Mr W. N. Harvey (Peckfield Lodge), vice-chairman. Mr Percy Paver was re-appointed hon. sec., as were Messrs A. Jackson and J. Wice as treasurer and auditor respectively. The following committee was elected by ballot:—Messrs L. Muskill, W. G. Lambert, J. Gill, C. E. Cawthorne, G. Cliff, G. Holgate, C. Newby, G. H. Ambler, H. Readley, R. Sutton, W. Morris, W. Tindall, C. P. Lister, A. Johnson, R. Laycock, J. W. Levitt, F. Wyman, E. Thorpe, W. Thorp, and J. Smith. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded all the last year's officials, and Messrs Cliff and Paver suitably responded. The date of the 1914 show was fixed for Wednesday, November 11th, and various suggestions were made as to new classes in poultry, pigeons, and rabbit sections. An egg show was held in an adjoining room, and some splendid exhibits were shown. In the blake egg class the winners were:—1, C. Newby; 2, P. Paver; 3, Mr. Roy. The winners for white eggs were:—1, G. D. Cliff; 2, G. Holgate; 3, Mrs P. Paver. Messrs G. H. Ambler and G. Cairns (Church Fenton) very kindly officiated as judges. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed throughout the proceedings, and everything points to a most successful year's work. A handsome challenge trophy has been presented by Messrs J. and J. Colman, of Norwich, for the best bird in poultry section at the forthcoming show.

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

The arrangements for summer bedding should be carefully thought out before planting commences. Colour seems to do not always work out as expected, the green foliage of the plants having a good deal to do with the ultimate effect. In making plans for the disposal of the various available plants the following points should be borne in mind. Blue, purple, and brown shades are more as penetrating as white, yellow, and red, and should be allocated to positions near to the windows or regularly frequented paths. If possible they should be given a background of white or pale yellow flowers; as this helps to break the somewhat dull appearance, and emphasises the richness of the darker shades. The pale shades and the bright scarlets may be planted in positions where they can be seen from a distance. Huge masses of scarlet give a garish effect when viewed at short range, but when planted well away from the windows, or regularly used paths, they are splendid. In all cases where such brilliant flowers are that of the Paul Crampel Geranium is used, the ground should be toned down by the use of white flowers, such as Swan Violas, Mrs Sanders Marguerite, or White Lobella. The importance of including a few tall plants should not be overlooked. They remove any suspicion of stiffness, and give a decidedly more graceful appearance to the beds and borders. A few of the best for the purpose are Dracena Indivisa, Kochia Trichophylla, Artemesia, Viridifolia, striped Maize, Nicotianas in variety, and standard Fuchsias.

HARDY PLANTS

Many varieties of hardy herbaceous plants are now rapidly developing flower stems, and in most cases it is necessary to provide good stable supports. If this task be neglected the plants cannot give of their best, and in some cases will be practically ruined. Pyrethrums are exceptionally pretty flowers for the market, are so frail that a shower of rain is sufficient to weigh them down. When this occurs it is utterly impossible to coax them into an upright position again. Early staking is exceptionally important in their case. Delphiniums, Campanulas, and the old crimson peony should also be attended to in good time. On the other hand, English and German Iris, perennial Phlox, and similar wiry-stemmed plants will usually hold themselves erect in all but the most wind-swept positions.

EARLY CHRYSANTHEMUMS

If not already done the early-flowering varieties of chrysanthemums should now be planted in their flowering positions. They require a deep rich soil, and should be planted firmly. Loose planting will be followed by the the production of tall, soft growth. Our own practice is to tread firmly around each plant, finishing off with about an inch of loose soil at the top to allow the water free admission. Dryness at the root is very bad for these plants, and to guard against it a top dressing of decayed manure should be given about a month after planting. Stake immediately planting is completed.

ROSES

Rose trees will require constant attention if really good results are to be achieved. It seems to be the law of nature that the more charming a flower is the more attention it will require. Insect and other pests play house with unless regular attention is paid to the work of keeping them in check. Greenfly is a persistent enemy, but fortunately is easily destroyed. This does not mean that once the trees are cleared the trouble will be over. Winged specimens soon find their way to the roses, and this insect is so prolific in reproduction that unless constant efforts are made to destroy them they will soon disfigure both flowers and leaves. Soapy water, if mixed sufficiently strong, will destroy them, and the suds from the weekly clothes washing may be utilised for the purpose. The rose mildew can only be destroyed by hand picking. It will be found curled up in the leaves.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

In the majority of gardens the vegetable plot becomes a secondary consideration as soon as summer bedding is commenced. It is advisable to push forward all necessary work at once to avoid having awkward breaks in the crops of peas, kidney beans, salads, etc., later on.

KIDNEY BEANS

This is a vegetable which rarely gets the generous treatment it deserves. The ground should be well tilled and liberally manured, and the plants should be allowed plenty of room to develop. The rows should be about three feet apart, and the plants nine inches apart in the rows. As growth progresses fresh soil should be drawn to the sides of the rows. This keeps the plants erect, and encourages the production of more roots. It also obviates the necessity of giving water. Canadian Wonder and No Plus Ultra are two of the best varieties in existence.

BRASSICAS

The Brassica family includes savoys, cabbage, cauliflower, kale, broccoli, and brussels sprouts. The latter should be planted on ground that was bravily manured last year, but has had no manure added to it this year. Allow the plants a yard of space each way. All other brassicas require heavily manured ground, and the cauliflowers should be planted exceptionally firm. A good watering should be given immediately after planting. If weather follows the planting it will be necessary to water once or twice a week until free growth commences. Afterwards it will be sufficient to keep the surface soil broken up with the hoe, and to occasionally draw an inch or two of soil to the sides of the rows.

Sow lettuce, radishes, carrots, beet, onions, spinach, parsley, turnips, etc., for successional crops.

MINT

There is no more trouble-some occupant of the kitchen garden than this useful herb. It is quite true that in many gardens it will grow freely for years with little or no attention, but on the other hand in the majority of districts it will die off from no apparent cause. What is worse, we often hear complaints from gardeners that they cannot get it to grow at all. The best means of establishing a stock is to insert cuttings at this time of the year. Young shoots, about four inches long, with a small portion of root attached, are best for the purpose. They should be dibbled into pulverised garden soil, about 9 inches apart. Give a good watering to settle the soil around them, and syringe night and morning until they begin to grow. When they have grown an inch or two pinch out the lead to encourage them to form bushy growths.

TOMATOES

A sowing of seed may now be made to provide plants for autumn fruiting. Germination is very rapid at this time of the year, and it is advisable to have soil and small pots in readiness to pot off the seedlings as soon as they are large enough. Draw over the glass to encourage firm, short-jointed growth. Early batches should now be setting their fruit and notwithstanding the repeated assertions of some writers that a moist atmosphere is conducive to free setting, we still consider a dry atmosphere the best. Experience has proved to us that the blossom sets freely during a spell of hot dry weather, and this certainly implies that the pollen is most active when in a dry state. Ventilate freely on mild days, and top the rods with the hand daily about mid-day. Feed when the second truss commences to set.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

The final potting of all except the latest varieties should be taken in hand as soon as the frame will permit. The plants are full of roots and delay in transferring to final pots is unavoidable, a top-dressing of some approved chemical fertiliser should be given. This will keep the plants moving until time can be spared to repot them. The final potting must be conscientiously carried out or the plants will suffer later on. Few plants require ramming so firm as these. Use a blunt stick for the purpose and avoid damaging the roots when ramming the soil after the plant has been placed in position. See that the plants are not needing water at the time of potting. Any that are approaching dryness should be watered, and stood aside for an hour or two to drain. Place the strongest plants in the largest pots, and secure each to a stake as the work proceeds.

GREENHOUSE CLIMBERS

Nothing adds so much to the attractiveness of a conservatory as a few climbing plants trained judiciously on the roof. Care should be taken that they do not become so rank as to overshade the plants underneath. There are numerous varieties to select from. The Japanese are extremely graceful, their waxy blooms hanging like so many white bells. The white variety is very floriferous, and the blooms are largely used by florists for wreaths and similar floral designs. A tough fibrous compost suits them best, and a fair amount of good peat should be used. Climbers broken to the size of a cricket ball may also be added. They are impatient of remoulding, and if possible should be planted either in large tubs or a prepared border. Efficient drainage is essential.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS

Flowering plants should be fed once or twice a week. Soot water is good for them, and any kind of liquid animal manure will help to build up the flower stalks. Several chemical manure manufacturers are offering a special carnation manure, and growers who experience a difficulty in getting their plants to grow strongly should do well to give the special manure a trial. It must be distinctly understood that unless a light, airy house is available, no amount of feeding will give the desired result. The present is a good time for planting strong young plants outdoor. These may be lifted late in summer and potted up for winter flowering. Young plants should be moved on before the pots get full of root.

SOILS FOR POT PLANTS

Friable, rather loose, and porous soils are essential, the best being undoubtedly those that are somewhat light, without being light enough to dry up too quickly. Such are prepared by mixing good, unriddled garden loam with rotted fibry soils, leaf-mould or thoroughly decayed stable manure, and enough sharp sand to prevent the compost feeling sticky to the hand. It must been clearly borne in mind that all ordinary soils contain sufficient food-matter for the growth of plants for a time; and as we can easily supply further nutriment by means of liquid manure, the choice of soils must be guided, not by their richness, but by their mechanical powers of permitting the circulation of the atmosphere through them, of absorbing nutritive substances, and of retaining water. Suitable soils fall apart after being lightly pressed in the hand. The particles of clayey soils and of those that have been carefully riddled become so compacted in a short time as to hinder the all-important action of the roots of plants growing in them, while too rich earth is morally results in excessive foliage growth.

VENTILATION DURING INCUBATION

Under this heading many incubators are lamentably weak. During the process of incubation the development gerums absorb oxygen and emit carbon dioxide, or carbonic acid gas as it is more commonly known. If the latter is allowed to accumulate it stands to reason that the germs are weakened; in fact, a well-known American expert, Professor Horace Atwood, states: "It is my impression that bowel trouble and non-absorption of the contents of the yolk—sometimes very common ailments of infant chicks—are frequently caused by lack of fresh air in the incubating chamber during the hatch." Plenty of fresh air, then, is necessary; but even ventilation can be overdone This brings us to

THE MOISTURE QUESTION

Too much ventilation means that the eggs will evaporate too quickly, causing the chicks to dry fast to the shell, producing cripples and drowning chicks. Vice versa, if sufficient evaporation does not take place, the chicks are weaklings, and have insufficient room to break their shell and so make good their escape. The difficulty, then, therefore confronts us, "What is the happy medium as regards evaporation during incubation to produce best results? More attention has been paid to the solution of this in the United States of America than in this country. Over there it has been brought down to a hard and fast rule, whilst with us it has been left to the skill (or lack of it) of the operator, with about 90 per cent. of luck. I cannot do better than reproduce an extract from bulletin No. 73 which was issued by the U.S.A. Government, portions of which have been quoted before. Prof. Horace Atwood, in an able article, which he contributed to the "Reliable Poultry Journal" on this subject.

Experiments which have personally conducted coincide with these results; but they have gone more deeply into the matter than time and opportunity have permitted me. The extract from bulletin No 73 is as follows:

LOSS IN WEIGHT OF EGGS DURING NATURAL INCUBATION

"Artificial incubation is rapidly assuming immense importance not only on the large poultry farms where all of the hatching is done by incubators, but on thousands of farms where a few hens find that it is easier to hatch by artificial methods. Artificial incubation would be more widely used if poultrymen had some simple and reliable method of determining whether the eggs, while incubating, are receiving the proper amount of ventilation, and at the same time are not drying up too rapidly. A uniform temperature can usually be secured in most modern makes of incubators, but at the present time operators rely almost entirely upon experience to determine whether the eggs have been sufficiently moist and are receiving enough ventilation for the best results.

"It is true that charts have been constructed showing the proper size of the air-cell for each day of the incubating period, but in using a chart considerable experience and good judgment are necessary, because the apparent size of the air-cells in individual eggs may vary considerably from each other in the same incubator, and the average size of the air-cells on any particular day may depart quite widely from the normal without an inexperienced operator realizing that the condition is not progressing in a satisfactory manner. In addition, the air-cells may be of proper size, and yet the embryos may perish either on account of an insufficient amount of oxygen, or because the gases resulting from the growth of the embryos are not carried away with sufficient rapidity."

(Any enquiries concerning poultry-keeping addressed to our expert, Ralph R. Allen, Sawbridgeworth, Herts, will be answered through these columns free, but when requiring a postal reply, or sending birds for post-mortem examination, must remit half-crown postal order).

WETHERBY CHAMBER OF AGRICULTURE.

IMPORTATION OF IRISH CATTLE.

VIEWS OF LOCAL AGRICULTURISTS.

A meeting of the Wetherby and District Chamber of Agriculture was held on Thursday afternoon at the Town Hall, Wetherby, to consider the advisability of allowing cattle landed from Ireland to be admitted into the West Riding. Action was taken in consequence of a letter from the Clerk of the Peace at Wakefield inviting Chambers of Agriculture and farmers' societies to express their views on the matter. The President (Mr J. Thompson) presided, and there were also present Messrs J. H. Thompson (secretary), H. Crossley, G. P. Wright, A. Burnett (Bardsey), R. Machin, W. L. Kendall, J. Spencley, W. Walker, W. Lax, T. Dawson, H. Knowles, Bladen, J. N. Atkinson, C. T. Sherston, R. F. Farrow, H. Whitehead, H. Elvidge, J. T. Allan, J. F. Holdsworth, etc.

THE LATE CANON GELDART.

The President moved that a vote of condolence be sent to the relatives of the late Canon Geldart, who, he said, had always taken a great interest in agriculture, who was a member of the Chamber from its inception, and by whose death the neighbourhood had suffered a great loss.

The motion was adopted by the members rising from their seats.

THE CATTLE QUESTION.

The President said the chief item on the agenda was the letter issued by the Clerk of the Peace for the West Riding relative to the admission of Irish cattle into the district. The Board of Agriculture, it appeared, had given County Councils the power to say whether or not store cattle from Ireland should be allowed into their districts. Some County Councils had allowed it; others had not. The Cattle Diseases Committee of the West Riding County Council wished to obtain the views of those interested in the matter. Letters had been received from several gentlemen expressing regret at their inability to attend this meeting.

INTERESTING LETTERS.

Major J. W. Dent, Ribston Hall, Wetherby, wrote:—

I think farmers ought to consider the risk not only to store cattle, but to others, the effect of an outbreak later on when fat cattle are just ready for market, and the loss to pedigree breeders by the closing of the ports. I do not think the risk so great now as, perhaps, a little later, when the cattle from the North of Ireland have been all moved. There is no doubt that there is a very serious state of things in the south, and all depends on how far the Irish department have got it under control.

Mr Matthew Tomlinson wrote:—

I certainly am in favour of admitting Irish cattle, both landing and being dispatched to graziers in the West Riding. To prohibit the Irish store cattle as we simply making legislative restrictions that will ultimately prove worse for the country than if we had foot and mouth disease in the Riding. In my opinion there is no risk as we have known it thirty years ago, is not half so serious as it is thought to be by the Board of Agriculture, and I am of opinion that we with a ten-mile radius (which would be effectively closed) that the rest of Ireland or any other country should be allowed to export healthy store cattle to England. I certainly am in favour of store cattle being booked direct to the graziers' holdings in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

Mr P. North, in a letter to the secretary, stated:—

There are very few farmers in Wharfedale who have got one-third of the cattle they require, and if they were stopped now from coming it would be ruin to very many. The feeders had a bad time last year, and they cannot possibly have a good one this year, but if the County Council debar them from coming into the West Riding it will simply be disastrous. I trust your Chamber will take this into consideration, and pass a resolution in favour of them being allowed to come.

Another letter was received in which the writer said:—

I think the stoppage of Irish cattle now would be very serious to all farmers in Wharfedale. Being entirely dependent on Irish stores for grazing, many farmers about here have not got half what they require.

THE RESOLUTION.

Mr Crossley said he thought there was no need to close Yorkshire to cattle from the North of Ireland, but in regard to cattle from the South of Ireland it was very different. He moved the following resolution:—

That in the opinion of this meeting there is little danger of foot and mouth disease from cattle imported from the North of Ireland, and this meeting considers that the West Riding authorities should admit such cattle on the ten hours' detention proposed by the Board of Agriculture without restrictions; but it further considers that the risks are too great to admit cattle from the South of Ireland, where the disease may be raging, on the four days' detention at the ports and fourteen days' isolation on the farms.

Mr J. T. Dawson, who seconded, said the County Council might be congratulated on taking such a wise step as to consult every farmers' club. It was a step in the right direction, and they ought to be grateful to them for their action. (Hear, hear).

Mr H. Knowles, Mr Machin, and Mr J. N. Atkinson supported the resolution.

Mr Sherston said he supposed that in Ireland the regulations were so strictly enforced that cattle could not get from the infected areas to the North of Ireland.

Mr Crossley said the authorities were much more careful now about the entrance of stock from the south into the north.

VIEW OF THE CENTRAL CHAMBER.

The President said that when he attended the last meeting of the Central Chamber of Agriculture in London the feeling of the majority of farmers was entirely against admitting Irish stores at all. Some thought they ought to be admitted, but the general tendency of the meeting was against it. Perhaps there might be a certain amount of risk, but he quite recognised that there was a very great loss to the English grazier who could not get cattle to eat his land. At the same time the Irish farmer had his land over-stocked, and things must be in a very deplorable condition. He quite agreed with the resolution, but he would emphasize that they would not have Irish stores from the south where there had been a bad fit of disease. The Department of Agriculture in Ireland had, perhaps, not looked after their business as well as they might have done—perhaps the police authorities had been a little bit misled in another direction. (Laughter). One great man had told him that it was quite a common occurrence to see cattle in a field at bedtime, and find them ten or fifteen miles away at breakfast time next morning. If that was a fact there was certainly an element of danger in it. There was also danger of the disease lurking about in railway trucks, steamboats, and lairages where diseased cattle had been recently.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

PROPOSED CONTINENTAL TOUR.

An informal discussion afterwards took place regarding a proposed continental tour, and correspondence was read from railway agents suggesting an itinerary in which the farming and dairying of Holland might be inspected.

No final or definite arrangement was come to.

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

VII.—TELLS OF TRANSFORMATIONS WORKED UPON A WEDDING-GOWN

"I never told you, did I?" said Patty, "that on a widow with a nice foundation of an income, which I add to by taking private orders for millinery. Well, I never did talk much about it—and I shan't begin now.

"But about the first order I had to me is this. There was I one Monday afternoon—working away with that peach-blossom poplin Mrs. King gave me for Diamond-dyeing her parlour curtains, and there was she herself bubbling away about her wedding-day when she first wore the poplin, and begging me not to dye it too dark. 'Keep it flowery, my dearie,' she said—'just the colour of full-blown roses that I've got a notion that I'll be a wedding-gown again.'

"Well—it was silly, but true as I'm telling you I had a bit of a cry as I hung out the poplin with every care, to dry in the garden that I went back—and set to reading the Diamond-Dye Book of Directions to the old lady—and was glad it interested her.

"Then I brought in the poplin—and pressed it with a hot iron—well—I was thinking my own thoughts when in burst a man, knocking and opening the door at the same time—and 'Mother,' said he, 'Where are you?' He took her clean in his arms—and carried her round my kitchen—and then set her down again—and looked at me and at the lavender poplin and laughed like a happy boy.

"Well, I don't say more—but my cheeks just flamed as his mother told him about the wedding gown and what she had said to me an hour before."

TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL.

A WATER TROUGH NEAR TADCASTER.

KIPPAX, TADCASTER, ALLERTON, AND ABERFORD AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at Tadcaster —Mr J. W. Blackburn (vice-chairman) presiding. Other members present were the Rev. Canon Greenwood (Grimston), Rev. C. D. Ash (Saxton), Messrs T. H. Prater (Partington), E. Parker (Lecklumb), J. H. Ingleby, J.P., W. Sykes, and J. Nettleton (Tadcaster), W. Simpson (Lead), T. Hey and J. E. Cawthorn (Sherburn), F. Myers (Hillthorpe), R. Wright (Barkwith), T. Wordsworth and E. H. Lowe (Preston), W. B. Gray (Church Fenton, J. Pick (Ulleskelf), Watson (Stutton), W. Crosland, J.P., and A. Johnson (South Milford), Copley (Riccall), F. Phillips, W. Robinson, and G. Pearson (Allerton Bywater), and J. Y. Wheatley (Appleton Roebuck), with the Clerk (Mr G. A. Bromet), the medical officer (Dr Hill), the surveyor (Mr Scott), and the sanitary inspectors (Messrs Driver and Wood).

THE HOUSE

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been 6 admissions to the workhouse and 5 discharges, and the number of inmates was 91 in the workhouse and 17 in the children's home—108 against 99 at the corresponding date of last year. The tramps relieved during the two weeks were 18 and 44 against 13 and 23.

At a meeting of the House Committee a letter was read from the secretary of the Yorkshire Poor Law Unions' Association stating that the Local Government Board have sanctioned the way ticket system for dealing with casual paupers, and he asked the Board to appoint a representative on the Vagrancy Committee. Mr Nettleton was appointed.—Plans and estimates for the alterations proposed to be made to the workhouse were submitted, and it was decided that specifications be got out.—The thanks of the Board were given to Mrs Scatchard, Mrs Sykes, and Mrs Brooksbank for gifts to the inmates.

The minutes of the Ribbrough Home Committee showed that twenty-five couples applying for the position of foster parents are to be asked to appear before them.

A GIFT—FORMER CLERK'S PHOTO

Mr Prater proposed a vote of thanks to the Rev. Canon Greenwood for presenting the Board with a framed photograph of Mr J. A. Bromet, the former Clerk to the Board. They were all delighted to see Mr Bromet's photo there; he was one of the most courteous and efficient gentlemen any Board could ever have as a Clerk.

The Chairman seconded, and the proposal was adopted.

DISTRICT COUNCIL

At a meeting of the District Council it was reported that the treasurer had a balance in hand of £3,859. On district roads a sum of £280 was spent during the fortnight.

The Highways Committee minutes showed that in regard to the proposed road improvements at Allerton Bywater the question of the land required had not been definitely settled.—The Local Government Board forwarded a copy of correspondence they had had with Aberford Parish Council relative to a quarry and asked their observations thereon. The Clerk's reply was submitted and approved.—In regard to the market place at Tadcaster, a letter was read from property complaining of inconvenience and obstruction by stalls being placed on it. The matter was adjourned.

A ROADS LIST

Mr Prater proposed that a list be supplied of the roads suggested by the surveyor to be scheduled as first and second class.

Mr Cawthorn seconded.

A lengthy discussion ensued, and Mr Crosland said that they wanted to know all the roads that had been scheduled by Mr Scott.

Mr Wright said that he wanted to know if any good purpose would be served by such a return. He understood that the list had to be in by last Friday, and he contended that it would be a waste of time for Mr Scott to prepare a list.

Mr Scott said he had the plans there and they could be seen.

Mr Parker said he could not see any objection to a list being supplied.

The resolution was agreed to.

A WATER-TROUGH—PATHETIC LETTER

Mr W. Simpson, hon. sec. of the Metropolitan Drinking Fountain and Cattle Trough Association, wrote on May 13th as follows:—"The enclosed is a copy of a pathetic letter I have received from Mrs Edward Cox, of Beechlands, York. Will you kindly give the question of water at the trough your early attention?" The letter is as follows:—

I think your Society has put the new trough for cattle on the Tadcaster Road (not far from Tadcaster)? This trough would be an immense boon to the hundreds of cattle which pass along this road on their way from Tadcaster and other places to York. On the 12th May a cow, utterly exhausted, lay down in front of our gate. I asked the drovers why they had not given her some water, on the eight miles from Tadcaster here, and they said they were very disappointed to find the new trough quite dry, and that they would have been any water in it during the time it has been put up. It would be such a blessing for the animals if they could drink there; that I am venturing to write to you to draw your attention to the matter.

The Clerk said that the matter had been before the Council and it had been referred to the local Water Committee at Tadcaster, who stated they would supply water to the trough at the usual rate.

Mr Myers said it would be difficult to estimate the amount of water that would be used.

Mr Parker said that it seemed to him that they had no power to supply water. He believed the Highways Committee would be quite willing to pay for the water if they had the power.

The Clerk suggested that they should apply for the sanction of the Local Government Board to the charge being laid on the whole district.

The Rev. Canon Greenwood said it seemed unfair to ask Tadcaster to supply the water for nothing. In the case of the trough he asked if there was any automatic arrangement whereby there would be no waste.

Mr Ingleby said there was.

The Rev. Canon Greenwood suggested, in the interests of the poor beasts and Tadcaster, that the District Council pay for the water if possible.

Mr Sykes said it was felt that it was a precedent that might be followed in half-a-dozen places, and Tadcaster water area was entirely separate from the place where the trough had been put. The giving of the trough was a great kindness, and was very much appreciated, but if they saddled the ratepayers of Tadcaster with the cost of the water some of them might be turned out at next election. (Laughter).

Mr Parker proposed that the Clerk write to the Local Government Board, and ask for their sanction to this District Council supplying the water.

This was agreed to.

Mr Parker explained, in regard to a roadman's wages, that at last meeting he had been granted an increase of 1s. per week, and it was not for the maintenance of a bicycle.

SANITARY COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Sanitary and Buildings Committee the Garforth Hospital Sub-Committee was reappointed. Mr Prater wrote stating permission to supply a house in Berwick with water from the Garforth mains, and the necessary permission was given.—It was reported that nothing had been done in regard to the Newton water supply, and the Clerk is to write to the owner.—Plans were submitted by John Smith's Co. for 14 cottages to be erected on York Road, Tadcaster, and they were approved.—Mr Ashburn Bayon it was reported that the out-fall required cleaning, and the inspector was instructed to have the work done.—A letter was received from the County medical officer in regard to the Milford water supply, and the matter was referred to Dr Hill and the inspector.—A sewer in High Street, Tadcaster is to be repaired.—In regard to the collection of water rents at Lock Lane and Allerton Bywater, it was resolved to pay £15 to Mr T. C. Lightley (Coalfield) for the work he has done, and Mr J. Hutchinson was appointed collector, the remuneration to be 5 per cent. on the collection.—In regard to the Tadcaster water supply, it is proposed to make a new bore hole, and a tender (£1,100) for the work was accepted.—A letter was received from the Town Clerk of Leeds stating that the Corporation were resuming negotiations with Tadcaster, and he asked if the Council wanted a water supply to reply at once. The letter was referred to the special Water Committee, and it was reported that the Rivers Board had agreed to receive a deputation with respect to the Kippax sewage works.—A letter was received from a person at Allerton Bywater stating that he could not get his ashpit cleared out. The inspector will attend to the matter.—It was reported that during the month there had been four cases of scarlet fever, two of enteric, and two of tuberculosis. It was recommended that Askham Bryan should have a water supply from York, and the Clerk was instructed to write for terms.

TADCASTER PETTY SESSIONS.

LANGUAGE—DISTRICT GETTING A BAD NAME

At Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday the magistrates present were Mr E. M. Lawson Smith (in the chair), Mr J. H. Ingleby, and Mr Wailes Fairbairn.

A poor rate of 1s. and 2s. was passed for Catterton.

The license of the Britannia Inn, Tadcaster, was transferred to Mr John Oddy Walker.

Mr A. J. Mortimer, of the Roebuck Inn, Appleton Roebuck, and Mr Herbert Scruton, Sun Inn, Bolton Percy, were granted an hour's extension for village feasts

AN OLD SOLDIER'S SLEEP

Arthur Hastings-Wright, labourer, of no fixed abode, was charged with having slept out in the open at Tadcaster on May 25th.

Defendant said that he had walked from York, and having got within about a mile of Tadcaster, he sat down and fell asleep.

The police evidence was that at 2.20 that morning defendant was found asleep on the grass at the York Road.

Supt. Slack said the man was an old soldier, and had the Egyptian medal and the South African star. He suggested that he should be allowed to go on promising to clear out of the town.

The magistrates allowed the defendant to go.

LANGUAGE AT STUTTON

Charles Nicholson, labourer, of Stutton, and Mary Lynes, married woman, of Stutton, were charged with using obscene language.

Nicholson, who was working, did not appear, but the woman said she was not guilty.

P.C. Hardy said that at 10.55 p.m. on the 16th inst he was in Stutton Lane, Stutton, and he heard some persons shouting and using bad language. He went up the road and came upon the defendants, who appeared to have been falling-out. Nichol-on was very abusive, and he had to threaten to lock him up before he would go away.

Supt. Slack: Can you read?—Lynes: No, I am no scholar, sir.

Defendant: What did I say? You could not see one's because you were sticking in the hedge, I had never seen him in my life before.

Supt. Slack: Was it possible to hear the language all over Stutton village?—Witness: Yes.

Defendant: They were all asleep. I have never seen that man in Stutton.

Supt. Slack: He was there that time.

Defendant: It is very hard that an owd woman turned no should be brought up here.

Supt. Slack: We have not often cases of bad language at Stutton, and we don't want them.

The Chairman: We don't want to be hard on you, but this language is getting rather common about here, and the district is getting a bad name for it, and you will have the penalty to pay if you indulge in language of this sort. We shall not deal hardly with you this time, but if you come again you will get it hot.

A fine of 1s. and costs was imposed in each case.

In a stable in Green Lane, Selby, a pair of sparrows have built their nest in the muzzle of a horse's bridle, which has been hanging on the stable wall.

In regard to Crossgates Scouts, a writer says:—"Forming a troop in a much easier task than re-establishing one, and Scoutmaster Marsden, who gallantly stepped into the breach consequent upon the resignation of Scoutmasters Simpson and Hall within a short period of one another, is finding it hard to re-imbue the troop with its old Spirit of zest and emulation. The inability to apply the funds raised by the bazaar some two years ago to the practical purpose of providing a club house, for which the money was intended, has seemed to cast a damper on the movement among their one-time ardent supporters.

TADCASTER CHAMBER OF AGRICULTURE.

FARMERS AND IMPORTATION OF IRISH CATTLE.

DRINKING TROUGH AT COLTON LANE END.

A meeting of the Tadcaster and District Chamber of Agriculture was held on Tuesday in the Longdesborough Hotel, Tadcaster, for the purpose of discussing the question of the advisability of excluding from the district animals from Ireland, and also to consider the question of a drinking trough situated at Colton Lane, on the York Road. Mr C. B. Lamb (President of the Chamber) occupied the chair, and others present were Messrs F. Myers, A. Kendall, J. J. Slater, T. Midgley, W. K. Steel, L. Sampson, F. Jackson, and T. B. Watson (secretary).

COUNTY COUNCIL'S QUERY

The question of excluding cattle from Ireland was placed before the Chamber in a letter from the West Riding County Council asking for the Chamber's opinion on the subject.

Mr Sampson said he did not think they could do anything in the matter, because they had already opened the ports.

Mr Myers said he had heard they were admitting cattle from the South of Ireland, and he thought they ought to protest against that.

Mr G. Midgley: I think we ought to express an opinion, or they will be grumbling afterwards. I suppose they (the West Riding County Council) will be guided by what is said to them on the matter.

"A SERIOUS THING."

Mr Myers: We shall be pleased to have stock cattle admitted from the North of Ireland, but not to come from any place near where there is foot and mouth disease. It would be a serious thing, especially in view of the breed of herds.

Mr Midgley: It is a question whether we can keep them out of the West Riding.

Mr Myers: We are not keeping them out of the West Riding now. They are coming in every day.

The Chairman: I gather they are only coming from the North of Ireland.

Mr Watson: I understand that is so.

Mr Jackson: I have heard they are running a few over the fire.

The Chairman: But they are pretty 'cute over there.

Mr Myers: I have heard of a few cases where they have been removed during the night.

The Chairman suggested that they should reply to the letter from the County Council, stating that they did not object to cattle being brought in from the North of Ireland, but objecting to them coming in from the South of Ireland, where there had been disease.

Mr Midgley thought that if the County Council did take steps to keep them out it would create strong feeling.

The Secretary thought it was rather late to object to cattle coming into the Riding.

THE RESOLUTION

Mr Midgley moved, and Mr Slater seconded: That this Chamber is of the opinion that cattle be allowed to come into the West Riding from the North of Ireland subject to restrictions being placed upon them from time to time by the Board of Agriculture.

Mr Sampson objected, stating that such a state of affairs existed already.

The meeting ultimately decided to adopt the Chairman's suggestion.

TROUGH WITHOUT WATER.

The question of providing water for the drinking trough at Colton Lane end, on the York Road, arose out of a letter sent to the Chamber by Mr E. C. Brooksbank. The letter mentioned that the trough was placed there on the understanding that the Tadcaster District Council should supply the water from their main, but the Tadcaster Water Committee had refused to supply the water. He thought it was a matter that should be brought before the Chamber, as it was one of interest to farmers.

The Chairman said he did not consider it was a matter for the Chamber. They ought not to be called upon to supply the water.

The Secretary read a letter from a lady who said that to allow the trough to stand dry on a dusty road was not a condition of affairs that ought to be allowed in a Christian country.

The question of cost was raised, and Mr Myers said he had heard that the probable cost would be £10 per annum.

Mr Midgley moved that no action be taken in the matter.

This was agreed to.

Garforth has a school population of 797 and Kippax has 899.

A SWILLINGTON BRIDGE TRAGEDY.

BYE-WORKMAN DROWNS HIMSELF.

An inquest was held at Oulton on Friday morning by the Coroner for the West Riding (Mr F. P. Maitland) on the body of Edward Fleming (28), a colliery bye-workman, living at lodgings at Oulton, who drowned himself in the River Aire at Swillington on Wednesday night.

James Marrion, who lodged along with the deceased at 3, Bentley Square, Oulton, said he had known Fleming since September last. He was a bye-workman at the Robin Hood Pit, and had worked "on nights" regularly up to Monday night. He was a native of Creeve, Roscommon, Ireland. As a rule, he had enjoyed good health, with the exception of an occasional cold when he would complain of pains in his head. He had not been off work, neither had he been medically attended. On Wednesday he appeared somewhat strange and had made the remark to his landlady that "many a man in Wakefield (meaning the Asylum) was not as bad as he was." There was no trouble that he knew of.

Michael Joyce, a labourer, nineteen years of age, said he came to lodge along with the deceased at Oulton on Wednesday afternoon. In the evening, about 6.45 p.m., Fleming asked him to go for a walk, and they went towards Swillington. He had noticed that deceased appeared strange. On reaching the first bridge crossing the Aire and Calder Canal he (deceased) asked him to "swop" caps, but witness pointed out that his cap was an old one while that of Fleming was practically new. Fleming answered "It will do for me," and the exchange was made.

The Coroner: Why did you exchange caps? Were you afraid of him?

Witness: No.

The Coroner: You would not do it to any man?

Witness: Yes, I would; it was better than mine. (Laughter).

Joyce said they proceeded to the bridge leading over the river Aire, which is but a few yards further on. Witness sat on the low wall facing the road, and Fleming stood inside the bridge on the bank, and looked over the bridge for a short while, and then walked along the bank. A few moments later when he looked round for Fleming he saw him in the water, but he had heard no splash. He shouted to him "Teddy," and deceased answered "Goodbye, Joyce."

After so said he shouted to some men who were coming along, and they ran towards the river bank, but arrived too late for deceased had sunk, and all they saw were a few bubbles on the surface. The men then proceeded to Oulton where they informed P.C. Coldwell, who, together with P.C. Abbott, grappled for the body, which was recovered about 11 p.m.

P.C. Coldwell, who spoke to recovering the body, said that twopence was found on the body along with an insurance card.

The Coroner, in advising the jury to return a verdict of "Suicide whilst temporarily insane," said the action of changing caps was a strange one, but the idea seemed to be economical as his cap was not worth 6d.

The jury returned a verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind."

GAME TRESPASS AT TEMPLE-NEWSAM.

A POLICEMAN'S CHASE.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Patrick Hawkins, labourer, of Leeds, was summoned for trespassing on land in search of game.

Evidence was given by William Day, gamekeeper, who said that about 7.20 p.m. on 20th inst he saw the defendant, who was accompanied by a dog, enter land attached to White Beck Farm, Halton, and belonging to the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P. A rabbit was chased and caught.

Defendant said that as he was passing the field he saw the rabbit and gave chase. The rabbit hid under some thorns, and he went towards it. When he saw the rabbit it was very tempting, and he took it. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was imposed, and defendant was told to keep his dog away from rabbits.

Defendant: I thank you very much.

Michael O'Donald, labourer, of Leeds, was charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with coming from land and being in possession of game recently killed.

P.C. Stothard stated that about 5.20 a.m. on May 14th he was on duty at Templenewsam, when he saw two men come from land belonging to the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., and they were carrying a sack. The men ran away, and he gave chase and succeeded in catching the defendant, who was searched. In his possession was a gun and two hares, which had recently been killed.

There was a bad record against O'Donald, who was fined £5 and costs, the full penalty, or, in default, two months.

SHERBURN-IN-ELMET ENDOWED SCHOOL.

A NEW SCHEME.

Sherburn-in-Elmet, like many other ancient Yorkshire towns formerly of some importance, still has its own Grammar School Foundation, dating back to those days when men of means gave liberally to further movements for the instruction and care of the young. In this case it was one Robert Hungate, a local landowner, who became the benefactor. By his will, dated May 10th, 1619, he founded a "hospital" as it was then termed, otherwise an almshouse, together with school, in which 24 orphan boys were to be maintained, provided with clothing, and educated. The annual income of the endowed land, derived from neighbourhood lands, amounted to about £132, but in course of time it assumed bigger proportions, as was ascertained when the foundation came under the direction of the Court of Chancery in 1860. To-day the gross amount is much more than double the original sum available, including, as it does, interest on investments of accumulated funds, and it seems to have attracted the notice of the Board of Education. At all events, under the provisions of the Charitable Trusts Acts, they have stepped in and devised a scheme, and, subject to possible modification as the result of objections, this is likely to come into force early next month.

The proposed rearrangement consists largely of an alteration in the method of administration. First of all, in place of the two trustees appointed by the owners and occupiers of land in Sherburn and Saxton, there are to be two representative trustees, one appointed by the Sherburn Parish Council and the other by the West Riding County Council; nevertheless, the present trustees are to remain in office for their lives as supernumerary members. Then, after setting aside certain sums of money for specific purposes, in accordance with the will of the founder, an "Educational Advancement Fund" is to be established with the balance, to be administered by a separate governing body of seven persons, three appointed by the trustees, two by the Sherburn Parish Council, and two by the West Riding Council. This fund really represents the modern development of the institution, inasmuch as it allows not only for exhibitions open to children within the privileged area, but for payments in aid of further education, such as evening classes or continuation schools, as well as special instruction, technical training, and so fourth. Moreover, a sum of £20 a year is earmarked in respect of the health or physical condition of children attending any public elementary school in the area.

The "York-shire Post" says:—Such is the scheme in outline. But it is apparently more than it looks on paper. For one thing, by means taking full control out of the hands of purely local persons. That, at least, is what is feared. For 297 years the affairs have been administered by people on the spot, and the changing times and methods are to transfer the direction more or less to outsiders. For instance, all the property and investments are to be vested in the Official Trustee and the Board of Governors is to be settled by public vote and the County Council. The significance of the scheme will be understood when it is stated that this is the only boys' school in Sherburn. While there are, and have been for many years, only four inmates of the "hospital," the day school can count over 100 boys on the roll. Under the benevolent Hungate's estimate of a future demand has been exceeded even in greater degree than the financial resources have increased. One purpose of the new scheme, in fact, admits of the use of the building as a public elementary school instead of on the system of upper and lower schools; and it is stipulated further that if the school-master object to act as overseer of the hospital a separate overseer can be appointed. A sum of £127 a year is to be allowed for the purposes of the "hospital," with £20 for the trustees to use for the benefit of the school. The residue, exceeding £20 as a pension to the post overseer, is to be dealt with by the governors' body part of the "Educational Advancement Fund," one of whose powers will be to provide land and suitable buildings for special instruction. In that connection, there would appear to be some proud old picturesque Sherburn, who hope sincerely it does not mean the demolition of the ancient structure which the present trustees have preserved all these years, or that any part of it is to be carried away, the men ran away, and he gave chase and succeeded in catching the defendant, who was searched. In his the building of the Norman nave of Sherburn Church.

MOTORIST'S OFFENCE AT MONK FRYSTON.

MARRIAGE OR ENGAGEMENT?

The magistrates at Selby Petty Sessions on Monday were the Rev. B. Hemsworth (Chairman), Mr Mark Sutcliffe, Mr W. H. Cheesman, Dr J. Somers, Mr Harris Anson, and Mr T. S. Ullathorne.

Lyndon Hill, motor engineer, Chapel Allerton, was summoned for driving a motor cycle and side-car to the danger of the public at Monk Fryston, on Saturday afternoon, the 2nd inst.

Mr W. T. Silvester, Goole, defended.

The police stated that there was a good deal of traffic in the village owing to the holding of a bazaar at Monk Fryston Park, and that the defendant drove at the rate of 25 miles an hour.

Defendant denied that he drove at a dangerous pace, and his evidence was supported by Miss Lilian Lee, South Parade, Leeds, who was riding in the side car. The young lady said that on the country road the speedometer showed a rate of not more than ten miles an hour.

Superintendent Stafford: Your name is not Lee now, I think.

Witness: Yes, it is.

Have you not got married to the defendant since that occasion?—No, I do not think so. (Laughter).

Perhaps you are engaged to him, then?—Yes.

Defendant was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

Harold Poskitt, motor engineer, Selby, was fined 1s. and costs for driving a motor cycle at a dangerous speed through Gowthorpe Street, Selby, on the 8th inst.

William Handa, motor car proprietor, Matlock, was ordered to pay 2s. 6d. and costs for not having the weight painted on a heavy motor car driven at Chapel Haddlesey on the 19th inst.

WHAT HAPPENED AT WOODLESFORD.

WOMAN CHARGES MINER WITH ASSAULT.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Fred Mitchell, a miner, of Woodlesford, was summoned by Mrs Clara Thorpe, of Woodlesford, for assault.

The prosecutrix stated that about two o'clock on Friday, May 15th, she went out of her house to take in some washing, when she saw a pelican boy sitting on a wall, and went to talk with her. They were talking of a trip to Blackpool when the defendant came out of his house, and, after using bad language to her, struck her on the breast. She could not give any reason for his doing so unless it was his wife.

Mrs Goodall, a neighbour, said she was seated on a chair on the pavement when Mrs Mitchell came out of her house and commenced a conversation. Mitchell came up and made use of bad language and struck Mrs Thorpe.

The Chairman: Was he sober?

Witness: No, he was drunk.

Called by the defendant, a witness named Stead said that she never saw Mitchell leave his doorstep. Mrs Thorpe was attending outside her door and using bad language. She also threatened to throw a bucket of water over him.

P.C. Coldwell spoke to hearing the defendant use a steady man and a good worker.

Both parties were bound over in the sum of £5 to keep peace for six months.

BARKSTON ASH FARMERS AND IRISH CATTLE

Signatures were again taken on Monday at Selby Auction Mart on the question whether or not Irish cattle should be imported into the West Riding at the present time, taking into consideration the prevalence of foot and mouth disease in certain parts of Ireland.

Altogether 52 voted in favour of importation under proper restrictions and regulations. On the other hand 26 were against importation until Ireland had a clean bill of health.

The signatures are to be presented to the West Riding County Council.

MEMORIAL HALL EXTENSION.—Through the generosity of Miss Stansfeld, of Selby, who in addition to other gifts to the town is the founder of the women's ward at the Cottage Hospital, a great addition is being made to the Standeng Memorial Hall, the cost of which is being defrayed by that lady. A large building is being erected over the billiard-room for the further extension of St. James's parochial work.

LOCAL GENTLEMEN AND HOME RULE.

A NON-PARTISAN CALL FOR COMPROMISE.

At a non-party meeting held at the Queen's Hotel, Leeds, Mr E. C. Meysey-Thompson, M.P., presided, the following resolution, moved by Mr Henry Barran (Shadwell Grange), seconded by the Hon. Henry Wentworth Fitzwilliam, was passed unanimously:—

That we, Yorkshiremen of moderate views, putting aside all party considerations, wish to record our deep conviction that, although a large number of people in England may be unaware of it, the intensity of feeling which exists in Ulster, and in other parts of Ireland, with regard to the present Home Rule Bill is such that it cannot be forced upon Ireland without civil war.

We, therefore, call upon all Members of Parliament to avert this catastrophe by insisting upon a settlement by consent, and as the result of sacrifices on both sides. A satisfactory settlement must, in our opinion, secure to the province of Ulster exclusion from the Dublin Parliament until such time as it shall voluntarily come in, and also include such alterations in the Bill as will satisfy moderate opinion with regard to the government of the rest of Ireland.

The gentlemen supporting this resolution include:—

ROTHWELL AND DISTRICT FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

A meeting of the Rothwell and District Friendly Societies' Committee was held at Rothwell on Saturday, Mr A. Blackburn (President) presiding. Others present were Mr J. Wade (secretary), Mr W. H. Blacker (treasurer), Messrs Wm. Naylor, and Watson (Governors), and the following delegates:—Mr F. Brown (Greensfield Order of Oddfellows), Mr H. Twohey (Woodlesford branch of the Rechabites), and Messrs E. Ward, Linley, and Brook (Ancient Order of Romans).

The President reported on the steps which had been taken by the committee with regard to the demonstration to be held in July. Three neighbouring Councils are to be invited to attend.

It was reported that there were at the present time only about three societies who were not affiliated with the Council.

The President said he regretted that societies in the district had not joined Friendly Councils. He wanted, he said, to see the Council a fighting Council, and a vigorous and a healthy one.

Referring to the doctors and the Insurance Act, he said that at present doctors were making small fortunes out of the Act, yet they wanted to filch more out of the working classes.

The following resolutions were moved by Mr J. Wade and carried:—

(1) "That in the opinion of the Council it is not desirable as a general rule to encourage transfers between societies and branches affiliated with Friendly Councils."

(2) "In accordance with section 16, subsection 4 of the National Health Insurance Act, which empowers Insurance Committees to provide, in whole or in part, the expenses of maintenance of an insured person to and from a sanatorium or institution to which he may be sent for treatment, the Council are of opinion that an extension of this section is necessary, whereby Approved Societies may distribute a sum of money to all such persons as may be sent for rest or for the expense incurred in the case of sick pay during the period of the insured person's treatment in the institution."

In moving the latter resolution, Mr Wade said that there were three modes of treatment for tuberculosis. One was institutional or sanatorium treatment, dispensary treatment, and domiciliary or home treatment. The Act permitted that certain expenses be allowed by the Insurance Committees to persons who had no travel to institutions. Very often in the case of poor sons who were the bread-winners of the family for treatment, there was staring them in the face the difficulty of what, if they went, would become of their wives and families. A certain sum of money was allowed under the Act for institutional treatment, and he believed that if the money was efficiently used and applied there would still be a balance out of which provision of domiciliary treatment could be made. Any difficulty that might be in their way so far as going into a sanatorium was concerned. There would be nothing so disconcerting to him if he had the thought that his property and goods had to be sold to pay the rent.

Mr A. Blackburn seconded the resolution, which was supported by Mr E. Ward, and carried.

Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they say, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is the system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr. ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7
On Alternate Saturdays, May 30 and June 13.
Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION, ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s. SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
Special Notice.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, MAY 30th, 1914.

The Local Government Board has approved of the scheme promoted by the Yorkshire Poor Law Unions' Association whereby vagrants will be dealt with on an inter-union basis, and it will be formulated and managed by a committee consisting of a representative from each Union. Guardians have, in past years, made various attempts to reduce vagrancy, but with comparatively little success, and the way ticket system is the latest plan which has received the support of Yorkshire Boards. In certain counties in the South where the scheme has been tried it is stated that vagrancy has undergone a great reduction, but this only means that tramps have not sought public assistance in the same degree; it is not suggested that they have been driven off the roads and compelled to seek employment. One feature of the way-ticket system is that it makes special provision for the genuine working-man, who will no longer have to run the risk of being classed among the flotsam and jetsam of our civilization, and if it does any good to him the Guardians will have accomplished something. It is, however, impossible to deal successfully with the tramp question without going to its root, and the wasted money of the past decade or two in attempts to find a solution is a serious commentary upon English methods. Boards of Guardians throughout the country have, at the ratepayers' expense, built special buildings for the housing of vagrants, they have employed officials to deal with them, and they have had to feed them, yet they have had to admit failure. And so it will be to the end unless more drastic measures are taken. Vagrants have an aversion to work, and they will not labour unless they are compelled, and the only way by which they can be dealt with effectually is to wean them back to the paths of industry. Guardians may start whatever schemes they please, but so long as the tramp is a free agent, they will never eradicate vagrancy, although they may mitigate the evil for a time. Vagrants have forfeited every claim to be dealt with as free Britons—they are parasites, living upon their industrious fellows, and the propagation of their kind is a menace to the nation. Thousands of tramps—men and women—are on the roads at the present time, and they will never mend their ways until the question is treated from a national standpoint. New laws for the special benefit of vagrants are required, and when these are passed Guardians will not be troubled with the problem. Lunatics and feeble-minded people are housed in special institutions, bad boys are sent to industrial schools and reformatories, and law-breakers are put into prison, but vagrants are allowed to roam about the country, and do practically as they please. Why should they not be detained by the police and sent to labour colonies, where they may learn the value of honest work?

Just as some people, who would be filled with indignation were they charged with dishonesty, have no qualms of conscience at defrauding the railway companies by travelling without paying their fares, there are others who apparently think it is no sin to defraud the State. With them, honesty is a virtue to be practised when convenient. Malingering among insured persons, we are told, is widely practised, and the difficulty of detection seems to encourage these offenders in their erring ways. In one large society women and men over sixty years of age are stated to be the principal sinners, and this opens out the interesting question of the comparative honesty of men and women. Numerous societies having large numbers of female members have been hard hit, and the heavy drain upon the funds has brought some of them to a state bordering on insolvency. It has been asserted that the average woman lives longer than the average man, but probably those insured females who have to work hard physically in order to earn their daily bread will yield no low mortality. Before the Insurance Act came into operation, these women had to maintain their efficiency in the best way they could, and they could not afford to take much rest, but now it is feared that many of them, whenever they feel out-of-sorts—a condition that would not have been marked prior to the Insurance Act coming into operation—they too readily inconvenience their employers and avail themselves of sickness benefit. It may be assumed that they are not well, but a day's rest sets them up again, and cases have occurred in which women, drawing 7s. 6d. a week, have been discovered busily engaged in performing heavy tasks in their own homes. No doubt they think that they are entitled to some benefit from the State, seeing they have to pay a few coppers a week, but they cannot see the difference between illness, which incapacitates from work and an indisposition which a rest of a day or two would get rid of. Many of these women, it may be admitted, are not deliberately dishonest in thus milking the State exchequer, because they believe they are acting fully in accordance with the spirit of national insurance, the aim of which is to keep the worker healthy, but they fail to discern that it was never intended a worker should seek sickness benefit immediately he or she had an attack of indigestion or some slight trouble. Many cases of male malingerers have come to light, and one of the worst was that of a man at Hulme who was receiving benefit from his society whilst all the time he was at work. Of course, malingering is no new thing. It was the bane of Friendly Society work in the old days, but as a much greater number of persons are now insured, and as all sorts and conditions of men and women—good, bad, and indifferent—have come within the purview of the Insurance Act, the army of malingerers has, of course, increased. No doubt hundreds of cases go undetected—people quite able to work are cheating both the doctors and the State—and when offenders are discovered no quarter should be shown to them. Malingering is a mean thing—a dishonest action, robbing both the State and the Insurance society, and bringing the class to which the malingerer belongs into disrepute. In many case in towns it is to be feared that doctors have too many patients in order to efficiently supervise every case, and there is a tendency to carelessness. In one instance a medical man was known to have signed a certificate for a man who all the time his wife was drawing the sickness benefit was in gaol. In order to obtain better supervision, it is surely advisable that the number of insured persons allotted to each doctor should be limited.

Mr G. Lane-Fox, M.P., and the Hon. Mrs Lane-Fox have gone abroad for the Whitsuntide recess.

On Tuesday Messrs Hepper and Sons sold by auction for £3,250 a freehold residential estate known as Belle Vue, Adel, with the lodge, outbuildings, and gardens. The residence was recently in the occupation of Mr R. Humble. The area of the estate is four acres.

Sharp's New Town Hall—At the Selby Town Hall, on Thursday Mr Edgar Dudley, F.S.I., Local Government Board Inspector, held an inquiry into the application of the Selby District Council for sanction to borrow £3,300 for the purchase of the Missionary interest of the Museum Hall, which is to be converted into a new town hall. There was no opposition.

Had Been to the Races.—William Stranack (67), of Cawood, was charged at York with begging in Fossgate on May 20th. Police Constable Holliday proved the case, but the defendant denied the charge. He had, he said, been to York races that day. The Bench dismissed the summons, and the defendant promised to leave the city at once.

Sir J. W. Ramsden's Will.—Sir John William Ramsden, of Byram Park, left £489,028. Sir John Frecheville Ramsden, of Byram, his son, is the sole executor. Testator leaves 50,000 £1 shares in the Tali Ayer Rubber Estates in trust for his grandson, Richard Brinsley Ford, and his wife, and issue; £5,000 and £5,000 a year to his daughter, Hermione Charlotte Ramsden; £21,000 to his cousin, Jonkyn Francis Lord Muncaster; £1,000 to William Henry Wadham Powell, formerly his private secretary, for the assistance he has rendered him for so many years; £20,000 to his son, "as applied in a manner in which I intend to acquaint him." The residue of his property is left to his son, John Frecheville Ramsden.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL

Off to Rome.—The Rev. W. G. Softley, the resident Primitive Methodist Minister at Rothwell, has left for a tour in Rome, along with the Rev. E. Barrett (Leeds). He will be away for about a month.

Miners' Enforced Holiday.—The men employed at the Rose Pit, Rothwell, have been unable to resume work this week owing to the breakdown, reported last week. It had been anticipated that work would be resumed last Tuesday.

Honours.—Seventeen members of Rothwell Homing Society sent 175 birds to take part in the race from Banbury (116 miles). Results:—W. Illingworth 927, Fox Bros. 922, J. Armitage 919, S. Harrison 910, The Nunns 906, F. Kelsall 902, A. Hodgkinson 894, 879, J. Crossley 888, G. Ward 885, Fox Bros. 883 (two birds), W. Blackburn 877.

Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions.—The Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Mr J. Hirst, Mr Evans, Mr F. M. Lupton, and Col. A. M. Sagar Musgrave. Before commencing the business of the Court the Chairman announced that owing to the Whitsuntide holidays the Court would not be held next Tuesday.

Drink.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Annie Mawson, a married woman, living in Hunslet, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Rothwell, on Sunday night. PC Bennett said she had been spoken to on Commercial Street defendant refused to give any information regarding herself, and had to be taken to the police station at Leeds. Mawson said she had been visiting some friends, and had a little too much to drink. A fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

Bibby's Annual.—"Bibby's Annual," which has just been published, is beautifully printed and splendidly illustrated. It would be difficult to find better pictures in any publication, and the whole production is a work of art. The "annual," which extends to sixty-four large pages, contains numerous articles of an interesting and instructive character. These include "Idealization," "Truth in Art," "Child Education," "The Principal Factor in Success," "A Saunter Round the World," "Parades and Fairy Tales," "Creative Evolution and the Sex Passion," "The Feminine Renaissance," "Health and Healing," "Success and Failure," "Letters on Socialism," "Practical Education," eac.

Cricket.—On Saturday afternoon at Beeston a match was played between Rothwell W.M. Club (Marsh Villa) and Beeston Wed. Club, and the latter won easily. The winners batted first and after scoring 177 for 3 wickets, they declared. Scores:—Beeston—J. W. Sutton, lbw, b A Thurwl, 18; A. Leonard, c and b Thurwell, b J. Barrett, 80; Kellett, b A. Thurwell, 0; F. Johnson, not out, 24; extras, 9; total (for 3 wkts.), 177. Declared. Rothwell—J. Parker, b A Leonard, 18; S. Pritchard, b W. Warburton, 0; Fox, c Kellett, b A. Lconard, 11; L. Stringer, b W. Warburton, 0; J. W. Fox, c Leonard, b G. Pearson, 19; J. Taylor, c Leonard, b W. Warburton, 0; A. Thurwell, b W. Warburton, 13; J. Mack, not out, 2; G. Ashton, b W Warburton, 0; A. Thurwell, bit wkt., b W. Warburton, 0; J. Barrett, b W. Warburton, 0; extras, 6; total, 69.

Football.—The annual meeting of the Rothwell White Rose Football Club was held in the Old Band Room, Rothwell, on Saturday night, when there was a large gathering of the supporters of the club. Mr Humphrey presided. The report and balance sheet were discussed, and passed as being satisfactory. The election of Presidents was left over until the next meeting. It has been resolved that Mr J. Bradley was unanimously re-elected corresponding secretary, and Mr G. Tiffany was elected financial secretary. Mr W. Armstead was appointed treasurer. The following were appointed the committee:—Messrs. A. Fox, T. Banks, J. Lunn, J. Briggs, A. Padlor, J. Field, C. Tiffany, R. Whitehead, D. Copley, H. Copley, and F. Bickerdike. Mr J. Bradley is again to captain the first team, while Mr E Tiffany will act as vice-captain. It was decided to join the English Cup, the West Riding Cup, the Leeds and District Cup, and the Rothwell Charity Cup Competitions. A second team will be formed.

A Reply to Mr Charlesworth.—A correspondent, writing to a contemporary, says:—There is a report of a speech by Mr C. E. Charlesworth, in which he uses, as an illustration of the "too-much-legislation" which had crippled the coal trade "in many ways," the instance of his having the Openshaw given an order for £7,000 worth of electric lamps, when at the same time he had many thousands of pounds worth of other safety lamps on hand, and he had to send down those lamps to see whether the others (electric) were safe or not, and that he doubted whether the colliers would find the electric lamps of advantage. In making that statement, Mr Charlesworth seems to be under some misapprehension, as legislation has not been passed insisting upon the use of electric lamps, and from information obtained by the writer from headquarters, there seems to be not the slightest likelihood of this class of legislation being passed. It would, therefore, appear that if the £7,000 had been spent on increasing the miners' wages or some other possible more necessary improvement to the pit, it would have been put to better use.

ANNIVERSARY.—On Sunday the first of the anniversary services in connection with the Rothwell Primitive Methodist Sunday School took place. At all the services there were large congregations, and the singing of the special hymns by the children was an enjoyable feature. Mr E. H. Plows (Robin Hood) conducted the singing, and Mr J. C. Harrison presided at the organ. Recitations were given by the scholars, who had been carefully trained by Miss A. Kilburn. In the morning and evening sermons were preached by Mr W. Thurwell (Rothwell).

QUARRIERS AND THE WORLD'S MONEY.—On Friday at Wakefield John Dobson, grocer, Rothwell Haigh, was summoned by his wife, Lydia Dobson, for neglecting to maintain her. They parties were married on 19th February, 1913, each having children by a previous marriage. Complainant stated that shortly after their marriage she lent defendant £30; and since she refused two or three months ago to lend him another £40 he had made her life unbearable. He had refused to give her money to buy necessaries for the house, and had gone off drinking, leaving her to look after the shop. She asked for a separation order, with an allowance of 5s. per week. The Bench dismissed the case, considering that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant them in making an order.

CROSSGATES

The treasurer of Leeds Infirmary acknowledges receipt of £30 from Crossgates and District Medical Charities Society.

BOWLING.—On Saturday afternoon a League match was played at Tadcaster between the home team and Crossgates Recreation. The visitors sent only six players, and the full points of the other four games fell to Tadcaster. Scores:—Tadcaster 206, Recreation 56. Tadcaster names first.—D. Hill 21 v. Heron 1, W. Dyson 21 v. W. Elliott 0, T. Elliott 21 v. M. Elliot 8, L. S. Collins 17 v. J. P. Cowe 21, W. Milsom 21 v. Vimall 12, J. H. Hull 21 v. E. Preston 5.

PROPOSED UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL CLASS.—It is proposed to have a University Tutorial Class for Crossgates and district for next winter, and a preliminary meeting has been held with a view to obtaining support for it. There is every indication that a demand exists for such a class in the district, and, as the opportunity may not occur again for several years, it is hoped that a sufficient number of students will come forward to make the scheme possible. The class must contain not more than 32 students, and not fewer than 18, and any liberal subject may be chosen, viz., general history, literature, economics, philosophy, biology, etc. There are 24 meetings in the session, and the fee is nominal. Half of the class time is devoted to discussion, and there is no examination of individuals, comradeship in education for its own sake being the basis of the class.

CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL.—In connection with the Crossgates Baptist Church Sunday School anniversary a children's festival was held in the Hall on Saturday night. Mr John Brockhouse presided, and there was a large audience. The children, who had been trained by Mr Wright, and a number of choruses, and solos were sung by Phyllis Nussey, Kathleen Porteus, and Thomas English, while recitations were given by Alice Thomas, C. Hyde, Stanley Stringfellow, Thomas Cornforth, Margaret Jesper, Lilian Goldsack, John R. Haygarth, Frederick Anderson, Walter Exley, G. Coleman, Leonard Thorp, and Thomas English, the last-named giving "Britain and Kingdom"—with Marion English as "Britannia," was a very popular item. Mrs Hamilton presided at the piano. A Lord Wharncliffe Bible was presented by Mr Bairman to Walter Exley. A vote of thanks to the children, Chairman, Miss Diggle, and Mrs Hamilton was proposed by the Rev. J. Hamilton, and seconded by Mr Bairman, and carried amidst applause. The preacher on Sunday was the pastor (the Rev. J. Miller Hamilton), and a meeting in the afternoon was addressed by Mrs Herries, of Bradford, and Mrs. Goodall presided. The proceeds of the anniversary were over £10.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE.—The annual meeting of the Crossgates and Templenewsam Habitation of the Primrose League was held at The Grange, Whitkirk (the residence of Mr and Mrs P. S. Marsden). The following were elected officers for the years:—Dame President, Lady Dorothy Wood; deputy dame president, Mrs Marsden; ruling councillor, Mr P. S. Marsden: hon. treas., Mrs Dawson; hon. secs., Mrs Gabbert and Miss Flynn; executive council—Mrs Heywood, Mrs Dobson, Mrs Green, Mrs Dockray, Miss Bramley, Miss Elliott, Mr Pindar, Mr Braithwaite, Mr Bramley, Mr Fitton, Mr Young, and Mr J. Townend, junr.; delegates to Divisional Council—Miss Flynn, Mrs Heywood, and Miss Bramley. The hon. secs.' report showed that the Habitation has a membership of about 500, including 8 knights and 11 dames. Although the past year was rather heavy, there was a substantial balance in hand. The Habitation joined the Conservative Association in a successful fete at Temple Newsam Park, and also in a social gathering in Manston Schools in January of this year. On each occasion the gathering was addressed by Mr G. R. Lane-Fox, M.P., whilst others have been given on April 23rd, at Halton, when Lieut. E. H. Boughey, R.N., was the speaker. The Habitation secured over 600 signatures for the British Covenant against the Home Rule Bill.

GARFORTH

At Garforth six degrees of frost were registered on Tuesday morning, and it is stated that considerable damage has been done to the potato and bean crops.

DRINK.—Alfred Bockhouse, miner, of Garforth, was summoned at Leeds West Riding Court on Tuesday for having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Saturday, May 16th, and was fined 5s. and costs.

COUNTY WORTHS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Hamilton, a miner, of Garforth, was summoned for having used abusive language at Garforth. P.C. Bray stated that he was on duty in Main Street, Garforth, about 9.40 p.m. on May 16th, he heard the defendant using the language complained of to two young men. A fine of 2s. 6d. and costs was allowed.

GOLF CLUB.—On Saturday the qualifying round for the Portington Cup was played, and the following qualified:—W. J. Turnbull, handicap 25, 73; W. Shaw (14), 78; J. S. Sedgley (14), 80; W. H. Tatham (23), 80; G. B. Walker (13), 80; L. Smith (23), 80; T. C. Simpson (13), 81; W. Tate (13), 82; E. Tate (23), 82; E. Prince (26), 82; H. Peirse (20), 83; J. Bowker (23), 84; H. F. Smithson (6), 84; A. Taylor (20), 85; H. Sandy (14), 86; R. Tate (28), 86.

BOWLING.—Garforth W.M. had their first League match at home on Saturday, with Crossgates, and resulted in a win for Garforth by 203 points to 103 points. Details (Garforth W.M. names first):—D. Richmond 21 v. F./W. Jubb 11, G. Freeman 21 v. J. Firth 16, C. T. Cockerham 21 v. C. Holiday 16, W. H. Monks 14 v. J. Conner 21, M. Morritt 21 v. I. Semper 11, J. Whitley 21 v. J. McLeod 1, A. Reed 21 v. J. G. Armitage 5, T. Simpson 21 v. G. Birch 4, G. Hill 21 v. G. Danby 11, and J. Backhouse 21 v. I. A. Rymer 7.

GARFORTH WIN.—The final round in the Yorkshire Miners' Ambulance League Competition for the Hon. E. Wood Shield at Doncaster, was won by Garforth Colliery. Dr Pill, of York, was the judge, and among those present were the Mayor (Mr P. Stirling), who handed over the shield to the winners; Mr T. H. Mottram, H.M. Divisional Inspector of Mines, Doncaster; Mr C. L. Robinson, H.M. Inspector of Mines, Leeds, the Executive Officer; and Mr A. H. Barnard, of Conisborough, the secretary. Details:—1, Garforth Colliery, stretcher case 1003 points, individual tests 105 points, total 2054; 2, Manvers Main Colliery, 74\frac{1}{2}, 1214, 1963; 3, Woolley Colliery, 83\frac{1}{2}, 1103, 1943; A. Allerton Bywater Colliery, 85, 75, 160.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At Garforth Picture House the attractions for this week end are "The Fortune Hunters"—an exciting story—and "The Green Eye of the Yellow God," and there will no doubt be crowded "houses." For Whitsuntide the management have arranged special programmes of a first-rate character, and patrons will thoroughly enjoy the excellent fare that will be provided. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday "What the Gods Decree," described as the greatest mystery drama ever produced, will be screened, and there will be other fine pictures, including the Keystone "screem" "Get Rich Quick." On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday "Confederates in Crime" will be the principal attraction. It is a very exciting story, and the hero is shown bound and gagged, succeeding in flooding a cellar to prevent the explosion of a bomb. A terrific fight between police and swell mobsmen is also depicted. "A Face from the Past," a pleasing and interesting drama of a shattered romance, will be shown, as well as a Keystone, featuring Fred Sterling, the comedy star, in "A Muddy Romance." For times and prices see advert.

GREAT PRESTON

A SUCCESSFUL OPERETTA—The ability of children when properly trained was in evidence at the Infants' School on Tuesday evening, when the children of the St. Aidan's Band of Hope gave to a full schoolroom of parents and friends the operetta entitled "Robin and the Babes." The operetta consisted of three parts:—(1) a village green, (2) a forest evening, and (3) an out-of-date dame's school, each part being accompanied by suitable scenery. The parts of "Jack and Jill" and "The Babes of the Wood," were very neatly carried out by Doris Wylie and Ernest Manners, while Master Fred Milner as the role of "Robin Hood" well deserved the appreciation he received. Master A. Owbridge created roars of laughter by his clever impersonation of the "Inspector," and Miss Lily Rye as "schoolmistress" was also a marked success. Miss Fanny Smart took the part of "Eliza Trot, the inspector's wife" in good style, and Edgar Goodall proved a good milkman. The part of fairy queen was carried out by Hilda Spurden with becoming dignity, and Job Trot was the cruel uncle. There was also a chorus of village children. The Rev J. Gregory was the conductor, and Mr G. Bell the pianist. The Rev. E. B. Smith (vicar of Kippax) moved a hearty vote of thanks to the various performers and especially to the Rev. J. Gregory for the successful training of the children. The proceeds are to be given to the Band of Hope Fund established for the purpose of providing a trip to the seaside during summer for the members.

HALTON

NO LICENCE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Ernest Hoon, a commercial traveller, of Halton, was fined 7s. 6d. and costs for having a dog without a Fennce.

CONSERVATISM.—It has been decided to hold a demonstration in Templenewsam Park on Saturday, July 18th, under the auspices of the local Conservative Association and the Crossgates and Templenewsam Habitation of the Primrose League. The Hon. E. F. L. Wood, M.P., who is allowing the use of the park for the occasion, will preside, and it is expected that Sir Edward Sykes, M.P., and Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P., will be among the speakers.

DANGER AT YORK ROAD TERMINUS.—In the minutes of the Sub-Tramway and Electricity (Traffic) Committee of the Leeds City Council it appears the following:—"A letter was read from the Coroner of the West Riding of Yorkshire calling the attention of the sub-committee to a recent fatal accident at the terminus of the York Road tramway, and forwarding suggestions from the jury." It was decided to inform the Coroner (Mr Maitland) that an alteration has been made in the position of the cars standing at the terminus referred to, and that an extension of the tramway is contemplated in the near future, which will meet the suggestions of the jury.

KIPPAX

PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—Services in connection with the Sunday School anniversary were held in the chapel on Sunday, when the Rev. J. Leeds, of Castleford, had good congregations. Special hymns were sung by the teachers and scholars at the afternoon service and recitations were given by the scholars. Mr J. Brockhouse, of Whitkirk, presided.

ACCIDENT.—An accident befel a little boy about four years old, the son of Mr and Mrs Varley, who reside in Butt Lane, on Tuesday afternoon. While playing in Back Hill, he was run into by a cyclist, and was trailed on the ground fully a dozen yards, the boy's face being badly cut. Mr W. Hold rendered first-aid, and carried the boy home.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Temple Dixon, miner, of Kippax, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly in Leeds Lane, Kippax, on Saturday, May 16th, and was fined 5s. and costs. P.C. Davies proved the case. Levi Adams, a miner, of Kippax, was also summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Kippax on May 16th, and a fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.

THE LATE MR L. LOGG.—There has passed away in the person of Mr Lywis Logg a man who was well respected in the village. Deceased, who lived in Gibson Lane, within 40 yards of his home fell down and expired immediately. As a member of long standing in the Wesleyan Connexion his loss will be greatly felt. He was also a member of the last Parish Council, and one of the overseers. He leaves a widow and family.

KIPPAX AND ITS CYCLISTS.—The assertion made in the Parish Council that Kippax has more cyclists than any place of a similar size in the county has been investigated by a Leeds evening paper. It states:—A cycling authority, asked his opinion upon the statement, said he saw no reason to doubt it. "It is well known," he said, "that colliers are ardent devotees of the wheel, and as the male members of the community at Kippax nearly all earn their living underneath the pit, it is extremely probable that this little mining village has, in comparison, more cyclists than any other place in the country. The miner first takes to the bicycle in order to shorten the journey from his home to the pit head. Then he begins to take a fancy to long distance riding, and by degrees he transfers his enthusiasm to track racing. For many years now quite a large percentage of the track riders have been miners."

POLITICAL MEETING.—A meeting was held on Tuesday evening on the Cross Hills, and was presided over by Mr A. A. Redpath, of Castleford. The Chairman, before introducing the deputation that was chosen to interview Sir Joseph Compton Rickett, M.P., as to the shares that was rumoured to hold in many companies, but more especially shares held in a certain coal company in South Yorkshire, referred to the very different outlook of the working-classes to-day to that of 40 years ago. The latter facilities which had been given for the getting of education were bearing fruit, and the worker was thinking for himself, and utilising the means at his disposal to better his position. The deputation (Mr W. Farrar and Mr J. W. Mackenzie), in giving their report of the interview with the Member, were evidently impressed with the idea that the shares in question were in no way detrimental to the workers in the division, but if so considered Mr Rickett would willingly sell them. Mr Rickett, it was explained, entirely disapproved of the treatment meted out to the South African labour leaders. The question was asked that in order to qualify for disablement benefit in connection with Insurance, was it required of an employed contributor in paying off arrears to place a 2d. stamp or a 4d. stamp on his arrears card. A difference of opinion was in evidence in regard to this matter, and no solution was arrived at. A resolution that the deputation's report be accepted was passed at the close.

METHLEY

A METHLEY MOTHER'S NEGLECT.—On Friday at Wakefield Amy Armitage, married, Methley, was summoned for cruelly neglecting her four children, aged 11 years, 10 years, 6 years, and 13 years. A sad story was related by Mr T. H. Wordsworth, who appeared for the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The woman, he said, for some years had given way to drink, and appeared to have lost all self-control and self-respect. Her husband was an engineweight at a colliery and had been in the habit of handing his wife £2 a week. She had pawned furniture and other things in order to get money for drink. She had grossly neglected her household duties, and had not looked after the children properly. Only on the 7th of this month, added Mr Wordsworth, the defendant went to Castleford in the morning and came back shortly before one o'clock absolutely incapable of walking. She had the youngest child with her, and she went into a hen-cote to sleep off the drink. Defendant promised to give up the drink, and she was bound over to come up for judgment if called upon.

MOOR ALLERTON

Mrs Elizabeth Myers, of Dalton Holme, near Beverley, and formerly of Moor Allerton, left £1,112.

OULTON

BOWLING.—On Wednesday evening the Oulton bowlers were at home to Rothwell, and sixteen games were played on the green. The home team won by 12 points, the aggregate scores being Oulton 305, Rothwell 232. Details (Oulton names first):—F. Jones 21 v. J. Frobisher 0, F. Thompson 21 v. J. Vinton 4, Graham 21 v. J. Harrison 10, T. Brown 21 v. H. Morgan 7, K. Ripley 16 v. J. Oakland 21, G. Steele 21 v. E. Dobson 12, H. W. Matchinson 21 v. T. Hudson 11, J. Nuttall 21 v. W. Richardson 21, W. Lockwood 21 v. G. Carroll 9, W. P. Peters 15 v. J. Chapman 21, E. Raynor 20 v. J. Hobson 21, G. Williams 21 v. J. Wilson 11, J. Hobson 21 v. C. P. Ward 12, W. Fairy 15, J. Dobson 21 v. A. Denton 13, J. Harrison 21 v. W. Ward 15, and B. Healey 21 v. D. Barker 17.

PROPERTY SALE.—On Tuesday Messrs Oliver, Boyle and Pearson offered for sale the Gledhow Lodge, Gledhow Wood Road, the bidding for which started at £1,000, and the property was withdrawn at £1,450. Also at Headingley freehold land adjoining Ash Grove, at 9d. a yard.

MARRIAGE.—The marriage took place on Tuesday at St. Michael's Church, Headingley, of Francis Rowland, second son of the late Jonathan Dewhirst, of Meanwood, and Mrs Jenkinson, of Roundhay, to Amy, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs Charles Skitt, Wanstead House, Burley, Leeds. The bride was given away by her father, and the best man was Mr F. G. Denison. After a reception at Wanstead House, the couple left for Paris and Switzerland, where the honeymoon will be spent.

ST. JOHN'S, ROUNDHAY.—At the adjourned yearly meeting of St. John's Church, Roundhay, on Friday night, the Vicar (the Rev. T. Liddesdale Palmer) presiding, Alderman Thomas Oldroyd was nominated vicar's warden, in succession to Mr Harold Tetley, and Mr Lionel Smith was elected people's warden, in place of Mr Alfred White, who has resigned owing to ill-health. It was unanimously resolved to form a Leeds, York, and District of England Men's Society in the parish, and preliminary arrangements were made for an open-air parochial gathering, to be held some time in June.

TOWN PLANNING.—With reference to the representations made by a deputation of Roundhay residents to the Improvements Committee of the Leeds Corporation that a portion of the Roundhay Park estate should be included in the proposed town-planning scheme for Harehills, Roundhay, and Crossgates, the Committee have visited these districts, and have arrived at the following conclusions:—"That in view of the conditions upon which the Roundhay Park estate was purchased by the Corporation, which include provisions restricting the erection of buildings on that part of the estate immediately adjoining the lands included in the proposed scheme other than dwelling-houses costing less than £1,000 to erect, this Committee do not deem it necessary to include such part of the estate in the proposed scheme."

PROPOSED NEW GOLF COURSE.—On Wednesday at the meeting of Leeds City Council the question of a suggested municipal golf course was raised by Councillor Hall, of the Parks Committee, who had instructed the superintendent, with the assistance of Dr. A. Mackenzie, to get out estimates showing the cost of adapting the land at the north-east of the Upper Lake at Roundhay (comprising the North Hills Wood estate) for the purposes of a nine-hole municipal golf course. Mr Leslie Owen, Chairman of the Parks Committee, said there had been some opposition to the resolution. In his judgment the resolution, as it appeared in the minutes, ought to be allowed to go through. It was only a preliminary resolution, and not a resolution which committed the Council to the construction of a course. He was uncertain whether there was a demand in Leeds for such a course. The land proposed to be occupied for the purpose was now used for grazing. It was a good way out, and whether it was sufficiently accessible for the public for the purpose it was intended was doubtful, but it was the only land belonging to the Corporation that was available for the purpose. In answer to Alderman C. H. Wilson, Mr Owen said the passing of the resolution did not bind the Council to the principle of a municipal golf course. Mr A. E. Masser stated that the resolution merely enabled the Committee to get an estimate of the cost. The Council were not committed by it to anything, and when the matter came up for consideration and report, upon the estimate, the general question could be discussed. It would be a waste of time to discuss the matter now; that could be done when the proposal was brought forward in a concrete form. The minutes were adopted

SUGGESTED DANCING AT THE PARK.—London, Birmingham, and other large cities allow dancing in the parks during the summer months. Ought Leeds to follow suit? Mr J. H. Midgley, the hon. sec. of the Roundhay Park Band Committee, is confident the idea would not find favour with his co-workers, and no one would be more strongly opposed to the suggestion than himself. Whether dancing would be acceptable in some of the other parks in the city he is not prepared to say, but at the premier park he thinks it would "wreck the whole show." If dancing were permitted it would, he says, in all probability, bring to the band a performances an undesirable class, and that would drive away those who attended with the sole idea of listening to good music in the pleasant and healthy surroundings. It will be remembered that some years ago dancing was indulged in near the mansion at Roundhay Park, to the accompaniment of a small orchestra. Nowadays there is no such frivolity, gala days being the only occasions when visitors to the park trip the light fantastic toe.

SEACROFT

DERBY DAY HUMOUR.—At Leeds Police Court, on Wednesday, before the Stipendiary Magistrate, Mr H. Marshall—Mr A. W. Willey had to apologise for the absence of Harry Dorsey, a well-known bookmaker and building breeder, of Whitfield House, Harehside Street, Roundhay, who was summoned for driving a motor-car at an excessive speed. With a twinkle in his eye, Mr Willey remarked that Dorsey had an important engagement near London that day. Mr Marshall smiled, and allowed the case to proceed, Mr Willey entering a plea of guilty. It was stated that shortly after noon on Monday, May 4th, the defendant was driving a motor-car at Seacroft at a speed of over twenty-eight miles an hour. A fine of 20s. and costs was imposed.

STOURTON

SUICIDE.—The body of a man was taken out of the Thwaite Gate Locks at about 6.15 on Friday morning by the lock-keeper. It was that of Thomas Hiley (57), of 102, Cancel Street, Hunslet. "Suicide whilst of unsound mind," was the verdict at the inquest on Friday afternoon.

PENNINE METHODISM.—There was a large attendance at the P.S.A. meeting at the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon to hear an address by the minister, the Rev. W. S. Spencer. The chair was taken by Mr J. Sutcliffe, and his place had to be taken by Mr J. Collinson. Mr Waterton was in his usual place at the organ.

WHITKIRK

DEED OF ARRANGEMENT.—Harry Wilkinson, 97, Beckside Road, Bradford, and Walter Solitt, Grove House, Whitkirk, Headingley with Burley, Leeds, trading as Harry Wilkinson and the Sanitary Seat Company, sanitary seat manufacturers.—Secured creditors, £60; liabilities unsecured, £1,052; estimated net assets, £316. Filed May 20th, 17th. In a deed of arrangement with creditors the majority of the debtors fell to W. Williams, who took six for thirteen. Scores:—Woodlesford—H. Hamer, b Walker, 0; W. Harrison, b Cope, 12; O. Wilkinson, c C. Higgins, b Cope, 0; E. Dobson, run out, 40; E. Baxter, c Lockwood, b Higgins, 29; T. Collins, retired hurt, 6; A. Brittlebank, c Chapp'l, b Cope, 6; A. Evans, b Higgins, 0; V. Williams, b Higgins, 0; A. Dennison, not out, 0; extras, 9; total, 127. Oulton—H. Butler, c Harrison, b Williams, 7; P. Butler, c Sub, b Williams, 33; W. Hudson, c Evans, b Hitchin, 6; J. Jackson, b Hitchin, 0; P. Higgins, b Williams, 0; B. Walker, lbw, b Williams, 0; B. Chapp'l, b Williams, 0; C. Higgins, b Williams, 12; S. Walker, c Hamer, b Williams, 4; H. Cope, not out, 22; extras, 6; total, 90. The Woodlesford second team played at Oulton, and won by nine runs. The bowlers for Woodlesford were Jones and Dawson, and for Woodlesford Bennett took six for thirty-seven.

Restoration work is being carried out at Wilson Church, the contract being in the hands of Messrs Ullathorne, Selby. The scheme altogether is to cost about £400, and a bazaar in aid of the fund is to be held next year.

Pianos for sale compiled by John E. Walsh, chartered patent agent, of 25, Royal Exchange, Boar Lane, Leeds, and Crossby Street, Halifax:—Applications:—A. L. Brockmann, Leeds, improved time table apparatus; Leeds Forge, for; J. W. Harrap, Earlsheaton, improved nonslip motor rug, etc.; A. E. Morgan, W. Dorman, and E. Linsley, Leeds and Durham, apparatus for automatically locking and unlocking railway carriage doors.

CREDITORS' MEETING.—A meeting was held at York on Wednesday of the creditors of John Thomas Cheesborough, formerly of Hambleton, but now of Selby, corn and seed merchant. The statement of accounts showed that his gross liabilities were £141 17s. 11d., and £141 17s. 11d. was expected to rank for dividend. His assets amounted to £99 12s. 4d., leaving a deficiency of £42 5s. 7d. Debtor attributed his failure to heavy losses resulting from cattle dealing.

DAMAGE BY FROST.—The district around Selby was visited by another severe frost on Monday night, and the reports to hand show that great damage has been done to potatoes, acres of which have been attacked in a disastrous manner. The plants had "picked up" somewhat from the blast of a fortnight ago, but on Tuesday morning there was a sickening spectacle presented to the view, and acres of potatoes at Wistow, Barlby, Brayton, and around are lying blighted and drooping.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

DISPUTE WITH ROTHWELL COUNCIL

WATER CHARGES FOR CHILDREN'S HOMES.

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Guardians' Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon, the Chairman (Mr T. Thomas) presiding. Other members present were:—Mr J. Gavins (vice-chairman), Dr. E. Groves, Father T. Cody, Messrs J. Butterick, W. Schofield, T. G. Cooper, H. W. Hargreaves, W. Verity, W. Lunn, Peace, Hemingway, J. Bannister, H. I. Pulford, W. A. Appleyard, E. B. Pickersgill, W. Stead, and J. W. Verity, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Riley).

At the meeting of the Children's Homes Committee the Clerk reported that he had received the specimens of suitable for boys and girls from the Salvation Army, and was satisfied that they were good value for the £3 per head which the Local Government Board required to be expended. A letter was received from the superintendent reporting that he had seen the nine Pantes-tant children off from Liverpool on the 9th inst., and was very pleased with the arrangements made for their comfort during the voyage to Canada. The children seemed very happy.

The deputation appointed to meet the representatives of the Rothwell Urban District Council on the question of water supply and charges, reported upon an interview with the Waterworks Committee on Thursday last, and they were asked to write and state the maximum rent the Guardians are prepared to offer. The Clerk further reported that in consequence of a statement made by the Waterworks Committee that the meter showed an average consumption of 25,000 gallons per day during the ten days ended the 7th inst., he had had the taps turned off when the meter consisted to register, and the rate of about 9,000 gallons per day. It was proposed by Father Cody, and seconded by Mr Schofield that the Guardians be recommended to make a final offer of £50 per annum for water supplied to the Homes for domestic purposes, and that steps be taken to stop the leakage at once. An amendment was proposed and seconded, to substitute "That the matter be adjourned for a month for the pipes to be repaired, and for a report as to the then consumption." The amendment was carried.

The Clerk reported he was still without any further reply from the Bishop of Ripon with reference to the Guardians' complaint concerning the prayers taught in the Rothwell Sunday School. It was resolved that the Bishop of Ripon be asked for a further reply to the Guardians' letter.

Mr Lunn, referring to the item relating to the Children's Homes, and the water supply and charges, said he wished to warn the Board and Children's Homes Committee. The members of the Rothwell Council, he said, were feeling very sore about the action of the Board and of that Committee in seeking to get preferential treatment over other ratepayers in the district, and if the minute as it appeared was carried out, a grave strain might be established between the authorities, while it would be injurious to the Rothwell district. If it was granted it would mean that other ratepayers would be compelled probably be given the same treatment. He thought the Guardians ought to be satisfied with being charged equal to other people. The Council did not expect to get anything out of the Board that was unfair, and he hoped the Board and the Committee would act fairly towards the Council.

Mr Butterick suggested that Mr Lunn move an amendment to that effect. He thought the fairest way would be to pay for the consumption according to meter. He had been assured by the Chairman of the Rothwell Water Committee that the Council were making nothing out of the Guardians.

Mr Lunn said the minute had been adjourned for a month, and so it would be dealt with again. If he was present he would raise the question.

The minutes were carried.

At a meeting of the Workhouse Committee the letter from the master applying for additional clerical assistance in his office was considered, and a reference from the Board. It was proposed by Father Cody, and seconded by Mr W. Verity that the Board be recommended to provide a junior clerk in the master's office, and that the Clerk be instructed to make enquiries and report as to a suitable youth for the post as the next meeting. An amendment was proposed by Mr Stead and seconded by Mr Pulford to substitute "That before making any recommendation enquiries be made as to whether there is a suitable boy in the Children's Homes." On a vote being taken the amendment was lost.

The minutes were carried.

With respect to the recommendations of the Special Committee to draw up fresh regulations with regard to the relieving officers' duties, Mr J. Butterick took objection to one of the recommendations that a man with experience would be preferred for the vacancy, as, he said, there were several suitable men in Hunslet who he knew would be competent for the post, who were quite capable for the position, and who would be debarred by the recommendation. Mr Butterick also suggested that six and not three candidates be selected to attend before the Board for a final choice.

Mr Lunn, who also agreed with Mr Butterick regarding the preferential treatment of men with past experience, took up another point in the recommendations, and asked if the Clerk was to have all the control over the officers, such as the submitting of reports to the Clerk and the issuing of orders by the Clerk. He did not, he said, agree with all the strings being pulled by one man.

The amendment of Mr Butterick that the ward experienced be deleted, and that six applicants be selected to interview the Board was carried.

The recommendations of the Committee were passed with the above amendments.

The Selby licensing magistrates on Monday sanctioned a plan of alterations at the Friendship Inn, Selby, upon the application of Messrs John Smith, Tadcaster.

TRAMP IN A SURPLICE.—The Rector of Spofforth (the Rev. W. Pearson) was considerably surprised on a morning, wearing a white cloak; morning to find his surplice missing. It is usual in country villages to leave the doors of the church open, and it is surmised that some one entered after the services on Sunday and took the garment. The local constable was passed in a country lane, on Sunday, by some tramps. It happened that he noticed one of the party apparently a woman, wearing a white cloak; a rather unusual covering for members of that fraternity, but he had no suspicion of the theft until he was notified of the loss next morning. He then toured the district on his bicycle with a view to discovering the thieves, but without success.

ROTHWELL URBAN COUNCIL.

The monthly meeting of the Rothwell Urban District District Council was held at the Council offices, on Monday last, when Mr J. Hirst (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Messrs G. W. Blakey (vice-chairman), S. R. Chadwick, T. P. Wade, J. Armitage, H. Kielsby, S. Dobson, T. Ellis, H. Gordon, J. Hewson, R. Rowbotham, W. Lunn, W. Wade, W. Speake, and W. Robinson, with the Clerk (Mr W. Dodgson), the medical officer (Dr H. Stevenson), the sanitary inspector (Mr E. F. Moorhouse), and the surveyor (Mr J. Southwart).

HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Highways Committee, Mr Hirst on behalf of Major Calverley, Mr Elliott on behalf of Mr Hindle, Mr Ridyard on behalf of Mr Walter Hargreaves, and Mr Ellis on behalf of himself and Miss Arundel, met the committee and asked that the sewage works on Mr Hirst and Mr Elliott were asked to leave the matter over for further discussion. Mr Hirst on behalf of Mr Calverley, Mr W. H. Thurwell and another on behalf of Joshua Tetley and Son, Ltd., and Mr Wm. Armitage, were interviewed on their objections to the streets adjoining Carlton Lane, and the matter was adjourned until the next meeting. Mr Elliott asked the Council to remedy the dust nuisance in the outlying parts of the district. It was resolved that a letter be sent to the Local Board of Health that 7 days' notice be served on the Yorkshire West Riding Tramway Co., Ltd., to disconnect a drain at Lofthouse which interfered with the sewage disposal, and had been constructed without statutory notice to the Council, and in default of compliance the surveyor was instructed to disconnect. It was also resolved that the application of the Yorkshire West Riding Tramway Co., Ltd., to make a connection with the road gulley near the Old Engine be refused, but that the Co. be invited to submit plans for connecting the water into the sewer. Clerk reported he had received a circular from the County Council with regard to the classification of the whole of the roads in the district. The surveyor reported that he had notified the County Council of the following 3 census points:—Ivridge Hall, Carr Lane, and Long Bridge. It was resolved that the Highway Committee be authorised to purchase the frontage on Whitehall Field for widening Oulton Lane, and that a plan of the suggested widening be submitted to the Council. A list of streets and yards for paving prepared by Mr Moorhouse, was submitted to the committee, and it was resolved that the surveyor's report on it be considered at the next meeting. The minutes were passed.

SANITARY COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Sanitary Committee it was resolved that Mr Wm. Schofield, of Wakefield, be asked to attend the next meeting in respect of closing orders for 8 houses at Carlton. The committee decided to visit four houses at Potterly Fold; and also to inspect Mr H. Thurwell's Cottage at Scisserton, which was reported to be 180 feet from a public sewer. It was resolved that the inspector's report on the paving of yards and ashes be handed to the Highways Committee to be dealt with, and that the surveyor give the levels, distances, and estimates for the John O'Gaunt's easement and sewer and paving prepared by Mr Moorhouse, was submitted to the committee, and it was resolved that the surveyor's report on it be considered at the next meeting. The minutes were passed.

BUILDINGS COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Buildings Committee it was resolved that notice be served on the owner of a house in Meynell Avenue for breach of bye-law by altering his property without plan. It was also resolved that Mr Asquith be asked to stick to his plans. The committee's attention was drawn to the advanced state of town planning on their borders, and the advisability of moving in the matter.

The minutes were passed.

WATER COMMITTEE

The minutes of the Water Committee showed that the average daily consumption of water during the month ending April 30th, was Rothwell 143,000 gallons as against 170,000 gallons during the same month of last year; Thorpe 87,000 gallons as compared with 84,000 gallons; and Stourton 47,000 gallons as against 51,000 gallons; making a total consumption of 277,000 gallons as compared with 305,000 gallons in the same period of last year. The Midland Railway Co. consumed during the period 75,000 gallons, which is 17,000 gallons less than last year's figures. Private meters and domestic purposes and leakages accounted for 7,768,000 gallons. A deputation from the Children's Homes, along with the Clerk to the Guardians, attended before the Committee, and asked the committee to reduce the charges for the water supply to the Children's Homes below the ordinary amount charged for trade purposes in view of the fact that the supply was for domestic purposes. It was resolved that if the deputation are not willing to accept the ordinary meter charges, the matter be referred to the whole of the Council, and the Guardians be asked to state the maximum amount they are willing to offer as a compromise. It was resolved that Emily Bailey, of Langley Farm, be allowed £3 8s. off her meter charge for water supplied during half-year ending June 30th, 1914, in respect of leakage. It was also resolved that Mr Brook be asked to give a general report on the water supply and distribution in the district, setting out any deficiency and how it can be improved. The surveyor was instructed to get out levels, distances, and estimates for dealing with the John O'Gaunt's sewer and submit the same to the Sanitary Committee, the Water Committee being satisfied that their pipe could be taken in any direction suitable to the sewer. Mr A. Marshall asked for instructions how to charge for water to institutions, and the Clerk was instructed to get a copy of instructions from Mr B. Marshall, and report on the matter to the next committee. It was resolved that pipe scraping be done in the daytime, and that the surveyor get assistance if Mr Wright is called off for other work during the scraping.

BURIAL BOARD

The Clerk intimated that he expected the Bill sanctioning the Joint Board of Burial Board would pass through the Commons that afternoon. The composition of the Joint Board would be as follows:—Rothwell, six members, one constituted for elected area, one member who would be the chairman of the Council; Woodlesford, three members, one elected and two co-opted members, who would be the representatives of Oulton and Woodlesford on the Hunslet Rural District Council.

FISHING FOR EELS AT TADCASTER.—A correspondent writes:—"I notice the mention of an eel and flounder match at Tadcaster. I read the week previous in the Wharfe, at Tadcaster. As this is the close season for coarse fish, would you please answer the following question? Is it illegal to fish for eels and flounders during the close season for coarse fish? There seems to be a great difference of opinion among anglers on this point." In order to be as brief as possible, I will (replies Mr Bailey in the "Mercury") state without comment that:—Eels are exempt from the close season for coarse fish by the Act of 1884, and can be taken all the year round in nets, snares, and by means other than legitimate angling. The Honourable Company of Fishmongers exempt eels in their circular re the illegality of fishing freshwater fish during the close season. There is no restriction on the sale of eels from March 15th to June 15th. Although there is undoubtedly an implied illegality in fishing for and taking eels with rod and line during the period under notice, the Act imposes no penalty for so doing. In the Yorkshire Fishery District holders of trout licences are never interfered with for taking eels. In this connection, as in many another, the law is a perfect "hass!" The mere supposition that it should be legal to net, spear, trap, and destroy by every conceivable method a species of fish which must not be angled for by rod and line is simply ridiculous. And if eels can be sold without let or hindrance during the most sporting method of catching them should be recognised as "legal!" Again, if it be legal for an angler holding a trout licence to catch eel, it is certain

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

LANE FOX CUP COMPETITION.

The preliminary round of the Lane Fox Cup Competition will be played on Saturday, and six clubs will be engaged. Crossgates, at home, have an advantage over Halton, but I expect a keen tussle, and Crossgates will have to show improved form if they are to win. Great Preston are due at Whitkirk, and the homesters, although they have been doing better than their opponents, will take no liberties, inasmuch as Preston come off unexpectedly at times. South Milford will entertain Roundhay, and the homesters should, by careful cricket, manage to get into the next round.

Only one Senior League match—Saxton v. Cawood—is down for decision, and the former are given a chance of improving their position in the league table.—In the Junior League one of the keenest matches will be played between Ulleskelf and Kirk Deighton, Tadcaster A expect to beat Sherburn W.R., Barkston will create a surprise if they defeat South Milford A, Halton A will play Aberford, Great Preston A and Barwick A will try conclusions, and Micklefield A intend to make a bold bid for points against Garforth A.

SATURDAY'S LEAGUE MATCHES.

On Saturday morning rain fell heavily, and the prospect of cricketers fulfilling their engagements in the afternoon was the reverse of bright, but, fortunately, the weather improved, and the League programme, with the exception of one match, was completed. Cawood should have gone to Church Fenton, but I understand that Church Fenton Club hon. sec. wired to Cawood not to make the journey. The destination of the points in this match will be settled at next meeting of the League Executive.

Church Fenton Sycamore have struck a bad patch this season, and neither in batting nor bowling have the players shown the form of previous years, but it is probable they will come again. On Saturday afternoon they were at home to South Milford, and they were completely outplayed. The Milfordians scored 74 for five wickets and declared, and A. Atkinson made 23 (not out) and J. Hodgson 16. C. Poulter was the best of the Sycamore bowlers, capturing 4 wickets for 34 runs. Church Fenton offered a feeble resistance to the Milford attack, and the innings closed for 37, of which F. Poulter had 10. A. Lindley secured 4 of their wickets for 10, E. Atkinson 2 for 4, and H. Chilton 3 for 10.

Details of the match at Saxton have not come to hand, but Tadcaster, I understand, had a decisive victory. The homesters were unable to put up any fight against the Calcarians' bowling, and they were quickly dismissed for 32. This was a very easy task for Tadcaster, who are showing great promise this season, and they soon made 34 for a loss of 4 wickets.

Micklefield and Scarcroft continue their victorious career in division 2, and, with Garforth pressing closely on their heels, a splendid tussle for supremacy may be expected. For the second week in succession Great Preston had the misfortune to be beaten by opponents without the loss of a wicket, and I fancy this is a record for the League. Garforth accomplished the performance first, and Scarcroft followed suit on Saturday. Preston must wake up and show some of their old-time skill. They gave a wretched batting exhibition, being all out for 71, and Dennis Burton secured no fewer than eight of their wickets for 13 runs—a fine feat and no mistake. Tom Toft got two wickets at a cost of 12 runs. D. Burton (25) and G. Thompson (16) obtained the runs necessary for victory.

Micklefield entertained their Barwick friends, and the match was a comparatively low scoring one. The homesters were dismissed for 64, of which Stone put on 18, and W. Brown captured four of their wickets for seven runs. If he maintains this form Barwick should win a few matches before the season ends. B. Robshaw's four wickets were obtained at a cost of 27. Barwick discovered the Micklefield bowling much too good for them, and they had to be content with exactly half of their opponent's total, the chief contributor being Hartley (13 not out). Stone's five wickets were got at an expenditure of 10 runs, and Munro had 3 for 15.

Halton made a really good show at Garforth, and at one time it looked as if they were to secure the points. The losers batted first, and registered 74, towards which S. Haigh contributed 17, E. Daniels and W. Smales 14 each, and H. Cowell 12. Garforth tried all bowlers, and T. Ballance had the best figures (5 wickets for 19). W. Glover secured 3 for 13 runs, Morley one for 9, and Cassegrave one for 11. The home side made a capital start, H. Prime (27) and S. Glover (16) setting the team a good example, and Williamson followed with a useful 11. Then there came a collapse, and eight wickets had fallen ere the necessary runs were obtained. Beeson had 2 wickets for 7, Daniels 3 for 30, Bell 1 for 12, and C. Sunter 1 for 19.

Now that four teams have on equal number of points in division 2, a very interesting situation has arisen, and it is evident that there is not much to choose between the competing elevens. Collingham are not doing so well as was expected, and on Saturday they sustained their third defeat. Crossgates were their opponents, and the teams played on even ground. The losers' innings realized only 41, and the feature of it was the batting of Emmerson, who claimed no fewer than 23 (not out). B. Spivey secured two wickets for 4, Yeates 2 for 14, Goodall 2 for 16, and White 1 for 5. For a loss of five wickets Crossgates scored 42, and Barnell made 22 (not out) and Wilson 11. Emmerson was again the most useful man on his side, taking 3 wickets for 14, while Smithson had 1 for 5, and Tweddale 1 for 16.

Whitkirk came a cropper on the Halton Weslevans' ground, and, after their recent fine displays, I think they were not as careful as they might have been. Nevertheless, Halton might have won an easier victory than they secured. The visitors opened, as usual, with Milford and Arthur Shepherd, and the former, by making 17, showed that he is the most reliable batsman on the side. Taylor made 10 runs and A. Shepherd 8, but none of the others did much, and the innings closed for 46. Powell, with 4 wickets for 3—a capital performance—had the best figures among Halton bowlers, while Muirland had 2 for 9. O. Bell 2 for 14, and Wilson 2 for 24. Halton's first wicket—Kilburn 18 and J. W. Popplewell 13—put on over 30 runs, and things looked bright enough for Whitkirk, but they stuck to their task, and Halton actually lost nine wickets in getting 47. E. Ingle captured four wickets for 15, and Fred Wainwright had 3 for 17.

Shadwell gave an inglorious exhibition at Old Maccabeans, but they have the consolation that the score of 17 is not the lowest ever recorded in the League. It stands at eight. They had only ten men, and Ted Clough and Coultis soon had them out, the former claiming five wickets for 9 runs, and the latter 3 for 5 runs. It was no doubt a disheartening job for Shadwell, but I doubt that Heaton, who is the mainstay of the team, was unduly depressed. For a loss of one wicket Crossgates secured their first points, and D. Umpleby made 12 (not out).

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Bramham have received their first defeat, and Kirk Deighton brought it about. The losers were dismissed for 54 (Kerridge 15), and G. White captured four of their wickets for eight runs, while E. Linfoot had 4 for 16, and Beasley 2 for 10. Kirk Deighton made 55 for 9 wickets, and J. Beech played a fine innings of 29. Cawood improved their form by 5. Dawson 3 for 28, and Shaw 2 for 20.—Ulleskelf met with a check at Tadcaster, and were beaten, after a good match, by 13 runs. The Calcarians made 36, and Garbutt, coming in at the finish, knocked up 17 (not out). Potter captured 5 wickets for 20, Bean 3 for 24, and Stronach 2 for nil. The Ulleskelf team were dismissed for 37 (Smith 11), and A. Taylor had 4 of their wickets for 12, Smart 3 for 12, and Shearsmith 2 for 10.—Sherburn W.R. went to South Milford, and they were badly beaten. The Millfordians settled up 148 for 9 and declared (Illsley 55, Butcher 30, Alf. Atkinson, jun., 22, not out, and Stainburn 11), and Sherburn made only 91 (Dixon 14). J. Hill (Milford) gave the best bowling performance of the day—four wickets for no runs—while Crawford had 2 for 8, and Mr. Lindley 2 for 16. On the Sherburn side E. Hunter had 3 wickets for 19, and Popplewell 2 for 23.

In division 2 Scarcroft A, whose opponents were Great Preston A, got a fright. The match was on the green, and the homesters scored 97 (J. Dennell 21, J. Linley 5, Ball, and W. Linley 13 each), and J. Cooper obtained four of their wickets for 28. Then there was a collapse, and the remaining six wickets realized only five runs. J. Linley trundled with great effect, bowling 7 wickets for 18, while Ernest Hunter had 2 for 2 runs.—Barwick A brought off their first victory, and they are to be congratulated. Micklefield A were their opponents, and they made 42 (Simpson 17). Six wickets for 17 runs was T. Robshaw's bowling record, and Micklefield succumbed for 5 wickets for 21. For a loss of five wickets Barwick put on 44, and Lovett had a good innings of 20.—Garforth A defeated Aberford by nine wickets. The losers made 28 (G. Connell 10), and Garforth scored 29 for the loss of a wicket, the Piersegills batting well. For Garforth W. Hancock had 5 wickets for 12 and F. Hancock 5 for 13.

In division 3 Crossgates Wes. A. have assumed the leadership. Their opponents on Saturday were the Garforth Wes., who were defeated by 16 runs. Crossgates innings, which realized 106, was distinguished by the fine display of T. Yeadon, who made 54 (not out), while G. Willans put on 13. F. Gent trundled well for Garforth, taking 6 wickets for 26. Garforth made a great effort to get on terms with their opponents, but they had to be content with 88, H. Goodall securing 21, F. Siberry 19, and R. Brownridge 19 (not out). Selman secured 5 wickets for 32 and E. Beaumont had 4 for 26.—Crossgates A received a severe drubbing at Colton Mill, and the irony of it was that the bulk of the score was got by Southwick, the man whose reinstatement Crossgates applied for. Swillington and Colton led off with 114 (Southwick 50, not out), and the best of the Crossgates trundlers was H. Linley, who had 7 wickets for 45. Crossgates batting were poor, and 28 was no score for the team. They must "buck up." Mosby trundled splendidly, five wickets for 7, while Dobson had 4 for 19.—Whitkirk A managed to defeat Halton Wes. A by 3 wickets. The losers led off with 56 (Dewhirst 22) and Whitkirk replied with 48 for 7 wickets (H. Nowell 15 and Webb 13). For the winners W. Cuttle had 4 wickets for 8, H. Nowell 4 for 21, Tate 1 for 2, and Bruce 1 for 9.

ROTHWELL'S WINS.

Rothwell, in their friendly match with Wingate at Rothwell, won by seven wickets. The visitors were got out for a total of 39, the home eleven making matters safe with 42 for three wickets. W. Bedford contributed largely towards the success of Rothwell with his bowling, and eight of the visitors' wickets fell to him for 23 runs. The highest individual scores made among the Wingate men were those of W. and J. Wilkinson, who each made nine. A noteworthy performance with the bat was made by W. Fox for Rothwell, who secured 21 (not out), while C. Clark made ten off Firth's bowling before he was caught.

ROTHWELL AND DISTRICT LEAGUE.

On Saturday afternoon Carlton gained a decisive victory over Outwood Friends. The match was at Carlton, and the homesters sent up the respectable total of 83, and L. Bowin played splendid cricket for his score of 41, receiving valuable assistance from E. Fozzard (13). Outwood were gog rid of for 46, Ackroyd making 19 and Lunn 12. Carlton A., however, were not so successful. Outwood A. entertained the, and by honours are scored 100 (Richardson 27), and W. Ashton captured four of their wickets for 22, and W. Newton 4 for 23. Carlton A. were disposed of for 83 (Newton 23 and J. Ashton 13, not out).

Robin Hood were too good for Alotts United, who were dismissed at Robin Hood for 46. W. Hall making 14. The winners responded with 18 for six wickets, and E. Smith made 15 (not out), and P. Wormald 21 (not out).

GENERAL WEAKNESS CURED.

(Copy). 53, New Lloyd Street, Kirkstall.

To Prof. Crosswaite.

Dear Sir,—Eight years ago my head broke out in two or three different places, for which I was under four different doctors, and received absolutely no benefit. Two years ago my general health failed, and I gradually got worse and worse until I was unable to follow my usual employment. I was gradually losing flesh; in three weeks I lost 18 lbs in weight, and was in great despair of recovering. Eventually I was recommended to try what you could do for me, and under your treatment I gained 11lbs. in three weeks. My head is now completely better, and I feel better now than I have been for 13 yrs. I can strongly recommend your treatment to all suffering humanity.

With sincere thanks,

I am, yours truly,

J. KINGHAM

LOVE'S CROSS ROADS.

CHAPTER XV.

"Sit down," said Colthurst. His voice was exceedingly quiet. He also at least kept himself under absolute control. The quietness of his voice surpassed the other man's rising excitement.

"You say you have read the will?"

"I have; and the news that you were left everything, and that I and my children had nothing at all—that my boy Tom was cut off with a penny, and my girl Laura was no more to the old man than if she had never existed —rankled and rankled in my mind. At last I determined to come to England. I have a bit of a farm in South Africa, and I let it to a neighbour; he rents it from me, and will do so for the next couple of years. I and my wife and children are now living on that little bit of rent. I can tell you, Cousin Paul, it isn't a large sum. It only means a few hundreds a year. It means living with great care and economy. It means shabby rooms to sleep in, and a shabby dining-room to sit in, and people like the Fetherstones to amuse oneself with. It means poor clothes for Laura, who is quite a pretty girl, and it means a beastly dog, good-for-nothing life for Tom. There was a bit of luck, however, in going to that woman whose name is Luck. Tom's luck, I mean, is decent. I came across a friend of yours—Miss Patricia Ransome. She is a nice old woman, and she became rather friendly with me. I drew her out, and—has it ever struck you, Paul Colthurst, that that woman is bothered with a secret?"

"By no means," said Paul. He changed colour quickly, and was vexed with himself for doing so.

"Well," said Tom, fixing his eyes on his cousin's face, "to be frank, I do not agree with you. I think she is worried with a secret, and, what is more, I mean to get it from her."

"You have nothing to get. I have known Miss Ransome for a long time. I knew her during my first wife's lifetime; she was a great friend of hers, and since then I have, to a certain extent, kept up the connection."

"Have you? Now, I greatly wonder if you have."

"Fill your pipe again, won't you?" was Colthurst's reply.

"I am going to be quite frank with you," continued Oswald, as he filled his pipe fragrant tobacco into the bowl of his pipe, adjusted it skilfully, and dexterously applied a light to it. "I say, Paul, this tobacco is worth smoking. You can't think what a treat it is to a poor man to taste the wealth of a rich man once in a while. It's almost worth being poor —the enjoyment it gives one to taste the pleasures of the rich. However, let me speak. I went to Somerset House and read the will. It seems to me that a vast lot hangs on the marriage of these two young people, and that if anything occurs to prevent the marriage you are somewhat up a tree, old man, and I eventually—eventually, not at present, Paul, but I eventually am the person who holds the golden coin; I enter into the possession of the rich man. You are gathering your fathers, and I, if I am alive, or, if not, my son Tom and my daughter Laura secure the wealth. Now, the wealth (except a mere trifle bagatelle), which once belonged to Walter Colthurst. That is so, isn't it?"

"If you have read the will you ought to know," said Colthurst, in a quiet voice.

"I have read it. And I don't see why you must feel rather uncomfortable about it, don't you, Paul, old man?"

"Not at all. Why should I? The young people love each other, and are engaged."

"Ah!" said Tom. "Ah! but engaged ain't married."

Paul was silent.

"I wish to say to you very distinctly that engaged ain't married, and I wish to say more: that it will be my object—not to commit a crime; no, no, nothing of that sort—but it will be my object to prevent, by some wheel of young love, to present, by some means—a quite natural means—oh! I will keep well within the arm of the law—to prevent the marriage of Peter and Pamela. Now, I must be a very fool-people, not honourable, honest sort of fellow to come to you with a honest sort of fellow to come to you with a statement of this sort. But there, you see what I am. It is my way. Above board is the way of Tom Oswald; paying his debts to the penny is Thomas Oswald's line. Keep within the arm of the law is Thomas Oswald's motto. And now, Paul Colthurst, you know."

"I know that you cannot possibly prevent these two dear young people from marrying each other, and the sooner you get that idea out of your head the better," said Colthurst.

Oswald sat and watched his cousin for a little. After a moment or two he said:

"I may, perhaps, have more myself an income by coming here to-day."

"You have done yourself neither good nor injury. I take no notice of your words."

"Nevertheless," continued Oswald, "it will be to your interest to hurry on the marriage."

"No, I shall not hurry it on. My children shall please themselves."

"You are acting very unwisely, let me tell you. I mean every word I say. It is to my interest that they should not marry, and I will prevent it if I can."

"It is well for you to add the last few words: 'If I can.' You can't."

"You mean, then, that you are not in the least afraid of me?"

"Not in the very least."

"Then you're a pluckier man than I took you for. I say now, suppose——"

Paul had not been smoking. He had taken a few whiffs from his pipe, and then laid it down on a slab near him. He fixed his grave, thoughtful eyes on his cousin's face.

"Suppose," said Oswald, and he coloured slightly, "we were to make it a matter of business that I do not interfere in this matter."

Paul felt inclined to utter some very strong language, but he restrained himself. He sat with his eyes fixed on the other man's face.

"After all," said Oswald, "they—poor pretty young things—they are fond of each other, and it is possible for me to stand aside, not to interfere, not to make them miserable for all their days. I may be bought, you know. I am open to an offer."

Silence on the part of Colthurst.

"It would have to be," continued Oswald, watching his host very narrowly, "a substantial offer—a substantial sum down; something that would put me in mine out of the reach of want—say, twenty thou. How would twenty thou do? If you were to settle twenty thou on me, giving me the capital right away, why, I'd go back to South Africa with my wife and Tom and Laura and never worry you again. What do you say—twenty thou on the nail? It's worth it, old man—Then you can let those two stay engaged to each other as long as ever you please. It's worth it. Think of it, old man. Duty be so high and mighty. Think of it, and save your children. I'm a dangerous man when I'm opposed, and I tell you, I have my heart in this matter—my heart, and the future of my children. Twenty thou may close the deal. Is it a go, or is it not?"

"It is no. I am not afraid of you. I shan't buy the prevention of your evil ways with a single penny."

Thomas Oswald coloured an ugly mottled red. "Very well," he said. "Then you leave me to do my worst?"

"I leave you, Oswald, to do anything you can. You can do nothing."

"We'll see, we'll see. I suppose, quite apart from this, you wouldn't object to lending me a couple of hundred at the present moment? It would be such a bagatelle to you, and such a welcome assistance to me."

"Do you really want the money?"

"Want it? Of course I want it."

"I have no objection to giving it to you, Thomas; but as to lending it—I don't lend money."

"I am not proud, Paul. I am willing to take it as a gift, you see."

"Very well. I will write you out a cheque."

"Thanks."

Paul rose, went to his writing-table, filled in a cheque for two hundred pounds, and brought it across to his cousin.

"Paul," he said, "you are welcome to this. But please understand—it is not to be repeated, and I would rather you did not visit here except by invitation. I am sorry for you, but, after all, I do not see that you have any cause to be disappointed. You are, compared with me, an exceedingly distant relation of Walter Colthurst. He would naturally leave his property to his nearest of kin."

"I am very much obliged for this," said Thomas, folding up the little cheque carefully and putting it into his note-book. "Now, I suppose I am not one bit the richer, eh? Trying things to wish them happinese, must I?"

"I think they have left the place. They were going for a motor drive."

"Well, give them the kindest wishes of good Cousin Tom and remember me to your precious lady-pet—charming woman, my lady, very charming. Keep poor Miss Patricia as long as you can. They treat her shamefully at the Cedars. That room she sleeps in isn't fit for a cat. Keep her here, and make her happy. She's a good old soul, and deserves to be. And to your son Peter. Well, Paul, we might have made a bargain, and I might, in case you chose, change your mind. But thanks all the same for this drop in the ocean."

Tom pushed his waistcoat pocket as he spoke. A minute later, Paul Colthurst saw him to the gates. He did not offer to send things to the station. He was disgusted with the man, and, although the gift of two hundred pounds was not seriously trouble to him, he was determined not to encourage him to come to the place again.

CHAPTER XVI.

Thomas Oswald parted from his host with all appearance of outward friendliness. Some neighbours who were driving past saw Colthurst talking to a very rough-looking man—a man who clapped him on the back, and said, "I think you've got the whip," and then disappeared down the dusty road.

Paul did not wait to watch him out of sight. He returned slowly to the house. It took Thomas some time to reach the railway station. He had a cheque for two hundred pounds in his pocket. He had ordered a first-class meal; he had smoked the best tobacco that had touched his lips in the whole course of his life. He had sat for a couple of hours in the midst of luxury—luxury which he sincerely thought ought to have been his. Now he was away, but he had done good "biz." He had got two hundred pounds for nothing. He had made an offer which, if accepted, would put him and his family out of the reach of want practically for ever, and which, if refused, meant no open declaration of war.

"I'm above board, whatever else I am," thought Thomas to himself. "Now then, the thing to do is to see Silas Luke without a moment's delay. If there is anyone who can help me at this juncture, it is Silas. It is on account of him I got that two hundred pounds, for he's such a 'cute dog he'll do nothing for nothing."

Tom kept his mind and thoughts fixed on Silas Luke all the way up to town. He reached London at six o'clock in the evening. Instead of going back to No. 10, James-street, he hired a hansom—this he felt he could well afford with his cousin's cheque in his pocket—and drove to 17, Fisher-street, Pimlico. He thought it would look well to arrive there in a hansom.

Fisher-street was a decidedly low part of that somewhat fashionable neighbourhood. Close by were the houses of the enormously rich, the fashionable, those who loved society, and who bartered their wealth for the pleasures of life. But in the background there were always the slums, and amongst the many slums was one a trifle slummier than the rest, and this was Fisher-street. It was here that Silas Luke lived; or, rather, it was here Silas Luke could be found at the present moment. There had been a time, years ago in South Africa, when Tom and Silas were very much on a footing, and when, through a stroke of good fortune, Tom had been able to save Silas's life. Silas had been very nearly carried away by a raging lion, when Tom, who had abundance of courage, rushed to the rescue, shot the brute behind the ear, and delivered Silas from a death of awful horror. Since then Silas had formed one of those extraordinary attachments which come now and then in the life of a very rough man.

Thomas got out of his taxicab, desired the chauffeur to wait, and went upstairs. The front door of No. 17 was never shut, and he had no difficulty in reaching the fourth floor. He knocked with a stick on the door of a back room. A gruff voice said: "Who's there?" Tom made a few inarticulate, puzzling sounds. Instantly there was a noise within. The door was flung open, and a man in his shirt sleeves stood before him.

"I say, Oswald!"

"Yes, it's me," said Oswald; "and I've got a job for you, Silas, old man, which I want to talk over with you. Now, look slippy. Put on your things; make yourself as smart as you please. It's my turn to treat you to-night, please. I've got a few shillings in my pocket, so we'll go a buster, you and I, and afterwards I will tell you what I want you to do."

"I'm your man," said Silas. "Will you stay here, or go for downstairs?"

"Well, I can't say the air of this room is too pleasant," said Tom. "I have my taxi at the door, with a crowd of young savages round it. I'll go and wait for you there. But be say, an honest man; and I am not, no—I'm quick, there's a good chap. Look slippy, as I said."

"I will, Tom. I'll be with you in next to no time at all."

Thomas Oswald went down the dirty stairs. A woman pushed out her head and looked at him. "Say, you," she said, "you comin' along to see poor folk like us with your taxicabs indeed? It's such as you that grinds the faces of the poor."

"It isn't I who grind the faces of the poor, my good woman," said Thomas. "Here's and I will never drag you into this thing"? my good woman, and I am not, no—I'm ingly shabby. Oswald looked at him with some disfavour. He was a small, rather pale man, with a thin face and rather flat, tened in feature. There was something singularly insignificant about him. He looked like a person who would be by any possibility in be anything but mediocre. There was a timidity in his eyes which gave him an aggressive, even a furtive, expression. In moments of extreme peril—and Silas had passed through these in his somewhat adventurous life—owing to his very timidity he had been known to squint violently.

"I say!" exclaimed Tom; "you don't suppose I'm going to take you into a fashionable restaurant in that sort of attire?"

"My best is up the spout," said Silas.

"Where?"

Silas named a pawnshop which at present contained his exceedingly shabby best suit.

"We'll go and fetch it out," said Tom. "I can't be seen with you like this. There are flourishing days ahead of you, Silas, so you can look as cheerful as you please."

Silas's rugged face lighted up. He regarded with downright affection at Tom.

"We'll stop outside Victoria Station, and you can go to that pawnshop and get into your best toggery. Afterwards you can join me, and we'll go together and have a right good feed."

"Thank you, Tom. There never was your like in this world."

Tom felt it quite pleasant to be regarded in the light of a benefactor even by so low down a person as Silas Luke.

They stopped outside Victoria Station. Tom thought it best to get rid of his taxicab. He told the driver to go to Chatham and Dover part of the station until Silas returned, which he did in an incredibly short space of time. He was now dressed loudly, but in a suit of fair garments which were whole. His trousers were obsolete in cut, and were of a large check pattern. He had a big yellow tie fastened in a whisp round his neck, a brown coat, and a brown waistcoat.

"I feel something like now," he said, gazing with affection at his best clothes.

"We'll go to Claridge's, and have a meal," said Thomas, naming a restaurant not far off.

The two men entered. Thomas was a man of large appetite, but his excellent lunch at Connop Grange prevented his being as insatiated by quite as usual. He supplied his guest, however, with the best of everything, and when they had both finished he went to the manager and begged for the use of a private room.

"I want a room for an hour," he said, "for which you don't I am willing to pay for it."

The landlord considered, and presently conducted Thomas and Silas to a shabby little room which contained one window looking out on a very dismal area.

"Here we are," said Silas. "This is what I call cosy."

"It may be cosy to you, my man, but it ain't cosy to me. Now, Silas, you look here."

"I am looking," said Silas.

"You know I'm a friend for you once?"

"Thomas Oswald, I'll never forget it."

"So you say. Now I want you to prove your words."

"I am abundantly willing."

"Well, it's like this. I want you to do a job for me."

"Tom, I am your man."

"I want you to do it, and I want you to do it this night. If it is successful, it means no more rough days, no more misery, no more poverty for Silas Luke as long as he and Tom remains in his body."

"Then I am certain I'm your man," said Silas.

"Hold a bit; I haven't done yet. The good things I talk about happen if you are successful. If you are not successful there is, at the best, prison; at the worst—well, we won't talk of that."

"I don't understand you," said Silas. He felt a choking sensation coming up into his throat.

"If you've got to face it," said Thomas. "I want you to do something for me, and I don't want you to tell me how you do it. If you succeed you'll be a rich man. I'll give you succeed you'll be a rich man. I'll give you my word of honour that you will act on my behalf. You said to me after I had saved you from the jaws of the lion that there was nothing you would not do for me. Well, hold you to your word. You can do this thing for me, and if you fail and get into trouble, I will keep quiet, and don't drag me in. This is what I want you to say—I want you to say to me——"

"Yes, Tom, yes!"

"I want you to say this: 'I, Silas Luke, will do what you want, Thomas Oswald, and I won't stop day nor night, I won't rest a single moment, until I have accomplished what you require, and I will draw back at nothing to accomplish your wishes. If I succeed, I succeed; and if I fail, I keep your secret, even if I am hanged for it.' Now, are you prepared to say that?"

"It seems a very big thing," said Silas. "I am not, to say, a good man; and I am not, to say, an honest man; and I am not, no—I'm a bad lot, but I have never been inside a prison except for small things—a fortnight at a time at the most—not such very big things, nothing more. I've never done anything big. You want me to undertake a big thing. What is to be my reward?"

"Two pounds a week for life if you bring it off; and while you are at it one pound a week to keep you well and travelling expenses. Now, is it done? Do you put your hand in mine and say: 'I swear to do what you want Think of the lion, Silas, and of the promise you made."

"Yes," replied Silas, "I cannot help thinking of the lion and the promise I made, but I will do it. But don't let it be too long, Tom; for I am not a cruel sort—I am not, really and truly."

He lay back against his chair. "Well," he said, "that is all right." He said nothing about cruelty. "Now I will tell you simply what I want you to do. There's a place in Surrey called Connop Grange. It's near a little town called Lush. You can get there straight from Victoria, and get to Lush in an hour. Your third-class fare to Lush is one and sixpence. You take luggage as Lush, and look around you. You make friends with the people there, and you get them to talk to you. That's all easy enough. Connop Grange is two miles and a half from Lush. You can walk over there any day. There is living at present at Connop Grange a certain old Colthurst—an elderly man, somewhat about my age, but not like me a bit—a stately, stand-off sort of cove; and there is his wife—commonplace—you need have very little to do with her—that is, unless she can help you. But the people you have to manage I'm coming to presently. The Colthurts are rich, and they keep a number of servants—gardeners and indoor servants—and they're all devoted to Paul Colthurst. He has also a great many visitors. Staying there from time to time, in particular, at the present moment, he has got a lady called Miss Patricia Ransome. She is three and old—at least old—as am—older, in fact. I want you to watch her, and if she returns to London, or leaves the place, you are simply what I want you to do. There's a lady there called Pamela Lennox. They are engaged to be married—I rather think very soon.

"Now, you listen to me, Silas. They are not to marry! You have got to prevent it—oh! I'm not going to tell you how you are to do it. You and I and Tom, we're practical men, we've spoken in their wheel. You will know how to get at them. You can work it through the girl—it doesn't matter a bit to me. But they are not to marry. That is your job, Silas."

"I don't like it," said Silas.

"I daresay you don't, but a man can't earn a pound a week for life and travelling expenses, and if he is successful two pounds a week for the remainder of his days, for nothing? What do you like—eh, my friend Silas, eh?"

"That is true enough," replied Silas; "but there are possible things in the world and impossible things. There are things that are worth while and things that are not worth while."

"I don't doubt that you are driving at," said Tom. He spoke in an angry voice. The mellow colour came to his cheeks. It was always very plain when he was disturbed in mind.

"You see," said Luke, "it is like this. You give me no reason for anything. You want a thing done, and it is done, and there's an end of it. I'd like to know how I am to prevent——"

"For goodness' sake don't ask me!" said Oswald. "That is your affair."

"Well, but I don't see my way. I don't, truly."

Oswald came close to Luke, and, stooping down, looked into his anxious, small, poor face. "When I put a job of that sort into the hands of a man of your sort, you know what I expect," he said. "Don't talk to me of ways and means. Find them out, and do the job. Follow those young people and them. Keep them within your sight—day and night if necessary. There are thousands of ways that can come to the mind of a man who has had thousands of ways that a delicate-minded person such as I am could not think of for a moment. You are in receipt of £2 for a month, your travelling expenses, and your lodgings or hotel, wherever it is you put them up, and two pounds a week after the job is done, and if you get into a scrape, I'm out of it. You understand that? Yes or no?"

Silas sat very quiet. He did not dare to look Tom Oswald in the face. He kept gazing straight before him. The pipe which had been between his lips was now held listlessly in one hand. His thin, poor, skimpy features were strained and pale. After a time, tears rose to his eyes.

"Tom Oswald," he said, "I think you are very hard on me."

"Hard!" said Oswald. "Who delivered you from the lion?"

"I'm not saying nothing about that."

"Of course you are not. You're the sort that's a pauper all your life, and you know who wouldn't. I could have taken no notice, and you weren't even worth the powder and shot I spent in putting that poor brute out of the way. You are grateful enough at first, but you don't want to think of your bones being crunched and your body torn limb from limb. But you will, when a man's in a bit of trouble, and wants a thing done for him, you shrink back."

"Only I don't know how to do. You'd best take this to someone else."

"I won't take it to anyone else. I am putting it into your hands. Is it yes or no?"

Silas sat again very quiet. After a time he raised his eyes to Oswald's face.

"I suppose it is yes," he said.

"Swear it, man, on the Bible."

"I don't want no Bible. It's yes—it's yes. Can't you help me? It is yes!"

"Very well. Now clearly understand—you don't drag me into it. Here's money for you. I am pretty well off, as things turn out, at the present moment. I have a cheque in my pocket which will put me and mine in funds, but I can't cash that before to-morrow. I don't want to see you again. You had best go right away, and attend to your business. You had best go down to the village of Lush to-night, and sleep there. You can easily put up at Tadcaster's inn and be quite comfortable. You must appear just as you are—a weak sort of chap, with no harm in you. You're just the man for the deed."

"What deed?"

"Your deed! Am I going to tell you what your deed will be?"

"Tom Oswald, you frighten me. I am trembling as far in as my marrow."

"Don't bother me about your marrow. Now, I'm here. I will give you three pounds a week to any address you like to give me. That ought to cover your travelling expenses and your hotel bill, and leave a pound in your pocket."

"It won't," said Silas—"isn't enough. I may have to travel far, and you won't be within reach. Make it five pounds a week, and afterwards we can settle the balance."

"Very well. But remember, that is the limit of my generosity."

Silas looked fixedly at Oswald, and made no answer. Oswald thrust his hand into his pocket and took out five sovereigns.

"There you are," he said. "I will send you the money by postal order once a week. You write to this place, the Crocodile. I'm not going to give you a real address. You can call here once a week. I shall get your letter, and will send you the money. Now, be as sharp and incisive and quick as you can. There's no time to lose. You clearly understand—there must be no hitch, no delay, no step—no step is to be hesitated over that will prevent their marriage."

"All right," said Luke.

"If you fail, there are certain things in your past life that I can bring up against you."

"What things?" said Luke, his face turned cadaverous.

"Ah!" said the other man, "we needn't talk of them now; but there was that murder on the Veldt."

"You think that is hushed up, but I can soon bring evidence to bear on the right man. You'd best leave me now, Silas. I don't want to see your face again. You understand me; I understand you."

Silas stooped, took up the five sovereigns, clipped them into his trousers pocket, and, without glancing at Oswald or bidding him good-bye, left the room.

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

HEART PALPITATION.

An examination of the habits of the individual will usually suffice to show that the heart disturbance is due to an unwise mode of life, says Dr. Wilson in "Before the Doctor Comes." Thus excessive tobacco-smoking will produce palpitation, just as it tends to give rise to eye troubles. Taking a heavy supper at night, and the attempt to sleep whilst digestion is taking place in an overloaded stomach, is more than sufficient to cause palpitation, seeing that a distended stomach presses a large amount of pressure on the heart, and thus gives rise to irregular action of that organ. Even ordinary indigestion may be accompanied by palpitation; and neglect of the rule that rest after food tends to promote easy digestion is also a factor that is taken into account when palpitation is complained of. An anæmic person is also liable to suffer from irritability of the heart, by reason of that organ being, like the rest of the body, supplied with blood of inferior quality.

THE IDEAL BEDROOM.

The room in which one sleeps is the one in which one breathes and absorbs, whether it be pure or impure, air. A dust-laden atmosphere will clog up the lungs in a very short time, and will lay the seeds of consumption, fevers, and all the horrors which flesh is heir to, and which come through carelessness of the simple laws of life as anything else.

The ideal bedroom, says "Pepita" in the Manchester Express, is airy. It opens on free air, and is bathed in sunshine all day. It has nothing in it but what is clean. Every paint is luxurious by nature a rug of fur or wool is placed in the centre of the floor, and is easily removed. Screened from cracks by well-fitting frames and leather strips, and so obviate the necessity for heavy curtains which accumulate dust and germs. The muslin curtains which adorn the windows, hung on slender brass rods, are washed as soon as they are dusty.

The furniture is to suit the occupant's fancy, but it is also unincumbered to be easily moved aside and frequently dusted. Hygienic wall-paper which can be washed with a damp cloth covers the walls. The bed is of brass or iron, without draperies, with spring hair mattress and a few downy pillows. The sheets are light and warm, blankets being used instead of heavy quilts.

In this healthful room the occupant should sleep from eight to ten hours, going to sleep before twelve.

The nothing should be wiped up with a damp cloth every day or every other day, and dust should be fought as one would fight an enemy. After a working day of ten hours there was brought to the surface the enormous quantity of 3,000 tons 10 cwts., which constitutes an average of 78 rops pulled per hour.

Sunday eid and "flattie" matches are all the "go" at Tadcaster. These competitions are not exciting "events," but they provide a good excuse for getting away from the town to the country, and at the present time any excuse is excessfle for with the crab and apple in flower, and the hawthorn bursting into bloom, the country is lovely.

A GARFORTH GENTLEMAN'S SUCCESSFUL ACTION.

SEQUEL TO A MOTOR ACCIDENT.

At Pontefract County Court on Wednesday Thos. Percy Fawcett, maltster, Barrowby Hall, Garforth, brought an action against the West Riding of Yorkshire Tramways Company, Ltd., to recover £4 1s. as damages to his motor car, etc., caused by the alleged negligence of the driver of one of their tramcars.

Plaintiff, who was represented by Mr R. H. Branthwaite (for Mr Arthur Willey), stated that at noon on Monday, January 26th, he was driving his Wolseley car out of Eastfield Lane, Castleford, where his offices were, when he observed a tramcar in the Pontefract Road, about 20 yards behind him.

A little distance down the road he had to proceed very slowly to avert danger to children just running out of a school, and he observed the tram approach to within about three yards of him and apparently stop. A moment later, however, it suddenly spurted forward, and ran into his rear off mudguard. This cost £3 4s. to repair. Plaintiff also asked for one month's nominal depreciation, and 7s. for the four gallons of petrol required to take the car to Huddersfield for repairs and back.

Plaintiff said his own opinion was that the driver deliberately ran him down. There was no other theory on which he could account for such an extraordinary accident.

Plaintiff was supported by Mrs Garrett, of Ferrybridge Road, Castleford, and P.C. Thomas, who witnessed the occurrence. The latter added that when a tramways inspector called on him later he told him "the best thing you can do is to pay Mr Fawcett's damages, and shut him up." (Laughter).

The driver of the tramcar, John Hargrave, and a man named Clifford Simpson, whom he was instructing at the time, said that plaintiff came so quickly round the corner out of Eastfield Lane that nothing could prevent the tram and his car colliding.

Several passengers who were in the car gave similar evidence.

His Honour said he had no hesitation in accepting plaintiff's version, which was absolutely supported by two perfectly independent witnesses. He gave judgment for £4 and costs.

WETHERBY RACE MEETING.

The race meeting at Wetherby on Monday will attract large crowds of visitors to the district, and as the course, following the recent rain, is in good order, and as the entry in all the events is large, excellent sport is expected. Ever since the Easter meeting the committee have had a number of men at work on the course, improving it and making better arrangements for the convenience and accommodation of visitors. A new exit for motor cars, to divert a portion of the traffic, has been made from the motor car enclosure to the Walton Road, the entrance to which has been improved. In soft places stone has been put down, and the whole length ashed and rolled, at a considerable cost. This should make a much quicker disappearance of the road, and people may find it to their advantage to use this exit, and instead of coming to Wetherby, where there might be a block again in the streets, go a mile further round, over Thorparch Bridge, and by Boston Spa, and join the Leeds Road at Collingham.

The 10s. motor car enclosure has been made exactly as large again since the Easter meeting, as it was quite inadequate to hold the cars. An improvement has been made for those standing in the ring, by the taking away of the railed fence outside the enclosure, and placing there unclimbable fencing. People at Easter climbed the fence and obscured the view.

A new race card box has been erected at the entrance to the Paddock, and the whole of the dining room floor covered with linoleum, which has given it a tasteful appearance. Other improvements have been made, and after the summer considerably more alterations are contemplated for the comfort of visitors.

Racing commences at two o'clock. Special express trains will leave Leeds at 10.40, 11.5, 11.20, 11.40, 11.55, 12.15, 12.35, and others if necessary. The 12.18 ordinary train from Leeds will call at Crossgates. Return trains will depart every few minutes from 5.45 to 7 o'clock.

ACTION AGAINST N.E.R. CO. FAILS.

At the Middlesbrough County Court on Wednesday, an action of considerable public interest was heard by his Honour Judge Templer.

The plaintiff was Stewart Welch, of Saltburn, and he sued the North Eastern Railway Company for 30s. for alleged breach of contract. He stated that he was returning home from Berwick by the 7.45 p.m. train which was due to Darlington at 10.1 p.m., the last train for Saltburn being timed to leave Darlington at 10.15 p.m. Unfortunately his train was late, and he missed the connection. He spoke to several railway officials, and as it was urgent that he should reach home that night he took the last train to Middlesbrough, and completed the journey in a taxi for which the hire was 30s., and he claimed this amount from the company.

In a letter to the plaintiff the Railway Company pointed out that connections were not guaranteed, and that the company did not hold themselves liable for delay or consequences arising therefrom.

Mr Gaunt, for the company, pointed out that the tickets were issued subject to the regulations in the time-table, and under these regulations the company were not liable for delay.

Plaintiff submitted that such regulations were unreasonable.

His Honour said that was a matter for the Railway Commissioners. If they thought it unreasonable it would be struck out. If plaintiff read the conditions he would have known that he had to take his chance of catching connections.

Judgment was given for the company with costs.

A cable message was received at Kirk Deighton from South Africa on Saturday that the Rev. Canon Goldart, rector of Kirk Deighton, Wetherby, who died at sea on May 14th, while on his way to South Africa, was buried at sea the same day.

DAMAGE.—The frost on Tuesday morning was particularly keen in the Wetherby district, and did considerable damage to potatoes, apples, mangolds, etc. Probably more damage was done by it than by the severe frost at the beginning of the month.

SMOKEOUS IN TROUBLE.—At a juvenile court at Wetherby two 13-year-old schoolboys were charged with entering a dwelling-house and stealing £1 6s. 6d. The parents of the boys were bound over in the sum of £10 each for each lad's good behaviour for twelve months.

YORKSHIRE COLLIERY ON FIRE

TWO MEN RESCUED AFTER 27 HOURS.

A serious fire broke out at the South Hiendley Colliery, near Barnsley, the property of Henry Musgrave, Ltd. The colliery is a comparatively small one, employing about 200 men. At the time of the outbreak there were fortunately only 20 men in the workings. The fire, it is stated, broke out near the haulage engine, and is stated to have been caused by the bursting of an oil lamp. All but two of the men were happily in a position which enabled them to ascend to a place of safety. The two other men were: Charles Townsley, miner, South Hiendley; and Charles Beain, trammer, of Hemsworth. They were not rescued until they had been in the pit 27 hours. Being at the rear of the fire, they were in a position of considerable danger. The rescue teams from Brierley and Frickley stations were sent for, and these, together with local officials, were engaged throughout the night in trying to subdue the fire and rescue the entombed men. Townsley and Beain, after an imprisonment of 27 hours, were, at 10 o'clock on Wednesday night, safely brought to the surface amid scenes of rejoicing among the watchers. Both were able to walk out.

The pit where this battle between life and death was waged is situated in open country, about 10 miles from Barnsley, and, compared with the big collieries in Yorkshire, is a comparatively small undertaking. It is a day pit, the property of Messrs Musgrave, Ltd., and employs from 200 to 250 men, who walk into the workings. The average daily output of coal is from 400 to 500 tons. The origin of the fire, it is stated, was owing to a kerosene lamp bursting in a place near the engine house, which is situated about 1,800 yards from the main entrance, and about 100 yards below the surface of the ground. The woodwork, the brattice, and the general contents of the engine house being highly inflammable, were soon caught by the fire, which spread with amazing quickness.

The fire was first seen by John Hall, who is the engine house tenter, and he tried his best to extinguish the flames, but they mastered his efforts and grew rapidly in heat and volume. A deputy had the alarm given, and the men who were finishing the afternoon shift all escaped to safety with the exception of the two referred to.

The wonder is that the alarm was so effective, in view of the great speed with which the fire gathered force; indeed, it is not too much to say that for a brief spoon all the men working in the pit at the time of the outbreak were menaced by grave danger. Mr J. Fairs, the manager of the pit, was quickly on the scene, and telephonic messages for assistance were sent to the surrounding pits, with the result that with commendable promptitude rescue teams from Wath, Beierley, Grimethorpe, and Frickley were hurried to the pit, which was soon in the grip of raging flames. Under the direction of Mr Fairs, the rescue teams donned their apparatus, but even their valuable equipment could not enable them to penetrate through the fiery barrier, and it was not until two o'clock on Wednesday morning that they were able to open a door of the air shaft situate near the engine house. The fierceness of the fire was an altogether unusual experience, even to such experienced men as the members of the Wath rescue team. Their superintendent and instructor, Mr Winch, stated that the best following the explosions in the Cadeby disaster two years ago was not so intense as they experienced in the South Hiendley pit on this occasion. In the circumstances nothing could be done except to supply by the fire burn out, and to concentrate the rescue efforts upon working round the fire, and, so to speak, short circuiting the air current.

WHITKIRK HORSE SALE.

Messrs Bartle and Son held their monthly sale at Whitkirk on Wednesday, the catalogue containing 75 horses, consisting of 45 being sold on commission. Quotations:—Four-year-old draught geldings and Shire mares, 35gs. to 45gs.; five, six, and seven-year-old draught geldings and mares, 29gs. to 39gs.; three and four-year-old half-bred geldings and mares, 26gs to 32½gs.; aged working horses, 19gs. to 24½gs; six-year-old harness horses, to 33gs.; aged harness horses, 14gs. to 19gs.

"AN AMAZING DERBY."

The Derby of this year will long be remembered. In the first instance, it will be remembered as "The Tetrarch" year, although the famous horse never ran in it or ran a race in the year. The fact that for twelve months "The Tetrarch" was the favourite and then was "scratched" at the last moment, was the dominating factor in connection with the race. The next fact is that a French horse, owned by an American, won the Blue Ribbon of the Turf. The third is that not one of the favourites got even "a place" in the great race. Well may the Derby of this year be described as "an amazing Derby." It certainly had an amazingly depressing effect on the thousands of racegoers who collected on Epsom Downs to see the classic race run.

CRICKET.—On Wednesday afternoon Wetherby Tradesmen had a cricket match with Hunslet Tradesmen at Hunslet. Scores:—Wetherby Tradesmen—J. Hill 1, Denham 5, Hall 7, Armitage 8, Woodward 5, Marwood 0, D. Hill 2, Snape 0, Varley 2, Tempest 8, Johnson (not out) 10, extras, 12; total, 60. Hunslet Tradesmen—Clark 23, Goodall 2, Jackson 0, Johnson 0, Hullgan 2, Langton 27, Allsop 0, Scruton 6, Hepworth 0, Hardaker (not out) 2, Woolford 2, extras, 3; total, 67.

CREDITORS' MEETING.—A meeting of the creditors of David Robertson, watchmaker and jeweller, of 60, Wide Street, and 14, Westfield Avenue, Selby, was held at the Official Receiver's office, Duncombe Place, York, on Wednesday. Debtor's statement of accounts showed that his gross liabilities amounted to £4859 11s. 2d., and £4119 6s. 2d. was expected to rank for dividend. His assets were £1129 3s. 3d., leaving a deficiency of £3689 17s. 11d. Debtor attributed his failure to lack of capital and bad trade.

MARRIAGE.—The marriage has taken place at the British Consulate, Constantinople, of Mr Leslie James Darley, second son of the Rev. E. P. Dondney, M.A., vicar of Bilton, Wetherby, to Marjorie Eileen, daughter of Mr James Binns, of Belek, Constantinople, and the parties were married in the chapel of the British Embassy by the chaplain, the Rev. Canon Whitehouse, M.A. Mr Doudney is on the staff of the British Imperial and Helsby Cables Co., Prescot, and for the past two years has been engaged on a large contract in Turkey. Early in July Mr and Mrs Doudney will sail for Melbourne, where they will stay probably for four years.

CORRESPONDENCE

CROSSGATES AND PUBLIC LIGHTING.

(To the Editor).

SIR,—I should like to know, through the columns of your valuable paper, what our representative on the City Council is doing in allowing us to go without public lighting.

The City "fathers" were very anxious to get hold of us, and I cannot understand why we should be treated differently to any other part of the city.

What would the residents of Holbeck say if they were crossed off the lighting list for summer?

Crossgates is no doubt a prosperous place—judging by appearances, at any rate—but it is a mistake to suppose that the majority of the residents are so fortunately situated that they can afford to take a holiday extending throughout the summer and so overlook our "father's" latest dodge.

If the City Council have decided upon this as one of the little economies they are to adopt in order to make up some of the loss sustained by the strike, I can only say it's an extremely mean policy.—Yours, etc.,

JOHN O' CROSSGATES.

A NUISANCE AT CHAPELTOWN

To the Editor.

SIR,—Can you, or any of your readers, say where all the waste paper that finds its way into Town Street and Church Lane comes from? To find this out may be the first step towards abating a great nuisance to others as well as.—Yours, etc.,

A RESIDENT.

HOW A FAMILY OF SEVEN LIVED.

Details of how a family of seven persons had lived and slept in a room twelve feet by nine and a half feet were unfolded at the Sheffield Police Court, when Griffith Pugh, a newsagent and tobacconist, Beamsll Lane, and his wife Emmeline, were summoned at the instance of the Health Authority for neglecting their five children in a manner likely to cause injury or suffering to their health.

Robert Riley, miner, of South Milford, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on the 10th inst. in Low Street, Sherburn, P.C. Parkinson, who stated the case, said that he had previously been refused drink at the Red Bear Inn, and had to be ejected owing to his conduct. Fined 10s. and 5s. 6d. costs.

Fred Wilson, labourer, Sherburn, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly on the 21st. inst. P.C. Parkinson stated that the defendant was very drunk and violent, and he had to be locked up. He had smashed some windows with a big stick. Fined 10s. and 5s. 6d. costs.

Frank Tunnicliffe, gas stoker, of no fixed abode, was charged with drunkenness on the 16th inst on Milford Road, Sherburn. Defendant pleaded guilty. P.C. Parkinson stated he found defendant lying on the road side drunk. He and P.C. Simpson shifted him, and after awhile he was so incapable they had to take him to Sherburn lock-up. Fined 2s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. costs.

Harry Fletcher, Edmund Booth, Harry Pullen, and Clarence Farrar, miners, of Kippax, were charged with gaming with coins on the 10th inst at Ledsham. Defendants pleaded not guilty. P.C. Wickham stated he was watching defendants playing with coins at pitch and toss in Ledsham Lane. There were other men besides defendants, but they ran away. Booth said he was innocent as a new born baby. He had nothing to do with gambling; he did not understand it. By Supt. Stafford: He had been previously convicted for gambling. He passed Pullen and Farrar in the lane. Farrar said he saw some men running away. By Supt. Stafford: He saw a policeman near the Vicarage. The men were 100 yards away. He denied gambling. Pullen also denied the offence. Booth was fined 10s. and 8s. 6d. costs, and the others 2s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. costs.

LAUNCH.—On Tuesday Messrs Cochrane and Sons, Limited, launched from their shipyard at Selby a steel-screw trawler built for the the Yorkshire Steam Fishing Company, Ltd., of Hull. It was named Lord Denman by Miss Doris Watson, of Hull.

SHIPYARD DEVELOPMENT.—Messrs Cochrane and Sons, the well-known trawler building firm, of Selby, have just acquired two valuable sites adjoining their shipyard, including several acres on the east and west of their works, the whole giving them an additional frontage on the River Ouse of about 400 yards. This will allow of at least two new berths being laid down, and to ships at once can be put on the stocks, besides allowing space for the erection of additional machine shops, sheds, etc.

FIRE.—An outbreak of fire was discovered during Friday afternoon on the premises of Mr Thos. Longbottom, farmer, Monk Fryston. The discovery was made by Mr Longbottom's son, who happened to go into the stackyard, and he found a wheat straw stack on fire. A number of willing helpers were quickly on the spot, and a good water supply being close at hand, the flames were quickly subdued, but not before some damage was done. A staff of workmen from the Rev. B. Hemsworth's estate acted very promptly, and in a short time they attached a hose from the Concert Hall and played on the fire and some adjoining buildings. If it had not been for the excellent water supply close at hand, very serious damage would have been done. The Rev. B. Hemsworth recently laid water all over the village, and it runs through the Hall grounds. In case of fire he keeps an excellent equipment of hose-pipes. The damage is covered by insurance.

SHERBURN FARMERS' CLUB.—A meeting of the Farmers' Club was held on Friday.—Mr C. W. Helm (vice-president) presiding, and others present were Messrs T. Tomlinson, T. Bradley, H. Farrar, F. Bramley, T. Hey, T. Sykes, D. Greenwood, R. Lamb, J. Addinson, T. Jones, G. Hill, E. Hills, and C. Esbesby (secretary). The Chairman, in referring to the death of Mr T. Hugh Hey, said it needed no word from him to inform the members what a keen interest the late president had taken in the welfare of the club, and it now fell to his lot to propose that a resolution be placed upon the minute book of the club expressing their sense of the loss which had been sustained by the death of Mr Hey. Mr T. Hey seconded the resolution, and it was passed, all the members standing. Mr Helm then proposed and Mr Tomlinson seconded that Mr John Elston Cawthorn, of Elmete House, be the president, and this was adopted. The secretary read a letter from the West Riding County Council anent the importing of Irish cattle into the district. It was resolved that the club protest against it, and that a letter be sent to Wakefield conveying this decision.

BOWLING.—On Saturday afternoon Tadcaster defeated Crossgates Recreation, and on the same day the opening rounds of the Yorkshire Individual Merit Bowling Competition took place. In the first round Mr A. W. Westerman, Tadcaster, defeated Mr J. Payner, Kirkstall, by 21-6, and in the second round Mr M. Cockerill, Garforth, by 21-19. In the third round, however, he succumbed to Mr D. Rider, Bramley Liberal, by 21-17. The monthly handicap of the Tadcaster Club for the President's Cup was concluded on Tuesday evening. About 50 players took part in the April handicap, just concluded. In the semi-finals Mr D. Hill scored 21 against Mr T. Bilsbrook 20, and Mr H. H. Wise 21 against Mr C. Moorsley 16. In the final on Tuesday Mr Wise did not show his usual form, and he was beaten by Mr Hill by 21-12.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Some of the comments in the county medical officer's report are interesting and instructive, and parents will know how far the following has application to this district:—

It is disappointing that, though sewing has been taught for so many years in the schools, the mothers and elder sisters seem to be incapable of doing the least bit of mending; clothes remain torn, unpatched, untidy, and unclean till they are almost falling from the wearer. Of course, it is impossible for children to keep clean, when playing on muddy ground or in grimy surroundings, but cleanliness can be restored by soap and water, and patching and mending would improve the condition of the garments. Further, the boys' suits are not washed and kept clean as they ought to be; much of the shabbiness of rooms is due to the unclean and soiled clothing of the boys. The boys' collars, too, deserve remark; they are often enlisted, or of inferior material; are broken, chipped, unattached to any stud, and so always awry, and never seem to be clean. In many cases "best only" function is to hide an unwashed neck. If collars are not to be kept clean and neat and in a proper state their use should be discouraged, because the average boy flatters himself he is above reproach if he wears even the ruins of a collar.

Sometimes, he states, children are found covered with flea-bites, and when the clothes are opened fleas are seen hopping about "like morris-dancers."

Temple newsam Park will be open to the public every Sunday afternoon during the present month, and, judging by the number of people who visited the grounds last month, the privilege accorded by the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., will be appreciated. A sexagenarian informed me the other day that when he was a lad the grounds were always open, and swings were erected for the amusement of the youngsters. The privilege was, I believe, enjoyed for many years, but the people of Leeds abused it, and the late Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram was reluctantly compelled to close the park against the public.

But it is always so. When owners of park grounds give permission to the public to share the pleasure to be derived therefrom, care should be taken to do no damage, and if anyone sees a visitor causing destruction of trees or plants information should be given, because that is the only way by which the public may retain the privilege given them. So long as no damage is done, I think property-owners are acting wisely in throwing grounds open. It gives enjoyment to a great number of people—and this must be a source of satisfaction to the owner—and it tends to create good feeling between all connected with the estate and the public. It is unfortunate other landowners do not follow the Hon. E. L. Wood's example, but common sense will do no good.

At one time it was suggested that Sherburn should get a supply of water from Leeds, but the defeat of the Doncaster scheme by the city ratepayers caused the District Council to look elsewhere. In the district, I understand, there is a spring of good water—it is said to be rather hard—and instructions were given to obtain information concerning it. Since then the Leeds Corporation have stated they propose to again take up the Doncaster scheme, so that the main would go through Tadcaster rural district, but there is a strong opposition in the city to the project, and it may never be carried out. It would be much better were a local scheme, to supply a large area, adopted, but it seems impossible, with so many interests to conciliate, to get any agreement on the District Council.

To expect Tadcaster ratepayers to provide a water supply for the drinking fountain at Colton Lane end was unfair, because it is outside their area, and concerns them as little as residents at Allerton or Kippax. The fountain was a gift, and when it was erected it was thought the local Authority would provide the water for it, but it appears they have no power to do so. Of course, Tadcaster District Council have no more responsibility than either York or Leeds, because the trough has been put down for cattle passing along the highway, and not for local needs, but it is in the Tadcaster area, and the District Council do not provide the water the trough will remain empty. It has, therefore, been decided to apply to the Local Government Board for sanction to pay for water used in this connection.

Crossgates folks are very proud of their railway station—the finest wayside station on the system, they will tell you—but it is not ever thus. Many of us remember its old looking-office, like a hen-coop, perched on one end of the discarded footbridge, and the present waiting-rooms, but others can recall a time when the only access to the station was on the Halton side, and the ladder by which they descended to the platform was not without its dangers. Of course, the oldest inhabitants can recall the days when there was no Crossgates Station—when the few trains that passed along picked up passengers at Old Manstone and Halton stations, but the district had a small population then.

The other day I came across a publication containing an amusing description of Crossgates station as it was before the alterations. The writer states:—"Crossgates is an inconvenient station, in a cutting, where the North Eastern Company seems to keep its wind, and where you can get a very good illustration of the answer to the old conundrum "What gives a cold, cures a cold, and pays the doctor?" Different opinions for use on the station, and for transmission east, west, north and south, find their proper level here in many ways more or less extraordinary. Coals are shot down on the permanent way to be quickly shovelled up at the earliest possible moment; portmanteaux, tin boxes, etc., have to be wheeled down a very awkward pathway, so much on the incline that the willing and energetic porter has often to pull very hard to keep his horseless two-wheeler from running away with him. But bundles of chips and other things that will stand any amount of banging about are dealt with in a much more easy fashion, as they are pitched down from the road above, neck and crop, on to the platform—a drop of about five-and-twenty feet. This latter mode of delivery, although undoubtedly expeditious, would, if applied to packages of delicate materials, addressed on labels printed with the well-known exhortations to tender handling, as "With care," or "This side up," would obviously be possessed of many disadvantages." They do not pitch things from the roadway on to the platform nowadays. Gone are the old station and old methods.

How it was done at Harewood! The county medical officer, in his annual report, states:—

It is not right that cleanly parents should be compelled to send their children to sit at school beside the verminous child from a neglected home, and as exclusion of verminous children is without effect so long as the home remains unclean it is evident that nothing short of home visitation and constant, sharp supervision of the parents will suffice in these cases. In cases where parents will not take the means that are required to clean the heads of the children creeping of the hair should be insisted upon. The head teacher of Harewood School adopted an unusual but effective procedure for stimulating the self-respect of the girls. He showed to the senior scholars a louse under the microscope; within a week there was a marked improvement in the state of the girls heads which has since been maintained.

Nitty and verminous heads are common in mining communities such as Castleford, he states, but some agricultural districts are nearly free. Ringworm and ringworm again required attention from the central staff during the year.

Recently in local medical officers' reports comment has been passed on damp houses and dirty streets and yards, and the following extract from the county medical officer's report will be read with interest:—

Rheumatism is uncommon in children under three, but the percentage of heart disease from this cause increases after that age, and as rheumatism is associated with damp, and further, as rheumatism is more common among the children of the working-classes than among those of the upper classes, it is a fair inference that the damp and insanitary conditions of old and many new cottages are to blame for the incidence of the disease. If all medical men were to report to the Authority concerned cases of damp houses or streets which have caused disease, or were likely to do so, a great deal of good would be done, but I suppose the doctors will say it is not their business to do so.

Garforth is not so fortunate as Rothwell. In both areas the removal of the refuse is carried out by contract, and apparently at Rothwell there is no difficulty whatever in getting rid of the rubbish, which is tipped on to the land, but at Garforth objection is taken to the refuse being used in this way. What Garforth Council will do with it when they do the scavenging work themselves remains to be seen, but if they are not allowed to throw it on the land, they will either have to find a tip for it or erect a destructor.

It is not surprising, however, that protest is made against the emptying of refuse on land. Not long ago I noticed hedges and fields in Scholes and Barwick decorated with papers, and it was explained to me that they had come from Garforth direction. In Rothwell area the same difficulty is experienced apparently of keeping land and hedges in a decent condition, and an order has been issued for the burning of all paper within twenty-four hours of its being deposited on the land. This is a wise precaution, and it should be adopted in other parts of the district. It is a great pity that the beauty of country districts should be spoilt by deposits of filthy papers, tins, etc., and means should be adopted by the authorities for dealing with the matter.

Has Mr Charlesworth been caught napping? This well-known Rothwell colliery owner, who is High Sheriff for Yorkshire and resides at Knaresborough, lamented the other day that the coal trade was heavily hampered by useless legislation, and he stated that at his pits he had had to expend £7,000 on electric safety lamps for miners whilst having plenty of lamps of another kind. A correspondent points out that legislation has not compelled Mr Charlesworth to buy the lamps—that Parliament has not interfered with colliery owners to that extent, but Mr Charlesworth has made no reply, so one must conclude that he has made a mistake.

AFTER 27 YEARS.—To the regret of the members, Mr H. Crossley has decided to retire from the office of secretary of Wetherby Show. He has been in harness now for 27 years, and is, therefore, fully entitled to the relief he claims. Few who have not done the work realise the amount of detail which the secretary of a show has to get through, but Mr Crossley has done it with thoroughness and consistent courtesy.

GARFORTH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL.

PRIVATE STREETS AGAIN—COUNCIL AND PUBLICITY.

AUDITOR'S SUGGESTION AS TO WATER CHARGES.

The monthly meeting of Garforth Urban District Council was held at the offices at Garforth on Wednesday evening—Mr J. W. Dobson (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were Messrs R. Routledge, jun. (vice-chairman), E. R. Archer, R. Routledge, sen., W. W. Hartley, H. Gascoigne, H. Chappell, and T. S. Slater, with the Clerk (Mr A. E. Carr), the water inspector (Mr Naylor), and the surveyor and sanitary inspector (Mr T. Abbott).

Plans for a stable for Mr J. H. Watson were passed subject to the medical officer's approval.

A letter was read from Mr T. H. Prater in regard to the supplying of three cottages with water from the Council's mains. He thanked the Council, and stated he had got the Tadcaster District Council's permission, and he would be responsible for the water rent.

Permission was given to Mr E. Dixon to fix a water tap in his yard provided it is boxed in.

The medical officer's report showed that during the month there had been seven births and two deaths. A case of tuberculosis and a case of scarlet fever had been notified, and several cases of mumps had occurred.

COMMITTEES.

At a meeting of the Highways Committee a letter was read from the Council's tenants complaining of a nuisance caused by the dust from the mill, and the Clerk reported that he had written Mr Bursell that the nuisance must be abated at once.

At a meeting of the Water Committee a letter was read from Mr Prater stating that he was proposing to convey water to three cottages near Sturton Grange Farm, and was anxious to arrange for supplying water to the cottage occupied by Fred Goodall, off Barwick Road, and asking for the necessary permission, and stating that he was arranging the matter with the Tadcaster Rural District Council. It was proposed by Mr Dobson, and seconded by Mr Goodall, that the Council be recommended to grant such permission subject to the Tadcaster Rural District Council's consent being obtained, and Mr Prater being responsible for the payment of the water rent. This was agreed to. The surveyor reported that the consumption of water from April 25th to May 25th, 28 days, was 126,500 gallons, 45,171 gallons per day. It was agreed that the Working Men's Club be allowed to have water for six months for use at their bowling green at 1s. 3d. per quarter.

At a meeting of the Fire and Lighting Committee it was reported that Mr Blight had resigned the vice-captaincy of the fire brigade, and Mr J. Dale was appointed to the position.

DEFICIT IN WATER REVENUE.

The auditor's report was read, and, referring to the deficit on the water revenue account, he said it was desirable that the whole cost of the water supplied in the district should be borne by the water consumers themselves. At present a large sum represented by the deficit on the water revenue account was found by the general ratepayer, who might or might not be a consumer of water. It was probable, therefore, that the cost was not justly borne by those persons who enjoyed the benefit of the water service. He suggested that the Council should consider whether it would not be more equitable to raise the amount of the water rate now levied.

The Chairman said the deficit was £382, and it included the loans.

The Clerk said the deficit was going down.

The Chairman, in reply to Mr R. Routledge, jun., said the revenue from the sale of the water was more than they paid for it, but they had two loans on the area—one in connection with the old supply, and the second in connection with the supply from Leeds.

The matter then dropped.

DEFECTIVE TAPS—WASTED WATER

Mr Hartley said he had had it reported to him that owing to defective taps a lot of water was wasted, and he wondered whether a periodical inspection of the water taps would prevent the waste. He saw by Mr Naylor's agreement that his duties included a regular inspection, and he wanted to know what that meant. He did not want to put any additional labour on Mr Naylor without paying him for it, and he thought that if washers were supplied the Council might save something.

Mr Routledge: It is for the people to put their own washers on.

Mr Hartley said it was, but it was a roundabout way of getting the work done, and the waste was going on.

Mr Naylor then stated what he did in regard to inspection, and said he did not think there was any great waste of water.

Mr Slater: Suppose we pass a resolution that Mr Naylor put on washers will the owners let him interfere with the taps? Suppose a new tap was needed would they come on to us for it? (Laughter).

Mr Gascoigne said he did not think anyone would object to Mr Naylor putting washers on.

Mr Chappell: It means that we would relieve the landlords of the responsibility of keeping their taps in repair.

Mr Gascoigne said they would have to alter the water regulations before they could supply washers.

Mr Routledge said they had better leave the matter at present.

Nothing more was said on the question.

Mr Chappel brought forward the question of water charges to the fish shops.

The Chairman said that when they went through the water regulations a resolution was passed that these shops should pay 2s. 6d. a quarter, and they had been charged that and on their rateable value as well. It was a mistake.

Mr Chappel said he would give notice of motion on the matter for next meeting.

PRIVATE STREETS AGAIN—"IN COMMITTEE."

When the minutes of the Highways Committee were read, Mr Hartley inquired what had been done in regard to the private streets.

Mr Routledge, sen.: You were here last Wednesday.

Mr Hartley: No, I am not on that committee.

The Chairman: Nothing was done, because we had no authority for it.

Mr Hartley: Did they recommend that the matter be proceeded with?

The Clerk: It will come before the Council to-night.

Mr Hartley: Is this not the time, on the reading of the minutes, to bring it forward?

The Chairman said it was thought desirable it should be taken after the other business.

Mr Chappel: No committee can recommend the Council to go "into committee."

Mr Hartley: I think this matter should be discussed before the minutes are passed.

The Chairman: We must pass the minutes as a correct record before anything is done.

The minutes were then passed.

When the rest of the business had been completed, the Chairman asked if they were to "go into committee."

Mr Chappel: I don't think it is necessary seeing the matter has been before the Council for two years.

Mr Routledge, sen.: It was passed at last meeting that it should be taken "in committee."

Mr Gascoigne: Yes, but it was out of order.

The Clerk: You can move a resolution now.

Mr Routledge, sen.: Then I move that the matter be taken "in committee."

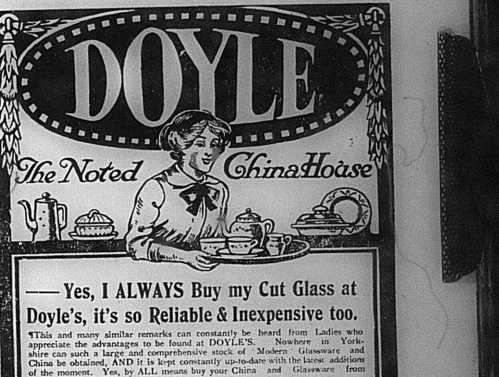
Mr Routledge, jun.: I second that.

Mr Hartley: I propose that we proceed with it in open Council.

The Clerk: That is a direct negative. You can vote against the resolution.

Mr Gascoigne: I don't see why we should go into committee. There is nothing new to talk about, and I am not going to say anything more about it. I shall simply move a resolution.

The proposal to go into committee was then put and carried.



THE LATE MR G. H. LACY.—The funeral took place on Thursday at the Wetherby Cemetery of Mr George Henry Lacy, innkeeper, of Stamford Bridge, and formerly in business as an innkeeper at Wetherby, where he was highly respected. Deceased, who was in his 40th year, died in a nursing home at Leeds, after an illness extending over several weeks, caused by a growth on the brain. The mourners were Mrs Lacy (mother), and the deceased's brothers and sisters, Mr B. Lacy (uncle), Tadcaster; and Mr J. Pick, Ellesfield. There were also present Mr Walker (Messrs Walker and Scott, York), Mr Newman, Mr W. Dobbie, Mr J. D. Tiplady, Mr B. Jackson, Mr J. Hodgson, Mr and Mrs F. Simpson, Mr H. Hainsworth, Mr Fox, Mr S. Johnson, Mr G. H. Crossley, and Mr T. Fozzard (Wetherby), and Mr Jas. Oddy (Spofforth). Rev. A. G. Lockett (curate at St. James's Church), was the officiating clergyman.

OFFICER RETIRES.—Captain Bryan C. Fairfax, one of the well-known Yorkshire family, and a prominent member of the Yorkshire Gentlemen's Cricket Elven, has retired on pension from the Durham Light Infantry, in which he was senior company commander. He had passed for field rank, but it was understood that he was going in for work with the Royal Flying Corps, and two of his juniors were promoted over his head last summer. Captain Fairfax joined the "Faithful Durhams" 21 years ago, and got his steps in 1896 and 1900. He qualified in the Chinese Regiment test for the Chinese language, and served with the Wei-Hai-Wei corps during the fighting for the relief of Pekin in 1900. He was at one time inspector of Chinese labourers in the Transwaal, and he saw active service in the Boer War. He has been aide-de-camp to General the Hon. Sir Neville Lyttelton in South Africa, and military secretary to the Hon. Sir Arthur Lawley, Governor of Madras.

WEDDING.—On Tuesday the marriage of Miss Myrtle Sunderland, third daughter of Mr and Mrs Robert Sunderland, of Myrtle House, South Milford, and Mr Thomas Atkinson, only son of Mrs Atkinson, and the late Mr Thomas Atkinson, of Manor House, Monk Fryston, was solemnised at St. Mary's Church, South Milford, by the Rev. B. Heinsworth, M.A., of Monk Fryston Hall. The bride was given away by her father, and Miss Mildred Sunderland (sister of the bride) was the bridesmaid, while the best man was Mr Gledhill, Wakefield. A reception was held at the bride's father's house, where breakfast was served, and there was a large gathering, including Mrs Atkinson (mother of the bridegroom), Mrs R. Batty, Mr and Mrs Geo. Dixon, Mrs Gledhill, Miss Atkinson (Thirsk), Mr H. Batty, Mr H. Kendall, and Messrs F. and A. Sunderland. Later in the afternoon the happy couple left Monk Fryston Station, en route for Bristol and Ilfracombe, where they will spend their honeymoon.

ACCIDENTS.—There have been a few road accidents in the Wetherby district, but fortunately none attended with serious injury. At the Boston Spa cross roads a couple of cars, one coming from the direction of Bramham and the other coming from Boston Spa, collided. A lady in one of them was cut about the face by broken glass, and a gentleman in the other car was stunned for a while. Both cars were very badly damaged, one having to be towed into Wetherby. Within a mile on the Wetherby side of the scene of this accident, a hind wheel came off a waggonette pulled by a pair of horses, and the occupants were thrown into the road, but one only complained of injury, and that very slight, to his elbow. Just outside Wetherby, at the corner which has of late years become so notorious because of the number of accidents happening there, the occupant of a "knockabout" motor cycle ran into the chains at the entrance to the Wetherby Grange Park. A wooden post was smashed completely off, and the cycle damaged, but luckily the driver was not seriously injured.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Bedding operations are now in full swing. If the soil is very dry it should be turned over roughly and receive a good soaking of water a few hours before being planted. This will simplify the work of planting, and give the plants a better chance of growing away freely afterwards. If possible the bulk of the planting should be done at the later part of the day when the power of the sun is decreasing. In any case seedlings from boxes and nursery beds should not be exposed during the hottest part of the day. For plants such as geraniums, fuchsias, marguerites, etc., will not suffer much even if planted at mid-day providing their roots are thoroughly moist at the time. On rich ground geraniums should be planted in their pots.

TWO OLD FAVOURITES

Every year sees the introduction of a number of new plants, usually described in glowing terms by the raisers. After nearly thirty years of gardening experience, we are compelled to admit that many of the so-called improvements are no better than the old favourites of over a quarter of a century ago. Take the Sweet William as a case in point. A few new shades have been added, some of them certainly very pretty, but where shall we look for a new specie of plant to beat a well-grown Sweet William? The Canterbury Bell is another old favourite which can still hold its own with the best of the novelties. These two old favourites may be grown throughout without the aid of artificial heat, and if an early start is made, even the cold frame can be dispensed with. Towards the end of May sow the seeds in a warm, sheltered position outdoor. Sow thinly, and cover with finely sifted old potting soil. Attention should be paid to watering until the seedlings appear. When they are enough to handle prick the young plants into nursery beds, allowing them about nine inches of space each way. The beds should be matured and well broken up a few weeks before the seedlings are planted therein. The seed is cheap, and a large stock of plants may be secured for little outlay. A mixed packet of Canterbury Bells will probably include single, double, and Clematis-flowered varieties in many colours.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Provide Peas with suitable supports in good time. They never crop as well if they are once allowed to topple over.

Cabbage, cauliflowers, etc., do best when planted out during showery weather. If the soil is dry at planting time, and rain does follow immediately, hand-watering must be resorted to until the plants commence to grow freely.

Sow for succession, peas, lettuce, radishes, kidney beans, etc.

Lettuce should be transplanted into well-manured beds. Allow 9 inches of space to each plant.

Parsley requires plenty of room and should be thinned to about a foot apart. Crowded plants produce small leaves only.

Thin onions, parsnips, beet, carrots, etc., in good time.

There is still time to put in mint cuttings. Syringe daily until rooted.

CELERY FLY

The larvæ of the celery fly is very injurious. It is perhaps better known locally as the leaf-mining maggot. It makes mines or passages in the leaves, and feeds upon the soft substances. Its presence is indicated by the appearance of pale patches on the upper side of the leaves. If these are examined they will be found to contain a number of fat maggots. In course of time they will destroy the leaves, and in doing this the flow of sap is so much checked that the growth of the plants is seriously affected. In some instances, if the attack is very severe the plants die. The fly usually appears about the end of April, and places its eggs upon the upper side of the leaves. The eggs are hatched in about a week's time, and the larvæ from these bury themselves between the leaves. About a fortnight later the larvæ changes to a puna inside a puparium. From this the fly hatches out and in course of time lays more eggs, and thus the work of the reproduction goes on throughout the summer months. It is simply impossible to deal with the maggot whilst it is encased within the leaf unless hand-picking is resorted to, a slow and tedious task when the attack is severe. Preventive measures are best, and if these are carefully attended to there will be little danger of the plants suffering very much. A mixture of one part finely powdered lime to 3 parts of soot may be dusted over the plants about once a fortnight. It should be put on when the leaves are damp dew or rain.

Paraffin and soft soap is highly spoken of as a means of keeping the fly at a distance. One quart of paraffin and half-a-pound of soft soap to ten gallons of water is a suitable mixture. The paraffin and soap should be thoroughly mixed in a small quantity of hot water before adding the bulk of cold water. This preparation should be used two or three times during the growing season. If only applied once the young leaves will probably be attacked when they grow above the old ones, and the above remedies should be adopted even if no maggot has been noticed. Prevention is better than cure, and plants which appear to be clear may be attacked any time.

POT PLANTS

AMERICAN CARNATIONS

The earliest batch of cuttings rooted in December or January should now be ready for transferring to their final pots. Three parts fibrous yellow loam, one part clean leaf-mould or fibrous peat, and a generous sprinkling of wood ashes and charcoal, will provide a good rooting media. If available, Le Fruitier, or the rate of a six-inch potful to the barrow load of compost, may be added. Powdered lime rubble is also very good. Pot into six-inch pots, and ram firm. Avoid sinking the ball of soil deeper in the pot than it was previously. Stand in a cold frame, shade from bright sun, and syringe fairly close, and sprinkle overhead twice a day. Continue this treatment for a fortnight, then gradually give more light and air. Keep a sharp look out for greenfly as this pest is particularly harmful to carnations.

SEEDS TO SOW NOW

The stress of work in the flower garden must not be allowed to interfere with the work of sowing seeds of plants required for greenhouse or conservatory decoration during the winter and spring months. Primulas in variety, cinerarias, and calceolarias are three of the most important, and any or all of these should be sown now. Later sowings may be made to provide a succession. Schizanthus and cherkias in variety may be sown to provide plants to bloom immediately before chrysanthemums. It often happens that greenhouse flowers are somewhat scarce just before the early chrysanthemums commence to bloom, and the conservatory becomes somewhat dull. A number of colous cuttings should now be got in. These will provide nice plants to mix with cherkias and schizanthus.

SWEET PEAS IN POTS

Sweet peas are producing an exceptionally large amount of fine blooms this year. The bright weather have been all in their favour. It should be remembered that in producing a large amount of bloom the strength of the plants is being severely taxed, and compensation in the shape of liquid food must be provided, or they will soon weaken, and the flowers become small and short-stalked. Liquid manure may be given at alternate waterings, and once a week a topdressing of some approved chemical fertiliser should be used. Cut the flowers as fast as they open. If they are allowed to remain on the plants they will soon weaken them. It is a great mistake to cut sweet peas when the sun is shining upon them. Those cut early in the morning, or in the evening will last much longer.

QUESTION

I have a hanging basket. Will you advise me how to fill it with soil and plants? You not about the varieties of plants last week. An answer will oblige.—A. W. (Gildersome).

Pack the bottom and sides with some fresh sphagnum moss, or if not available gather some nice green moss from the woods. Mix some fibrous loam, fresh cow dung, and a little dissolved clay, and pack it next to the moss. Over this place a little of the soil, and stand the largest plants in position. Press the remainder of the soil firmly around the plants, and fill in with your smaller plants as the work proceeds. Do not overcrowd the plants. Leave sufficient space for light and air to get to them. They will fill all spaces later.

Owing to the large and ever-increasing number of Joneses in the Swansea Valley, there is serious difficulty in delivering letters to the proper quarters. Representations are being made to the local authorities that all houses should be numbered and all streets properly named. It often happens that four or five different families of Joneses live near one another.

LUPUS CURED.

5, Clarence Road,

(Copy). Hunslet, Leeds.

Dear Sir,—I write thanking you for the benefit I have derived from your treatment. I suffered from Lupus for 13 years. I have undergone an operation at the Leeds Dispensary and Lupus and two operations at the Leeds General Infirmary, and was discharged as cured; but in a few months' time was as bad as ever. I was then advised by some friends to consult you, which I did, and I am glad to say that after six months' treatment I am perfectly cured, and have not been in better health for a number of years. I hope everyone suffering from Lupus will see this testimonial and be advised to consult Prof. Crosswaite, at once, and be advised by one who has suffered.

I am, your friend always,

JOHN T. PICKERING

N.B.—Make what use you like of this testimonial, for I cannot be too thankful for the new man you have made of me.

LOSS OF WEIGHT OF EGGS DURING NATURAL INCUBATION (continued).

"It is unnecessary to describe in detail the stages in the development of a chick. The chick, however, absorbs oxygen, and moisture and certain gases are thrown off through the shell. Under normal conditions the total amount of moisture and gases which have been thrown off at any particular time corresponds to that particular stage in the development of the chicken; in other words, when the egg is incubated under perfectly normal conditions the total loss in the weight of the egg corresponds, within certain limits, to the stage of development of the embryo.

"If the operator of an incubator knows how much a certain number of eggs have lost in weight since the beginning of the incubating period, and compares this loss with the normal loss of the same number of eggs for the same length of time, he will know definitely whether the eggs have decreased properly in weight. If they have lost too much, provided, of course, that the temperature has been normal, they are drying up too rapidly, and either more moisture should be supplied or the amount of ventilation should be reduced; but in reducing the circulation of air through the incubating chamber it must be remembered that pure air surrounding the eggs is just as important as a proper temperature. On the other hand, if the eggs are not losing weight as rapidly as they should they are either kept too moist or they are not receiving the proper amount of ventilation, or perhaps they may be kept too moist and insufficiently ventilated also.

"The object of this bulletin is to furnish sufficient data to enable the operators of incubators to exercise a more intelligent supervision over the operation of their machines. A number of experiments have been performed to determine the normal loss in the weight of eggs during the incubation, and for this purpose the natural method of hatching has been employed. Eggs have been weighed, placed under broody hens in locations suitable for a perfect hatch, re-weighed on a chemical balance at suitable intervals, and the loss determined."

As a result of the studies retailed in bulletin No. 73, directions were issued covering the practical points involved, and these directions are reproduced herewith.

DIRECTIONS FOR WEIGHING THE EGGS.

After placing the eggs upon the trays ready for the incubator, set the trays upon a pair of scales reading to ounces, and note the total weight of the eggs and trays. (The trays should be thoroughly dry). After a few days weigh again. Subtract this from the first weigh. This will give the actual loss in weight of the eggs.

AN EXAMPLE

Suppose that you have 208 eggs on the trays; that the first weight with trays is 24lb. 20z.; and that on the sixth day the weight is 23lb. 6oz. Then the loss in weight is 1202. Now look in the table for the loss in weight of 100 eggs for six days. This is 100z.; 100z. multiplied by 2.08 gives 20.80z., which is the calculated loss of 208 eggs for six days. Therefore the eggs have not been losing weight as rapidly as they should and the eggs should be given more ventilation or the incubator should be removed to a dryer location. It is assumed that the eggs are kept uniformly at the proper temperature). After the eggs have been tested for the infertile ones, weigh again and proceed as before.

TWO RULES

If the eggs have lost too much weight give more moisture or less ventilation; but in regulating ventilation great care must be used, as pure air in the egg-chambers is absolutely necessary.

If the eggs have not lost enough weight, open the ventilators or place the incubator in a dryer place.

WETHERBY RACE MEETING.

LARGE CROWD—GOOD SPORT.

The race meeting at Wetherby on Monday was favoured with ideal weather, the sun shining with considerable heat from a cloudless sky. As a result the patronage extended was quite satisfactory in every department, and the fixture was a decided success. The stake money offered for the seven events exceeded anything given by any other meeting under National Hunt Rules for the day, but this generosity did not meet with its due reward, as though the fields for the various events yielded a fair average considering the time of the year, the principal event ended in a walk-over for Rough and Ready. This was certainly disappointing, but the meeting is sure to go in the long-run. The course was in good order, as the jumps had been well protected, both on the take-off and the landing side, and with a plentiful supply of herbage on the course there was little cause for complaint. Since the Easter Meeting a new exit for motor-cars has been made from the back of the stands to the town, and the motor car enclosure has been made nearly as large again. Other minor improvements have been effected, and further schemes are under consideration. The most notable of these is the provision of an additional grand stand in the chief enclosure, the patronage of which has shown an increase during the past few years.

Racing commenced with the Bickerton Handicap Hurdle, for which Ballymac was preferred over his four opponents. The picking was by no means good, as Ballymac, after making a bad mistake at a hurdle a mile from home, was well beaten, and Millstream, who made all the running, was caught a quarter of a mile from home by Close-wood Boy, who, well ridden by Threlfall, challenged, and quickly getting on terms, won cleverly by a length. Ballymac was a bad third.

The Spofforth Selling Handicap Steeplechase was considered to be a good thing for 10 M.P.H., once sheltered in Mr Calman's stable. Of the others there was nothing to choose between Tuscalum and Cushington from a market point of view. The favourite never held a winning chance, neither did Tuscalum, but Dwarf II., half a mile from home, looked like doing so. Entering the straight, however, was very comfortable on Chessington, and when he got on terms with the leader at the distance it was palpable there was only one in it, the old horse forging ahead to win by four lengths. Tango fell, and Mr H. Trueman was badly shaken, being brought back in the horse ambulance. He was suffering from slight concussion, but it was hoped he would be all right. There was no bid for the winner at the auction.

The Linton Optional Selling Hurdle Race was voted a good thing for the Lambourne horse, Bullfinch, and he was duly installed favourite, with Samura the best backed of the remainder. He never had any chance with Parthia, a winner in Easter, and ridden by Halfack. The latter made the whole of the running, and though challenged by Bullfinch close home, Mr De Trafford's horse came on for more, and Parthia came away easily by a length and a half. He was led into the sale ring and bought in for 250gs.

The Whitsuntide Steeplechase, the most valuable event on the card, was a very disappointing affair as nothing turned out to oppose Rough and Ready, the Yarm horse consequently walking over for the stakes.

Rough and Ready confidently expected to supplement the victory of Pyrrhic for the Doncaster stable by taking the Ainsty Selling Hurdle Race, and was favourite from the outset. There was little money for Orchid at 3 to 1, whilst Claret Lad and Banger were also backed. It provided an excellent race between Orchid and Bestroot, the latter proving the better and finishing by a head. There was an objection to the winner subsequently for crossing, but the stewards, Mr J. C. Wilmot-Smith, Mr R. F. Meyrick, Mr Fairbairn, and the acting Starter, Mr R. F. Walnwaring—after a lengthy investigation, decided not to disturb the judge's verdict. There was no bid for Orchid when submitted for auction.

For the Fotherthorpe Handicap Steeplechase, Patches, a previous winner over the course, was made favourite, with Captain Farrell also a popular fancy. Patches was a winner by everyone except at the post. At the final fence he was first over, but could not withstand the challenge of Captain Farrell, the horse shaking up somewhat and winning by half a length.

Backers of favourites had to wait until the final event, the Tally Ho Hurdle, to see their selected score. The winner proved to be Puffical Billy, but there was an element of luck about it, as the danger, Media, came to grief at the first fence, whilst Sir Guy was pulled up, leaving Puffing Billy with only Flying Storm to beat, which he easily enough, but accompanied all the way round by the riderless Media, the latter gaining the post first.

The officials were:—Stewards: Mr J. C. Wilmot Smith, Heathlands, George Gunter, and Mr R. F. Meyrick. Stakeholder and Clerk of the Course, Mr J. Godfrey Lang, Spofforth, Harrogate. Handicapper, Mr F. W. Wilson, Llargfield, Surrey. Clerk of The Scales, Mr H. Ford, Nottingham. Judge, Mr Stanley Ford, Nottingham. Starter, Mr C. Lang, Spofforth, Harrogate. Auctioneer, Mr H. Walker, York. A Tobermory correspondent states that genuine wild cat has been caught in Ardnamurchan deer forest, Argyllshire, by a gamekeeper. The animal is very large, measuring 45 inches in length. It has a short, bushy tail, and is dark in colour, with brown stripes. It stands very high on its legs and has a very tigerish appearance.

ROTHWELL AND ITS REFUSE.

THE DESTRUCTOR QUESTION.

In his annual report Mr E. F. Moorhouse, sanitary inspector for the Rothwell urban area, states that last year 9,953 loads of house refuse were removed at a total cost, for the year, of 1s. 5¼d. per load of refuse and 9s. 4d. per ashpit.

Complaints in regard to tardy removal of the ashpit contents after 9 a.m. have been fewer than in previous years, and the ashpit contents have been satisfactorily disposed of for agricultural purposes, and there has been quicker despatch in dealing with the refuse after being tipped on to the land.

This district is particularly fortunate in having large tracts of agricultural land within, or bordering upon its boundaries which are suitable in every way for absorbing enormous quantities of house refuse, both on account of its nature and the class of crops grown upon it, and I see no reason why the refuse of this district should not continue to be disposed of for agricultural purposes for many years to come; but the disposal will require to be under strict supervision and control, if serious nuisances are to be avoided.

There is a natural tendency when suggestions are brought forward for improved methods of removal and disposal to infer that a refuse destructor will be the ultimate outcome, with the result that a check is given to the suggestions being put into force. The advocates of the privy-midden system also use this refuse destructor argument.

The surest, and, in my opinion, only way of preventing a refuse destructor with its enormous cost and unsatisfactory features, being brought into existence in this district is by a proper use of the natural advantages this district possesses for disposal of the refuse on to the land along with improved methods of removal.

The difficulty in this district is not with the refuse, but with the rubbish, consisting of tins, pots, etc., which are yearly becoming more difficult to dispose of and arrangements will soon have to be made for these materials to be sorted at depots and more suitable ways of disposal found. Were this done, many farmers and market gardeners, who at present object, would have the refuse upon the land, would gladly use it.

Result of Curious Courtship

SHORT STORY

Between the two places only business communications had passed along the wires, but a change came about in an unexpected way. A new telegraphic operator had been appointed to Dunwood, and one morning a message came to me, in this wise:—

"Good morning, Brandon."

I responded:

"Good morning, Danwood."

Then came the information:

"The former operation died last night, and I have taken his place."

"What is your name?" I asked.

"Nellie Merton. What is yours?"

A spirit of mischief prompted my reply "Ned Clayborn."

"Thank you," was the concise response.

Then a message in real earnest came along the lines, and we were obliged to attend to business.

She told me her history. She had run away from home because her parents insisted upon marrying her to a man she detested (and the description of him was a revelation in the way of a coward came clicking viciously from my end of the line). She would never marry him—never! I advised her not to, and hinted at an affection deeper and truer than any the presuming "Dolores" could offer.

Well, the outcome of it all was that I asked the unseen Nellie to be my wife, and even described the little home that was becoming awaiting her coming. I was floundering in deep water, and could but trust to a kind Providence to pull me out. My "fun" was becoming dead earnest. How I wished the wires stretched long between us, so that I might see the expression that I could perchance hear some exclamation, or gain some token of how my message was received. But this was not to be, and I had to possess my soul in patience.

That virtue was almost exhausted, when the well-known call fell upon my ear. I flew to the instrument. It was concise, and not very complimentary.

"Rather than marry that brute, I will risk it."

I was in for it now, and must perforce flounder still deeper by sending rapturous messages over the wires. I, Delia Brown, was engaged to be married to a young lady I had never seen. This was forcing the question of woman's rights.

I carried the "fun" on for over three months, and every day it grew decidedly less "funny," until I began to brood over the predicament into which I had giddily led my friend.

At last I vowed that it no longer, and one day, just three weeks before I was to travel to Danwood and claim my bride, I got into the train with altogether another motive. It was to "kiss and make up," after I had begged her with tears to forgive me, etc., etc.

I found a little house, with a little sign in blue and white swinging in the breeze, and going in I saw the little sign at Brandon. It was occupied at the time by a young man reading a paper. I looked at him, without speaking, and he returned the the compliment in kind.

"I wish to see Miss Nellie Merton," I said, and, as he did not speak, I went on to explain. "I am the operator at Brandon, and I have an important message which must be delivered to her at once. A moment's delay means——" I paused for a word, and he spoke for the first time.

"So you are the operator at Brandon, and desire to see Miss Merton. I am sorry to disappoint you, but you see, Miss Merton is at home at the present time, while I take her place. The fact is, she is going to marry a brute, and is compelled to do so against her will. Perhaps you can help me in the matter. I have an important message which must be delivered to her at once. A moment's delay means——" I paused for a word, and he spoke for the first time.

His coolness nearly distracted me.

"I must see her!" I exclaimed, excitedly.

"But you cannot," he said, coolly. "I have instructions not to let any one know her whereabout for a day or two, until these preparations are well under way."

I was on the verge of tears, and, with a husky sob, I cried out, sinking into a chair, and holding up my hands deprecatingly:

"Don't say another word! You will set me wild. If you will not let me speak to find Nellie," I went on, in desperation, "will you please tell her this? I have been a bad, wicked girl, and—and—and there is no such person as Ned Clayborn. It started in fun, and—and—and—please let me go to her. She will understand me so much better than you can explain it."

"No such person as New Clayborn? My dear young lady, I must beg leave to differ with you. That is the name of the young man who, in three short weeks, is to marry Miss Merton. Surely, he is not dead?" he added, in consternation.

"Oh, will you not understand? It was all a joke at first. I thought it would be great fun, and so I—well, I am Ned Clayborn, and after a time I became engaged—in fun, you know" (here I laughed hysterically); "I tried to stop, but I was so wicked I could not, and now poor Nellie will break her heart, and—and—and—" and I broke down and began to cry in a miserable way.

Unlike most men, my companion was not in the least disconcerted at the sight of my tears, but simply laughed, loud and long.

Presently the laughter ceased; then I heard uneasy movements in the chair occupied by my companion; then he got up and paced about restlessly. Pretty soon a light touch fell upon my arm, and his voice, very gentle and kind, said:

"Nellie is here to receive your confession and forgiveness."

I dried my eyes, and looked up, but saw no one but the tall young man who was looking at me very earnestly.

"Where is she?" I asked, ready to cry again.

"Here," he said, holding out his hand.

Instinctively, I put mine into it, and it closed over it tightly.

"I also have a confession to make," he said, earnestly. "I thought you were another young fellow like myself, and, wishing to relieve the tedium of a long day's waiting, decided to play you a flirtation. I intended some day to meet the young man and have it out with him, when you came with your strange message. I knew it was a mistake directly I saw Nellie Merton. And you are Ned Clayborn? Come, dry your eyes, Ned; your Nellie is not heartbroken at the turn of affairs."

After standing him in silent amazement for a space of five seconds, the truth of the whole matter began to dawn upon my confused brain. My face grew hot with indignation, and I snatched my hand from his and stepped to my feet.

"You are a contemptible fellow!" I cried.

He did not reply, but stood looking down at me from his superior height.

"It was a hundred times more meaner in you, because your object was a woman. I will never forgive you, if I live to be a thousand."

"Isn't that rather paradoxical, considering the fact that you thought I was a woman, and you were enacting the role of the sterner sex?" he asked.

"You might have known," I answered, severely.

"But I did not," he said.

"Here is my train," I said, shortly.

"Goodbye," he replied, assuming me on to the train, despite my independence, and lifting his hat as it steamed out.

I travelled back to Brandon a sadder but a wiser woman.

"I have a fool," said I, to my reflection in the little mirror as I removed my hat."

A year rolled by, I had entirely recovered from my chagrin, and hurled in the direction of Dunwood every morning, was a vivid recollection of the voice, and manner, and appearance of the tall young operator at Danwood.

One morning I was answering and copying back a long message, when a long shadow fell across my papers. A glance upward told me who it was. The door of that secret and darkened chamber of my memory flew open, and I knew that the tall young man whom I had met at Danwood was not as yet quite consigned to oblivion. Standing with hat in hand, and without any preface of any kind, he said:

"Over a year ago you asked me to marry you, and I consented. I have come to-day to ask will you come. Or shall I enter an action for breach of promise?"

What could I do? And, after all, perhaps he would not have made me a better husband had I been left in the lurch, conventional way, and waited for him to propose to me."

"TAKING COLD."

Of all causes of "cold," most probably fatigue is one of the most common, says Health. A jaded man coming home at night from a long day's work; a growing youth losing some hours' sleep over evening parties two or three times a week, a young lady heavily "doing the season," or overburdened children overfed with short allowance of sleep, are common instances of the victim of "cold." Luxury is favourable to chill taking. Very hot rooms, feather beds, and soft chairs create a sensitiveness that leads to catarrh. Probably many chills are contracted at night or at the fag-end of the day, when tired people get the equilibrium of their circulation disturbed by either overheated sitting-rooms or under-heated bedrooms and beds. This is especially the case with elderly people. In such cases the mischief is not always done simultaneously, or in a single night. It often takes place individually, extending over days or even weeks.

Sixty-one couples were married on the same day in the parish church at Calugareasa, Roumania.

SHERBURN GRAMMAR SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL.

"FOR LEGITIMATE ORPHANS AND INFANTS ONLY."

Apropos of the new scheme for the administration of the Sherburn-in-Elmet Endowed School, the following account of the foundation and its charity is taken from Wheater's "History of Sherburn and Cawood":—

In Robert Hungate, second son of William Hungate and Anne Stillington his wife, "counsellor at law" of Lincoln's Inn (1570), and of Sand Hutton in 1605, Sherburn found a generous benefactor. It was he who founded and endowed, by will dated 11th May, 1619, the executors of which were his nephew, Sir William Hungate, and his neice, Margery Hungate, the hospital and grammar school at Sherburn, declaring that the several sums of £900, £700, and £1,300, moneys owing to him, should on recovery be devoted by his executors to that purpose. After the receipt of the said sums or any part amounting to the sum of £1100 or above, the executors were with all convenient speed to purchase to them and their heirs lands, tenements, and hereditaments, of so much yearly value as bona fide so much moneys would purchase in fee simple, upon the confidence and trust that his said executors and their heirs should for ever thereafter employ the yearly profits of the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments as from time to time to be purchased, in erecting, building, and founding one convenient house or hospital, with a convenient school-house and rooms, within the town of Sherburn, for the town of Sherburn, for legitimate orphans and infants only, above seven or under fifteen years old, to consist of the number of 24 orphans in one time, and each child to be yearly allowed for their maintinance the sum of £5; and also to provide an able schoolmaster, being a preaching minister, to instruct the said orphans in the art of grammar; and to catechise the said orphans in the grounde of the Christian religion established in England, twice every week, and to preach once on every Sabbath in the parish church, where the said hospital should be erected, yearly for ever. The schoolmaster and instructor to have a convenient room there for his lodgment, and a solary of £30 per annum, and his diet assigned of as marks per annum. The master, usher, and orphans were to be chosen by his executors, or the survivor of them, and after their death by the Dean of York, for the time being, should act until there was a heir male, "being no Popish recusant," and then the eldest of that heir male by the name of William Hungate, his late father, "if he be no Popish recusant." The orphans of the towns of Sherburn and Sutton should be preferred, after the orphans of Sand Hutton, and then of York. In default of heir male of his father, or if such heir male should be a "Popish recusant," or if there be any default in choosing and placing such schoolmaster, preacher, usher, and orphans, his will was that the Dean of York, for the time being, should act until there was a heir male, "being no Popish recusant," and then the eldest of that heir male by the name of William Hungate, his late father, "if he be no Popish recusant." The orphans of the towns of Sherburn and Sutton should be preferred, after the orphans of Sand Hutton, and then of York. In default of heir male of his father, or if such heir male should be a "Popish recusant," or if there be any default in choosing and placing such schoolmaster, preacher, usher, and orphans, his will was that the Dean of York, for the time being, should act until there was a heir male, "being no Popish recusant," and then the eldest of that heir male by the age of fifteen years and a half at the most; but before and within that time, as they should be able and fit for it, should be sent to the University, or be placed apprentices to "some honest course of life within this Commonwealth." After these directions had been complied with, the grammar-school to have the said lands, etc., should belong to his executors, their heirs, and assigns, "to their sole and proper use for ever." Sir William Hungate, the executor named of the sums mentioned in the purchase of lands, which in 1628 were conveyed to the use of the charity, and then produced in yearly rents upwards of £250 (which must have been a very capital investment on the part of Sir William!). The several payments directed by the will amounted to £265 (or, 8d.

William at the same time provided a school-house. In 1671 the charity was endowed by one Francis Thornhill with land, which was thereupon demised by the trustees to the same Francis Thornhill at a yearly rent of £40. Sir William Hungate having survived the executors, acted as the patron of the charity until his death in 1655, and the heir male of the testator's father being then a Papist, the Dean of York acted as patron until 1780. In 1780 Sir Thomas Gascoigne, whose father had married the heiress of the Hungate estates, and had become entitled to the estates charged with the payments to the charity, conformed to the Protestany religion, and from thence until his death acted as patron of the charity. In the year 1770 Sir Thomas Gascoigne obtained an Act of Parliament for enclosing, among other lands, the estates charged with the payment to the charity; and thereupon by the interference of the then Dean of York, Sir Thomas at that time being a Papist, that in respect of the benefit which Sir Thomas derived from the enclosure, the charity payments should be increased by a further yearly payment of £12. Sir Thomas, who became by purchase the owner of the lease granted to Francis Thornhill, died in 1810, and thereupon Richard Oliver Gascoigne came into possession of the charity lands, as tenant for life, under the will of Sir Thomas Gascoigne, and from the time of such possession the payments made by him to the charity were upwards of £50 a year less than the amount of the payments directed by the will of the founder! The income of the estates at the time of filing the information amounted to £800 a year, and the object of the information was to have the whole of those rents applied to the purposes of the charity, by a scheme to be settled by the Master of the Rolls.

And now comes casuistry and a very feeble attempt at right—liberal pseudonotes! The master declared that "it a court of justice were to provide for that change in the value of money, which the testator had not in his contemplation, it would not be to execute the will, but to make a new will for the testator"; and therefore upon in the face of his own dictum he proceeded to make a new will for the testator, but clearly not such a one as the testator would have made. He determined that in addition to the stipulated payment, the owner of the estate was bound, at his own expense, to maintain and keep the school-house in good repair, and to pay for the fitting up and furnishing of the school, and to find the school books, and also the necessary furniture and bedding for the lodging of the scholars, so far as the yearly sum of £12, mentioned in the Enclosure Act, was not adequate to that purpose; and he directed the defendant, Richard Oliver Gascoigne, to account for the amount of the stipulated payments from the time of his possession, and to pay the costs of the information, and referred it to the Master to settle a scheme for the future management of the charity.

On the cause coming on for further directions on the Master's report, a question was raised as to the propriety of the introduction of a provision for the teaching of writing and arithmetic into the scheme for the management of the Grammar School. It was argued that writing and arithmetic, although best fitted for commercial purposes, were inconsistent with maturo of a "grammar" school. And yet the pupils of this particular grammar school, twenty out of twenty-four were "to be placed apprentices to some honest course of life within this Commonwealth," according to the very words and will of the testator. The lawyers had to admit that Lord Lyndhurst—whom men called Cyplex, as they did Bishop Grostete, another very clear-sighted man, who spoke plain truth and commen-sense, six hundred years before—had approved of the introduction of a provision for giving instruction in writing and arithmetic into a scheme for the administration of a free grammar school. And so the Master of the Rolls, "glad of an opportunity of holding, upon the authority of the case before Lord Lyndhurst," could not but see "that the teaching of writing and arithmetic might be well introduced into a scheme for the management of a free "grammar school." This account is taken from Myles and Keen's Chancery Reports.

The school was established at Sherburn, and in front of it is this inscription:—"Robertus Hungate de Fletate Eboruac Armiger. Natus Saxonis Fundator Prime, 1610. Major et Aldermanni Eborum in Memoriam Ejus Hoc Posuerunt, 1656."

This possibly may be the year of the erection of the present building. Robert Hungate also left £30 a year to the minister of St. Cuthbert's Church in York, and £30 to the minister of Sand Hutton Church and Sutton Church, which annual sums were to continue for thirty-five years after his death. This generous and noble-minded man is buried in St. Cuthbert's Church, Peaseholme, York.

TERRITORIALS' CAMP AT BOSTON SPA.

The Northern Command Companies, more popularly known as the Northern Signal Companies (R.E.), had their Whitsuntide Camp at Boston Spa. The men paraded at Leeds on Saturday afternoon at twelve o'clock, the mounted men and waggons journeying by road through Roundhay and Collingham, The dismounted portion were conveyed by rail at 4.35 p.m., marching from Collingham and reaching Boston Spa at 6.30. The cable waggons arrived at 7 o'clock. Owing to no fewer than a score of horses having been condemned before starting both the airline and wireless waggons were considerably delayed, and it was a late hour before all were completely fixed up. The preliminary arrangements, the erection of 40 tents and the laying of picket lines, had been well carried out by a small fatigue party. By 5 o'clock on Sunday morning the camp was astir, and soon after nine the airline waggons moved off to build lines in the immediate neighbourhood. All the cable companies went north of the River Wharfe to lay their cables and maintain communication throughout, spreading over a considerable distance. Both the wireless companies worked in different directions, erecting their tall masts and getting in touch with each other, the general results of the morning's work being considered most satisfactory.

Particularly good work was done on Sunday, by the four cable companies. An extensive intercommunication scheme, by which the waggons of all the Companies were connected one with another, was carried out. All the cable lines and waggons were occupied in instructional work between Newton Kyme, Clifford, and Boston Spa, while the wireless got as far as Bramham. Rain fell during the morning, but the afternoon was beautifully fine.

On Monday the airline and wireless waggons were drawn by six-horse teams for the first time. Second-class officers were fixed up by the former establishment at Thorparch, and at the cross roads between Walton and Wighill, where also there were four base offices of the Cable Detachments. The waggons made a more extended circuit than on Sunday, No. 1 section reaching Cattal. For the first time active use was made of a number of the motor cyclist branch, Lance-Corporal Blakeborough, Marsh carrying special messages fairly long distances.

Major-General Baldock, accompanied by Major Wilkins, arrived at Boston Spa by motor soon after 10 o'clock, and, prior to visiting the working detachments, inspected the camp in detail. Accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel J. W. H. Broan and Captain T. H. L. Speight, R.E. (Adjutant), he then went to Newton Kyme, where the wireless was in touch with Lieut. Barker's detachment at Compton, a distance of about six miles. From here the Inspecting Officer despatched a message. The airline second-class office at Thorparch was taken next, a "wire" being transmitted from the General to the Walton Lodge office, and whilst half-way between these he instructed an operator to "tee in" on the line, and despatch a further message asking "What time did the General go through," receiving a reply within five minutes giving the correct particulars. A short visit to the termination of the airline length was followed by a lengthy stay at the base cable offices, where Captain D. Hey explained the positions of the waggons, and the work they were performing. Major-General Baldock then followed the route laid by Lieut. Jackson's detachment towards Wetherby, and meeting them "reeling up" on their return journey, followed the waggon for half a mile, thoroughly inspecting the whole process. Before leaving Boston Spa Major-General Baldock expressed himself as being very pleased with the work of all the sections, and with the arrangements of the camp.

At 3.15 a general parade was called, but a welcome rest was accorded soon afterwards. On Tuesday morning camp was struck, the troops returning to Leeds soon after dinner.

HOUSING ACCOMMODATION AT ADEL.

THE DRAINAGE QUESTION.

At the meeting of the Wharfedale Rural Council on Friday the Clerk submitted for execution the revised agreement with the Leeds Corporation, under which the sewage from the residential portion of Adel will be sent for treatment into the Leeds sewers.

The Clerk (Mr E. C. Newstead) stated that after long refusal by the Local Government Board to allow a special drainage area to be created, the agreement had had to be re-drawn. The Council would make certain annual payments based upon the assessable value of the property to be treated. The agreement had been executed by the Leeds Corporation.

In regard to the work, the contractors were suggesting a variation of the terms by reason of the increased cost of labour. Sanction was given for the agreement to be executed.

In reply to a letter from the Local Government Board as to the progress of the negotiations for providing housing accommodation, the Clerk stated that the Council were proceeding as quickly as they could, but their first difficulty was in regard to the selection of a suitable site. Plans were being prepared of the class of houses the Council proposed to erect.

The Chairman (Mr Hornsby Jackson) said that Adel seemed to be the only district where cottages were wanted. They had heard of a very suitable site, but the owner was not disposed to sell the land for workmen's cottages. They had the offer of three sites on another estate, but all were some distance from the sewage and water mains, and inquiries were being made as to the cost of making the necessary connections.

HOUSING IN SELBY RURAL DISTRICT.

WHAT HOUSES AT HAMBLETON COST.

At the meeting of Selby Rural District Council on Monday—Mr Harris Anson presiding, a letter was read from the Local Government Board on the housing question, inquiring what action was being taken by the Council.

The former medical officer, Dr Stedman, in his last annual report, stated that the scarcity of houses was becoming a serious problem owing to industrial developments in and around Selby. The houses only had been built in the rural district during 1913. The report continued:—

In the villages near the town the demand is the greatest. Since the date that if Part 3 of the Housing of the Working Classes Act were put into operation, and a number of houses erected by the local authority, there would be no loss to the ratepayers and great benefit to the district.

Mr Parkin did not think the housing question was serious in villages like Drax.

The Clerk said that people working in and around Selby who could not get houses in the town went to villages in the district like Wistow.

Mr J. Pocklington added that when sufficient houses were built in Selby a number of people now occupying houses in villages would remove to dwellings nearer their work. Houses built by the Rural Council might be left on their hands.

Mr W. Abell agreed that outsiders coming in were making the houses scarce in villages.

The newly-appointed medical officer (Dr Bertram Hill) was present, and he was instructed to investigate and report upon the question.

Replying to a question as to the cost of houses, the Chairman stated that two he had built at Hambleton when materials were cheap cost £165 each. He had seen the price stated as low as £110, but it was only on paper.

Dr Hill said Adel had, drainage, and road-making were not always taken into consideration. He worked out the figures as to one of the cheap cottages at York, and found the cost came to £250.

The medical officer reported that during the past month there had been a case of diphtheria at Burn, the patient being removed to the Isolation Hospital.

ON A ROTHWELL TRAMCAR.

A SUNDAY NIGHT SCENE.

At Leeds, on Friday, the Stipendiary Magistrate (Mr H. Marshall) fined Sydney Cammell, a young forgemhn, of Dewsbury Road, for being drunk and disorderly, doing wilful damage to the window of a tramcar, and for interfering with the comfort of passengers, 20s. and costs, together with 8s. damages.

Walter Armitage, twenty-one, of Moor Crescent, Dewsbury Road, for being drunk and disorderly and interfering with the comfort of passengers, was fined 10s. and costs, and James Myland, pit machineman, Gorra Street, Dewsbury Road, 20s. and costs on similar charges.

The case arose out of a scene on the outside of a car proceeding from Rothwell to Leeds on Sunday evening, the 24th ult. On the way the conductor, Walter Cliff, had collected their fares from Rothwell to Thwaite Gate, and then noticed, he said, that they had had some drink, but he "did not think they were bad enough to be put off the car."

Later a passenger, named Herbert Wright, saw one of the men taking one of the electric lamps off, and advised him to put it back. The man replied, "What's it got to do with you?" and Wright, after a further exchange of words, went downstairs and informed the conductor.

Wright added that previous to that incident the men had been singing and using very bad language, with the result that two other passengers—a lady and gentleman—had gone to the opposite end of the car.

Wright afterwards went to the top of the car with the conductor, and it was then seen that all the lamps had been taken off on one side of the car. At the request of Cliff, Wright held the door, and it was alleged that Cammell then struck at him through the glass panel, smashing the glass.

When Hunslet Police Station was reached the police were called in.

In the course of the hearing conductor Cliff gave, amid laughter, a new definition as to the speed of the men. He said he thought they were well half-way gone.

DISASTROUS COLLIERY EXPLOSION.

A disastrous explosion occurred on Saturday at the Pilley Pit of the Wharncliffe Silkstone Colliery Company, Tankersley, near Barnsley. Eleven men at work near to an electrical coal-cutting machine were instantly killed, and two others were badly injured. The outburst of flame and the cloud of afterdamp following the explosion quickly expended their force, and the damage was restricted to a small area of the Whinmoor seam. Two or three miners had narrow escapes from death, and their experiences in making their way to safety were distressing.

ESSAYS ON "FIRST-AID."

The competition amongst school children for essays on "First-Aid," organised by C. E. Fulford, Ltd., the sole proprietors of Zam-Buk, has just concluded. Nearly 10,000 essays were sent in from schools and scholars in practically every corner of the British Isles.

According to the judges' report, the essays disclose a much improved knowledge of "First-Aid," due probably to the introduction of the study in the regular curriculum. Council enough the standard of merit is higher in the case of girls than boys. The essay which secured the highest number of marks, written by Miss Mildred Swinscoe, aged 13, of the Berry Brow Council School, Huddersfield, displays a really high degree of skill and ingenuity for a schoolgirl.

The silver cup awarded to the teacher whose scholars displayed the best average knowledge of "First-Aid" has been won by Miss M. E. Barnes, assistant mistress of the Manor Road Girls' School, West Ham, Essex.

Francis James Macready, thirty-nine, labourer, was stated at a Manchester inquest to have died through swallowing a bone, which lodged in the intestines.

SELBY HOSPITAL SPORTS.

TADCASTER AND SELBY WINNERS.

The Selby Cottage Hospital sports were held on Monday in fine weather. There was a good attendance, including many holiday visitors. Over £40 was given in prizes, the programme being arranged by the Workingmen's Committee in aid of the local Cottage Hospital. A satisfactory entry was received for the open events, a good deal of interest there was, as usual, plenty of competition in the local contests. Prizes were offered in a walking match. A comic band and other entertaining items were included in the programme. Music was contributed by the Selby Town Band.

Mrs Solloway kindly consented to present the prizes at the close of the competitions.

The local troops of Boy Scouts paraded through the town with decorated cars, collections being made on behalf of the funds as the procession went along the streets.

The following are the results of some of the events:—

WORK-A-DAY WONDERS.

VIII.—ABOUT THE LUCK THAT COMES THROUGH HELPING PEOPLE.

"Well," said Patty, "if you ask me straight I do think Diamond Dyes are lucky. Just you look at the luck that they brought me at first. I only sent them in the "Weekly News" and I saw at once how it was that I had spoiled so many things in my past attempts at home dyeing. Why, Mrs Hedley, I've found that 'one-packet-for-everything dye can be all round successful. If it's best for wool it can't be best for linen; if it's best for linen it can't be best for cotton. And I've proved that the big dyeing firms use a parate dyes for different materials."

"Then, if you remember, I bought a sixpenny packet of Diamond Dye for wool and got the Diamond Dye Direction Book, which the grocer or chemist gives away with every packet of dye. And, first I knew, I was the proud owner of Mrs Hedley's best blouse, and then I got round that cross-grained Mrs Bridges through Diamond-dyeing her linen. After that the luck seemed to come in tenses, and I've been the envy of Hedley Fold for being careful as could be—and the minister's wife—and the old darling that's now next to a mother to me.

"So Diamond Dyers are mixed up somehow with all my luck. Of course, part of it comes of helping people—but then, as John King says, 'it has to be helping them with a good thing'—and Diamond Dyes are that.

"Have I let it out? Well, I don't care if I do know now—for I shan't be Patty Prue that much longer—and you'll have a job to trace me as Mrs Patrick Darling—see there!"

DANGER FROM DAMP LINEN.

Damp linen is sufficient to account for frequent colds, consumption, and premature death of a whole family. Rheumatism, when produced from damp linen, develops into a form which is generally incurable. All body linen, shortly before putting on, should be well dry by a good fire. Those who have experienced no signal evidence of the mischief of damp linen are apt to be careless on the subject; but the carelessness will inevitably entail its punishment.

COMMON ILLS.

If you feel a disagreeable pressure in the forehead above the eyes, connected with attacks of giddiness and loss of appetite, the cause is simply disorder of your stomach. This only requires a short hunger cure. If the pain in the forehead is very violent and accompanied by fever it is a symptom of something more severe, and you should consult a physician at once, says a writer in the Family Doctor. A lasting pain in the head, without dizziness, fever, &c., indicates something wrong in the lungs. If you have frequent pains in the back of the head you should have your liver examined, thereby preventing perhaps a long illness. A stinging, boring pain indicates anæmia, while a violent headache in one side of the head is a sure sign of nervous prostration, which may be remedied by absolute rest for several hours in a quiet dark room. If the pain is located in the top of the head, causing the feeling as if a heavy weight were placed upon the vault of the cranium, we may safely presume that excessive mental exertion is the cause. If the pains appear with short-interruptions through all the parts of the head they are of a rheumatic nature and due to "cold."

SATURDAY, JUNE 6th, 1914.

Superstition still lingers in this so-called enlightened land, and it is really amazing how people cling to a belief in signs and charms. In the old days the "rude fathers of the hamlet," bred in ignorance, believed in witchcraft, and many inoffensive old women were cruelly done to death to satisfy the superstitious fear of the age, but even of comparatively recent date have changed human nature very little. Comparatively few give a thought to witchcraft now-a-days, but fortune-tellers flourish, and this would not be possible had not certain people faith in the ability of individuals to unravel the future for them. Any charlatan, provided sufficient mystery enshrouds the performances, can get willing victims. Prosecution does not prevent the hoodwinking of the public, and the publication of the stories of how people have been duped—frequently of the most amusing character—fails to kill superstitious belief. In these cases, as a rule, women are both the offenders and the duped, but the sterner sex are no better than the ladies. When a football team sets out to play a big match or when a racing yacht is launched mascots are in evidence, and even motorists carry mascots in their cars. It is all a pitiful tribute to the superstitious beliefs that exist. And what are the common people to think when great ladies wear charms and great men flourish mascots? Of course, this practice has its amusing side. If success follows a venture it may be attributed to the lucky mascot, but if failure results no one would attribute it to the sign of superstition—of course not. Another reason must be found for the failure. It is so childish that it is amazing grown men and women persist in flaunting evidences of their weakness in public.

Many attempts have been made to analyse the reasons for the growth of the betting evil in the country, but, as different people are actuated by different motives, it is somewhat difficult for even the judicially-minded to arrive at an accurate conclusion on the matter. Since the craze for excitement became so accentuated, apologists for persons who fritter away their hard-won earnings on betting find a ready excuse for them in the desire to escape from the dull monotony of daily occupations, and one writer states that "save for a few in whom gambling is a dangerous and obsessing lust, and a few more who are half-imbecile with excess of time and money, people would rather partake directly of some pleasurably exciting occupation than merely follow its course in half-penny papers and bet on the results. They would rather kick a ball, if they had the health and leisure to cultivate skill in kicking it, than make or lose money as the result of other people's kicking." This infers that pleasure is denied people to such an extent that they are practically compelled to seek some means, however low, of satisfying the desires within them. Never in the history of the nation has the working-class population, whose outlook is so frequently written down as drab, been so well catered for in the way of healthy sport, and almost every man is afforded facilities for playing the games he has a liking for. It may be argued that in winter comparatively few people have an opportunity of playing games, but betting goes on all the year round, and throughout the summer a great variety of recreative pursuits offers pleasure to those who will take them up. Nor is it true that people "would rather kick a ball" than "make or lose money as the result of other people's kicking." This is one of the grievances about the great winter game, but it is a fact—experience in Leeds and district proves it—that young men would rather follow the big clubs and "back their fancy" than play the game themselves, the result being a slump in junior football. What is true of football is true of other sport. Yet we are told that "the proper cure for such evils as betting is not prohibition but diversion." People who have never seen a race-course bet on horse-racing, and others who would not trouble themselves to go on a cricket or football field bet on the results of matches, and we are asked to believe that all these people require in order to make them cease throwing away their money is participation in some sport or recreation. "Men and women, so long as they are neither machines nor gods," says a writer, "must have variety and excitement; if social organisation is such that to the vast majority of us work is still bound to be monotonous and drab—then in the name of heaven and common sense let us see to it that the excitement of our getting is made the best of." The people who "back their fancy" are trying to "make the best of it," but not according to the writer's idea, and he won't bring about any change. Many of the people who gamble do not have work which is "monotonous"; they have the means to provide for themselves any pleasure they desire; yet they gamble. One of the characteristics of the age, it has been stated, is the desire to get rich—and to get rich quickly, and we are afraid that at the root of the betting evil is greed of gain—the winning of money easily. The same spirit is manifested in other ways. In order to force up circulations many papers promote competitions in which the rewards are so large as to prove a temptation to thousands to risk their money, and even advertisers adopt similar methods, knowing full well that people are always on the look-out for "something for nothing." Neither education nor experience have taught people the foolishness of betting, and if these and other agencies have comparatively little chance of success.

CRICKET.—On Saturday afternoon Adel Church defeated St. Michael's at Adel. Scores:—St. Michael's—Hattersley 13, Bennett 1, Wright 5, King 28, Hutchinson 3, Young 7, Fearnley 6, Dennison (not out) 2, Moody 0, extras, 12; total, 77. Adel Church—Ascham 21, Standidge 13, Moore 1, Holliday 9, Smith 0, Collitt 11, Stead 10, Coates 0, Blockey (not out) 14, Holt 2, extras 11; total, 95.

FARM LABOURERS.—A well-attended meeting of farm workers was held in the Selby Market Place on Saturday for the purpose of promoting the better organisation of the agricultural workers' section of the Workers' Union, and bringing them into closer touch with other labour organizations. The meeting was addressed by Mr Arthur Smith, of Horsforth, organiser of the Farm Workers' Union, in answer to a question, Mr Smith said that the wages and requisites of farm labourers in the Selby district worked out at 21s. per week.

MR R. HUMBLE'S WILL.—Mr Richard Humble, of Belle Vue, Adel, a former prominent figure in the public life of Leeds, and a pioneer of "boarding out" workhouse children, left £22,202. By his will he leaves £200 to the Leeds Unmarried Women's Benevolent Institution, £50 to the Headingley (Ripon diocese) St Chad's Home for Waifs and Strays; and £50 each to his cook, Emma Parker, his gardener, Charles Stead, and his housemaid, Annie Simpson.

FIRE ON ADEL MOOR.—Adel Moor was shorn of a part of its beauty for the time being by a fire which started about noon on Wednesday. The services of the Leeds Fire Brigade were required to cope with the flames, which involved eventually bushes of gorse and heather, and a number of young trees over an area half a mile long by about 200 yards wide. Owing to the exceptionally dry season the fire spread with great rapidity, and the firemen laboured for over four hours before they removed all danger of further damage. It is stated that the outbreak originated in a heap of weeds which were being burnt at the time.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL.

In a boxing match at Wakefield on Saturday afternoon Joe Fennell (Rothwell) beat Joe Fox (Morley) on points.

By permission of Mr Charlesworth, the Rothwell colliery owner, the Knaresborough company of the National Reserve were inspected at Conyngham Park on Saturday, and they were addressed by Mr Charlesworth, who also entertained the men to tea.

HOSTING.—On Saturday seventeen members of Rothwell Hosting Society sent 153 birds to take part in the race from Didcot (148 miles). Results:—G. Ward 657.8, 653, W. Dobson 657.3, J. Armitage 652, 641, W. Illingworth 651, 648, Kettel 616, A. Hodgkinson 615, Fox Bros. 591, Nunns, 489, E. Bulmer 476.

"MOTHERS' DAY."—Sunday was "Mothers' Day," at the Salvation Army, and special services were held. On Monday the corps was visited by the members of the Ardsley Corps, and 150 sat down to tea. In the evening an excellent miscellaneous programme was gone through. On Sunday's memorial services will be held for the unfortunate victims of the ill-fated Empress of Ireland.

DRINK.—At a special court held in the Leeds Town Hall on Wednesday—before Mr F. M. Lupton and Mr T. Thomas—Mary Ann Walton, of no fixed abode, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Rothwell on Monday night. P.C. Womack spoke to finding the prisoner in Gillett Lane, Rothwell. Sergt. Metcalfe corroborated, and Walton was committed for a month without the option of a fine.

CRICKET.—On Tuesday at Rothwell a match was played between a Headingley eleven and Mr Baldwin's team. Scores:—Mr Baldwin's XI.—Tiffany 1, Kendall 1, Baldwin 2, Nodding 5, Elston 2, Corker 4, Baldwin (not out) 4, Dawson 0, Town 0, Drew 8, Langton 2, extras, 2; total, 31. Headingley An XI—Watson 27, H Parker 40, Kirkup 2, Hall 0, Hodgson 0, Grant 0, Quarton 4, Davy 0, Peters 26, Chambers 0, Onsell 0, Hargreaves (not out) 4, extras, 22; total, 196.

PITMEN'S CHAMPION.—There was only a moderate crowd at the Wakefield Hippodrome on Saturday afternoon, when Harold Littlewood (Lofthouse), the pitmen's champion, met Young Walsh (Warrington), who has a pretty good record, in a ten two-minute round contest for £15 a side and a purse of £35. In the first round Walsh showed superior ring craft, and sent the left once or twice hard to the face, Littlewood's guard being slack. The next two rounds were also Walsh's, but in the fourth session the Lofthouse man commenced to go after his opponent, and with smart right and left drives levelled up the honours. In the fifth round there was a fair amount of in-fighting done by both men, and Walsh endeavoured to bring matters to a climax, swinging viciously his right and left, but just missing. Even battling with some hard exchanges marked the sixth round. Littlewood got in some stinging rights and lefts in the next round. Obviously the Lancashire man was the cleverer boxer, for in the eighth session he more than held his own with his hard swings, and just before the end of the round tricked Littlewood by spinning round and catching him clean in the body with a hard Littlewood, and the bell going he was carried to his corner. He made a wonderful rally, and fought the two concluding rounds as strongly as his opponent. The referee (Mr W. L. Gamble) declared the encounter a draw. This is the second time these boxers have fought a drawn battle.

CRICKET MATCHES.—On Monday Rothwell journeyed to Arthington where they played a fifty-a-side match. An interesting game was witnessed. Scores:—Rothwell—H Hodgkinson 0, Jas. Beckwith 12, H Hemsworth 22, W. Fox 4, W Nelson 0, E Tiffany 40, E Longley 15, J Dovey 0, H Lane 2, W Bedford (not out) 7, H Banks 1, extras 6; total, 109. Arthington—H. Marshall 75, A Wood 2, J Marshall 0, A Sharper 13, S Sharper 41, J Sharper 11, R Gold 0, T Dawson (not out) 13, J. Wilson 1, O Proctor (not out) 0, extras, 9; total, 161. Rothwell A. entertained Alotfts United in a friendly game at Rothwell on Monday, a return match being played on Tuesday when Rothwell visited Alotfts. Rothwell won both the matches. Scores (Monday)—Alotfts A.—T. Dolan 15, P Sykes 1, H Sykes 1, J Tomlinson 61, J H Gibson 5, J. Dawson (not out) 13, J. Chafer 0, S. Hall 0, G. Schofield 0, G. Rockitt 0, R. Thompson 2, extras, 5; total, 99. Rothwell A—W. Charlesworth 14, G Tiffany 3, J. W. Paley 1, F Schofield (not out) 22, T. Gibson (not out) 54 extras 6; total (for 3 wkts.) 100 Tuesday's match:—Rothwell—W. Nelson 11, E Tiffany 0, R Gibson 19, J Lunn 19, E Longley 0, Bathgate 6, G Ingleby 11, G Tiffany 0, E. Gibbons 16, S Hall 0, J Chafer 4, G Rockett 5, H Bains 0, G Schofield 1, R Thompson 2, extras 8, total, 57.

ROTHWELL W.M BEATEN.—On Saturday afternoon Rothwell W.M. cricket club were at home to East Leeds W.M. Club and were beaten by eight wickets. Scores:—Rothwell—S Pritchard 13, J Taylor 0, E. Ducre 4, J Hill 2, J W Fox 1, J Sconor 0, J Parker (not out) 16, M Naylor 0, A. Abbishaw 6, F. Lunn 0, J. Barnett 0, extras, 3; total, 49. East Leeds—J. Green (not out) 22, S. Padgett 10, J. Walker 3, J. Godrick (not out) 11, extras, 4; total (for 2 wkts.), 50.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—The anniversary services were continued at the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday last, when the preacher was Mr Reeve, of Ackworth. All the services were well attended, and the children of the Sunday School agree sang their special hymns, and rendered it a pleasing manner. On Monday the children went the round of the town, and sang their hymns. Tea was afterwards served in the Sunday School, and then the scholars adjourned to the recreation ground in Carlton Lane where all manner of games were engaged in.

A ROTHWELL LADY ON THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND.—Mrs Robert Hoggan, one of the victims of the liner disaster, was a well-known Rothwell lady. She was the fourth daughter of Mr G. W. Bickey, a deputy at a Rothwell pit, and vice-chairman of the Rothwell Urban District Council, who lives at Trinity View, Church Lane, Rothwell. The news of the disaster came as a terrible shock to her parents, who were looking forward to seeing her later on absence from the country of about two years. Mrs Hoggan left England about two years ago and went out to Canada, where she met her husband. Before leaving for Canada she was a teacher at the Rothwell National School, where she was educated as a child. From Rothwell she took up an appointment at Wentbridge. She had been married about a year, her husband being a postmaster in Vancouver. On leaving for Canada, she promised her parents that she would pay a visit to this country after a couple of years, and in embarking on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland she was fulfilling her promise. Her husband, however, was unable to make the journey with her, as he could only obtain leave of absence for a month, whereas Mrs Hoggan intended to have a holiday of at least three months. Mr Blakey, seen at his home at Rothwell on Tuesday by a reporter, declared that he was no doubt that his daughter was aboard the Empress of Ireland. "It's a terrible blow to us," he said.

ALLERTON BYWATER

Eleven miners were charged at Castleford, on Wednesday, with gaming with coins at Allerton Bywater on May 24th. All pleaded guilty, and were fined sums amounting to £4 5s. 6d.

BETTING.—On Wednesday at Castleford Frank Brooke, weaver, Netherton, Huddersfield, was charged with betting on the ground of the Allerton Bywater charity sports, Lock Lane. Defendant, who said he was only having a friendly bet with his friends, was fined 7s. 6d. and costs.

HOMING.—On Saturday the Yorkshire Federation race was from Banbury, and in the Eastern section Mr Townend, of Allerton Bywater, was first with 815, followed by Mr Evans, Castleford United, 778. Mr Fox, of Fairburn, was third, with 765. The members of Allerton Homing Society sent 117 miles), and the results were :—Townend 815, Milner 730, Barrett 689 (wins 6d. pool), Booth Bros. 669, Smith and Rhodes 659, Collinson 656.

BARWICK

A YOUNG MAN'S END.—An inquest was held at Barwick on Wednesday by Mr P. P. Maitland (Coroner for the West Riding) on Henry Schofield (25), son of George William Schofield, farmer, of Bedale Hall Farm, Barwick. The father said his son was a farm labourer, and resided at home. He had enjoyed fairly good health, but had always been of a sleepwalking disposition. During the last six weeks he had been very quiet in his manner and had, contrary to his usual custom, stayed at home in the evenings and read. He left home at about seven on Sunday night, when witness last saw him alive. About 7.30 the next morning he was missing from his work, and a search was made, with the result that a cap was found on the stump of a tree close to the pond in which the deceased was subsequently discovered, lying face downwards in about two feet of water. He was quite dead when got out. Dr. Hall, of Barwick, said he slept with the deceased, who got up and went out about 7.20 a.m. on Monday. He was afterwards seen in the yard. The body was found about 9.30 a.m. A verdict of "Drowned himself while of unsound mind" was returned.

E. Makin won President's prize of £5 for horse winning most money.

FERRYBRIDGE

THEFTS.—The West Riding Magistrates at Pontefract were engaged for some time on Saturday in hearing a further series of charges of theft from Ferrybridge Potteries. The prosecutors were Messrs Horn Brothers and Messrs Sefton and Brown, and the prisoners were Thomas Percy England, potter, who was charged in custody with having stolen a quantity of engraved copper rollers and plates from each pottery, and Samuel Hudson, marine store dealer, Ferrybridge, who was charged with having received them knowing them to have been stolen. Superintendent Aykroyd said that the articles stolen—all within the last few weeks—were worth as much as £60, and had been sold by the prisoners to John William Wilkinson, marine store dealer, Castleford, and to Messrs Armitage and Sons, dealers, Leeds, as scrap metal. The prisoners pleaded guilty, and Hudson, as the receiver, was sentenced to six months' hard labour on each charge, and England to three months on each, the terms to run consecutively. The Bench thanked Messrs Armitage for the assistance they had given to the police in tracing the thefts.

GARFORTH

The annual carnival in connection with Garforth medical charities will be held on July 25th. See advert.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—The chapel anniversary will be celebrated on June 14th, and the Rev. G. H. Armitage, of Dewsbury, who resided at Garforth a few years ago, will be the special preacher. See advert.

KIPPAX

The Parish Church choir and Sunday School teachers had their annual trip to Scarborough on Monday.

W. Walker, Kippax, won third prize in the 120 yards handicap flat race (open) at Market Weighton Sports on Monday.

The members of the Central Working Men's Club held their annual treat on Monday, when a substantial tea was provided.

OUTING.—The members of the Primitive Methodist Church choir had their annual trip to Scarborough on Monday. Journeying from Garforth, they arrived at their destination in good time, and the weather being fine, they had a most enjoyable outing.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—The Wesleyan Church Sunday School anniversary was celebrated on Sunday, and the Rev. Owen Jones (superintendent minister, Leeds), was the preacher. A scholars' service was held in the afternoon, and special hymns were sung by the teachers and scholars, conducted by Mr H. Gummerson. Recitations were given by a number of the scholars, who had been trained by Mr Bertie Plows. The band parts were played by Messrs Dyer, Eastwood, J. Wright, and R. Haywood, and Misses Ida Crigwell and Marie Shackleton, while Mr Sherburn officiated at the organ. The teachers and scholars went round the village on Monday afternoon, singing their hymns at various points, and the parade was followed by the children's tea, which, along with the public tea, was held in the schoolroom, the latter being well attended. The members of the Wesley Guild connected with the church were the promoters of a waggonette drive to Wentbridge on Tuesday, and the outing was an enjoyable one.

ROUNDHAY

MOTOR-DRIVEN BOATS AT ROUNDHAY.—Members of the Parks Committee of the Leeds Corporation, to say nothing of the regular boating visitors at Roundhay Park, are much interested in an American motor, which it is proposed to apply to some of the boats on the Roundhay Lake. Very successful have been the experiments which Mr Charles Parker has made with the motor at Roundhay during the last day or two. It is known as the Ferro detachable boat motor, weighs only 52 pounds, and it is claimed that it can be fixed on or detached in two or three minutes. The motor is a two-stroke water-cooled engine of 2½ h.p., and whilst running for six hours on a gallon of petrol is said to be capable of propelling a boat at nine miles an hour.

SHADWELL

WEDDING.—A pretty and interesting wedding took place at St. Paul's Church, Shadwell, on Tuesday afternoon, the contracting parties being Miss Hettie Goodman, sixth daughter of Mr and Mrs Joseph Goodman, Bay Horse Farm, and Mr Charles Henry Noble, son of Mr and Mrs Noble, of Scarcroft. The Vicar (the Rev. A. Chadwick) was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of cream satin, trimmed with lace, and a veil with spray of orange blossom, and she carried a bouquet of roses and lilies. The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Goodman (sister of the bride), and Miss L. Greaves, of Gomersal (cousin of the bride), and they wore Quaker grey dresses with silver trimmings to match. Miss Doris Ingle (niece) and Master Norman Cryer, of Clayton, nephew, were also in attendance. The bridesmaids wore gold brooches and pendants, (gifts of the bridegroom). The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. A large number of handsome and useful presents were received.

STOURTON

OUTING.—The annual trip of the members of the Primitive Methodist choir took place on Monday, when a party of about 35 journeyed in four carriages to Scarborough. Fine weather favoured the party, and an enjoyable time was spent.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHURCH.—The annual festival in connection with this Primitive Methodist Church took place on Sunday, when the children of the Sunday School paraded Stourton, in the morning and after the evening service, singing their festival hymns. In the afternoon the annual prize distribution took place, Mr Brook acting in the place of Mr J. W. Vollans, who was unable to be present. The children were addressed by Mr Rickers, of Beeston Hill, who also conducted the service in the evening. On Monday the children were taken to a field at Outwood (kindly lent by Mr Cairns), and all kinds of games and sports were indulged in.

SUICIDE.—An inquest was held at the Wesleyan Schoolroom, Stourton, on Wednesday, by Mr P. P. Maitland (Coroner) on the body of Edwin Hardy (32), a boat hauler, of Garden Street, Leeds, who was found in the Aire and Calder Canal, Stourton. William Fieldhouse, carting agent, of 4, Kirk's Yard, Great Wilson Street, Leeds, said the deceased had worked for him on and off for the past twelve years. About 5.40 a.m. on Friday he came to his place and took out a horse for the purpose of taking a boat back to Allerton Bywater. About 10.30 the same day witness found a cart, a cap and coat had been found on the canal bank, while a horse, which he identified as his own, was found grazing on the bank. He saw nothing more of the deceased until Tuesday, when he identified the body. He had heard the deceased threaten to take his life, saying that he would drown himself before going to prison again, as he had been there a few times. George Thomson, 4, Perseverance Street, Stourton, spoke to recovering the body near to the Copper Works, Stourton. A verdict of "Drowned himself whilst of unsound mind," was returned.

SWILLINGTON

SWILLINGTON PARK DEFEATED.—A cricket match was played at Wakefield on Saturday between the West Riding Asylum team and Swillington Park. Scores:—Asylum—Culpan 9, Elstone 7, Thatcher 3, Abercrombie 0, Dr Robinson 8, Wilcock 0, Randall 39, Harrop 4, Moody 0, Dr Brown (not out) 5, extras, 8; total 100. WOODLESFORD

HOMING.—On Saturday nine members of Woodlesford H.S. sent 55 birds to take part in the race from Didcot. Results:—Swindell 656, Higgins 581, D. Atkinson 554, Hall and Pritchard 529.

WHITKIRK

Captain the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., is one of the officers in camp with the Yorkshire Dragoons at Scarborough.

Mr H. Watson, of Newton Kyme, won two first prizes in the hackney horse classes at Beverley Show.

HORSE LEAPING.—On Monday at Grimsby Mr Fred Welburn, of Hudleston Hall, Welburn Bros., Fryston, and T. Smith, Derby, were equal for second, third, fourth, and fifth, and the prizes were shared. The Novice Jumping, Welburn's and T. Smith, Derby, bracketed equal, and shared the first three prizes, and the fourth prize went to Welburn Bros.

ST JAMES'S PAROCHIAL HALL.—The additional room which Miss Stansfeld is providing at the Parochial Hall, Selby, at a cost of about £280, is to be opened early in July. By the new room, which will be a serviceable addition to the buildings, Miss Stansfeld is adding to the gifts she has already bestowed on the parish.

ST. JAMES'S CHURCH SCOUTS.—The colours, which have been provided by subscription for the Selby St. James's Church Scouts, were presented to the corps by Miss Dorothy Gaulden. The scouts assembled at the vicarage, where they were addressed by the Rev. A. Conner (vicar), after which the colours flags presented are the Union Jack and the Cross of St. George. A service in church followed. A new boss drum, provided for the St. James's Scouts, is to be given by Mr Stansfeld.

TAKEN ILL IN THE PULPIT.—During the afternoon service at the Carlton Primitive Methodist Chapel, near Selby, on Sunday, Mr. Geo. Grasby, who for forty years had been a visitor to the village on local preaching plans, entered the pulpit, and had just announced the first hymn when he was suddenly seized with illness and fell. He was removed to a neighbouring house. Mr Grasby is well-known throughout Methodism, and the remarkable occurrence brought the service to an abrupt termination, and caused a profound sensation in the village.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.—On Sunday at South Milford Wesleyan Church the Sunday School anniversary was celebrated, and instructive sermons were preached by the Rev. H. Ripley. At the evening service Mr Ripley conducted a children's service, and recitations were given by the scholars, while there was also special singing by the children, leaders, and choir. On Monday afternoon the children paraded the streets, singing at various points, and afterwards tea was provided for them in the schoolroom. In the evening the children's meeting was held, and Mr. Hambleton, presided. The prize distribution for good attendance took place and numerous Bibles, hymn books, and various other books were kindly distributed by Mrs Ripley, after which the children paraded the village

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

LANE FOX CUP COMPETITION.

Great Preston, who have not shown themselves a very efficient combination this season, gave a glimpse of their old-time form at Whitkirk, and they maintained their reputation for brilliant off surprises. Whitkirk, be it said, were unfortunate to be without Milford and Fred Wainwright, and they had to pay the penalty for their absence. The losers were dismissed for the paltry score of 32 by J. Green (5 for 17 runs) and A. Thompson (5 for 11), and Preston made 33 for the loss of two wickets. T. Wiggle-worth 13 and R. Wiggleworth 13 (not out).

South Milford had a fine victory over Roundhay, and a feature of the meeting was the splendid bowling and fielding of both teams. The Millordians had first knock of the wicket, and they compiled 63, of which E. Atkinson had 18, A. Atkinson 12, and N. Stainburn 10. Oliver trundled with great effect, capturing seven wickets at a cost of three runs each. Roundhay were unable to make any stand against the deliveries of Chilton, who secured no fewer than eight wickets for 24 runs, and the side went down for 30, Craven making a dozen.

Crossgates were in great form in their match with Halton, and they won by over a hundred runs. Goodall, who contributed 82 towards a total of 196, was particularly hard on the Halton bowling, and he had six 4 hits and fourteen 3's. Burnell, as usual, gave a good batting display, making 38. Fairburn registered 23 before he was run out, and Wilson 12. Daniel was the best of the six Halton bowlers, taking 3 wickets for 49, while Benson had 3 for 65. Halton had a good team before them, but they underwent a severe overhauling, and after their long spell of leather hunting, it must be conceded that their innings of 80 was a plucky one. Hall scored 23. Sutner 19, Haigh 13, and Cowell 12. Crossgates tried five bowlers, and Yeates obtained 3 wickets for 28, Burnell 3 for 29, Harvey 2 for 9, and Goodall 2 for 13.

SENIOR LEAGUE—SAXTON WINS.

Saxton, at home, completely upset the calculations of Cawood, and they won by two runs. when there was every prospect of their being defeated. It is this delightful uncertainty of the cricket that gives additional interest to the game and causes teams to strive up to the very last. It must be confessed that the winners made a poor show at the wickets, and 35 was a very small score, indeed. J. Firm made 22, and six of the team failed to score. Cawood, no doubt, thought they had a cheap thing on hand, and they were justified in this opinion by the meagre total of their opponents, but the unexpected happened, and they received their quietus for 33. P. Lawn annexed four wickets for 8 runs, T. Sissons had 3 for 10, and Richardson one for 10. Well done, Saxton!

JUNIOR LEAGUE—SATURDAY'S MATCHES.

Kirk Deighton and Ulleskelf had a very exciting match at Ulleskelf. The visitors' innings was a short one, realising only 29. Five of the team failed to score, and Linfoot made 11, F. Stronach's 5 wickets cost 12, Walter Bean had 3 for 10, and Potter 2 for 2. Ulleskelf did worse than their opponents, for they were credited with only 21, and five players got nothing. H Oxley was the best bowler on the field, taking 4 wickets for 5, and Linfoot got 3 for 13 runs. Barwick was getting on strong for the visitors with 4 for 7.—Tadcaster A. proved much too strong for Sherburn W.R. The game was on the Calcarians' ground, and the homesters showed excellent form. G. Freer made 18, A. Taylor 25, and W. Iredale 10, and when Hesp joined H. Taylor (26, not out) the score was 95 for 6. These players completely collared the bowling, and when the innings was declared the score was 142, and they were still at the wickets. He-p contributed 31 (not out). For the losers B. Hey had 3 wickets for 47, Hawley 2 for 11, Petch 2 for 16, and Hester 2 for 39. Sherburn were sent back for 46 (Hester 11 and C. Hey 10), and A. Taylor captured five wickets for 17. Smart 3 for 24, and G. Freer 2 for 3.—Barkston Ash, at home, made a poor show against South Milford A. The latter scored 42 (J. Hill and C Hey 11 each), and E. Hills 9x three of their wickets for 4, and A. Smith 6 for 13 runs. Barkston were got rid of for 18, seven players not having a single among them, and A. Lindley secured six wickets for 10 and J. Hill 4 for 7 runs.

Aberford are still on the search for points. Halton A. were their opponents on Saturday, and the homesters sent up 166 for 9 wickets and declared. H. Guest compiled 30, B. Nicholson 13, N. Sunter 11, and S. Clarke and G. Simpson—(10, not out). J. Inman was the best of the trundlers, taking 2 for 17 runs, while Illsley had 2 for 10. Aberford batted well, and their score of 67 was contributed to by every player. Walton (14) and Lupton (11) were the principal scorers. F. Nicholson had four wickets for five and H. Dobson 4 for 18.—Great Preston A. had an easy win over Barwick. The winners made 119 (Hutchinson 44, G Wiggleworth 34, and H. Lilley 12), and Barwick were dismissed for 27. Per Preston A. Wiggleworth captured 7 wickets for 11, and Mason had 2 for 13.—Garforth A. defeated Micklefield A. by over a hundred runs. The winners put on 145, and A. H. with scored 37, J. Kilburn 32, Pordham 22, F. Hancock 11, and W. Kilburn 10. Micklefield's response was 33 (Tompkinson 15). For Garforth Wiggleworth had 4 for 4 runs, and W. Hancock 5 for 10.

SEACROFT'S VICTORIES.

On Saturday afternoon Seacroft entertained Fryston Colliery, and they won a handsome victory. The visitors were sent back for 77, and Noble was top scorer with 23. D. Burton took 4 wickets for 10, and Stead had 2 for 9 runs. Seacroft scored 80 for a loss of 2 wickets, T. Toft and Stead, who were not out, scoring 31 and 30 respectively. BARKSTON ASH BOWLING ASSOCIATION.

INTER-ASSOCIATION MATCH AT CROSSGATES.

On Tuesday afternoon a match was played on the Crossgates green between teams representing the Barkston Ash and Airedale Associations, and the local men won a handsome victory by 77 points. Most of the game's were well-contested, but emphatic wins were registered, on one side, by F. Vince (Halton), A. Cockren (Garforth W.M.), J. P. Cowl (Crossgates Recreation), and F. Hutchinson (President of Barkston Ash Association), and, on the other, by Judson (Meanwood). No fewer than 14 of the 19 Barkston Ash players beat their opponents, and four of the others were defeated by narrow margins. The scores were:—

LEEDS AND DISTRICT FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.

FOOTBALL MALINGERERS.

The annual meeting of the Leeds and District Football Association was held on Thursday night at the Green Dragon Hotel, Leeds, Mr W. Howe (president) being in the chair.

The report and balance-sheet disclosed a very satisfactory state of affairs. Financially, the Association had a balance in hand of £54, including a profit of £20 10s. which had been realised on the workshops competition. In that competition forty clubs had taken part, and the hon. secretary (Mr T. H Lenton) believed that next season the profits from the competition would be doubled. The various trophies belonging to the Association had been won as follows:—Leeds Senior Cup, Methley Perseverance; Leeds Minor Cup and Minor League, Victoria Swinnow; Junior League Shield, Allerton Bywater Church Institute. The report and balance-sheet were unanimously adopted.

Among the new rules adopted for the future was one providing that each affiliated club shall compete for the District Association's Cup unless specially exempted by the Executive. The Nicholson 5, W. CHAPTER XVII.

On the day that Thomas Oswald had gone to see his distant cousin, Paul Colthurst, Paul returned very slowly to the bosom of his family. He was relieved when he saw Patricia Ransome once more in her own home. In her old-fashioned dress, with her gentle, old-world manner, she was more agreeable to the man at that moment than any other person in the wide world.

"Why aren't you out somewhere, Patricia?" he said. "Didn't my wife offer to take you for a drive or something?"

"She did Paul, but I had a slight headache; and, to tell you the truth, I was anxious to see you, and I made an excuse not to go with her. She is making some calls, and will not be back until after tea. I am quite at your service, Paul."

"And the young people, where are they?" "I don't know. I heard Pamela laughing a little time ago. They are together."

"Yes," repeated Paul Colthurst; "they are together—that is sufficient."

"It is," said Miss Patricia.

They walked side by side very slowly.

"So," said Paul then, "you thought, Patricia, that I might want you?"

"I knew it, Paul dear."

"Because that man Oswald came to see me?"

"Yes, and for other reasons."

"Oswald is a greater brute than I could have imagined any human being to be, Patricia, my friend."

"He is terrible, is he not?" said Miss Patricia. "Did he talk to you? Did he say much?"

"He talked a great deal, and what he said would have been from anyone else of the utmost importance. From him I consider it mere bluff, and will treat it accordingly."

"Paul, I wish you wouldn't."

"Patricia, you cannot change me. I regard that man's speeches, his endeavours to put me in the wrong, his threats, as the most absolute stuff I have ever listened to. I will tell you one thing he proposed, and I think this will open your eyes to the sort of man he is."

"What was that, Paul?"

"He said he'd go back to Africa with his belonging if I paid him twenty thousand pounds. Hush money, my dear Patricia—a nice sort of affair for me to be in!"

"Did he really say that? I have always thought him a bad man; I didn't know he was as bad as that," replied Paul Colthurst.

"He would stop at nothing," said Miss Patricia.

"That is true enough; but, then, if there's nothing to stop at——"

"Paul, you will at least take my advice. Circumstances have forced me to live with people of this sort. My eyes have been opened, to my own deep sorrow, to the bad things of life. But even I have never met anyone quite such a scoundrel as Thomas Oswald."

"Well, dear, you have something more to say?"

"I want those children to be married immediately by special licence."

"What?" said Paul. "And give away my hand, show that I am frightened, make it a sort—a sort of scandal—the marriage of my son and of my wife's daughter? Patricia, you don't know what you are saying."

"There need be no scandal. You can take them to London and get a special licence and let them marry."

"I wonder what you think Pamela's mother would say if I proposed such a thing to her?"

"Those little difficulties," said Miss Patricia, "are of no consequence at all compared with the main thing. It would be quite possible for you to tell your wife enough about the circumstances for her to see that her willing to agree. You could tell her that there was a bad man whose object was to prevent the marriage for evident reasons of his own. Your wife has plenty of sense. If you like, I will speak to her."

"Will you, Patricia? If my wife agrees, it will make all the difference."

"I would have you spoke to her yourself, of course, but I will do it if you wish it. I can tell her about the will."

"No, Patricia, no. If she agrees we can have the wedding here within a fortnight. The banns can be called on Sunday. Anything quicker than that I will not listen to for a moment."

"A fortnight!" said poor Miss Patricia.

"A great deal can be done in a fortnight."

"Nothing can be done, dear, nothing. You will stay with us. We could not have the ceremony without your presence. After all, the young people will be safe as safe can be, once they are husband and wife. We can make an excuse that they want to go abroad together. Oh, yes, it can be managed, if you will get round my wife."

"I will do my best," said Miss Patricia.

"Of course," said Paul, "there are the children themselves to be considered."

"You will talk to them, won't you, Paul?"

"I will talk to Peter, certainly, and my wife can talk to Pamela. When will you have the conversation with my wife?"

"As soon as ever she comes back. I feel, somehow, that there is no time to lose."

"Nothing could make me nervous in this matter," said Paul. "But if Peter is worried that way, you and Thomas Oswald between you would do the deed. But there! I see the carriage coming back now. My wife will not have tea with you, after all. Take your opportunity afterwards."

Paul Colthurst hurried away into his study. He looked the door and sat down. He was feeling indescribably wretched. That time long ago when he had gone to Brabazon Hall and came back to him. He had told a lie then. He had said he was the father of a child who in fact was only the son of another. No one knew all the world now except Miss Patricia knew and of that lie. The other difficulties seemed to the man at that moment a bagatelle compared with the fact that he had told a lie to a dying man. His whole life seemed to be impregnated with the presence of that horrible creature, Thomas Oswald. There was no rest for him now. He got up, put on his hat, and went out. He went to the stables, and desired a groom to saddle his favourite horse. He mounted, and rode away for a long distance. When he had put Connop Grange and all those he loved far behind him, he felt that he could think calmly and consecutively. His boy, his darling, the child of his first wife, his dearly-loved wife, was in danger. "No father in all the world ever loved a son as a love Peter," thought the man. "I will never give him up; I will never reveal the fact that another man existed to whom he owed his birth. I have taught myself to believe myself to be his father. That belief I will cling to as long as life remains within me. To the confession of that sin I will never submit. Merciful Heaven! It is no sin; it is no sin. Have I not helped the boy, and saved him? Patricia, good soul! has helped me. Patricia must live with us. We will look after the dear woman. She shall not have any more miserable days. She is as devoted to Peter as I am. She shall share his joy. I will be as good to Patricia in the future as man can be."

Meanwhile, Miss Patricia entered the beautiful shady drawing-room and sat down opposite Mrs. Colthurst.

"It was so tiresome," said Mrs. Colthurst, taking off her light summer jacket and removing her gloves—"most of my friends were at home. You must have thought me very rude, Miss Ransome, to leave you by yourself for such a long time."

"Not at all," said Miss Ransome. "I had plenty to do. To be in a place like this is a great luxury to me. You understand, don't you, Mrs. Colthurst?"

"I do, dear. I hope I do. It is nice to have you here. You give a sort of feeling of rest to the whole house, and my dear husband is fond of you. You know his first wife very well, didn't you?"

"Of course I did."

"And also Peter when he was a baby! Was Peter like his mother? He does not resemble Paul in the least."

"He was like his mother."

"She must have been a handsome young woman."

"She was."

"I have never seen a picture of her," said Mrs. Colthurst. "I must get Paul to show me one."

"Oh, do you think it worth while to talk on the subject to him now?"

Mrs. Colthurst looked steadily at her guest.

"Do you think he would mind?" she said.

"Does he still fret about his first wife? He and I have been married for so many years."

"He loved her very dearly," said Miss Ransome.

"Yes, but she is dead. I am the person he ought to love now."

"And of course he loves you, Mrs. Colthurst."

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Colthurst, "that you, my dear friend, of late, that you know more about Paul than most people. It is quite comforting to find you here with him. For many years, I never even heard your name, and now you seem like one of the family, and Paul undoubtedly takes pleasure in your presence. You remind him of Auld Lang Syne."

"That must be it," said Patricia.

"It seems strange to me," said Mrs. Colthurst, "why you lived all these years with Connop Grange for such a long time now, and yet you only came here for a few months ago."

"To tell you the truth," said Miss Patricia, "I did not want to get in his way. He was married to you. He was rich, and I was poor. You can well understand that I did not want to trouble him."

"I think I do, my dear. Nice of you. But what made you come at last?"

"I—well, that is the subject I wish to talk to you really about."

"Do you really? I like having things confided to me. There is only one thing I have to complain of in my dear husband—that he looks a little anxious, but he never talks to me about his real feelings. Do you think he has anything to be anxious?"

"I hope, indeed, that he has no real cause," said Miss Patricia.

"Nevertheless, there must be something, or you would not have looked him up."

"There is something."

"You mean to tell it me?"

"Yes, I mean to tell it to you."

"That will be quite exciting," said Mrs. Colthurst. "I have always loved Paul devotedly. I am not what is called an intensely affectionate woman, but I have really cared for Paul. I love him; I love him far more than I did Mr. Lennox, my first husband. He was very unhappy with my first husband. He was a cold-blooded, disagreeable man. I was not sorry when he died. I was very glad to live with my dear husband, Walter Colthurst."

"Ah, yes, I have heard of all that," said Miss Patricia. "He was fond of you, was he not?"

"Very, very fond of me. I was his favourite niece. I can't tell you how often in the early days he used to say to me, 'And I the world if you were a man, Mary.' And I the world if you were a man, Mary.' And I used to say in reply, 'Well, you can't turn me into one.' Then he used to laugh, and look at me so piteously. Then, again, another day, he'd say, 'You are the best thing to your day, he'd say, 'You are the best thing to your being a man would be that Pamela were a man.' 'You can't turn her into a man, Uncle Walter,' I would reply. Then he would talk of Paul Colthurst; but I never guessed, never, that he meant to make Paul his heir, never, that he meant to make Paul his heir, my husband's wife's niece, and a much poorer relation, too. But he had a queer determination that the property should go in the male line, and I suppose it was natural enough."

"I suppose so," said Miss Patricia.

"I never had to do with large fortunes, or anything of that sort, but I am quite under the impression that what he did was the natural and right thing."

"I suppose so."

"It is extraordinary how matters have turned out. The dear old man died, and almost all his money, except a mere trifle for me, was left to Paul, and I'm a very few years after Paul asked me to be his wife; and I became his wife, and he told me after we were married that it was the wish of the dear old man that he and I should marry. He has been a good husband to me, very, and I have loved him deeply. But I am not blind, and I can see quite plainly that the greatest love of his life was given to his first wife, Anne. Anyone can see that by the way he pets Peter, the fuss he makes over Peter. I know it is because Peter is Anne's boy. Paul and I never had any children, and we just lived each of us for our own child—Paul for Peter, and I for Pamela. And now Pamela and Peter are to be married. Isn't it very curious, and—and very delightful; and the fact of this being part of the old man's arrangement is more extraordinary than ever. To think that they should love each other, and they do, and it should be essential that they should marry; it makes it altogether very much out of the common. Don't you think so, Miss Ransome?"

"I think it is perfectly splendid," said Miss Ransome.

"You—you are not eating anything," said Mrs. Colthurst. "You ought to eat more. You are really old, but you want better food. Paul and I were talking about you last night, and Paul said that he would like you to feel that our house was a sort of second home that you could come to whenever you pleased. It would give us absolute pleasure if you lived with us altogether. I like a quiet, reserved, lady-like person about the house, and if you wanted occupation you would have quite enough to do in keeping the flowers in order. Of course, for the present, that is Pamela's work, but by-and-bye, when she is married, in a year or two, I shall want someone to take her place; and why not you, dear Miss Patricia? It would really be very, very nice."

"Forgive me," said Miss Patricia. "All those little matters in connection with myself can be settled later on. But you speak of Peter's and Pamela's engagement as a matter of a couple of years."

Mrs. Colthurst stared at her visitor in some astonishment. A haughty look swept over her face.

"As a matter of fact," she said, slowly and coldly, "I have not thought at all of the matter yet. The fact that those two babies are engaged is enough for me. Why, dear Miss Patricia, my little Pamela isn't nineteen yet."

"Nevertheless, she is grown up."

"Well, yes—just grown up; and Peter is a mere boy," continued Mrs. Colthurst. "I should think it a most sensible arrangement if they did not marry until the time next year. Then Pamela would be close on twenty-one, and Peter about twenty-six—a far more suitable age to take the cares of life on, do."

"Now I am going to tell you why I called to see your husband the other night," said Miss Patricia.

"You extraordinary woman! What a queer thing to allude to, when we are talking about the young people's marriage."

"I must talk to you on the subject, because it affects the young people and their engagement."

"Ah! Well, what is it?"

"Did you or did you not, Mrs. Colthurst, read your uncle's will?"

"It was read aloud in my presence."

"You never read it for yourself—quietly, alone?"

"Never."

"Do you remember it very vividly?"

"Parts of it I remember. It is impossible for anyone to take in the peculiar phraseology of a will."

"Nevertheless, it is a very strange will. It is a will impossible to be common."

"Do you know all about it, then?"

"Yes, I know all about it. I have very recently read it, and I have not present when it was read."

"I was not; but, of course, you are aware that the will is kept at Somerset House, and that anybody who likes, by paying a shilling, can see the will of anyone in which he happens to be interested."

"Miss Ransome, I should not have thought it like you to tell me that you paid a shilling and went to Somerset House and read my uncle's will!"

"But—but someone else did."

"Ah! Well, to tell you the truth, I am glad you didn't. I should not like you so much if you were capable of that sort of thing."

"I don't think I am capable of it. At any rate, I did not do it. Now I will tell you exactly what happened. There came to the boarding-house where I live a certain Mr. and Mrs. Oswald. The same three accompanied by their son and their daughter. They came from South Africa; and they had been living in the boarding-house before Mr. Thomas Oswald—one of the most unpleasant men I have ever met in my life—told me that he was your husband's cousin."

"You need not tell me that he is unpleasant. I saw the odious being at lunch to-day. He is simply unfit to speak to. I felt so angry, I could scarcely sit at the table with him. However, he's gone now, thank goodness!"

"Yes, he's gone; but he has left his trail behind him."

"What do you mean?"

"You must let me explain. Mr. Thomas Oswald is your husband's cousin, and, according to the reading of the will, if anything prevents Peter and Pamela marrying each other, Thomas Oswald and his family certainly Thomas Oswald and his family certainly inherit the bulk of this great property—all of it, with the exception of twenty thousand pounds, ten thousand of which is left to Pamela, and ten thousand to Peter. It is true they don't get the money during your husband's lifetime, but at his death it is theirs. Thomas Oswald is a man who stops at nothing. He is determined not to leave one stone unturned to prevent the marriage. If by this marriage is consummated he is cut off for ever from his chance of becoming the possessor of the property. Therefore he came here to-day to speak to Paul. Paul is exceedingly unhappy about him. The fact is, Mrs. Colthurst, he is a most dangerous man, and the only way to circumvent him is to have the wedding immediately—one—two. Yes, I know what I am saying. I have lived in the house with people who are not good, Mrs. Colthurst, who think—oh! it is dreadful to have to say it to you—who think very little of crime. Your child is in danger. Paul's son is in danger. You ought to be married at once—at once."

While Miss Patricia was speaking Mrs. Colthurst's face had changed from its usual good-natured, pleasant, fresh sort of appearance to a pallid and somewhat haggard one. Deep lines showed under the eyes and round her lips. Her frightened eyes fixed themselves on Miss Patricia's face.

"You mean to tell me," she said, after a pause, "that my little darling Pamela is in danger?"

"I don't know. I hope not. Let her marry Peter, and she is safe."

"Miss Patricia—Patricia—I put it to you: are we some of the first people in this place. We are looked up to and respected. Is there anything that could be done to rush a marriage in such a great hurry is not possible. We could protect our children. They may be safe and happy if we get them married at the end of the summer—say, in three or four months' time—but not sooner. I must consult Paul."

"I most earnestly beseech of you," said Miss Patricia—"and I say it because I know the love of man Mr. Thomas Oswald is—not to delay the marriage until the end of the summer. Make any excuse you like to the neighbourhood, but have it at once. Endure a little gossip on the part of the neighbours for the sake of the greater good of having the boy safe and keeping the property in your husband's and your daughter's and his son's hands."

"You frighten me very much. I don't see how it can possibly be done. I don't know what I do. When did you wish the marriage to be?"

"I naturally, have no voice in the matter, but I should wish them to be married by special licence in a couple of days."

"Oh, that is too silly! That is beyond anything."

"I think you will regret it if you don't take my advice."

"I know you mean well, and I—I will certainly think over your words and perhaps by the end of the summer the children may be married. My little Pam! My sweet child! It is terrible to think of losing her so soon! And, my dear Miss Patricia, the England of the present day is not a place where violence can be committed. The child is perfectly safe. We have the law of the land to protect her. She certainly cannot be married under two or three months."

"Very well," said Miss Patricia. She rose slowly. "I have spoken with the very best intentions."

"I know that, my dear good creature, but you must understand a mother's feelings."

"I try to, but I think that when a mother realises that her child is in danger she would forget everything else aside."

"You cannot pretend that my little Pam is in danger!"

"Indeed, I pray, I trust not."

"Well, listen, dear friend. You will stay with us for the present. The mere fact that you are in the house is a kind of solace and protection. I like you immensely, I do really; and you are so kind to me. I will think and arrange it, and if the young people are willing, the marriage may take place in September. That is my friend's intention—that they should set up house at Brabazon Hall. We will go there to-morrow, the next day, as well as the children. If they are married in September, they can winter abroad and be ready to take up their abode at the Hall next spring. But ah! to think of losing my little Pam so soon! There, don't you think I have given up a great deal just because a nervous old woman asks me to?"

"I thank you for what you have given up," said Miss Patricia, and she left the room.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Silas Luke from his earliest days had lived from hand to mouth. He had never known, from the time when he first opened his eyes on a cold, treacherous, unfeeling world—a world that did not want him—what it was to be quite certain of food to eat and a lodging in which to repose at night. He was one of the ne'er-do-wells of earth. He was scatterbrained; he was silly; he was without concentration; he was without the slightest sharpness about him which one sometimes sees in a wild beast. He had an instinct which was to be called the instinct of self-preservation. He thought more of his own life and his own comforts than of anything else in the world. Therefore his whole career had been the affair of the lion. He had risen then to the sublime heights of wild rapture in the days of his boyhood. He had escaped by the skin of his teeth. His miserable life was left in his miserable carcase.

He managed to get to England, and he kept always more or less in touch with Thomas Oswald. Now the second crisis in his life approached. Oswald wanted him. He knew perfectly well what he was to do. He ought to marry a servant between a young man and a maiden. He was to leave no stone unturned to attain that end. He smiled to himself. He knew well what it meant. At first he was shocked. Even he, miserable wretch that he was, was horrified at the task which was set upon him.

He had not been half an hour away from the presence of Thomas Oswald before he began to cast about in his brain for the necessary tools for that which he intended to do. He had amongst his friends—they surely were not worthy the name—amongst those acquaintances he had picked up from time to time when one called himself a doctor. This man's name was Reuben Jakes. He was not qualified, but there was no one in the land who could tell that of a man who would see a person for a shilling, give a bottle of medicine without any prescription, pocket his shilling, and ask his victim to call again. He had possessed himself of a smattering of the necessary knowledge of the medical profession, and it occurred to Silas that the case before him was one which he could not do better than put into Jakes' hands. Jakes had in that part of East London where he was living a miserable room, and he was always morning after morning at a shilling a head with advice and bottles of medicine.

Silas had lived for a very little room off Tottenham Court-road.

There he had climbed to three flights of stairs.

He went, and considered himself lucky in finding him at home; he stayed with him a couple of hours, and when he left he had departed with two of those sovereigns with which Thomas Oswald had supplied him. And several little bottles containing several little bottles containing half-a-dozen-looking drugs.

When he was saying good-bye to Jakes, Jakes said to him: "I can, if necessary, see you by appointment at any time, but in a case like yours I must charge a guinea a visit."

Silas considered. "Very well," he said "I'll have to let my man know."

"Yes, of course you will have to let him know. You can't do what he wants except through me. I am not squeamish. A poor man like me can't be. I got rid of mine years ago. You're not a good hand at writing letters, are you, Silas?"

"No, my fist isn't one to boast about."

"Well, I will write your letters for you. You needn't after my friend's name."

Silas laughed. "I have no intention of doing that," he said.

"I'll write a letter now. You ought to have the two sovereigns you have given me refunded."

Jakes sat down by a table and wrote a few words. Silas addressed the letter. Jakes turned his back, and apparently went out. He posted the letter, addressing it to the care of the proprietor of the Crocodile. It was quite possible that Thomas Oswald might go near the Crocodile for a week; on the other hand, he might pay a visit to the place much later. Jakes returned to the room. Silas went to a shop and bought one or two very necessary articles of wardrobe. He also got some cheap and second-hand Gladstone bag. By that time his three pounds were much reduced, but he had still over two left.

He decided that if he was to be comfortable, and get this horrible job over and done his two pounds were all he could afford.

He went home to Jakes' room, and after much turmoil, the sweet freshness of Lush was like Paradise. Even Silas felt the difference. He seemed to breathe a cleaner air.

"Now, if I had a conscience it would awake in a place like this," he said to himself.

The evenings were now at their longest, and the little village street looked strangely peaceful with the last glow of sunset gilding the tops of the houses and reflecting broad patches of colour here and there. Lush was quite a small town, and in order to reach it Silas had to take a single-line train at a terminus a little way off. It consisted of a High-street, and another street which led to the higher part of the town. Here the better-class people lived. Beyond these residences was the country—pure and simple—wide stretches of moor, great patches of heather and bracken and furze, trees which had lived and made homes for birds for many centuries, little babbling streams, the sweet, pure scent of nature, when nature is her best.

Into the midst of this lovely bit of God's world there entered one of His creatures—a man deeply defiled; a man low down, with nothing good in him; a man with a dead conscience. Instead of seeking at once for a lodging he went straight out towards the moors, and lay down close to one of the streams and thrust his dirty hands into the water, watching it as it flowed and flowed over them. Was it going to carry some of the iniquity of his soul away? Was it possible that conscience was to be awakened here even for such a man as Silas Luke?

"I don't like the job," he said to himself. "I'd a sight rayther live as I've always lived. I'd a sight rayther be back in South Africa than have a lion springing on me from under bush. But there! I'm doomed. I've got an appetite, and it must be fed. I must take my chance in life. This is my chance."

He felt carefully in his pocket where the little bottles given to him by Jakes were safely deposited. He then turned slowly and walked back to the town. After a little time he ensured a lodging in the house of a widow of the name of Martin. She had two little children and a very tiny house, and when Silas entered and asked for a bed and food and shelter for perhaps a day or so, and showed her a golden sovereign out of his pocket, she accepted him as her lodger on the spot.

She asked him to sit down by the fire.

"I don't mind," he said. He had all the airs of a weary tramp.

"It's a 'ot night," said the widow.

"I don't find it so," replied Silas.

"What will you have to eat?" she asked.

"He suggested that the widow should supply him with what she thought best. She considered for a minute, and soon prepared a meal of eggs and bacon for his consumption. He ate heartily, scarcely glancing at her and never asking her a question.

USES OF TURPENTINE.

Turpentine in which is dissolved as much camphor as it will take up is pre-eminently the dressing for cuts, lacerations, bruises, and sores. Its antiseptic action is equal to that of carbolic acid; it speedily stops the bleeding ("Better says one lady, if not the only true styptic"), allays the pain, and hastens the process of healing. Few, if any, ulcers resist this continued application.

As a liniment, turpentine with equal parts of laudanum, camphor, and chloroform is unsurpassed. Sprains, rheumatic pains, bruises, and sometimes even neuralgia yield to its magic influence.

As an inhalation, turpentine has proved of great service in bronchitis, pneumonia, pleurisy, and indeed in all affections of the throat.

If you have a cough, sprinkle a little on a handkerchief and hold it to your mouth and nose for a few minutes, breathing the vapour, and note the relief.

Internally, writes "Medicus," turpentine has enjoyed for a century the reputation of being a specific for sciatica. Its mode of operation is unknown, but that it cures stands as a proof of its virtue. Ten drops three times a day in sweetened water is the dose.

As a remedy for the life destroying worms, it is well known. A teaspoonful given in half a glassful of sweetened milk followed up on the next day with a dose of castor oil, seldom fails. The practice of our grandmothers in giving it to us on rising on sugar for sore throats was based on common sense.

A bath in half a pint of turpentine and two pounds of soda in an ordinary bathtub thrrequarters full of water, at 100deg. Fahr., will cure pediculosis in a single bath. Three baths or four baths, one daily, are usually sufficient. Cotton soaked in olive oil and turpentine and put into the ears relieves the ache of the most painful kind. In the hands of the physician turpentine is of great value in typhoid fever. Keep turpentine in the house.

TO PREVENT SCREWS FROM RUSTING.

Many people know the wrinkle of applying turpentine to a rusted screw or nut in order that it may be unscrewed. But it is not so generally known that a simple application of linseed, before use, with a thin paste of black-lead and machine oil or tallow protects them for a long time from rusting. Screws, nuts, or bolts thus treated can be removed, after years of service under unfavourable conditions, without difficulty or risk of breakage.

NICE DISHES.

Semolina Eggs.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying-pan, lay in it carefully the number of eggs you require, break them in a saucer and sliding it from this into the butter. Have a knife at hand with which to divide the yolks from the whites as they stiffen. Put the eggs may not run into each other. As soon as they are set season with salt and pepper, and pour over them a cup of tomato sauce or of stewed tomatoes. Let the sauce simmer and thickened with a little flour. Add onion-juice to qualify the tomato, and a little sugar if liked.

French Beans a la Francaise.—Cut and boil one pound of French beans, and when tender put them in a warm dish and set by the fire to dry. Shake the pan that they may not burn. When quite free from moisture put three ounces of fresh butter, the juice of half a lemon, pepper, salt, and a tablespoonful of fine sugar. Shake the pan over the fire until the beans are quite hot, and serve quickly.

Curried Eggs.—Sweetbread Quenelles.—Take the meat of the remains of roast grouse and mince finely. Prepare a sufficient for one dish, and serve garnish till tender. Mince it also. Then make a pounds of cooked veal, one tablespoonful of finely-chopped parsley, one tablespoonful, finely grated lemon-peel, chopped shallot, a pinch of herbs, pepper, and salt, and the strength of a French yolks previously soaked in milk and squeezed dry. Mix all together, and add the whites of two eggs and the yolk of an egg. Set on one side till cold. Then take equal quantities of the mixture and of butter, and pound and pound all together in a mortar. Add a whole egg. Form quenelles in a tablespoon, and slide into boiling water. Serve with a white sauce.

Compote of Greengages.—To a teacupful of white granulated sugar and the strength of one half of cane loaf sugar add a teacupful of cold water. Boil gently for twenty minutes. Add the barely ripe greengages and then add as many whole greengages as will form a single layer. Cook gently, not very slowly, and as soon as they are soft but not in the least broken remove them from the syrup. Repeat until all are cooked; then pour the hot syrup over the whole, and keep covered until cold.

The Kingston-on-Thames Corporation have made a rule requiring ladies to wear caps when using the public swimming baths.

Nellie Sorcer, the 15 year old daughter of a widow, was very early one morning crossing Woodhouse Moor, Leeds, when a man suddenly sprung upon her, forced her to the ground, and cut off so the roots a long plait of flowing black hair reaching to her waist. The man ran away.

Overheated rooms in colliery districts! "Bad housing," says a school medical inspector, "overheated rooms (especially in miners' houses where coals are cheap), bad ventilation, with the window sealed, and clothing—if these were remedied and less cough mixture poured down the children's throats, there would be much less chest trouble."

* * *

Apropos of Wetherby races (says a correspondent) one overheard in the Leeds railway refreshment room on Monday morning how "Mr. Bellow manages to back horses on the "heads I win, tails you lose" principle. A young fellow walked in and the waitress, after asking his order, said she had got a tip for a certain horse running at Wetherby. She explained that a customer had given her the "information" and also a shilling to put on it. She had no speaking acquaintance with the "bookie"; but the young fellow was going to Wetherby and would be mind putting sixpence each way on for her? "Certainly," said the youth, who, however, was too gallant to take the shilling off her.

WETHERBY AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

DECREASED HORSE ENTRY—MORE CATTLE

THE PRINCIPAL PRIZE-WINNERS.

On Wednesday the seventy-third show of the Wetherby Agricultural Society was held in the Grange Park, Wetherby, and the weather was all that could be desired. The show is more purely agricultural than many other shows, which have sporting events and floral exhibits, which have sporting events and floral exhibits, and it may be that fact, together with its traditions, that has saved it from the depression and falling off which many secretaries have had to dipplore, and which has led some of them even to suggest discontinuing their annual events. The manner in which the show has held its own may be judged from the number of entries, which this year were only two less than last year, when, with an entry of 616, the show touched its high water mark. The number of horses entered, however, continues to show a steady decrease. This year there were 20 less than last year, and so many as 40 fewer than at the show held five years ago. Cattle, on the other hand, both in quality and quantity, showed a very marked increase, and the exhibits were, as far as numbers go, the best for over 40 years. This was directly attributable to the repeated outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in Ireland, which, having seriously restricted the output from the Emerald Isle, has almost obliged, and certainly made it worth while for the local farmers to go in more and more for cattle breeding. The motor-car again is blamed for the decrease in the horses. The actual numbers of the entries, with those for last year, given in parentheses, are as follows:—Horses, 141 (161); cattle, 75 (68); sheep, 31 (30); pigs, 11 (14); implements, 8 (11); butter, eggs, bread, and hams, 55 (40); pigeons, rabbits, and poultry, 293 (292). The receipts were £8 in excess of those of last year.

NEW FEATURES

A new feature this year was a musical ride (chairs) for which an entry of eight was obtained. There was a cricket match in the afternoon between Wetherby Tradesmen and Leeds Tradesmen, and music was provided by the band of the York Industrial School. During the afternoon there was a parade of winners in the ring.

The judges were as follows:—Agricultural: Mr W. Webster, Stockton-on-Forest, York; Mr G. W. Wright, Leconfield Grange, Beverley. Hunters, Hackneys, etc.: Mr W. Heslop, West Side, Staindrop, Darlington; Mr H. Hoby, Middledale, Kilham, Driffield. Cattle, Sheep, and Pigs: Mr George Knowles, Creyke; Mr T. Winter, Lotherton. Butter, Eggs, Bread, and Dressed Poultry: Mrs W. E. Mudd, Slade House, Thornthwaite, Darley, Leeds. Hams: Mr W. R. Holgate, Scarcroft. Cavies, Pigeons, Poultry, and Rabbits: Mr C. A. House, Idle, Bradford. Awards:—

THE LUNCHEON

Luncheon was served in a marquee on the showground. Mr C. F. Ryder (President) presided, and he was supported by Mr J. M. Dawson (Wighill), Colonel Jerome, C.B., (Bilton), Mr J. C. Wilmot Smith (Bevercotes Hall), Rev. C. A. Durrant (vicar of Wetherby), Mr J. P. Law (Wetherby), Mr R. F. Meyrick (Wetherby), Mr C. T. Sheraton, Mr H. Crossley (secretary), and the judges and committee.

After luncheon the Chairman submitted the loyal toasts, and these were heartily honoured.

Colonel Jerome, C.B., proposed "Success to the Wetherby Agricultural Society," coupled with the name of the President. He was glad to be informed by the secretary that the society was in a prosperous state. The entries were satisfactory, and as regards actual numbers they were only two less than last year. The entry of cattle was very good indeed, and the quality was quite satisfactory. As regards horses they were a little short this year, one reason being that they had got no class for Army remounts as compared with last year. He did not know the reason why it had been dropped, but there must have been a good reason. The hunter classes and agricultural horses, as far as he could judge, were well supported, and the quality was good.

The President responded and said the society had every reason to congratulate itself on the long continued prosperity of the show. That was the 73rd show, and the entries were only two short of the previous year. Of course, they would scarcely expect horses to keep up to the same standard, but they were fairly successful on the whole. The President went on to allude to the loss the society had sustained by the death of Canon Geldart. He was with them last year, and they as neighbours always remembered and appreciated his efforts to promote the benefit of the neighbourhood. Mr E. H. Barlow was with them last year, and agriculture, particularly the horse breeding part, had suffered a severe loss by his death. Mr Lane Fox, M.P., who was fully convalescent after a small operation, wrote regretting he could not attend as he had to go abroad. In these times the life of a Member of Parliament was a very arduous one, and they would only hope he would soon be restored to health.

It was difficult to talk about agriculture, continued Mr Ryder, as if there was one class in the country which knew its business it was that of farming. Farmers had had experience from earliest childhood, and it was not easy always to say anything that would benefit them. But there was one thing they could congratulate themselves upon—the fine weather, and one could only regret that the prospects were not better for agriculture on account of the long-continued drought. During the past eight and a half years the weather had been very changeable. We had long spells of drought and long spells of rain, which made heavy land very troublesome, and one effect would be to encourage the laying down of the heaviest kind of land to grass.

Mr R. F. Meyrick proposed "The judges," and Mr Wright responded.

Mr J. Thompson proposed a vote of thanks to Sir Neville Gunter, Bart., Mr Gunter, and Mrs Riley Smith for the use of the park and Mr J. M. Dawson responded.

A SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPH OF RHODES.

There is a reference in "My Father—Personal and Spiritual Reminiscences of the late W. T. Stead" (Heinemann) to a spirit photograph taken of Cecil Rhodes. The narrative makes interesting reading:

"There is a round-faced, well-set-up man here with a short moustache and a dimple in his chin. Do you know him?" said the photographer. "No," I said, "I don't know any such man." "Well, he seems to be very busy about you." "Well," I said, "if he comes upstairs, we shall see what we can get." "I don't know," said he. When I was sitting, he said: "There he is, and I see the letter R. Is it Robert or Richard, do you think?" "I don't know any Robert or Richard," I said. He took the picture. He then proceeded with the second plate, and said: "That man is still there, and I see behind him a country road. I wonder what that means." He went into the dark-room, and presently came out and said: "I see 'road' or roads." Do you know anyone of that name?" "Of course," I said, "Cecil Rhodes." "Do you mean him as died in the Transvaal lately?" said he. I said "Yes." "Well," he said, "was he a man like that?" "Well, he had a moustache," I said. And sure enough, when the plate was developed there was Cecil Rhodes looking fifteen years younger than when he died.

Of course, it may be said that it was well known I was connected with Cecil Rhodes, and that the photographer, therefore, would have no difficulty in faking a picture. I admit all that, and therefore I would not have introduced this if it had stood alone as any evidence showing that it was a bona-fide photograph of an invisible being. But it does not stand alone, and I have almost every reason to believe in the almost stupid honesty, if I may use such a phrase, of the photographer. I am naturally much interested in these latest portraits of the African Colossus. They are, at any rate, entirely new, no such portrait to the best of my knowledge (and I have made a collection of all I can lay my hands on), exactly resembling those portraits which I obtained at Mr. B.'s studio.

A Stourton Lady's Wedding.

YOUNGHUSBAND—WADE.

A pretty wedding, which attracted a good deal of local interest, took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Wesleyan Chapel, Waterloo Road, Hunslet.

The bride was Miss Lily Ethel Wade, the only daughter of Mr T. P. Wade, of Stourton Lodge, Wakefield Road, a member of the Rothwell Urban District Council, and the bridegroom Mr Harry Younghusband, Oakwood Drive, Roundhay, of the London, City, and Midland Bank (Hunslet branch), and the elder son of Mr and Mrs D. P. Younghusband.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a charming gown of ivory charmeuse, the bodice having a corsage of filmy shadow lace over ninon. The skirt was handsomely draped with a tunic effect, and caught with embroidery of pearls and crystals. She carried a bouquet of lilies.

There were two bridesmaids, Miss Gladys Wilkinson and Miss Margery Swales (both cousins of the bride), and they wore dainty dresses of pale blue broche prettily trimmed with shadow lace and rosebuds and pendants and chains (gifts of the bridegroom), and each carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

The bride's mother wore a gown of handsome brocade crepe, beautifully hand embroidered in variegated colours, completed with sash and heavy tassels of oriental effect.

Mr George Younghusband, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. J. Ashton, assisted by the Rev. W. T. Kitching.

The church was tastefully decorated with palms and flowers, and the service was choral.

A reception was afterwards held in the grounds of Stourton Lodge, the home of the bride's parents, where a large marquee had been erected. The outside was effectively draped, and in the interior the pink and white floral table decorations made a pretty effect. About eighty guests were present, and a well chosen programme of music was rendered by an orchestra, under the direction of Mr Dyson.

The bride and bridegroom were the recipients of numerous and costly presents. Later in the day the happy couple left for London and the Channel Islands, where the honeymoon is to be spent.

MOTOR COLLISION AT SCARCROFT.

CHARGE AT WETHERBY.

At Wetherby yesterday James William Calcra, doctor, Ayr, was charged with having driven a motor-car in a manner dangerous to the public, and with failing to stop after an accident.

The evidence showed that about midnight on Saturday, May 16th, Mr Frank Clayton, chartered accountant, 2, The Terrace, Woodhouse Lane, Leeds, was riding a motor-cycle from Wetherby to Leeds, having a lady in his side-car, and when between Bardsey and Scarcroft he met the defendant in his motor-car on his way from Leeds to Tadcaster. The car collided with the cycle, wrenching the pedal clean off, and buckling the front wheel.

Mr Clayton was considerably bruised, and a hole was punctured through his boot. Both he and the lady were thrown on to the embankment. Mr Clayton whistled to the defendant, and an eye-witness, who was able to take the number of the car, shouted to him, but he went on his way.

Measurements taken afterwards showed that the side-car wheel was within six inches of the left hand side of the road, and that the defendant had 17 or 18 feet of road on which to pass.

Defendant's lights, said Mr Clayton, were so powerful that he ought to have seen a fly crossing the road 100 yards away.

Defendant, who said he was a stranger to the district, admitted that he was driving the car. He felt that he had touched something, and thought it must be a parcel on the carrier of the cycle. He looked back, and thinking no damage had been done he did not stop. His right misdgeard was only slightly bent.

The Bench took a serious view of the incident, and fined the defendant £5 and costs in each case.

Mr R. C. Davies watched the case in the interests of Mr Clayton.

A CITY OF SHRINES.

Pagan, one of the ancient capitals of Burmah, is in many respects the most remarkable religious city in the world. Jerusalem, Benares, Rome, Kieff—none of them can boast the multitude of temples and the lavishness of design and ornament that make marvellous the deserted capital on the Irawaddy. Deserted it practically is, for the flimsy huts that stand by the river are inhabited by pagoda-slaves and men condemned to perpetual beggary. For eight miles along the river bank, extending to a depth of two miles inland, the whole space is thickly studded with pagodas of all sizes and shapes. The very ground is so thickly covered with crumbling remnants of vanished shrines that, according to the popular saying, you cannot move a foot or hand without touching a sacred thing.

Mr Henry J. Clayton, of Wharfe Bank, Ulleskelf, left £1,492.

Colonel and Mrs Wallerstein have arrived at Kensington Palace Mansions, De Vere Gardens, from Thorpearch Hall, for the present month.

On Tuesday 180 people travelled by rail from Leeds to Tadcaster and Wetherby against 191 on the same day last year.

LORD HAWKE CONGRATULATED.—On Monday the Committees of the Yorkshire and Lancashire clubs, with Mr B. A. Firth presiding, passed the following interesting resolution:—That this reunion of members of the Lancashire and Yorkshire county committees heartily congratulate Lord Hawke on his election as President of the M.C.C., a position which he readily deserves in recognition of the invaluable service which he has rendered to cricket generally.

ESTABLISHED 1871.
Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7
On Alternate Saturdays, June 13th and 27th.
Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.
TREATMENT WITHOUT OPERATION, ARTIFICIAL HUMAN EYES fitted from 15s. SPECTACLES and EYE PRESERVERS, 3/6 to 10/6. Gold Frames from 20s.
SPECIAL NOTICE.—There are many cases of failing eyesight which can be speedily remedied by mild local treatment, thus dispensing with the use of glasses.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Looking well ahead, the Barwick-in-Elmet Council have asked the District Council to promote a town-planning scheme for Scholes, and it is a step in the right direction. Town-planning does not necessarily mean that people will at once start building houses in a certain area, but it provides that when building is begun it will have to be done according to a plan approved by the Local Government Board. Hunslet District Council are to town-plan part of Templenewsam, and Leeds Corporation have a scheme in hand for Crossgates district, so it is advisable that something should be done in regard to land adjoining. At some time the district between Stanks and Scholes will be developed, and it is just possible the N.E.R. Co will eventually erect a station at Stanks Bridge. In addition to providing for the proper laying out of the land, a town-planning scheme would help the opposition in frustrating Leeds Corporation should they ever be so ill-advised as to seek a further extension of the city boundaries.

Owing to the disruption of Barwick parish the old plan for the administration of the charities will have to be abandoned, and at the present time the Parish Council are in communication with the Charity Commissioners in regard to the making of a new scheme for dealing with the parish lands—one of the most valuable charities in the district. What share the Commissioners will give to Crossgates remains to be seen, but when the charity was formed Barwick was the predominant partner, and it would probably be running contrary to the intentions of the originators were Crossgates, with its growing rateable value, to secure the bulk of the income. The Council, who have adopted a straightforward and honourable course, desire a settlement of the whole question of the charities, and to that end they have directed the attention of the Commissioners to the changed conditions brought about by the inclusion of Crosgates in the city.

The county call in the Tadcaster Union is up by over £1,000 but very little was said about it at the Guardians' meeting. Presumably it was regarded as inevitable, but the Chairman explained that one of the causes of increased expenditure was the piling on to Poor Law work on to the County Councils, without the necessary funds to carry it out. The cost of education, we all know, is increasing, and the police rate is going the wrong way. Nowadays the policemen have one day's rest in seven, and whether they rest or not, they are surely entitled to one day off a week. Furthermore, have not the Standing Joint Committee increase the policeman's rate of pay? So long as "hobbies" are necessary the people will have to pay them for the protection they give.

In the Wetherby Union the people are not doing their duty to the State, and there are lamentations over the falling birth-rate. Evidently the people, deaf to the plaint of the ex-Bishop of Ripon, have determined to limit the size of their families, and the birth-rate last year was only 16.56—the lowest rate recorded in Barkston Ash and district. In Tadcaster area the rate was 24.6, and, taking purely rural districts, the rate for Sherburn sub-district was 21, and for Tadcaster sub-district 22, so that it will be seen the Wetherby rural area is a long way behind. In the Rothwell urban area the figures were 28.40. The birth-rate for England and Wales, it may be stated, was 23.90.

It is possible that there may be some connection between wages and birth-rate in Wetherby rural area, and people may be trying to make the size of their families suit their meagre incomes. In some trades, I know, the wages are surprisingly low for a place so near Leeds, where high wages in similar trades prevail. It may be that rents are lower in the country town and the cost of living slightly low, but investigation will reveal that the differences are not so great as that in the wages of the two places. The majority of employes in Wetherby area, of course, are farm hands, and in many cases the wages are very low; in fact, in the best cases the chances of their saving money are not particularly good. Some day, when the agricultural labourers realise their strength, they will come into their own.

The Hon. Edward Wood, M.P., of Templenewsam, has, I understand, offered what remains of the old cricket field at Whitkirk as a recreation ground for the children, and his generosity is greatly appreciated by the residents. The question of ingress, however, is causing some bother. Rightly, I think, the owner does not want an entrance made to the field from the Selby Road. If there is danger from motor traffic in Hollyshaw Lane there is a great deal more in Selby Road, and if the field is to be used for the purpose it is intended, it is not advisable that there should be an open door inviting every tramp that comes along to enter and rest. An entrance from one of the side streets off Hollyshaw Lane is very desirable, and a difficulty that has cropped up will, I hope, be eventually overcome.

Saxton has its annual fete and sports on Saturday afternoon, and, provided the weather is favourable, there will probably be a record gathering of spectators. Situated in a beautiful district, near the heart of Barkston Ash, Saxton is rather difficult to get at, for the railway has not yet disturbed the quietness of this quaint nook of historic country. However, it is not far from Church Fenton Station, and the walk to the village is a pleasant one. For cyclists and pedestrians in one part of the district the best way to go is by Hook Moor, past Lotherton Hall, and then by the side of the Cock Beck past Lead Church and the "Crooked Billet." It is all interesting country, and the observant may learn a little more about the history of the county by a visit to Saxton. The gathering is a very popular one, but the committee are ambitious, and they desire to make it the premier sports meeting of the district. To that end they are offering additional attractions, and I hope that Saxton's "annual" will prove a great success. A record number of entries has been received.

Templenewsam is apparently greatly desired by the Leeds Corporation, and their manœuvres are so palpable that comparatively few are misled by them. To suit their own ends—the Halton people must not suppose that the scheme was promoted for their comfort and convenience—the Corporation are to extend the tramway system to the Institute at Halton within the next two years, but they seemingly do not think that the conferring of such a service and the supplying of Templenewsam with water give them sufficiently strong hold on the parish to make them practically certain of success when they put forward their next annexation scheme, and they must therefore, adopt further measures to render any opposition that might be made less awkward.

They endeavoured to destroy the Templenewsam town-planning scheme by urging the making of a road through the Halton sewage beds, and they were defeated, but that has not prevented them promoting a town-planning scheme of their own with the road proposed in it. Evidently they are not altogether satisfied with their plans, because they have offered to deal with the sewage of the parish, which would, of course, mean the abandonment of the Halton works, but the District Council have given them the cold shoulder. Leeds rulers have only one motive in showing such solicitude for the welfare of Templenewsam. They want to strengthen their hold on the parish, and at the same time, in the event of annexation being successful, keep the debt on the parish which they would have to pay as low as possible. If the ratepayers of Templenewsam desire to have control of their own affairs they must fight Leeds at every turn.

No one can say that Crossgates has gained anything, with the exception of public lighting, by the extension of the Leeds boundary. It enjoys a preference for annexation. In the meantime, but the heavier burden is ahead. On the other hand, the district has suffered, because that interest in local affairs which was once so keen has been effectually smothered. Of course, a few people, I know, do not value privileges when they possess them, but when a small place is linked up with a great city it is possible for them to estimate their worth, for assuredly the people have really no voice in the settlement of questions that directly concern them.

Garforth Urban Council have discussed the making-up of a couple of private streets for a couple of years, and, after trying to persuade the owners to repair them and failing, they decided to put the Private Street Works Act into operation. They obtained an Order, tenders were advertised for, and then they declined to accept the lowest tender, because they thought it was too great. Since that time they have had several debates on the subject—in fact, they should be experts in road-making by this time—it is like a serial story going on from month to month—and at last, knowing they had another "go" at it "in committee." A protest was made against the eloquence of members being thus wasted—and it was scarcely fair to the ratepayers—but the majority were in no mood for economy of this kind, and the reading of the next chapter was taken with closed doors.

An interesting experiment in house-building is to be tried at Tadcaster, and if it is a success it may solve the question of cheap cottages in the rural district. Two cottages with concrete walls are to be erected, and in passing the plans the District Council, who are sympathetic towards the experiment, have stated distinctly that they are not to be bound by this decision. This means that if the cottages are not a success they will not approve of the erection of any more. Several years ago I read a series of articles on concrete cottages and their cheapness, and it was claimed that they fulfilled every expectation of the builders, but there does not seem to have been any run on this class of house. Why such a cottage should not be an economical and convenient as one made of bricks I fail to see, and I hope the Tadcaster experiment will demonstrate that concrete cottages are a success in every way. It is said that nowadays bricks cottages cannot be built for less than £250 when everything is taken into consideration, and if concrete cottages are as good and can be put up for £150 there should be a building "boom" in villages where working-class houses are required.

On Wednesday at Boston Spa Messrs Hepper and Sons sold by auction a semi-detached freehold house, out-buildings, and gardens in Poplar Terrace, Boston Spa, to Mrs H. Noble, Boston Spa, for £250.

THE WATER SUPPLY.—A parish meeting was held in the schoolroom, Askham Bryan to consider the scheme for a water supply for Askham Bryan. A letter to the Council, from Mr Walter Liddiss, referring to the matter, was read by the surveyor, Mr Wood. There was a large attendance of parishioners, including Colonel Preston, the Rev. W. Morgan (vicar), Messrs Payne-Galway, Horner, Hudson, Gawkwell, Dales, Dixon, Liddiss, Powell, Bramley, Tayle, Wright, Hullah, etc. Mr F. Busey was the chairman. Mr Wood, the surveyor, explained the scheme in a clear manner, and it was unanimously decided to accept the terms of the York Waterworks Company to provide a supply of water for the village.

EXHIBITION AT WETHERBY.

A Church missionary exhibition was opened in the Town Hall at Wetherby on Tuesday, and remained open throughout the week. The Lord Bishop of Ripon is acting as president of the exhibition, and the other prominent officials are as follows:—Chairman, the Rev. C. A. Durrant, M.A., vicar of Wetherby; organising secretary, Mr T. H. Baxter, Islington; general secretaries, Rev. A. G. Lockett (curate) and Mr W. Storey, Wetherby; treasurer, Mr J. P. Heap; captains of stewards, Rev. A. O'Brien Newenham, Cowthorpe, and Mr A. Brett, Wetherby; advertising secretary, Mrs H. Crossley, Wetherby; ticket secretary, Mr M. J. Foster; costumes secretary, Mrs Whitaker; sale of foreign goods secretaries, Mrs Stoughton Harris and Mrs Dalrymple Wilson; music secretary, Mrs Durrant; refreshment secretaries, Mrs Jessop and Mrs Tennant; schools secretary, Mr C. E. Whitaker; and hospitality secretary, Mrs Brett.

The walls of the hall have been decorated with pictures illustrative of foreign lands, and the exhibition was arranged in a series of courts containing curios representing native life in West Africa, East Africa, Uganda, Moslem lands, India, China, and Japan. Brief talks are given in the courts at intervals by missionaries and others. A Bedouin tent is used to illustrate patriarchal life in Bible times, and in a separate court were specimens of native drugs and instruments, which show the important work of the medical missions. There is also a Zenana, with ladies in costume; a Chinese guest room, in which a Chinese feast and display scenes, etc., are represented; and also Japanese receptions. There are talks on "races to be won" by young people in costume; numerous exhibits illustrating the daily life, customs, and industries of the people and their religions; and a stall for the sale of books, literature, and information on Church Missionary Society work.

The Japanese, Chinese, Indian, and children's scenes were given on Tuesday in the old schoolroom below the Town Hall, and the refreshments were dispensed in Mr Houfe's unoccupied shop on the opposite side of the Market Place. Talks at the West Africa Court were given by the Rev. F. C. Tease; at the Indian Zenana by Mrs Lockett; at the Moslem Lands Court by the Rev. Napier Malcolm; at the Medical Missions Court by the Rev. W. R. Coke; at the East Africa Court by the Rev. W. E. Paylor; at the China Court by the Rev. E. Thompson; at the Bedouin Tent by Miss Pedley; at the Japan Court by the Rev. A. F. Chappell; at the Home Organisation Court by the Rev. J. W. Aigur; in the Prayer Room by Miss Stockdale; at the Indian Zenana by Miss E. G. Edwards; and at the Indian Court by the Rev. A. G. Lockett. The Japanese series presented on Tuesday were "An evening meal" and "An afternoon call," by Miss Storey and Miss Stoughton Harris; Chinese scenes, "A Bible woman at work," "A feast," and "A village dispensary," by Miss Gubbins and Miss Simpson; children's scene, "Missionary Alphabet"; and Indian scene, "An Indian school," by Mrs Lockett. Native melodies were also sung, and the exhibits explained by the stewards.

There was a large attendance at the opening ceremony, which was presided over by Mr W. B. Bridgeman Simpson, Park Hill, Wetherby, in the absence of Major J. W. Dent, those present including the Rev. C. A. Durrant, M.A. (vicar of Wetherby), Mrs Durrant and the Misses Durrant, the Rev. M. G. Lascelles (vicar of Harewood and Rural Dean of Wetherby), Rev. A. O'Brien Newenham (vicar of Cowthorpe), and Mrs Newenham, Rev. E. P. Doudney (vicar of Bilton), Rev. J. Dingle Cocks (Wesleyan Minister at Wetherby), Rev. W. Pearson (rector of Cowthorpe), Rev. A. G. Lockett (curate at Wetherby), and Mrs Lockett, Rev. J. F. D. Chapman (curate-in-charge at East Keswick) and Mrs Chapman, Rev. Archdeacon Griffith (vicar of Thorparch) and Mrs Griffith, Mrs F. Riley-Smith, Wetherby Grange; Mrs and the Misses Murton, Whitefields Lawn; Mr P. Christie, Mrs and Miss Waddington, Miss Clarke, Miss Scott, Miss Anderson, Miss Harland, Miss M. Worthy, Mrs A. F. Smith, Collingham; Mrs Duncan-Hall, and Miss Bowen, North Deighton Manor; Mrs Browne, Miss Bickerdike, Boston Spa; Miss Pearson, Mr Downey, Spofforth; Mr Warner, Thorpe-le-Messor; Mr Johnson, Deighton Grange; Mr Tennant, Mr S. S. Whitfield, Mrs and Miss Jessop, Miss Gaudin, Miss Brett, Mr R. Purdy, Mr and Mrs T. Snape, Mrs S. Sykes, Mr and Mrs A. S. Allan, Mrs and Miss Stoughton Harris, the Misses Hill, Mrs Whitaker, Misses Preston, Miss Hall, Miss Wollscroft, Miss Lucey, Mr and Mrs J. Foster, Mr E. Jones, Mr C. E. Foulds, Wetherby; and many others.

Mr Bridgeman Simpson briefly introduced the Ven. Archdeacon Armstrong Hall, rector of Methley, saying they all regretted the absence of Major Dent, who was a busy man, yet always willing to help Church work as well.

The Ven. Archdeacon Hall said that the exhibition was not primarily to raise money, but to bring home to their hearts by an appeal to the imagination what was really going on in foreign lands. "Stay-at-home" people could not conceive what was going on abroad and the circumstances under which they were going on. The exhibition would show the reality of superstition, making them understand what heathenism really means; the patience and courage of the missionaries, who left comfort and happiness to go and labour under infinitely dressing circumstances; and the triumphs God was bringing about day by day. In the name of God, there lay the whole secret. The heathen knew not God. Their Bible was an Oriental book, and when they saw the Oriental things gathered together perhaps their Bible would be made more vivid to them. They must think of the infinite need of the heathen, and the necessity of preaching the gospel to all.

The second day's proceedings were opened on Wednesday by Mr G. W. Lloyd, of Stockton Hall, York. The Rev. Archdeacon Griffith vicar of Thorparch, presided.

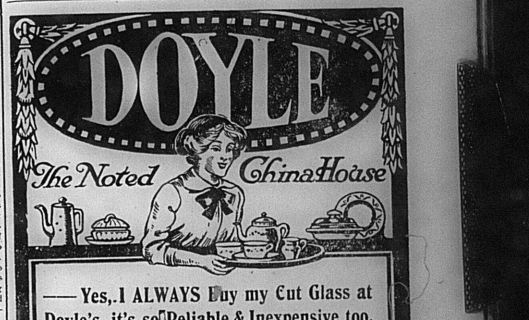
Mr Lloyd said that he considered it was very plucky of a small place like Wetherby to attempt the holding of such an exhibition. It reminded him of the first he ever went to at a small town in Lincolnshire. The Archbishop of Canterbury once said that we in England were only half-awake to the tremendous call of missions, which pulled up the blinds of ignorance and indifference and prejudice, and let in the light of information and knowledge. They had a great deal to be thankful for, and he was pleased to say that many people were waking up. For many years the C.M.S. had been burdened with a big debt, which had grown to £74,000, but as the outcome of a conference held a year ago that had been entirely removed, and they could start afresh. Other societies had gone forward. Last year the income of the S.P.G. was £34,000 higher than in the previous year. Almost every parish in the York diocese had done better. Twelve of the 13 parishes in his own deanery had sent in better reports, and in some cases had more than doubled the amount collected. But there was the danger of reaction, and they must impress upon themselves the fact that they could not stand still—that they must go on advancing. At the present time they had a tremendous opportunity all over the world, such as they had never had before, and they must not lose it. There was, however, a tremendous shortage of missionaries. In Africa alone there were 83 gaps to fill up in the C.M.S. missions. At Sierra Leone two of the three institutions were without a missionary. The old chiefs went with tears in their eyes and money in their hands to ask for churches to be built, but in five cases out of six they had to be refused because they had no one to send. The missionaries who were out were terribly overworked, each trying to do the work of two men. The very serious thing at present was not the condition of the churches abroad, but the condition of the Church at home. Compare Leeds with Toronto. The whole of Leeds—the Church and Nonconformity—two years ago gave £9,000 for Nonconformity. Four years ago Toronto gave £27,000, and two years ago £90,000. It was part of everyone's duty to take their share in the work of trying to make people realise more the splendid privileges and opportunities there were of helping forward missionary work.

There was again a good attendance, including a couple of Japanese young gentlemen, one of whom is a Professor at the Tokio University, and the other is very prominent in journalism in Japan.

SHERBURN PETTY SESSIONS.

Yesterday at Sherburn Petty Sessions the magistrates present were the Rev. B. Hemsworth (Chairman), Mr Walter Crosland, and Mr H. S. Child.

Gilbert Hartland, apprentice, Castleford, was charged with riding a bicycle without a light on the 3rd inst in Ledston Road, Ledston. Fined 6d. and 7s. 6d. costs.



John Ellis, miner, Brotherton, was charged with being drunk and disorderly on the 24th ult. in High Street, Brotherton. Fined 2s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. costs. The same defendant, John Ellis, of the same address, was charged with Lily Wright, married woman, on the 24th May, at Brotherton. Mr Claude Kemp, solicitor, appeared for the complainant, who stated that on the 24th May two strange men were going to kill her husband, and she saw the men assault him. Ellis rushed at her several times and struck her with his fist on the face, and kicked her on the knee. She had to throw a stone at him to defend herself. He came to her door and threatened her life. She was badly treated. Evidence in support was given, and defendant denied the charge and called several witnesses. The Chairman said they had decided to convict and fined Ellis 10s. and £1 11s. 6d. costs.

SOUTH MILFORD AND DISTRICT FANCIERS' SOCIETY.

Mr G. D. Cliff presided over a largely-attended meeting of members on Wednesday evening at the White Swan Hotel, and the arrangement of the class list for the forthcoming show was the principal business. The following new classes were added to the twenty-eight at last year's show, making 40 in all, viz.:—White Wyandotte cock and hen, a novice class for poultry, and three separate classes for bantams. In the pigeon section additions are exhibition flying homers, working homers, a ten shilling selling class, that guaranteed by Mr A. Naismith, of Knottingley, and tumblers. Ducks and rabbits will be another attraction. English rabbits, any variety under six months, are included in the prize list. It was unanimously decided to increase the prizes for rabbits to 8s., 4s., and 2s., making the same in all sections. The bread classes will, it is hoped, be the same as last year.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

TUBS, VASES, ETC.

The decorative value of large vases, tubs, etc., filled with plants is not generally recognised. They should be placed about the flower garden in a more or less haphazard manner. Any attempt at arranging them in lines or circles will result in the creation of a formal appearance once, whereas the object of using them is to give a rustic, or natural effect. Hard tubs covered with rustic cork are excellent for the purpose. They are often used in the centre of oval or circular beds, but unnecessarily so, as on the chances as they open almost put this point out of court so far as the flower garden proper is concerned. Margined beds, with central polygonal units, and such trailing subjects as the Japanese honeysuckle, campanulas in variety, canary creeper (syn.loved pelargoniums, etc., may all be used with telling effect. Readers who have not tried this phase of gardening should certainly experiment with a few tubs. We have no hesitation in saying they will be more than pleased. One important point which must not be lost sight of is, that plants grown under these conditions require more attention in regard to watering than those planted in the open round. The soil should be enriched by the addition of a little rotten manure and leaf mould, and firm planting is another important point. The surface of the soil should be mulched with cocoa-fibre or chilled leaf-mould.

LAWNS.

A well-kept lawn is always pleasing to the eye and gives just the right finish to beds and borders filled with bushy plants. Regular attention must be paid to mowing and the necessary trimming of the grass edgings. To get a neat, even effect, it is essential that the machine should be passed twice over each part in the opposite directions. During dry weather the grass box may be dispensed with. This reduces the work, and the cut grass, if allowed to fall on the lawn, is beneficial to it. There need be no fear about it looking unsightly as it soon dries up and practically disappears. Up-to-date machines have a contrivance attached whereby the grass is thrown behind when the box is not in use. After heavy rain the roller should be freely used. At this time of the year a few hours' sunshine is sufficient to bake the surface hard, and the need for prompt action with the roller is obvious. Dandelions and other large weeds are very unsightly and it is a tedious operation removing the roots with a weeding fork. A quicker method is to cut through the root about an inch below the surface, pull out the top, and drop half-a-teaspoonful of sulphate of ammonia into the hole. This will prevent further growth. Dilution may be destroyed by sprinkling them with a mixture of 4 parts fine dust to 1 part powdered sulphate of ammonia. Apply through an ordinary flour dredger.

CLIPPING HEDGES.

Privet, thorn, beech, and other hedges may be clipped over as soon as the seeding-out operations are completed. This task should be performed as frequently as time will allow. The oftener it is done and the denser will the hedge become. In the case of newly-planted privet it is advisable to cut well back. This encouragege dense bottom growth. It is much a matter of taste as to what shape the hedge shall be trained. Some like it trained with a round top, others are cut flat, whilst some growers prefer them with a narrow, almost sharp top. Privet look very effective with a flat top, but we prefer to see other kinds nicely rounded off. It is advisable to stretch a guide line alongside when clipping rough, uneven hedges.

Rose growers in town gardens should make free use of the syringe. Soot, dust, and other undesirable deposits hinder free growth, and regular syringings will not only remove them but provide that amount of moisture necessary for the production of free growth. Another advantage will be the reduced trouble in regard to insect pests. Once a week soapy water should be used for the purpose. This will still further check the increase of insect life. Established trees that have not been mulched should be watered with liquid manure. Early chrysanthemums (show or Dijon should be pruned back as soon as they finish blooming. This will cause them to break into new growth and flower again later on.

SHRUBS.

Rhododendrons and hardy azaleas are blooming very freely this year. This means that a great deal of energy is being expended, and it is possible some encouragement should be given them to make strong growth when the flowering period is over. With large old specimens this is somewhat difficult, but it is as well to remember that every seed pod that is allowed to develop is weakening the plants still more. Choice hybrid varieties should have every seed pod removed as soon as the flowers fade, and if the ground is dry, a thorough soaking of water should be given. This may be followed up a few days later by watering with soot water. An occasional solid over the foliage will also be helpful. This may be done with either the syringe or the hose-pipe.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Continue to sow peas, beans, kidney beans, and salad plants in variety for succession.

Provide supports for peas in good time. If they fall over it will be impossible to cook them into an upright position again near the base. They never come as well if they are once allowed to trail over.

Mint cuttings will root freely this month if dibbled into soil that has been thoroughly broken up.

Plant main-crop celery and water freely until established. Newly-planted celery derives great benefit from being sprayed overhead in the evenings of hot days. Keep a sharp look out for the celery maggot and destroy every specimen that can be found. The fly is very active during the present month.

FRUIT PLANTS.

TRAINING LEADING.

The tuberous-rooted begonia is a splendid greenhouse plant, many of the double flowers being equal to the finest camellia. In northern districts it is rarely a success when planted outdoor, and under glass it should be shaded from bright sunshine. It be a moisture loving plant, and will take up an enormous amount of liquid manure when in full growth. The grass-feeding nature of begonias generally is not rarely recognised by amateurs. We have not rarely recognised by amateurs. We have not found them to answer readily to chemical feeding, but liquid prepared from animal manures or from soot is very good for them. A large proportion of their roots are made near the surface of the soil and for this reason they should be planted either in broad-topped pots or in ordinary pans.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

In almost every case the plants will now be ready for potting into the flowering-size pots. A few important points in final potting are to prove report the plant that in need of water, pot firm, using a blunt stick to ram the compost home, sink the plant about an inch deeper into the soil, and always leave room for future top dressings. After potting water the plants to a firm stake, and for the time being stand them where they will be sheltered from direct winds. If they droop badly after potting, syringe several times a day. This will tend towards keeping the foliage fresh. Decorative varieties require stopping a few times to encourage bushy growth. It is quite safe to stop until the end of June. Simply remove the point.

POTTING ON.

The phrase "potting on" is applied to the work of repotting greenhouse plants that have made good progress and filled with roots the pots they were intended to flower in. Foliage plants often make more headway than when repotted of them, and when this occurs they also must be potted on or they will soon deteriorate. Pelargoniums, fuchsias, and tuberous begonias are regular offenders amongst flowering subjects and should be kept under observation. If the bottom leaves begin to lose colour it is safe to assume that they are root-bound and require a shift. If they have commenced to show flower they should be potted lightly. Firm potting would result in a large proportion of the foliage turning yellow, and the quality of the bloom would be impaired.

QUESTIONS.

In reply to O. S., Cottingley, the chrysanthemums you mention are suitable for flowering in an unheated greenhouse. You say they are in small pots. If you mean 3½-inch pots, move them into the 7-inch size at once. Use a compost containing a fair amount of rotten manure and pot firm. Pinch off the tops about a week after re-potting and attend to staking, tying, and the removal of weak, useless shoots. It is difficult to advise you thoroughly without having a description of your plants. Early in August commence to give liquid manure two or three times a week. House your plants as soon as the buds commence to burst. Any that have not reached that stage should be housed late in September.

ROTHWELL WOMAN'S SUDDEN DEATH.

WOULD NOT HAVE A DOCTOR.

An inquest was held at the Mechanics' Institute, Rothwell, on Monday night by Mr P. P. Maitland (Coroner) on the body of Mrs Mary Wainwright, who died with tragic suddenness on Sunday morning. The deceased, who was 70 years of age, was the widow of Mr Asher Wainwright, an under-manager at Rothwell Pit, and lived by herself at 46, Gilbert Lane, Rothwell.

Ethel Wainwright, wife of Thomas Wainwright, a pit deputy, living at 23, Meynell Avenue, Rothwell, deposed that the deceased was her mother-in-law. She had lived alone for about the last five years. No doctor had attended her for some time, she having used home remedies, such as poultices and plasters.

The Coroner: Was she in the habit of taking drugs?

Witness: No, but I have heard her say she took something.

The Coroner: You don't think it was an overdose?

Witness: No.

She was fairly cheerful, said witness, and seemed to be in comfortable circumstances. During the last few weeks she had complained of a cold and of pains in the chest. She had been advised to get a doctor, but had replied that she did not feel ill enough for one. She was last seen alive about a fortnight ago, when she said she was just as usual. On Sunday morning her son, who had been sleeping with the deceased, came home about 7.30 and said that his grandmother was ill. Witness went off at once, but on her arrival the old lady was dead.

The Coroner: You don't suspect anything improper? By that I mean that it was improper for her not to have a doctor and bring ill all this time.

Witness: No, only on Saturday night she (deceased) was in Leeds.

Cyril Wainwright, a boy of eleven years of age, said he called at his grandmother's house on his way to Sunday night, and slept with the deceased. Early on Sunday morning she asked him to go and see if the fire was all right. He did so, and on going back to the bedroom, she said "Oh, Cyril." He saw she was ill and ran off for his mother.

Dr. Buck said he had only attended the deceased once, and that was about right or ten months ago. He found that she had a cold, and was a bronchial subject. When he was called to the house at 8.15 on Sunday morning she was dead. Death was due to syncope following bronchial trouble.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony, the Coroner remarking that it was a pity she had not had a doctor in the drinking of the past hour. It would perhaps have relieved her.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

TURNING THE EGGS.

My own practice is not to disturb the eggs until the second evening, although there is really no reason why they should not be turned before. From experience I know the care exercised by many operators in turning eggs. Many times have I noticed "mooning" carefully written on one side of the egg and "Pewning" diametrically opposite, to ensure that the eggs are evenly turned right and morning. This is quite unnecessary. Inadequate for turning them at all is, instinct is to do, unless always done in exactly the same manner, there is danger of it adhering to the shell. To obviate this it has been found advisable by practical experience to change the position of the eggs, hence the term "turning" was applied to the operation. In the course of time this has conveyed to the operator, or, at all events, to the casual observer, a meaning quite different to that originally given to the word. Instead of turning them from an exact half-circle. Personally, I do not find this gives the best results, and for this reason I am not in favour of automatic turning, although I see no extra tray for turning, as advocated in the use of some of the American egg-tray machines.

I should strongly advise operators to simply remove a few of the eggs from the centre of the drawer or tray, and then gently roll the remainder of the eggs towards the centre, placing the eggs that were removed on the outside of the drawer or tray. This alters the position of every egg, and prevents the adhesion of the embryo to the shell, and at the same time tends to give a more average temperature to every egg if the diffusion of heat is not equal in every part of the chamber. Incubator manufacturers must not be angry at this observation. I have personally tested most makes of machines, and at present know of practically none where the diffusion is absolutely equable throughout the egg-chamber; at the same time, I am not remarking this from a derogatory sense. To my mind, providing the variation is small, it is beneficial, the temperature under the hen varying according to the location of the egg in the nest. Experience, however, has taught me to observe that the hens are careful to constantly change their relative position so as to secure an average throughout, and if the practice I recommend is followed, we secure the same advantage in artificial incubation.

I might here remark that I have frequently been the recipient of correspondence inquiring why worth eggs hatch out fully thirty-six hours sooner than others? I concede that the freshness of the egg when set is a factor in the solution of the problem, but I also suggest to you that the variation in temperature to which some eggs are subjected, due to the unequal diffusion of heat throughout the chamber, combined with the fact that the operator has failed to change the relative position, is also a determining cause. To prove the accuracy of my remarks on this point, commence a hatch, run it at comparatively high temperature throughout, say 104 degrees, reduce the time for airing and cooling to a minimum, and you will hatch chicks in nine hours to twenty days. I grant you they will be weakly specimens, and not worth your trouble to rear. On the other hand, run it or hatch on the ordinary approved lines, as laid down, and twenty to twenty-one days will be the average period of incubation. You can get even further by a third test. Run the machine at 102 degrees only. Air and cool to a considerable extent, and incubation can be prolonged to twenty-one and even twenty-two days. This conclusively proves to my mind that, granted unequal diffusion of heat in the egg-chamber, and I can assure you it obtains to a greater or lesser extent in practically every machine, it is necessary to change the location of the eggs on the tray or drawer if it is desired to hatch the eggs more or less simultaneously. The temperature can be controlled until the minute-ath evening.

It is the practice with some operators to turn the eggs only once per diem. In the great majority of cases this is sufficient; but there is a danger when the operation is only performed once a day that what we are endeavouring to prevent—namely, the adhesion of the embryo to the interior of the shell—may happen, and as the turning process, carried out in the manner I have suggested, is so simple, and occupies only a fraction of time, I would advise that it be performed morning and evening.

BARKSTON ASH CRICKET COMPETITION.

WHAT CONSTITUTES PROFESSIONALISM?

COLLINGHAM CASE—CHURCH FENTON AND CAWOOD MATCH:

The monthly meeting of the Executive of Barkston Ash Cricket Competition was held at the Hotel Metropole, Leeds, on Tuesday night—Mr R. Ward (great Preston) in the chair. Other representatives present were Messrs T. Lumb (Barwick), R. Fern (Cawood), G. H. Amber (Church Fenton Sycamore), A. Young (Collingham), W. H. Smith (Crossgates), G. Umpleby (Crossgates West), W. Glover (Garforth), F. Hipps (Halton), J. A. Popplewell (Halton West), J. H. Townend (Micklefield), A. Flowith (Scarcroft), E. Taylor (Shadwell), A. Johnson (South Milford), A. Deighton (Church Fenton), G. W. Herbert (Tadcaster), and E. D. Pawson (hon. sec).

Mr Pawson stated that he made inquiries as to the amateur status of Southwick (Templenewsam). He wrote to Mr Leathem, of Wentbridge, and he replied that Southwick was not a professional and had never been a professional. He afterwards saw Southwick and questioned him, and he gave out the statement of Mr Leathem. He, therefore, gave him permission to play, and he had turned out for Swillington and Colton.

Collingham applied for the reinstatement of J. W. Dalby, and this gave rise to considerable discussion on the interpretation of a rule. It was stated that Dalby was groundsman for Collingham last year, but he had given the position up. He was not paid for playing.

The Hon. Sec. and Chairman did not know that he could be reinstated, and the rule was read as follows:—"No club shall be allowed to play a professional, or any paid groundsman, or any person who is or has been in receipt of remuneration, either directly or indirectly, for services rendered as a player. The committee may reinstate any player as an amateur if he has not been played as a professional for a period of not less than one year."

Mr Young said that Dalby was not groundsman now.

Mr Herbert thought that a paid groundsman was disqualified in the same way as a professional, according to the rule.

Mr Amber said the man was not a professional.

Mr Johnson said it was hard if they stopped a man from playing because he was a groundsman.

Mr Herbert said he was in favour of the man playing if it was not opening a precedent.

Mr Smith said that Dalby was a groundsman and did not require reinstating. It was never intended by the rules to debar such a man from playing.

Mr Popplewell said the rule was evidently intended to prevent clubs getting men and paying them in an indirect way. He proposed that Dalby be reinstated.

Mr Glover seconded, and this was agreed to.

The allocation of the points in the Church Fenton v. Cawood match on May 23rd caused some discussion. The Hon. Sec. said that they would remember it was a very wet morning, but all the matches were played with the exception of this one. The Church Fenton club secretary stated that he wired to Cawood to save them a journey, as he thought play would be impossible. Cawood did not make the journey, and he wanted to know how to allocate the points.

The Chairman said that Cawood were wrong in not going.

Mr Flowith said that the question of the ground being fit for play was one for the umpires to settle.

Mr Fern asked if any of them would have made the journey after receiving a telegram that the ground was under water.

Mr Deighton said that both clubs were at fault. Mr Holgreaves acted in perfect good faith, and he did not know the rules.

Young proposed that both clubs be fined. One was as bad as the other.

Mr Herbert: What will you do with the money? If you inflict a fine according to the rules it goes to the other club. (Laughter).

After further discussion Mr Herbert proposed that the points in the match be deleted from the League table, and that in future it be decided that the League fixture can be cancelled by either team.

Mr Lumb seconded, and this was agreed to.

It appears that in the match between Aberford and Garforth A on May 23rd the latter were returned winners by nine wickets, but when the result was sent the scores were put at Aberford 29 and Garforth A 29 for one wicket. A bowler discovered after the game that Aberford's total came to 29 instead of 28.—It was agreed that the match stand as a win for Garforth.

Saxton, Great Preston, and Church Fenton were fined for not sending results of matches to the League secretary according to rule.

Mr Popplewell said he heard some time one make a remark that in the event of a player making 50 or 100 and a collection was made for him on the field, that made him a professional.

Mr Umpleby: That has been thrashed out before.

Mr Popplewell: With what result?

Mr Herbert said it did not constitute a player a professional. The man did not go on to the field with the intention of being paid for his services.

Mr Deighton asked if it was possible for a man who had never played or resided in Barkston Ash to be qualified to play in the League.

The Chairman: No.

Mr Amber: Suppose he has complied with the rules and has played in the requisite number of League matches?

The Chairman: He cannot comply with the rules if he has never resided in Barkston Ash.

Mr Amber: Is a man ineligible to play who owns a pony in subscription?

Mr Deighton said the man he had referred to had been playing. Of course, he would not agree if the whole things was thrown open.

Mr Glover: Was he qualified the first season?

Mr Deighton said he was not.

In the course of further conversation, Mr Herbert said that it was the duty of any club to report cases in which rules were broken.

Mr Herbert asked if it had been decided about the semi-finals and final for the three divisions.

The Hon. Sec.: Yes.

Mr Herbert said that at next meeting he would bring forward the question of the prizes the semi-finalists should receive.

Mr Young asked if they were bound to charge gate money in a Lane Fox Cup match.

The Hon. Sec. said they were.

Going the wrong way! Dr J. A. Hargreaves, medical officer of health for the Wetherby Union, in his annual report, just published, draws attention to the fact that the increase in the population during the last decennium was only half that of the rural areas of the country generally; it was also to be noted that the birth-rate of the district was falling to a serious extent; the birth-rate last year was 16.56, against 22.15 in 1901.

TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL

KIPPAX, ALLERTON, TADCASTER, AND ULLESKELF AFFAIRS.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday at Tadcaster —Mr E. C. Brooksbank, J.P. (Chairman), presiding. The other members present were the Rev. Canon Greenwood (Garnston), Messrs T. H. Parker (Darfield), E. Parker (Ledsham), R. Wright (Barwick), J. H. Ingleby, J.P., and J. Nettleton (Tadcaster), R. Routledge, B. Ibrahim, J. Prime, and H. Green (Garforth), T. Hey, E. Cawthorn, and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), J. W. Dobson (Newthorpe), W. Y. K. Young (Aberford), Carlton (Stutton), J. Pick (Ulleskelf), G. Webster (Appleton-Roebuck), Walter Crosland, J.P. (South Milford), with the Clerk (Mr G. A. Bromet).

It was reported that the treasurer had a balance of £3,489 in hand.

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been two admissions and nine discharges from the workhouse, and the numbers were 58 and 17 in the casual and children's home—not against 100 at the corresponding date last year. The tramps relieved during the two weeks were 33 and 21 against 21 and 25 for the same fortnight last year.

The House Committee had before them the estimates, specifications, and plans for the alterations to the workhouse, and it was agreed that tenders should be advertised for.

It was agreed to advertise for an assistant nurse at a salary of £25 and a laundress at £20. Tenders for sixty new wire mattresses are to be obtained. An increase of salary to the master and matron was not recommended. The thanks of the Board were given to the Allerton Bywater Working Men's Club for a gift of books to the inmates.

At a meeting of the Children's Homes Committee it was recommended that Mr and Mrs Howarth, of Barnsdy, be appointed foster-parents at a salary of £45. This was adopted.

On behalf of the Finance Committee, Mr Pratert reported that the precept from the County Council had been received for the half-year, and he was sorry to say that it was an increase of £1,034 on the corresponding half of last year. The greatest increase were elementary education £868 and police rate £412. The increase on the last half-year was £1,222.

Dr. Rose was re-appointed medical officer for Rythe.

Mr Webster was appointed, in place of Mr Nettleton, to attend the Poor Law Conference at Bridlington.

A circular letter was read from a Union asking the Board to support the increase of old age pensions from 5s. to 7s. 6d., and the right to be entitled to 5s. pensions.—It was decided not to support the proposal.

DISTRICT COUNCIL.

The officers at the District Council meeting were Mr. HH (county councillor) Scott (urban council), Messrs. Driver and Wood (sanitary inspectors).

It was reported that the treasurer had a balance in hand of £3,403 9s.

HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Highways Committee a request was made that certain roads at Ulleskelf be taken over, and the matter was adjourned for a fortnight.—In regard to the painting of Barwick, the tender of Mr Allen for paint, etc., was accepted, and a section of the work is to be done.—A letter was read asking for a length of road in Saxton to be tarspraved. The Council has to be made to the County Council for permission to do the work The Clerk reported that an order had been received from the Local Government Board confirming the loans the Council to purchase property for the improvement of roads in the district, and the Clerk was asked to prepare any conveyances that might be required in regard to the property in Oxton Lane.—It was decided that permission be not granted to people to erect stalls in Tadcaster market place. —A Barnsley motor-cyclist stating that he had damaged his side-car owing to the bad condition of a road in the area, and he asked the Council to meet the cost of repairs. It was resolved to reply that the Council had no liability.

The minutes were approved.

SANITARY AND BUILDING.

At a meeting of the Sanitary Committee plans for a house in Brigshaw Lane, Allerton Bywater, a shop in Main Street, Kippax, and for sewers in the gas works, Kippax, were approved. It was reported that twenty yards of sewer at Kippax required to be re-laid, and the work is to be done. Repairs of vacant land at Lady Hill sewage works was let at 8s. a year, and as it was thought the works should be more securely fenced, the inspector was asked to get tenders.

Plans for a cottage for John Smith's, Tadcaster, were submitted, and were not approved. Plans for two concrete cottages by John Smith's Co. were approved, on condition that they were treated as an experiment, and the Council not bound by the decision in the event of the cottages proving unsatisfactory.—It was reported that the sanitary inspector of the County Council had visited Tadcaster for the purpose of preparing a report to the County Council on the housing conditions. The Clerk submitted correspondence with the county medical officer, who had agreed to do nothing further in the matter for two months.—Notice is to be served on several owners at Sherburn to connect their cesspools with the sewers.—At a meeting of the

SELBY PETTY SESSIONS.

SQUIRE OF MONK FRYSTON AND COUNTY COUNCIL.

The magistrature at Selby Petty Sessions on Monday were the Rev. B. Hemsworth (Chairman) and Mr H. Pulleine.

A number of drivers of heavy motor vans and char-a-bancs were fined for driving over Hadfield's Bridge, which is prohibited to heavy vehicles of over three tons axle weight. Wilson Rattenley, Halifax, was fined 2s. 6d. and costs; James Rhodes Hartley, Sheffield, 5s. and costs; Sydney Taylor, Wombwell, 5s. and costs; Joseph Thomas Hirst, Oldham, 2s. 6d. and costs; Henry C. Lesson, Ardsley, 5s. and costs; and Alf. Ernest Hutton, Sheffield, 5s. and costs. The Chairman said that the police had done their duty; but the magistrates considered that it was high time that this bridge, an important one on the main road, was replaced by a new structure which would be adequate and suitable for modern traffic. He requested Supt. Stafford to convey this expression of opinion from the Bench to the West Riding County Council.

Lionel Carr, labourer, of Leversholme, was summoned for deserting his wife, Annie Maria Carr, Selby. Defendant did not appear. Mrs Carr stated that her husband had worked at the Selby Olympia Mills. They were married in 1913, there being one child, a boy. After their marriage they lived with her mother, a widow, aged 64. Something she found led her to make an investigation against her husband, which he admitted. He subsequently left her, going to Manchester. He earned 29s. a week. An order was made that defendant contribute 12s. a week to the maintenance of his wife and child, and pay the costs.

WHITKIRK RECREATION FIELD—HALTON SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

The monthly meeting of Templenewsam Ratepayers' Association was held on Friday evening at the Brown Cow Inn, Whitkirk—Mr J. M. Armistead (President) in the chair.

Mr Whitaker (Mr Wilkinson), in regard to the recreation ground for Whitkirk, said that a field had been offered by the Hon. E. L. Wood, but the question of access to the field had caused delay. They did not want access to the field from Selby Road if there was any other way, and objection had been raised by certain persons to giving access from one of the side streets. The question would be dealt with at the next Parish Council meeting. Opposition was forthcoming, too, from members, who were in favour of the recreation ground, but they did not want the children coming past their houses.

Mr Rhodes: They were speaking feelingly. Neither are they!

Mr Morton said that considering the dangers to children from the motor traffic in Hollyshaw he felt the question of the playing field should be pushed forward as quickly as possible, and personal considerations should not be allowed to stand in the way.

The President said the sub-committee would do everything they could.

A lengthy discussion ensued, and eventually it was decided to have a special meeting of the Association after the Parish Council had met and dealt with the question.

Mr Cousins said he noticed by the paper that the Leeds Corporation had offered to take Halton sewage, and he thought the offer was a good one.

The President: Leeds Corporation, in their town-planning scheme, propose to run a road through Halton sewage works.

Mr Rhodes: They are proposing to annex Templenewsam.

The President: Ultimately. That is only one step towards it. The offer is not so generous as it appears to be.

Mr Cousins: I think it would be a good riddance.

The question then dropped.

Mr Clay brought forward the question of the representation of Templenewsam on Hunslet Rural District Council. They had, he said, eleven members on the Parish Council, who had nothing to do, and on the District Council, who had all the work to do, they had only two representatives. He did not know that they could have two better men—one represented the farming interest and the other the landed interest—but they lived on the extreme ends of the parish. The Council was too small and he believed that many questions would be ventilated were it larger.

The President pointed out the difficulties, as explained to the Association, of obtaining increased representation, and no resolution was moved on the question.

In regard to the resolution passed at last meeting and sent to Leeds Tramways Committee about the dangers arising from the position of the cars at the York Road terminus, Mr Hamilton replied that the matter was receiving attention.

The "plague" of rats at Whitkirk was again discussed, and Mr Morton said that at last meeting it was suggested they should have the sanitary inspector's report on the matter.

The Chairman said it was suggested that they should find out whether the rats were sewer or field rats, and also whether the drain was connected with the sewer. He had written to the inspector, but he had not received a reply yet. He was himself inclined to think they were field rats.

Mr Morton said that one resident had killed a number of rats, and he had informed him they were both sewer and field rats.

Mr Mackay said that residents in Hollyshaw Lane had told him they had had rats on their premises, and one gentleman said he had seen rats running up a tall pipe at his house.

Mr Cousins said that a nest of eleven rats had been found in Halton all-the-month.

No further action was taken in the matter.

It was stated that Mr and Mrs Shepherd were leaving the "Brown Cow," and Mr Rhodes proposed that the thanks of the Association be given to them for their courtesy and kindness during the time the meetings had been held there.

Mr Ripon, on seconding, said that they had studied the convenience of the members all along.

The resolution was cordially passed.

A SELBY WATCH-MAKER'S AFFAIRS

STARTED BUSINESS WITH £10 CAPITAL.

The examination of David Roberson, watch-maker and jeweller, Wide Street, and residing at 14, Westfield Avenue, Selby, took place at York on Friday. The liabilities were returned at £480 7s. 2d., and expected to rank £419 0s. 2d. The assets were £113 8s. 3d., leaving a deficiency of £305 17s. 11d.

Debtor, in answer to the Official Receiver (Mr Donald S. Mackay), attributed his position to heavy losses by cattle dealing. He was 35 years of age, and began business as a butcher at Hambleton in June, 1913, with £20 cash capital, and the credit of a bank overdraft up to £80 guaranteed by his father. The overdraft at the present time amounted to £175, which, it was said, was secured by policies on debtor's life. Consequently the bankers were not included as creditors in debtor's statement of affairs. The value of the policies was being ascertained. The valuation of fixtures, fittings, and goodwill paid by debtor on entry was £54.

Between seven and eight years ago he commenced cattle dealing, which he carried on for four years, during which time he sustained losses amounting to £200. This loss had since been largely reduced out of the profits from the butchering business. The only books kept were a debtor's ledger and day-book, which did not contain any trading or profit and loss account. He estimated that the profits during the past three years had averaged £2 5s. per week, and that the weekly trade and domestic expenses had been £1 15s. He knew he was insolvent for the last three years, during which time all the present debts had been contracted.

All the debts, with one exception, were for cattle, pigs, sheep, and meat purchased since October, 1913. A pianoforte, sewing machine, grandfather's clock and some other goods belonged to his wife. When he filed his petition on May 12th he was in a better position than he was three years ago, when he gave up cattle dealing. In addition to the £141 in the official statement, he also owed £175 to the bank, but the value of the insurance policies in the bank was £44 5s. His position was due entirely to losses at cattle dealing, and if he had stuck to the butchering business he would still have been solvent. His wife bought a piano with some money left to her by a distant relative.

The examination was closed.

A BRAMHAM MAN'S VISIT TO TADCASTER.

HIS UNCONVINCING STORY TO THE POLICE.

At Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday—before Mr E. C. Brooksbank (Chairman) and other magistrates—Thomas Moran (23), labourer, of Bramham, was charged with stealing an acetylene bicycle lamp, value 10s. 6d., the property of Harry Mirskill, of Newton Kyme.

Harry Mirskill, labourer, of Newton Kyme, said that on Tuesday night, June 2nd, he went to Tadcaster about 7-45, and he had his bicycle, which had an acetylene lamp on it, with him. He took his bicycle and placed it in a room at the picture house. Then he went out and stood it the corner of the Market Place, and prisoner came and said "Hullo, Harry. Are you going to the pictures?" He replied "I don't know. I am just studying." When he went back he noticed that in the store room were his own bicycle, prisoner's machine, and another. He saw that there was no lamp on prisoner's bicycle. He thereafter went to the picture house, and about nine o'clock he went out and had a look at his bicycle, and he was all right. When, however, he wanted to go home about 9-45 he discovered that his lamp had disappeared, and prisoner's bicycle was also gone. On Thursday he reported his loss to P.C. Harrison, at Newton Kyme, and on Friday he saw prisoner at Bramham, and he informed him that someone had put his (witness's) lamp on his machine, and he had taken it to the police for safety.

In reply to the Chairman, witness said that Moran left the picture house before he did.

James Jolleman, carter, of Bramham, said that he was cycling home from Tadcaster between 9.30 and 10 on the night of the 2nd, and he came across prisoner lighting a lamp on the Grammar School. He went on, but prisoner overtook him. He (prisoner) told him he was not used to that kind of lamp, and he voluntered the news that he won it at Barwick Feast for running.

Prisoner: Never.

Supt. Slack: Did he say anything about selling it?

Witness: Yes, he said that he would sell it to anyone for 5s., and it was worth 15s.

P.C. Harrison said that prisoner came to his house on Monday with the lamp, and said some one had put it on his bicycle at Tadcaster picture house on Tuesday night. He told him he would see about it. Subsequently he was arrested him on warrant, and, in reply to the charge, he said "All I can say is that the lamp was placed on my bicycle and that my bicycle had been taken out and punctured."

Prisoner said that was the truth.

Moran, however, charged his mind immediately afterwards, for on being formally charged by the Clerk, he pleaded guilty.

The Chairman asked if anything was known about prisoner.

Supt. Slack said he was a lad left-and he read several convictions against him for various offences.

Moran was sent to prison for three months.

A HAMBLETON MAN'S ACCIDENT AT SWILLINGTON

CASE AT THE SKYRACK COURT.

The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday spent a considerable time in hearing a case in which George William Hill, of Hambleton, was summoned for riding a motor-cycle and side-car whilst under the influence of drink.

Mr Claud Kemp appeared for the defendant.

P.C. Eadon stated that about 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 23rd, he was on duty on the Selby Road, Swillington, when he saw the defendant riding a motor-cycle, to which a side-car was attached. He noticed that defendant went along the road in a zig-zag fashion. He had watched him for about half-a-mile and saw him go on the footpath. Witness followed him, and in a little further down the road defendant stopped, and the officer asked him for his licence. Defendant replied that he was not drunk. Witness told him he would be reported. Defendant, added the officer, had one hand bleeding, and his nose was stained. The side-car, which was damaged, was placed in the yard of an inn.

Samuel Brook Chawner, a postman at Halton, said he was on the Selby Road at Swillington Common on the night in question, when he noticed a motor-cycle and side-car attached, and driven by the defendant, travelling down the road. When it had passed him the side-car rounded a hawker's cart. In his opinion defendant did not seem to have full control of the machine. Having passed the cart he skidded into a telegraph pole. Witness went to his assistance and got the machine back into the roadway, but he tried to persuade defendant not to ride it, as it was badly damaged. However, he got the engine started and went off. Further down the road the cycle stopped.

John Murray, a navvier, said he thought defendant was very drunk. Just after passing the cart at Swillington Common, the machine dashed into a telegraph pole. When he (defendant) started off again, he could not keep his feet on the pedals.

The defendant, who is employed by Mr. I. Anson, of Hambleton, said he left Hambleton on the day in question about 6-30 p.m. His first stop was at the Gaping Goose Inn at Garforth. From there he rode to the weigh house at Halton to meet some one. As he was travelling back he let go his handlebars to light a cigarette, when the car turned over on top of him. He was assisted by the police. Setting off again he went to the Old George, at Garforth, and washed his hands, which were bleeding, and also had a glass of beer. He then got a man to drive him home. All that day he did not taste more than two glasses of beer. He admitted he was stopped by the police at Garforth, who asked for his licence.

Harry Yarborough, of Hambleton, said he was now walking at the top of Austhorpe Lane, when he saw the defendant riding a motor cycle and side-car. He rode along in the usual manner. The car overturned because of the fact that defendant let go the handlebars.

William Reed, cab proprietor, of Garforth, said he drove the defendant home, and he seemed all right.

After retiring, the magistrates decided to convict and fined the defendant 10s. and costs.

Colonel Jerome, C.B., the new member for the township of Bilton, took his seat on the Wetherby Board of Guardians and Rural Council at last meeting.

THE LATE CANON GELDART, KIRK DEIGHTON

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

At All Saints' Church, Kirk Deighton, on Saturday, a memorial service was held for the late Canon James William Geldart, LL.M. (41 years assistant curate and 18 years rector of Kirk Deighton), who died on board the s.s. Guildford Castle, bound for South Africa, and was buried at sea on May 12th. At 7 a.m. in the same place of worship there had been a celebration of Holy Communion. The other retired clergy of the Deanery—Rev. A. O'Brien Newnham (rector of Cowthorp), the Rev. C. Holmes (Harrogate), the Rev. John Cave Reed (vicar of Bishop Monkton), the Rev. J. J. Stewart-Duffield (Ripon), the Rev. H. Hunsam (vicar of Felliskirk and Rural Dean of Thirsk), and the Rev. Archdeacon Griffith (vicar of Thorparch); while among the congregation were the Rev. A. Durant (vicar of Wetherby), the Rev. G. H. Morwood (vicar of Bardsey), and the Rev. J. E. Williamson (Lofthouse-in-Cleveland). The Rev. F. W. Powell (vicar of Kirkby Overblow) and formerly assistant curate of Kirk Deighton) was unable to be present.

The congregation also included Mr G. H. Ward Jackson and Mr Walker (churchwardens), who conducted the bishop to and from his throne; Messrs R. B. Barrell, L. Isaacs, E. Spink, G. W. Sadler, and D. Bell, sidesmen; Messrs J. P. Law, J.P., H. Crossley, J. T. Allan, J. D. Tiplady, A. Brett, J. W. Varley, and others from Wetherby; Mrs Duncombe, North Deighton Manor; Mrs Walker, Mrs Powell, Mrs Gaisford, Mrs and Miss Durrant, Mrs Newenham, Mrs Mathers, Mrs Ward Jackson, Mrs W. Atkinson, Mr and Mrs W. V. Atkinson, Mrs Burrell, Mrs and Miss Jessop, Miss Wilkinson, Mr T. Jewett, Mrs Coates, Mrs Murton, the Misses Dalby, Mr Stoughton Harris, and many others. The chief mourners were Mr H. W. Jepson (nephew), of Lewes; Miss W. Jepson (niece), London; and Mr C. H. Cobb, York (deputising for legal representative). Mrs Geldart, the widow, has not yet returned from South Africa. Her sister, Miss Bealey, was unable to attend because of her mother's illness, and her other sister, Miss Margaret Bealey, is Lady Principal at one of the Church Missionary Schools in India, and was therefore unable to be present. Mr Henry Wood-unable also to be present. Mr Henry Wood-bridge, schoolmaster at Kirk Deighton, presided at the organ, as he did at the funeral of the late Dr. Geldart (rector of Kirk Deighton, and father of the late curate). In the Psalm (cxxi.) the people were kindly lent for the occasion by Mrs Woodbridge. The Kirk Deighton Cricket Club, in which the late Canon took a great interest—and friends of him—had postponed a League match to a later hour in order to attend the service.

The Bishop of Knaresborough preached from Philippians xxi. 21—"For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." The preacher said that they were gathered together on a very sad occasion—sad to the parishioners, and sad to the friends of him whose body they had committed to the deep. It need scarcely be mentioned that no boys have gone to the university as exhibitioners for many years, and under all the circumstances of the case it does not appear to us that the charity would be rendered more useful and efficient by a strict adherence to the directions of the will being required or adopted in practice. Some suggestions of complaints were suggested to our notice respecting principally, the maintenance and clothing of the boys, and the employment of them by the master of the hospital in services of labour, we endeavoured fully to investigate the administration of the charity in that and other particulars; the result, however, does not appear of sufficient importance to require special notice in this report, though in some things we think that an improvement might be effected by the attention of the patron being directed to the state of the charity for this purpose, as he was at a distance when the inquiry took place, we have caused a copy of the examination to be transmitted to him.

Lord and Lady Harewood have been re-appointed Ruling Councillor and Dame President respectively of Knaresborough Habitation of the Primrose League.

SHERBURN GRAMMAR SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL.

COMMISSIONERS' REPORT IN 1826.

In connection with the new scheme for the administration of the Sherburn Grammar School and Hospital, founded by Robert Hungate, by his will dated May 10th, 1609, it is interesting to know what the Commissioners for Inquiry into Charities in 1826, had to say about this particular charity. After stating the terms of the will and the purposes of the charity, the report states:—

The hospital and school, which was erected at Sherburn, contain apartments for the different purposes mentioned in the will. The master of the hospital and the children are lodged in the building; but the apartments destined for the master of the school, being very small, have not been occupied by him for many years.

The charity is maintained by an annual payment issuing out of the estates at Sherburn belonging to Richard Oliver Gascoigne, Esq., late the property of Sir Thomas Gascoigne, Bart., deceased, the representative by descent of the family of Hungate; the fund annually appropriated to the master of the hospital in respect of his salary, and the clothing and maintaining of the children, being £145 13s. 4d., and that paid to the master of the school for the same purposes being £40 13s. 4d., in addition to which the Gascoigne estates defrays the charges of keeping the buildings in repair.

In consequence of the inadequacy of the revenue, the number of children maintained at the hospital has been from time to time reduced. According to the last agreement between Mr Gascoigne as the patron, and the master of the hospital, the number of children should be eight, and this number is perhaps as great as can fairly be maintained, but through neglect to fill vacancies, or from some other cause not sufficiently explained, there have for about four years past been only six.

The boys are appointed by or under the direction of Mr Gascoigne, being generally poor children who have lost both or one of their parents. They are supplied by the master of the hospital with food and clothing, and such of them as continue there to the age of 15 receive also from the master, on leaving, the sum of £2 10s. and a suit of clothes. They are also instructed by an assistant, under the superintendence of the master of the school, in reading, writing, and accounts, with other children to the number of 20, or thereabouts, who attend the school. For many years past no such has been appointed, and the wards of the master and usher have been consolidated and paid to the master, the latter providing thereout books for the charity boys; to prevent the master's stipend is received by his assistant, and both the master and his assistant are in holy orders.

Considering the amount of the revenues of the charity, and the absolution from all the children maintained by it, it need scarcely be mentioned that no boys have gone to the university as exhibitioners for many years, and under all the circumstances of the case it does not appear to us that the charity would be rendered more useful and efficient by a strict adherence to the directions of the will being required or adopted in practice. Some suggestions of complaints were suggested to our notice respecting, principally, the maintenance and clothing of the boys, and the employment of them by the master of the hospital in services of labour, we endeavoured fully to investigate the administration of the charity in that and other particulars; the result, however, does not appear of sufficient importance to require special notice in this report, though in some things we think that an improvement might be effected by the attention of the patron being directed to the state of the charity for this purpose, as he was at a distance when the inquiry took place, we have caused a copy of the examination to be transmitted to him.

BARWICK AND SCHOLES AFFAIRS

CROSSGATES AND THE CHARITIES.

SCHOLES TOWN-PLANNING—GAS AND TELEPHONE FOR BARWICK.

The monthly meeting of Barwick-in-Elmet Council was held on Thursday at Scholes—Mr J. M. Rayner (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were Messrs R. Wright, A. Booth, J. Birth, A. Robshaw, and F. Lamb (Barwick), Messrs Needham, J. Pemberton, and W. Wetherall (Scholes), with the Clerk (Mr H. R. Clarke).

A letter was received from the postal authorities stating their intention of opening a telephone call office at Barwick, provided a guarantee of £12 7s. 6d. was given for five years—The Clerk said that the first guarantee they asked was seventeen guineas, and it was obtained, and he had gone round and got guarantees for the remainder.—The Chairman asked if it was advisable the Parish Council should sign the agreement and be made responsible for the guarantors, some of whom might leave the district.—Mr Pemberton inquired the reason for the increase in the guarantee.—The Chairman said he understood that the expense attached to the scheme was greater than was anticipated.—The Clerk read the agreement sent by the postal authorities, and Mr Birch proposed that the Council sign it.—Mr Wright seconded, and this was adopted.

A letter was received from the Garforth Gas Co. stating that it was their intention to carry they had done nothing yet. The Vicar of Aberford charged for gas was the same as in Aberford, viz., 2s. per 1,000 cubic feet (no fee 1d.) for slot meters, 3 lights, and small stove and the necessary piping supplied free. For ordinary meters, for which 6d. per quarter was to be charged, the terms were 2s. per 1,000 cubic feet, and the consumers to find their own piping and fittings.—Mr Booth said that he understood the terms offered by the Aberford Co. at the last meeting as to piping were similar in both cases, and this was the opinion of the members generally.—Mr Birch proposed that the Clerk write the Gas Co. asking them to discuss the matter on these statements.—Mr Wright seconded, and this was adopted.

The county nursing scheme was considered, and the Chairman said that the matter was before the Garforth Education Committee, but they had done nothing yet. The Vicar of Aberford said that they were trying to get a district nurse for Aberford, and he (the Chairman) said that the Barwick people might feel inclined to join with them. He asked what was being done by Tadcaster District Council.—Mr Wright said he had also from the master, on leaving, the sum of £2 10s. and a suit of clothes. They are also instructed by an assistant, under the superintendence of the master of the school, in reading, writing, and accounts, with other children to the number of 20, or thereabouts, who attend the school. For many years past no such has been appointed, and the wards of the master and usher have been consolidated and paid to the master, the latter providing thereout books for the charity boys; to prevent the master's stipend is received by his assistant, and both the master and his assistant are in holy orders.

Store lambs 42s. to 50s., small pigs 16s. 6d. to 28s. 6d. Mr Hy Revis sold several heifers and bull calves, which made from £18 to £24; 15s.; Messrs Kendall, Jackson, and Sons had bullocks from £23 15s. to £25 15s.; Mr C. Wither, heifers and bullocks at £13 15s. to £17 15s.; and Mr Tom Field a fat cow at £20 12s. 6d. Mr Walter Potter sold some prime shearlings at 53s. and a ewe at 62s.; Mr T. I. Leake's made to 54s. 6d.; Mr Hy. Revis had several pens of shearlings making from 55s. 6d. to 59s. each; Messrs T. Whiter and Sons sold a number of good shearlings from 50s. 6d. to 59s. each; Mr Kenneth Wilson had some small weight shearlings making to 48s. 6d. each. Fat ewes from 50s. to 56s.; lambs from Mr T. I. Leake's made up to 42s. 6d.; from Messrs J. and H. Thorpe to 40s. each; and from Mr B. G. Foster to 36s. 6d. Pork pigs made from 9os. to 72s. each.

TADCASTER, Monday.—Messrs Thomlinson and Son had forward a capital show of prime fat stock, and the attendance of butchers and dealers was quite up to the average. Trade ruled same as last week, with a firm demand for beef, which made from 8d. 6d. to 9d. 3d. per stone; cows and heavy sheep a good trade from 8s. to 8s. 6d. Sheep met a ready sale, making 5d. to 6d. per lb. Lambs about late rates, from 10d. to 1s. Pork pigs made from 7s. 6d. to 7s. 9d. Store pigs, good to sell. Beasts made to £20 7s. 6d. Fat bullocks made: Messrs Robshaw and Son, 13 sheep and lambs, 87 pigs. Seven grand bullocks from Mr Bramley made to £29 2s. 6d.; Mr Jas. Bramley, Huddersfield, had three grand bullocks, Mr Bramley's own, had three grand bullocks, Mr Blacker, Healaugh, had two bullocks, making £23 10s.; two beasts from Mr G. Winter, Pallathorpe, made £23 and £20 7s. 6d.; a grand finished heifer from Mr T. Wilsons made £25 15s.; three fine bullocks from Mrs Harrison, Church Fenton, made £19 7s. 6d. and £16 12s. 6d.; Mr L. Sampson, Newton Kyme, had two ripe bullocks make £20 5s. 6d.; J. W. Watson, Wighill Manor, £23 17s. 6d.; Mr W. Wetherall, Harrington, £17 17s. 6d.; four black polled bullocks from Mr J. Snarr, Hazlewood, made £19 15s., £18 5s., £18 5s., and £17 17s. 6d.; two Leeds would probably at some time try to annex more area, and as they did not want to lose any more, they should reduce the risk by putting their place in order.—Mr Wright said he thought the suggestion was a good one. A certain fear existed as to further encroachments, and they should ask the District Council to form a town-plan scheme.—Mr Birch proposed that it would be a safeguard.—The Chairman then proposed that they suggest to the District Council the advisability of carrying out a town-planning scheme for Scholes.—Mr Birch seconded, and this was adopted.

The Council had under consideration the reply they should send to the Charity Commissioners dealing with a new scheme for the administration of the Crossgates and other parish lands. They suggested, in their reply, that as Crossgates in 1719, when the charity originated, was a small portion of the parish, and as its growth was due to people coming from Leeds in recent years, and that as their part of the charity had become very small, the new scheme should be on a different basis. They suggested that 11 beds should be paid a given amount (payable over a certain number of years) in settlement of all claims.—The Clerk said he had had a letter from the Town Clerk of Leeds about a conference on town-plan schemes.—Mr Birch thought that it would be a safeguard.—The Chairman then proposed that they suggest to the District Council the advisability of carrying out a town-planning scheme for Scholes.—Mr Birch seconded, and this was adopted.

ROUNDHAY

MARRIAGE.—At St. John's Church, Roundhay, on Thursday, Dr. T. J. Hudson, of Meschrough town, Roundhay, and Leeds, was married to Annie, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs Horner Dove, of Elmete Lane, Roundhay. The bride, who wore a beautiful Saxe blue with bridesmaids, trimmed with old Irish lace, was given away by her father, and the best man was Dr. A. E. Little, of Roundhay Road. Misses M. and M. Power, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. The ceremony was conducted by the Vicar of Roundhay. A reception was subsequently held at Elmete Avenue, after which Dr. and Mrs Hudson left for London and the Isle of Wight.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Mr E. H. Foster, Col. A. M. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr C. Holliday, Mr J. R. Cross, Mr J. Parker, and Mr H. Evans.

A CLAIM.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday the Lofthouse Park Syndicate were summoned by the Rothwell Gas Light Company for the payment of £5 14s. 10d., a claim for gas supplied. Mr W. S. Denton stated the claim for the Gas Co., and as there was no appearance for the defendants, an order for payment was made.

INFIRMARY DEMONSTRATION.—The postponed annual general meeting of the Rothwell Infirmary Demonstration Committee was held at the Council Offices on Saturday night, and there was a meagre attendance. Mr W. H. Wilson presided. The election of officers for the ensuing year was the first business, and it was decided to wait on Mr Bolton, of Springhead, to see if he will accept the position of president in the place of Mr Warrington, who has left the district. Messrs G. A. Scholby and G. H. Palmer were re-elected hon. secretaries, and Mr J. Fox was re-appointed hon. treasurer. Messrs A. Marshall, W. Lee, and W. Lunn were elected trustees, and the auditors of the past year (Messrs A. Marshall and W. H. Wilson) were re-elected. Those present at the meeting were elected on the committee with power to add to their number. It was decided that a house-to-house collection be made as in previous years. A deputation was appointed to wait on Mr Bolton to make arrangements for a field for the annual demonstration.

ALLERTON BYWATER

HOMING.—The members of Allerton Bywater Homing Society sent 108 birds to take part in a race from Dilton. Results:—Collinson 881, Flowers 869, A. Barrett 857, Booth Bros. 850, Townend 849, Smith and Sons 816, Bisconthe 810, Hutchinson 808, Simpson 800, Atkinson 686.

CARLTON

ANNIVERSARY.—The children of the Wesleyan Sunday School celebrated their anniversary on Sunday, when special services were held. Sermons were preached both in the morning and evening by Mr Hutchinson, of Headingley College, who also gave an address at the children's service in the afternoon. At all the services special festival hymns were sung, under the conductorship of Mr T. Hampson.

CROSSGATES

The members of the Crossgates Literary Society are to have an excursion to the Bronte country

A HOLE IN ONE.—Playing over the Crossgates links against his captain (Mr J. Simpson), Mr F. Findlay holed out No. 7 green (120 yards) in one. This is the first occasion this has been accomplished.

MEDICAL CHARITIES.—On Monday evening the annual meeting of Crossgates, Seacroft, and Halton Medical Charities Society will be held in the Conservative Room at Crossgates, when all ladies and gentlemen interested in this good work are invited to attend. It is hoped that the residents will make a good response, because the district could do a great deal more than is done for the medical charities. See advt.

FAIRBURN

Misses T. E. Makin and Son, Fairburn, won first prize in the jumping competition over the course open to the International Horse Show in Sowerby on Wednesday.

GARFORTH

ANNIVERSARY.—On Sunday the anniversary services will be held at Garforth Wesleyan Church, and the Rev. G. H. Findlay, of Castleford, will be the special preacher. See advt.

DISORDER.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Samuel Smart, a miner, of Garforth, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Monday night. P.C. Hogg proved the case, and Smart was fined 5s. and costs.

FOOTBALL.—Garforth White Rose Club has joined the Leeds Senior Football League. Other clubs in the League are the Rothwell organizations, Allerton, Preston Colliery, Mirfield United, Shadwell, and Thornhill Lees. It is expected the combination will be a strong one next season.

DRINK.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Doran, labourer, of Garforth, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Friday, May 29th. P.C. Bayes spoke to finding defendant, who was very drunk, committing a nuisance on the Station Road, where several people were about. A fine of 10s. and costs was imposed.

BOWLING.—On Wednesday a league match was played between Garforth and Garforth Conservatives, and the scores were:—Garforth (Garforth Conservatives in brackets) 193 (193). Details (Garforth names first):—A. Matthews 21 (J. Dransfield 9), C. W. Slater 13 v. H. Hoyle 0, F. Walker 21 (W. Cooke 15), T. Brownhill 21 (W. Sedgwick 2), S. Slater 21 (A. Day 15), H. Freeman 18 v. J. Barker 21, G. Walker 15 v. H. Margerison 21, D. Gott 21 v. T. Wrathall 12, E. Walker 21 v. W. Dixon 6, G. Tinker 21 v. H. Brahane 20.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At the Picture House this week attractive programmes of excellent pictures have been provided, and for the weekend the management have arranged for the exhibition of several first-rate films for the entertainment of the numerous patrons of the house. For the first three nights of next week "The Rag-Pickers of Paris," which is a story of the under-world of the gay French capital, will be the outstanding film, and "Topped Wires," an exciting picture, describes the thrilling adventures of two telegraphists. "A healthy neighbourhood," the best of recent Keystone productions, will likewise be shown. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, a film by the famous Nordisk Company—"Dr. Gar-del-Hama"—will prove a powerful attraction. It deals with the most elusive and daring criminal in the annals of detective photo-drama, and with no doubt be greatly appreciated. "The Price of Thoughtlessness" is another good film promised, and other pictures will complete an interesting programme. See advt. for times and prices.

HALTON

COSTLY DELAY.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday John Anthony Austin, a farmer, of Halton, was summoned for driving a vehicle without a light at 10.10 p.m. on the 27th May. P.C. Stothard proved the case. Defendant said he had been to Whitkirk "to meet some chickens," and was delayed longer than he expected. He was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

COUPLE SEPARATED.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday George Arthur Linley, miner, of Halton, was summoned by his wife, Hannah Linley, for desertion. The complainant said she had been married about seventeen years. About three months ago defendant made her no payment. Six weeks ago he left the house and took some of the things, and pawned them, but he never returned home again. She wished for a separation order. An inspector under the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children described the man as lazy. Whenever he visited the house the woman was always out at work. Defendant said he worked at the pit on nights and was forced to rest during the day time. A separation order was granted with 8s. a week.

BOWLING.—Halton had a match at home in the Mowley Trophy Competition with Chapeltown, and the latter were defeated by 227 to 192. Details (Chapeltown names first):—T. W. Wilkinson 19 v. G. Simpson 21, T. E. Warburton 13 v. G. Cowell 21, J. F. V. Jones 16 v. F. Vince 21, J. Baldinson 6 v. H. Thomas 21, A. Warling 20 v. R. Pinder 21, R. Kingston 21 v. T. Bedford 14, E. Briggs 12 v. A. Caine 21, H. Dixon 11 v. W. Green 21, I. Lawthwaite 12 v. C. Lambert 21, E. Hall 21 v. J. W. Walker 20, C. Moss 21 v. W. Scott 17, F. Ewing 21 v. A. Kaye 8.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—Yesterday the golden wedding of Mr and Mrs W. Todd, of Grove Road, Halton, who are aged respectively 74 and 72 years, and Mr and Mrs W. Schofield, of South View, Featherstone, who are 77 and 71 respectively, was celebrated at Halton. The two couples were married at Rothwell Church on the same day, and it seems they have made it a practice of celebrating the anniversary of their wedding day together, and they have had a meeting nearly every year. Mr and Mrs Todd are well-known and highly respected in Halton, and until some time ago Mr Todd was the chapel-keeper at the Halton Wesleyan Church.

A BOY'S ORDEAL.—Harry Humble, a thirteen-year-old boy, who lives with his elder brother at Riverside Cottage, Knostrop, by Leeds, gave an excellent experience recently. He was proceeding from the office of the Waterloo Main Colliery to the Dame Pit, carrying the wages of four men and his own, when he met a man named James McCullock, of 43, Bread Street, York Road, Leeds, whom he knew. The man stopped him, and pulling a scarf from his neck tied the lad's legs together also tying his hands with some string which he took from the boy's pocket. Then he rifled the boy's pockets, and took £3 13s. and made away. The lad was lying on the ground, but after struggling for some time worked himself loose, cutting the string and scarf with a knife, which he opened with his teeth. Detective Sergeant Kettringham apprehended McCullock on Monday. When charged he admitted the theft, but said he was drunk at the time. When before the Leeds magistrates on Tuesday McCullock made no attempt to refute the evidence, and simply said he would pay the money back at a pound a week if he was given a chance. He was committed to the Sessions, and bail was refused.

KIPPAX

ACCIDENT.—While cycling down Butt Hill, Mr Leonard Wilson, who resides in Leeds Lane, Kippax, was thrown from his machine and rendered unconscious. The young man was placed in a waggonette that was standing near, and taken to Dr. Infield's surgery, and after examination he was taken on a stretcher to his home.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—In continuation of the Sunday School anniversary special sermons were preached on Sunday by the Rev. C. D. Eadon, of Headingley College. The teachers and scholars sang their special hymns, and the scholars gave recitations in the afternoon. The various services were fairly well attended, and the collections were satisfactory.

WEDDING.—A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday in the Primitive Methodist Church, the contracting parties being Miss Annie E. Jones, daughter of Mr and Mrs Alfred Jones, of Kippax, and Mr Norman Wheatley, son of Mr and Mrs William Wheatley, of Kippax. The bride, who was given away by her father, was becomingly attired in a dress of champagne satin, trimmed with guipure lace, and she carried a bouquet composed of sweet peas. There were two bridesmaids—Miss Edith Jones (sister of the bride), and Miss Emily Ellis (cousin of the bride), and the duties of best man were undertaken by Mr H. Wheatley (brother of the bridegroom). The officiating minister was the Rev. B. B. Farlow (circuit minister, Castleford). After the wedding a reception and tea were held in the Primitive Methodist Schools room, and about one hundred and fifty guests were present. The presents were as follows:—Bride's father and mother, tea service; Mr and Mrs Jas. Goodall (brother-in-law and sister), pair of sheets; Miss Edith Jones (sister), eiderdown; Miss Emily Ellis (cousin), bed cover; Miss Elsie Jones (sister), shovel; Walter Ellis (cousin), set of ornaments; bridegroom's mother, bedroom service, trinket set, and tea spoons; father, half dinner service; Mr and Mrs Fred Wheatley (brother and sister-in-law), bed quilt; Mr and Mrs H. SCOUTS.—On Saturday about 30 members of the Oulton St. John's Troop of Boy Scouts, which forms the 10th South-East Leeds Company, joined in the welcome to General R. Baden-Powell in the front of the Leeds Town Hall. In referring to the recent camp of Scouts at Oulton, from May 15th to 18th, in which the Scouts of the Leeds troops took part, a writer in the Parish Magazine states, with regard to the Oulton Troop:—Our own troop still grows apace, and we shall not stop until all the lads of Oulton are members. We heartily invite all boys to come and join us; if they do not come, we go to them. We are always on the prowl for new recruits.

BOWLING.—On Saturday at Holbeck Oulton, in the Peston Shield Competition, played Holbeck (Limited), and the latter won by 224 to 206. Details (Holbeck names first):—C. Gee 7, J. Lee 11 v. T. SEACROFT

Mr J. M. Rayner, of Whinmoor, was one of the judges at Escrick Agricultural Show on Wednesday.

STOURTON

PRIMITIVE METHODIST P.S.A.—The minister, the Rev. W. B. Spencer, gave the address at the weekly P.S.A. service at the Primitive Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon. There was a good attendance, and a profitable afternoon was spent.

A WILY DEFENDANT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday George Bradford, a polisher living in Leeds, was summoned for riding a bicycle at Stourton without a light. P.C. Wright proved the case, and said he stopped the defendant on the Postefract Road about 10.25 p.m. on May 22nd. The lamp was quite cold. Asked if he had anything to say, defendant said the officer was telling to him for about ten minutes before he felt the lamp. A fine of 1s. and costs was imposed. Frederick Wm. Bourton, another Leeds youngster, daughter of the late Rev. Frederick Fawkes, and sister o Mr F. H. Fawkes, J.P. The bridegroom was a widower, his previous marriage taking place in 1884, when he married the Hon. Evelyn Augusta Bateman, the second daughter of Baron Bateman, of Shobdon Court, Hereford. He has four children by his first marriage.

The scene of the wedding was the ancient Norman church at Leathley, a picturesque hamlet, near Otley, which has been connected with the Fawkes' family for generations.

The tenantry were given a holiday, and the girls from the village schools on the estates at Farnley, Stainburn, and Hawkesworth lined the path to the church as the bridal pair entered and emerged from the building. Afterwards they were entertained at tea.

The interior of the church had been beautifully decorated, and the service was choral, the organist being Mr F. S. Kendall, organist of the Otley Parish Church. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Boyd Carpenter, Canon of Windsor, assisted by Bishop of Ripon, assisted by the Rev. Walter Fawkes, brother of the bride.

The bride, who was given away by her father, Mr F. H. Fawkes, Squire of Farnley, wore a beautiful gown of white satin nearly covered with old Brussels lace.

The train of her skirt was composed of a beautiful old veil of Brussels pillow lace worn by Maria Sophia Fawkes at her wedding, being the gift of the Marquis de Florian after his return to France from this city, in gratitude for kindness shown to him by Walter Fawkes while in exile at the time of the French Revolution.

Miss Fawkes also wore a wreath of orange blossom, and carried a beautiful bouquet of lilies of the valley, white heather, and orange blossom. Her ornaments included a diamond pendant, the gift of the bridegroom.

There were no bridesmaids, but the bride was attended by two pages—Master Joslau Ingilby, and Master Harry Wormald, of Leathley Hall—who wore cherry-coloured greenaway suits with blue cambelle frills, and were given enamelled and motor-of-pearl waistcoat buttons.

The best man was Mr Fred Foster, brother of the bridegroom. As Mr and Mrs Foster left the church a merry peal was rung in the belfry. The chimes are over 400 years old.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Farnley Hall, where Mrs Fawkes (mother of the bride) and Mr F. H. Fawkes received the guests, who were almost entirely confined to members of the two families.

Later the bride and bridegroom left fro Paris.

Mr T. G. Mylchreest has given £30 to the Baden-Powell Scouts' Fund.

At the monthly meeting of the N.C.A.A. in Leeds on Monday the prospectus for sports at South Milford on July 11th was passed.

RATES.—On Monday at Tadcaster Petty Sessions the following poor rates were passed:—Angram, 1s. 2d. and 2s. 4d.; Wighill, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 2d.; and Healaugh, 11d. and 1s. 10d.

HOUSES.—Messrs John Smith's Co. are to build a number of houses at Tadcaster, and on Monday plans for two concrete cottages were passed. Plans for additions at High Moor Farm were also passed.

EXTENSIONS.—On Monday at Tadcaster Petty Sessions Mr Edward Walker, of the Falcon Hotel, Tadcaster, was granted an extension from 11 p.m. on the 10th inst. to one next morning for the postmen's dinner. Miss Maw, of Marston, was granted an hour's extension on the 20th for the village sports.

Rothwell Parish Church Football Club.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Rothwell Parish Church Football Club was held in the Old Band Room, Rothwell, on Saturday night. Mr Walter Wormald presided.

The income during the past season amounted to £581 13s. 8½d., and after all expenses have been paid a balance is left in the treasurer's hands of £5 7s. 8½d.

Mr Robinson reported that the senior team did fairly well, finishing sixth in the Leeds Senior League, besides getting into the Rothwell Charity Cup final and the semi-finals of the Leeds Hospital Cup, and the Leeds and District Cup Competitions. The junior team was again a failure, both from a playing and a financial aspect. For not playing full strength in their cup matches, fines of 12s. 6d. each were imposed on the club for the junior team.

The prospects for the coming season, said the report, are bright. The club has entered for the English Cup and in the draw have been very fortunate, being at home to Fryston Colliery in the first round, while if they are successful they will be at home in the second round to either Calverley or Booth Town. The Leeds Senior League looked like being a very strong league during the coming season, the following clubs having sent applications, viz., Headingley, Mirfield, Fryston Colliery, Calverley, Harrogate, and Thornhill Lees.

The election of officers resulted in Mr H. Robinson and Mr C. Batty being re-appointed to the position of hon. sec. and hon. treasurer respectively. Mr W. Taylor was appointed trainer to the team, and Mr O. Banks was re-elected as store-keeper. Mr H. Rollinson, as secretary of the club, was appointed representative on the Leeds Senior League. The following were elected on the committee:—Messrs F. Gibson, T. Asquith, G. Pickersgill, T. Naylor, J. Boyes, L. Thurwell, G. Woodhead, J. Lunn, W. Elliott, H. Smith, A. Woodhead, and W. Gibson.

Mr F. Stringer was elected captain of the first team with Mr J. Gregg as vice-captain.

The question of which cups should be competed for was next discussed.

The chairman said that in trying for so many cups they were placed in a very awkward position, and he would advise them not to enter more than would interfere with the League. So far as the Charity Cup was concerned a revision was needed, and if it was only conducted in a sportsmanlike way no one would be more pleased than he to join it, but as it was conducted on the present lines he was not in favour of doing so.

It was decided that the club enter for the West Riding Cup and the Leeds and District Cup Competitions

The question of running a second team was discussed, and it was unanimously decided not to run one.

A vote of thanks to the auditors, Messrs W. Cousins and G. Cripps, the officers for the past season, and the chairman, brought the meeting to a close.

MARRIAGE OF MR FOSTER, STOCKELD PARK.

Yesterday the marriage took place of Mr Robert John Foster, of Stockeld Park, Wetherby, and Miss Susan Fawkes, of Bilton House, Harrogate, and Farnley Hall, Otley, the younger daughter of the late Rev. Frederick Fawkes, and sister o Mr F. H. Fawkes, J.P. The bridegroom was a widower, his previous marriage taking place in 1884, when he married the Hon. Evelyn Augusta Bateman, the second daughter of Baron Bateman, of Shobdon Court, Hereford. He has four children by his first marriage.

The scene of the wedding was the ancient Norman church at Leathley, a picturesque hamlet, near Otley, which has been connected with the Fawkes' family for generations.

Later the bride and bridegroom left fro Paris.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS

RELIEVING OFFICER APPOINTED.

INCREASED SCALE OF RELIEF.

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Union Offices, Hunslet, on Wednesday afternoon—Mr T. Thomas (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Mr J. Gavins (vice-chairman), Mrs E. A. Dickenson, Father T. Cosly, Dr. E. Graves, Messrs W. Schofield, J. W. Hargreaves, G. Armitage, W. Verity, J. Butterick, J. R. Chappell, T. Bennett, J. Flanagan, J. Bannister, W. A. Appleyard, E. B. Pickersgill, H. L. Pulford, W. Lunn, W. Stead, J. W. Verity, G. W. Peace, W. Hemingway, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Mee).

The workhouse master's report showed that during the past fortnight there had been two deaths in the institution.

HOUSE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Workhouse Committee the master emphasized the necessity for the full half-dozen crib beds asked for being available for use when necessary, and pointed out that the relief shed at pavilion H is not satisfactory. It was resolved that the Guardians be recommended to purchase four additional crib bids. —The committee had again under consideration the question of additional clerical assistance in the master's office on a reference from the Board. The master was called before the committee and further questioned as to the need for the additional help asked for, when he stated that without returning to the practice of allowing inmates to receive and issue stores, and relieving him of the necessity of inspecting the institution daily it was not possible to do the clerical work during reasonable office hours. It was resolved that under the circumstances the committee adhere to their opinion that the provision of further assistance in the master's office is necessary, and that the Board be recommended to appoint a youth as master's clerk on such terms and conditions as may hereafter be determined. It was resolved that subject to the adoption by the Guardians of the foregoing recommendation, the Children's Homes Committee be asked if there is a suitable boy in the Homes for the post.

The minutes were passed.

RELIEVING OFFICER.

The Clerk read the minutes of the special committee held to consider the relieving officers' duties, together with the applications for the vacancy caused by the "departure" of Mr V. Sharp. It was reported that there had been 118 applications for the post, and of these twenty-one were not in compliance with the requirements. These latter were struck out of the list along with fifteen others. The committee also resolved to give the first consideration to the applicants within the Union, and six were selected to attend before the Board.

Mr Appleyard said he considered it a waste of time on those who had applied outside the district, while it was a waste of money on the part of the Guardians in advertising outside when they only intended considering those who resided in the district.

Mr Stead: Is Mr Appleyard moving a vote of censure on the committee he laughed.

Mr Buttrick said Mr Appleyard was casting a reflection on the action of the Board a fortnight ago. He ought to have raised his objection then, when the matter was discussed.

Upon a vote being taken the minutes of the committee were passed.

The six selected candidates for the post of relieving officer for No. 3 district were interviewed, and Mr George William Steel, Rothwell, attendance officer and Rothwell Education Committee, was appointed.

INCREASE OF RELIEF.

The report of the Permanent Relief Committee regarding the amendments of regulations, which was sent back to the committee by the Board a month ago for reconsideration, again came up. The minutes of the Parliamentary Relief Committee stated that while they could not see their way to adopt the increase of relief allowances advocated in the former report they were unanimous in recommending that the allowance of relief to children be increased to the following amounts, the present figures being shown in parenthesis:—

	If living alone.	If residing with relatives, etc.
1st child	4s. (2s. 6d.)	3s. 6d. (2s. od.)
and child	3s. (2s. od.)	2s. 6d. (1s. 6d.)
Every other child	2s. 6d. (2s. od.)	2s. od. (1s. 6d.)

The foregoing represents increases varying from 25 to 75 per cent., and an extra cost apart from any increases in numbers of £786 per annum.

The committee also decided to recommend, though the committee (it was stated) were somewhat grudging in so doing, the allowance of out-relief to adults be also increased as follows, the present figures being given in parenthesis:—

	If living alone.	If residing with relatives, etc.
Single or widowed men or women	4s. 6d. (4s.)	3s. 6d. (3s. od.)
Married couples	8s. od. (7s.)	6s. 6d. (5s. 6d.)
Other adults	4s. 6d. (4s.)	3s. 6d. (3s. od.)

These increases vary from 13⅓ to 18 per cent., and as nearly as can be ascertained represent an additional cost of £482 per annum. The committee also expressed themselves in agreement with the spirit of the former recommendation that a wider margin be allowed in the fixing of maximum incomes, to permit of recipients of relief supplementing same by earnings to a larger extent than now, particularly where the family is a small one. They considered that the circumstances and requirements would be better and more amply met by altering rule 14 of the regulations so as to read:—"Relief shall not be given to any one so as to make the total weekly income of the recipient, and his or her family more than 5s. in excess of the maximum allowances of relief hereinbefore provided for." If the recommendations were adopted they will enable the total weekly income of an adult with five children to be brought up to 24s. instead of 19s. 6d. if living alone, and 22s. 6d. instead of 18s. 6d. if living with relatives, and for the income of a married couple with five children to be brought up to 27s. 6d. instead of 22s. 6d. if living alone, and 23s. instead of 19s. if residing with relatives.

In moving the minutes, Father Cody said the Board would find that only slight changes had been made in past three months, and the committee were quite unanimous in the matter. With regard to the scale referring to children he would point out that the committee were unanimous that widows with children deserved support, and that the task of bringing up a family was a heavy one, especially in cases where there were four or five children to look after. In the past they had given the widow 3s. 6d. for herself, 2s. 6d. for the first child, 2s. for the second child, and every other child 2s. Father Cody said that when he went into the various homes he saw the necessity of giving further relief. If they estimated that to live in a decent house for which they had to pay 2s. 6d. for rent, and the cost of light per cwt., soap twopence, and a shilling per cwt. of coal, that made up the first 4s. He did not think they were overstepping the mark in giving 4s. 6d.

Mr Appleyard, who seconded, said he thought the recommendations were a step towards real progress.

A vote was taken, the recommendations being passed, with only Mr Schofield voting against.

Father Cody moved that the recommendations take effect on October 1st.

Mr R. Kendall, of Cawood, won first prize for hackney gelding or filly, two years old, at Escrick Show on Wednesday. He also secured the Hackney Horse Society's silver medal.

SHEEP-WORRYING.—Three sheep and two lambs owned by Mr H. Kent, formerly of Alwoodley, were found dead on the farm on Sunday with their throats torn. Mr Kent states that the attack was made by dogs which were seen, but Mr Kent was unable to catch them.

Mr John W. England has been appointed postmaster of Sherburn. Mr England, who was born at Aberford, was educated at Sherburn Grammar School, and was apprenticed to the grocery business at Selby. After this he was manager to the late postmaster, Mr Thomas Spear, grocer, Sherburn.

A LUMBY LADY'S END.—It has been announced that one of the victims of the Empress of Ireland disaster is Miss Jeanie Newton, sister of Mr Wm. Newton, of Lumby, South Milford. Deceased was a native of Beal, near Knottingley. She went to Canada 12 months ago on a visit to a brother, and she was returning to England on the Empress of Ireland. It is understood that the body, which was identified by a nephew named Cook, is being sent to England for burial.

ANGLING.—The timely flush should put our rivers in good order for the opening of the coarse fishing season on Tuesday next (writes Mr Bazley). All the old favourites should give passable returns. At Boroughbridge, like Tadcaster and Topcliffe, shoals of large fish have been seen from the bridge during the fine, bright weather, all waiting to be caught, and visitors who have walked the stretch between Tadcaster and Ulleskelf recently say that they have never seen so many fish on the shallows before. Dace and perch were spawning early this year, and these will be in good condition. There will not be much the matter either with chub and barbel, but roach, I am afraid, will not be up to the mark.

LEEDS RIFLES AT PARLINGTON PARK.—The 8th Battalion of the Leeds Rifles visited Parlington Park last week-end for a special instructional camp. About 200 rank and file left Carlton Hill Barracks on Saturday afternoon, and travelled by train to Garforth, reaching the park at 4.45, where the camp was pitched. Soon after 7 on Sunday morning the programme of work was explained to the men, and proceeded as follows:—Section drill and fire control followed by squadron drill. At 9.30 Divine Service was held, the Vicar of Aberford officiating. General Baldock and General Asselbergs afterwards saw the troops go through outpost duty and field discipline, and from 2.15 to 3.30 the last-named inspected the men in battalion movements in battle formation. Camp was struck at 4 o'clock, but before the men left Mr Prater, estate agent for Colonel Gascoigne, speaking on his behalf, extended a hearty invitation to both battalions to visit the park at any time. He was pleased to say that the conduct of the men had been exemplary. The troops arrived back to barracks by 7 o'clock on Sunday night, having had an exceptionally heavy day's work.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE FOR THIRSK AND MALTON DIVISION.—A largely attended meeting of the Executive Committee of the Thirsk and Malton Division Liberal Association was held in the offices of the Association, Castlegate, York, on Friday. Mr Alfred Taylor, J.P., Malton, Chairman of the Association, presided. Mr George Nicholls, ex-M.P. for North Northamptonshire, was present, and delivered an address on current political matters. Mr Nicholls was afterwards unanimously selected as prospective Liberal candidate for the division to contest the seat at the next election against Viscount Helmsley, M.P. Mr Nicholls, who is in his fiftieth year, resides at Kimberley Lodge, Local Castle, Peterborough. He was working as a farm lad at eight years of age, and afterwards worked as a navvy and in the gravel pits at his native place, Withernsea. For eight years, from 1894, he was lay pastor of the Evangelist Church, Chatteris, Cambridgeshire, and was afterwards engaged in work in Congregational churches at Silverdale and Chesterton, Stafford-shire. He won North Northamptonshire as a Liberal-Labour candidate in 1906, but at the January election of 1910 he was defeated. In the election of December, 1910, he contested the Faversham Division of Kent in the Liberal interest, but was unsuccessful. He is a member of the Peterborough Town Council.

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

BARKSTON ASH COMPETITION—MATCHES TOMORROW.

A number of interesting matches are down for decision on Saturday afternoon. Keen rivalry exists between Church Fenton and Church Fenton Sycamore, and there should be a big turnout of villagers to witness the struggle for supremacy on the Sycamore ground—South Milford and Eadwaster have had some good games in recent years, and the meeting at Eadwaster is an attractive fixture. The chances are in favour the homesiders, who are undefeated, but, forth, at home, have a stiff task set them. Micklefield will provide the opposition, and it is probable that if the home sides evince their best form they will come out on the right side, although, of course, Micklefield are not without confidence in their ability to maintain their position at the head of the division. Scarcroft will be expected to account for Halton on the village green, and Halton Wednesdays and Whitkirk, playing at home, are hopeful of improving their position at the expense of Collingham and the good. The meeting of Cross-Shadwell respectively. Oulton will likely draw a big crowd of spectators, and attractive cricket will be seen if both sides show their best form. Colliers have more than their opponents so far, but in games between such teams past performances count for little and both sides are out for the points.

About forty umpires are engaged practically every week in the Competition matches, and frequently Mr Pawson, the hon. sec., has a difficulty in filling the appointments. In consequence, he has asked me to invite men who are qualified for the position of umpires to allow their names to be placed on the list and to take appointments. In the district there are many old cricketers who would find the Saturday afternoon's outing a pleasant one, and I hope they will communicate with Mr Pawson, whose address is 35, The Drive, Halton.

SENIOR LEAGUE GAMES ON SATURDAY.

Cawood would probably have been defeated on their own ground by Church Fenton Sycamore had there been time in which to finish the match. The Fentonians, who have been under a cloud this season, gave a glimpse of their old-time skill, and trounced the Cawood bowling right merrily, sending up the creditable score of 96. R. Poulter made 20, E. Poulter 18, and Rowbotham 12 (not out). H. Dobson (4 for 27 runs) and Lupton (2 for 16) were the best of the Cawood trundlers. The homesters lost seven wickets in getting 58 runs (Ward 17 and Jackson 12), and the chances are that had the game been completed the Fenton team would have secured full points. Britton captured two of the Cawood wickets for six runs, E. Poulter had 3 for 23, and Whittingham 2 for 20.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES.

Tadcaster overcame Church Fenton, on whose ground the match was played, by 107 runs. Batting first, the Caldertons registered 150 runs for 8 wickets and declared, and H. Todd distinguished himself by scoring 50, while Hebden made 38, Baker 20, and Roper 12. Dixon was the most successful of the home bowlers, taking 3 wickets for 48, while Claughton secured 3 for 63. Church Fenton 17, and Smith 9, who came out only. were dismissed for 44, towards which Atha contributed 12 (not out) and Dixon 11. Roper got 4 of the visitors' wickets for 15, and West and Nettleton each had two for eight runs.

Oxton, now unable to bring off a "coup" at South Milford. The homesters had learnt by experience to treat their opponents with due respect, and on Saturday afternoon the game, which was an excellent one, was keenly fought, and the visitors proved themselves much the stronger side, and in both batting and bowling departments they were distinctly superior. The plucky Saxtonians went under for 74, and their dismissal for such a comparatively small score six wickets and declared, J. Cook scoring 24, was largely brought about by the splendid work and Linford 33 and Sherburn had to be content of Arthur Lindley, who had six of their wickets for 12 runs. E. Atkinson secured 2 for 16 and runs, and Chilton had 2 for 27. For Milford A. Atkinson (30 not out) and E. Atkinson (17) made 47 victory practically sure, and they won by eight wickets.

The surprise of the afternoon was undoubtedly the defeat of Scarcroft at Micklefield, and the result was really a personal triumph for A. Smith, who demonstrated that he was the best all-round player on the field. Scarcroft, who have been making big scores this season, opened promisingly, and D. Barrington (24) and Tuft (17), Hooper (42 not out) set the side a good example. Smith, however, afterwards trundled with great effect, and the innings closed for 174. Hooper's obtained 7 wickets for 54, but the farmers went to Smith with eight wickets for 27 runs—Micklefield showed that they are still a force to be reckoned with, and Scarcroft, who were strong considerably, lost the points. Again Alf. Smith figured prominently, and his consistent inflation of 28 to a total of 90 for seven wickets was a good offer, and Scarcroft were the best of the bowlers, securing five wickets for 29. Micklefield have the honour of being one of the two unbeaten clubs in the Senior League. Will they manage to maintain their record?

Without doubt Garforth got a fright at Barwick, and at one time it looked as if the homesters would defeat their opponents. Every credit is due to Barwick for the splendid fight they put up, and it should be an encouragement to them to persevere. Batting first, Barwick registered 87, and Armitage contributed 20 and W. Hartley 16, while there were no fewer than six extras. Garforth tried six bowlers, and W. Glover had two wickets for 18 runs, T. Bellamy two for 18 runs, and H. Pickersgill four for 24 runs. Garforth started well, and Prime scored 6, S. Glover 10, Bellamy 11, Wilson 12, W. Glover 11, and Mellor 12, and then the runs came loads. Cooregan and Birch failed to emulate the others, and the last man—Firth and Pickersgill—were at the wickets with several runs to get. They batted very carefully and, amid excitement, they made victory a cert, Garforth winning by a wicket. A fine performance was that of Firth, who scored 42 not out, and Hartley 24 not out.

Great Preston and Halton provided attractive cricket at the Primrose Valley ground, and although the homesters were beaten by 7 wickets their opponents gave a greatly improved batting display. Having first knock of the wicket, Preston went up 108, and amongst this Thompson's 39 was the top score. Then they had a collapse, and were all out for 123. Halton, who are one of the most promising of the younger teams, were over ten runs, M. Wrzeker being the top scorer with 26. D. White was also batting merrily when he was stumped, his performance standing at 18. J. W. Lunn and W. Bedford both scored 14, the last-named being not out. W. Pickard and R. Hyland made 12 each, while E. Thompson knocked up 13. W. Hodgkinson captured seven wickets for 24. The Roth-well innings started more too promisingly, three of the wickets falling for seven runs. H. Hemsworth brought about a change, however, sending up 23, and E. Moss, who partnered him in a fine, were 28 for the fifth wicket. But W. Bedford made the best effort of his side with 32 not out. For Outwood D. White took five wickets for 28 and M. Wheeler three for 39—Rothwell A were at home to Outwood, and this, too, went down. The visitors lost their first two men without scoring, and no great stand was made until the ninth man (). Lamb came in, and he sent up 20 not out). The total was 80. W. Nelson (Rothwell) made two brilliant catches. Of the Rothwell bowlers E. Loughy took three wickets for 16, and F. Scrimgeour four for 20. Rothwell's score was 74, and E. Gibson secured 25, and J. Lunn 20. For Outwood Whiteley captured seven wickets for 30 and Richardson two for 13.

Oulton entertained the unbeaten Carlton eleven, and a very interesting game was witnessed by a good number of spectators, the majority of whom had journeyed from Carlton. Oulton won the toss, and batted first, and fared very poorly against the bowling of Illingworth and Sykes, the former finding it difficult to play. Losing 6 wickets for 36, the homesters appeared to be in a hopeless position, but by excellent cricket on the part of Hutchinson and Walker a remarkable change came over the game. Batting with judgment, they treasured the bowling of Carlton unmercifully, and eventually the Oulton innings was declared closed at 179 for 8. Neither batsman gave a chance, and to them is due great credit for this fine exhibition they gave. Carlton failed to accomplish the big task set them, and they left their record spells. Illingworth walked out, and Butterworth scored 25 (not out), while Fozzard had to and L. Brown 17. Walker, Hutchinson, and Cope bowled well for the home-sters, Walker's 5 wickets costing 31 runs—Oulton were not so successful at Carlton, being defeated by three wickets. They made 77, of which E. Higgins contributed 25 and F. Blackburn and T. Jones 10 each. Carlton obtained 80 for seven wickets. The chief scorers were J. Ashton 17, J. Speak 16, S. Dobson 15, and W. Austin 13.

* * *

Kippax were at home to Altofts, and they gave a poor account of themselves. Hopson and Brown trundled splendidly for Altofts, only 7 Kippax were dismissed for only 28, of which A. Ballance claimed 15. Altofts defeated their opponents without losing a wicket, Brown putting on 21.

* * *

The match between Robin Hood and Stanley Church was splendidly contested, and, although the game was drawn, the chances are that Robin Hood would have won had the game been finished. Robin Hood batted first, and registered 130, and L. Armitage made 39, Fearnley 21, Bell 20, Bramham 15, P. Wormald 13, and G. Giles 10. In getting 144 runs Stanley lost nine wickets, and Heaton made 58.—Robin Hood A were defeated by Stanley A by four wickets. The match was at Stanley, and the visitors were sent back for 36 (E. Wormald 14), and Stanley replied with 37 for 6 wickets.

CHAPTER XIX.

"I don't like them silent 'uns," thought Mrs. Martin to herself.

This was when Luke had been more than an hour in her house. Her children were in bed. She was anxious to shut up her house and retire herself to rest. She was a very hard-working woman; she never wasted a minute of her time. In order to save candlelight she went to bed very early in the summer, getting up almost with the break of day, and doing a lot of fine work before breakfast.

"You will forgive me," she said, turning at last to her speechless guest.

He had long ceased to eat. He was leaning back in his chair, smoking a pipe.

"What be it?" he asked.

"Well, I've a deal to do. I am a needle-woman, and I've just got a big order from Mrs. Colthurst at Conmop Grange."

"Colthurst?" murmured Silas to himself. His eyes grew a little brighter. He turned and fixed them upon Mrs. Martin.

"They're a whole lot of fresh clothes for Miss Pamela—undergarments, we call them—for all the most beautiful material. I like to be up early, so as to get the morning light on them. It makes things kind o' tricky when you sit with the sunlight gilding your bit of a needle, and helping you to thread times and again. I does all my best work by hand, now I don't talk o' machines to me. It's hand work I like. I work a deal for folks round here, and I manages to support the little children and myself."

"Children?" said Silas. "Have you got any young ones?"

"Yes, two—a son and a daughter. Since the Almighty thought it right to take 'him' self away I have had to work. But there, it's good to have the work to do. I do all sorts, even the berrening of ducks and tea-cloths and seehlike. I do them with my machine, and I do poor people's clothes with my machine; but when it's work for Miss Pamela, it's my own fingers has to do it."

"Miss Pamela?" said Silas. "What sort be her?"

The woman laughed. "You never saw anyone like her in the whole course of your life's days, I'm sure. Like the morning—that's what I call her—beautiful, and gay, and sweet. Mr. Peter—he's a fine young gent, too—is Miss Pamela's fancy. There's talk that they two will be wedded some day. But there! I don't believe that nonsense. They're cousins, I suppose, although some folks say they isn't related at all. Anyhow, they're like brother and sister, always together; and then leave 'em as beautiful as God ever made any of His creatures."

"I'll be going to bed now," said Silas.

He rose. Mrs. Martin showed him his bedroom. He shut the door, flung himself as he was on the bed, and dropped off into a sound sleep.

When he awoke he was at first quite unconscious of where he was. Then all the events of the previous day came over him. He had something to do at last. He had a commission to execute. It was an ugly one. He uttered a groan.

"I" the young lady and the young gent is in love, I reckon. I should be main sad to see such," he said to himself. "Bet in a place like this—there! But there's no hurry. I must take me time."

He looked at his tiny bottles of round, apparently innocent, globules. The doctor had assured him that the time would come when he could use them. Immediately afterwards he was to bury what were left, and then leave the place. He was to go away as quickly as possible.

"I'll enjoy myself to-day, anyhow," thought Silas. "The air be beautiful here; it reminds me of the Veldt."

He washed, changed into some clean things which he had bought the day before, and went downstairs to eat an excellent breakfast and chat with Mrs. Martin's children.

They were quite small—a girl of five and a boy of seven. They were not usually shy, but just now they were. When he put out his hand to touch the girl she uttered a cry, rushed to her mother's side, and hid her little round, apple-blossom face in a mother's apron.

"There, Nance, there," said the mother; "don't you be such a ninny!"

"Isn't like that man," whispered Nance.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Silas. "Now I wonder."

"Don't you take no notice of them, sir," said Mrs. Martin. "Dick, here! Dick, my man, you will help Mr. ——. By the way, sir, I never have hell of your name."

"Yer never heard my name?"

A faint flush of colour came into the indefinably poor face. After a minute the man said:

"You call me Silas."

"But ain't you got no name but Silas?"

"Silas is enough for you. I'll be most likely having here to-day. I thank you for a good bed and a good supper and a good breakfast. I don't care to stay where the children don't take to me. I am fond of children."

"Oh, sir, if you want for any reason to stay on in our cottage, I am quite willing for you, and you won't be troubled with my little Nancy. See here, my little pet hearty, you just go to that gentleman and tell him that you mean to be nice to him in the future."

"No, mummy, I don't! I don't want to be nice to him," murmured little Nance.

"There's no good in forcing her," said Silas. "I'll walk out for a bit, if you don't mind, ma'am."

As he spoke he rose to his feet, and a minute or two later he was standing outside the cottage.

"Be you coming back or not, Mr. Silas?" called the widow.

"I be," he answered. "I will spend the night, and I'll axe for food as I wants it. Can you tell me the names of the big places round?"

"There are a good few big places round here," said Mrs. Martin, coming to the door, and going towards the porch of her little cottage. "There's the Hall, and there's the Rectory, but the finest place by far is Conmop Grange."

"That's a fine handful of a name," said Silas.

"It be all that, and it's the finest place far and away in the neighbourhood."

"And who lives there?"

"Oh, my word!" said Mrs. Martin. "I should have thought even a stranger would know that. The Colthursts live at Conmop Grange."

"Oh!" said Silas, his eyes sparkling. "The young lady you spoke of last night—she were a Colthurst, warn't she?"

"There's no saying but she will be one some day—there's no saying; but at present her name is Lennox—Miss Pamela Lennox. You see, it's like this. Her mother was married to a Mr. Lennox. He died, leaving that sweet little Miss Pam behind. Then the mother married Mr. Colthurst. He was the owner of Conmop Grange, and he had a son by a former wife. The son's name is Peter Colthurst. The girl's name is Pamela Lennox. We love Mr. Colthurst, and madam is a right good sort; but we'd give our very live for Mr. Peter and Miss Pam. Yes, they live at the Grange—rich enough, and if you want to see the outside of the grounds you can go along that road. It's a good two to three miles from here, but if you keep straight on you'll find it. I don't believe that they'll let you inside; they are very particular about keeping folks out that way."

"Who said I were a tramp?"

"I'm not saying anything. If you want to get on, perhaps you can. Anyhow, it's there they live, and it's a beautiful place, though there's no place on earth that's too good for our Miss Pam and our Mr. Peter."

Before Silas had time to turn away the woman with a comely face, apple-blossom cheeks, and bright brown eyes, came hurrying across the road.

"Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Martin," she exclaimed "you haven't heard the news?"

"What news are you talking about?" asked Mrs. Martin.

"Oh, it's all over the place, and we're as glad as glad can be."

"Well, but what be it?" said Mrs. Martin.

"It's this. Miss Pamela Lennox and Mr. Peter Colthurst are engaged one to the other."

"Engaged" is what they call it down in my part in Devonshire, but it's 'engaged' here. I am glad—I am truly glad. Such a beautiful young lady and such a splendid young gentleman! I am glad, and I knew you'd be glad."

"That I am; I am just fairly delighted," said Mrs. Martin. "And when did you hear of it, Mrs. Lane?"

"This morning. One of the servants came down from Conmop Grange and said that it was all settled and done days back. From what I can gather, it won't be a long engagement, either. Why should it? There's full and plenty for them both. Ah, well, no one grudges them their riches, do they, Mrs. Martin?"

"They'd be hard-hearted critters who did," was Mrs. Martin's response.

Silas had waited, standing very still, while this conversation went on between the two women. He now slowly crept away—it was impossible for him to walk in any other fashion. He invariably crept and cringed.

"What sort be he?" asked Mrs. Lane of her neighbour.

"Well, now, to tell you the truth, Mary Lane, I don't take to him much, nor did my Nance here. But beggars can't be choosers. He offered me a shilling a-night for his breakfast and supper and bed, and I couldn't see how I was to refuse. Shillings are scarce with me, Mrs. Lane."

"Well, if you ask me what I think," remarked Mrs. Lane, "I'd a thousand times rather never see a shilling again as long as I lived than have anything to do with that sort. He's a dou-right bad 'un. I wouldn't have him in my house not for ten shillin' a day, let alone one."

"Ah," said Mrs. Martin, "it's easy for you to talk. You've got full and plenty, but I've got a mind that my Nance don't clem, and that my boy don't clem—that makes all the difference, Mrs. Lane, you'll understand."

"I hate the look of the man," said Mrs. Lane, "and I'm real sorry for you that you have to earn your living by taking the like of him inside your doors. But there——"

"I make no doubt that this marriage 'ull help us all round. Miss Pam, if she's like what she always was, won't allow a stitch she puts on to be made except in Lush. That's her way, and a sweet way it be."

"You don't mean to tell I," remarked Mrs. Lane, "that you'll have her grand gowns made here at Lush?"

"Well, perhaps not, but all her underwear—and that'll come to a good penny. I've got a fine bit to be working at for her now, and I'd best not idle a minute," said Mrs. Martin.

She stepped briskly into the cottage, and began to put away the remains of breakfast. Jackie, her eldest child, went off to school, and Nance, who was still too young for school, sat gravely down on a creepy stool and watched her mother as she moved swiftly about her little kitchen. Soon all was in apple-pie order. Then Mrs. Martin, having looked at her stores and found she had enough meal to bake and make a nice supper, and also something over to give a fairly good meal to Jackie and Dick, settled down for a busy day at her needlework.

The needlework was very, very fine, and most exquisitely made. Mrs. Martin, as she sat at her work, was not the poor woman's eyes ached. They ached and ached, and presently her shoulders grew tired, and she was obliged to put on glasses. Then, as the hours sped by, even seeing through the glasses was poor and uncertain work. But she kept on saying to herself:

"I am glad that my Miss Pamela and Mr. Peter are going to be happy at last. I don't mind what I do for 'em, and no one but me shall make my Miss Pamela's underwear for her wedding."

Meanwhile, Silas, extremely busy in his own affairs, was also full of thoughts, and his conscience, which had lain dormant for so long, pricking him in a queer, uncomfortable manner, approached the gates of Conmop Grange.

There was a girl standing just inside the gates, a very tall and slender girl, dressed from head to foot in the purest, simplest white. She was swinging on the gate, and when Silas came in sight she left off swinging and, with a sensation of longing, to look into the girl's face.

A woman came out of the lodge and looked at him suspiciously. "What do you want, my man?" she said. "You don't come along. The place is only open to the public once a week, and this ain't the right day."

The girl looked at Silas. She was standing by a tall rose tree, and was in the act of picking a great spray of roses. Her dark, dreamy eyes fixed themselves on the poor faded eyes of this waif and stray of humanity.

"What did you say, Mrs. Masterman?" she exclaimed.

"Nothing, Miss Pamela—nothing except that you don't let tramps into the place except on Fridays from four to six."

"Do you want to see our place, poor man?" said Pamela. She went up to the gates as she spoke.

"Yes," he replied. He would have given anything—even his life—for one look, indeed, to see all the looked into her face, and it seemed to him that he'd all of a sudden, and for the first time in his base and terrible life, he had seen something absolutely good. But he could not utter one word except a guttural "Yes."

"Then, of course, you shall," answered Pamela. "Open the gates, will you, Mrs. Masterman?"

The woman obeyed, and the tramp passed through. It cannot be said that Pamela liked his appearance, but it was in her nature to be kind to everyone, whether man, woman, or child.

"Isn't it quite lovely to-day?" she said. "The air is so glorious. You must be enjoying yourself very much in the country. Do you know the country well?"

"Naw!"

"Where do you live most times?"

"Nowhere."

"You must live somewhere. Do you live in London?"

"Yus, sometimes London, sometimes—I can't talk."

"Poor creature!" thought Pamela. "I am sorry for you. You'd like me to show you a little bit of this place?" she said.

"Miss Pam!" said Mrs. Masterman.

The girl glanced at the lodgekeeper. The lodgekeeper looked at the man and shook her head. Pamela tossed hers.

"Come," she said. "I will show you just a very little way. Perhaps you'd like one or two flowers—some roses. They do smell so sweet to me, and I have lived with them all my days. They look quite lovely. They remind me of all sorts of good things. But, then, I am a very, very happy girl, and I am so afraid, poor man, that you are not happy."

"I'm? Naw!" said the man. "I was near torn in him by a man-eating lion."

"Oh, how truly dreadful! Were you, indeedy?"

"Yus." The man kept his eyes down as he spoke. He wanted to look at Pamela, but he did not dare.

"You may walk about here for a little bit," she said—"not for very long, for this isn't the day when my father and mother allow the grounds to be thrown open to visitors; but if you happen to be in the neighbourhood on Friday, you can come with the others. I give you leave to stay now for—let me see—half an hour. It's my permit; do you understand?"

"Yus; I thank yer, missie."

"If you walk along that path you will find green grass and little flowers growing in the midst. You may pick some of the flowers, but only a few—and roses for you. Perhaps you have little children of your own?"

"Naw, naw—not I."

"Perhaps you'd like to smell these flowers?"

"Yus."

"Well, keep them, and pick those you find in the grass. I trust you not to pick the others; the gardeners would be angry. Now, I must go, Peter's Peter! Here I am. Coming along, dear, come along!"

The girl suddenly turned her dimpled hand to her coral lips, and made a long, clear whistle. A youth came bounding over the green sward.

"What are you doing here, Pamela? And who is that person?"

"He is a fellow-traveller on the road of life, Pete, and he looked so tired and dusty that I let him in for a bit. I said he could walk about this path here, and I think he is glad. Aren't you glad, poor man?"

"You—and no."

"You mustn't stay longer than half an hour," said Pamela. "I will tell Mrs. Masterman to let you out at the end of that time. Now, good-bye."

She actually held out her hand—her snow-white, her lily-like hand. The man grasped it. Before Peter could prevent him he bent down and kissed it. A tear fell on the girl's hand.

"You have no right to do that," said Peter, in a strangled voice.

Silas had fallen at his feet. Pamela had softened all that was soft in his nature. For the sake of Pamela he meant to give up that pound a week, with all expenses paid, before the deed was done. For the sake of Pamela he meant to give up two pounds a week for all the remainder of his days. But Peter—Peter was different. Into the man's ugly eyes there flashed a look—a look of unscrupulous hatred. He turned on his heel and marched away.

"Pamela, my little angel," said her lover, "you must not talk to those sort of people."

"But, Peter dear, they are just the sort of people I want to help. They are unhappy, and I, if I talk to them, can make them a little happier. What's the use of having all—everything as I am, Peter, if I can't help others?"

"You mustn't talk to that horrible man. And oh, my darling, that he should have kissed your hand! Let's go down to the stream and wash it. You don't know what disease you may contract."

"Peter! I won't—I can't. See, he is watching us; he is standing by the tree there. If he saw me wash my hand, it would hurt him."

"And who cares whether he is hurt or not?" said Peter.

"Pete, I care. Why should we be so very happy and be unhappy? I won't do it, Pete."

"If she washes 'er 'and, she's doomed," thought the man who stood still and watched. But Peter walked down towards the lake. The man still stood by the shelter of the tree. The girl slipped her hand inside her lover's arm.

"She ain't washed 'er 'and," thought Silas, "so—good for her. But him—it's him I must tackle."

ART SCHOOLS.—The building of a new Art School, to take the place of the old Subscription School, which is quite inadequate for present needs, is under consideration at Selby. Since the gift to the town of the Museum Buildings under the will of the late Sir Jonathan Hutchinson, a plan has been suggested for converting old stables and coach-houses to provide accommodation suitable for an Art School, as well as a Town Hall and offices on the site. An alternative scheme suggested is to build a Town Hall and an Art School on a part of the property in Gowthorpe Street, purchased by the Urban Council for the purpose of carrying a road through from Gowthorpe to Baxley Road.

THE LATE MR G. M. BRIGGS.—The death occurred at Osgodby Hall, near Selby, on Friday morning, after a lingering illness, of Mr George M. Briggs, who only about a year ago succeeded to the East Riding estates of Osgodby on the death of his father, Mr. Rilts Briggs. Mr Geo. Briggs has been in ill-health for many years, but had shown signs of improvement, and was able a short time ago to preside over a large gathering of tenants and friends. He was unmarried.

THE OLD MAN'S MISTAKE

SHORT STORY.

"It is a rather amusing story," said Gilder. "An old fellow, whom we'll call Smith, had a presentation watch, and it went wrong. He left it at a jeweller's to be repaired, and a few days after he called for it, paid, and went away. He had not gone far, however, when a man—apparently one of the jeweller's assistants—came running after him, and said they had not had time to regulate the watch. It would be ready on the morrow. Old Smith handed over the watch."

"And who was the assistant?" asked Lessing.

"He was a well-known "crook" who'd overheard Smith's parting words to the manager at the door. Clever trick, wasn't it."

"Three weeks later Lessing happened to be calling at Mr James Harble's house. At least, he asked the maid if Miss Harble were in. This was a young lady in whom he took a deep, and reciprocated interest.

"No, sir; but Mr Harble would like to see you."

He stepped into the library. Miss Dorothy's father, a retired banker of choleric temperament, regarded him fixedly from the further side of the table, and did not seem to see his outstretched hand.

His bald out a copy of "Weekly Humour."

"May I ask," he demanded, "what's the meaning of this?"

Philip Lessing, following his forefinger, stared wonderingly. But before he could speak Mr Harble continued chidingly:

"I—I consider it an ill-mannered and—impertinent proceeding! Isn't it enough that I should lose my watch, sir, without being held up as a laughing-stock to my own Dora, Dick, or Harry who buys this paper? I can't think how you heard of it. I suppose it was from Britt. I'll give him another piece of my mind, by Jove! He's not fit as a manager, if he blabs his customers' affairs——"

"One moment, sir, please. Let me tell you—"

"I don't want any explanation from you, Mr Lessing."

"But, sir, you've just asked——"

"I wonder you can call at the house here, after using my misfortune to cause a laugh against me, and money!"

"But—I told no-one the story re-read to you, sir; and I haven't mentioned your name."

"Hm! Smith? Anyone can say—though that does not alter the case—Tadgaster Hill estate fishmarket"—presentation watch from employees—Scroll and inscription on the back!' It's obvious! All our friends and acquaintances will recognise that. And not only will the bank staff consider me careless of their gift, but everybody'll come round here—and chaff me till they're tired!"

"But, Mr Harble, I've never heard even that you had such a watch. The story was told me by a friend. If I'd known, I shouldn't have dreamed for an instant——"

"That will do, sir. Good heavens! I shall never hear the last of this."

His pride as a cute business man was obviously severely wounded. Philip Lessing, who would have gone to any lengths to avoid offending him, for his daughter's sake, stood breathing, the picture of dismay.

"It's rather hard on me, sir, I——"

"That is all, Mr Lessing." With a short the irate banker snatched up "Weekly Humour" and, tearing it in pieces, threw them into the fire-place. "Good afternoon!"

As he walked home, Lessing felt some resentment against George Gilder. He was the cause of the whole affair.

But a day or two later they met; and Lessing upbraided him vigorously.

"But, my dear fellow——"

"It's my belief," interrupted Lessing warmly, as a spark of anger flashed across his face, "that it's all your fault, and, if I talk to them, can make them a little happier. What's the use of having all—everything as I am, Peter, if I can't help others?"

"You mustn't talk to that horrible man. And oh, my darling, that he should have kissed your hand! Let's go down to the stream and wash it. You don't know what disease you may contract."

"Peter! I won't—I can't. See, he is watching us; he is standing by the tree there. If he saw me wash my hand, it would hurt him."

"Pete, I care. Why should we be so very happy and be unhappy? I won't do it, Pete."

"Go by the front door, please. It's safer—more usual." And, chuckling under his breath, Mr Harble disappeared into the library.

Keep This First-Aid Always Handy.

The wound or sore on which Zam-Buk is smeared is soothed, protected from germ attack and festering, and placed under the direct influence of a powerful healer. Zam-Buk is the best first-aid ever produced. It has unique soothing, purifying and antiseptic qualities never found in any common ointment.

When Zam-Buk is applied to the broken skin, all pain and irritation are soothed away, the wound or sore is purified and healed with new skin. Every housewife and breadwinner should keep Zam-Buk handy.

Zam-Buk is sold from door to door. Beware of worthless imitations.

BLEEDING AND HOW TO STOP IT.

It is well to bear in mind that cuts about the head and face, especially the nose, bleed profusely. Many a mother has had a terrible fright by a child running in with its clothes, hands, and face all smeared with blood. This is astonishing, but what is still more astonishing to make of a spoonful or two of blood. Try to keep cool and collected. You will find, most probably, that you have washed with cold water, that the amount of injury is a mere trifle.

If it is difficult to stop the bleeding, a most invaluable remedy, and one you will find in almost every cottage, is the common cobweb, or pipe-clay. Put a thick covering of either of these on the wound, then a bit of dry lint, and press it closely for a few minutes; let what sticks to the wound remain there, and cover with a bit of plaster.

NICE DISHES.

RABBIT FRICASSEE.—Boil a skinned rabbit, and when tender remove the flesh from the bones. Place the flesh—minced—in a pan with one pint of stock, one or two onions, a breakfastcupful of hot milk which has been stirred by degrees into a spoonful or two of flour. Stir occasionally, and cook for an hour. Remains of veal cloop, minced, may be added to the rabbit with advantage.

PARTRIDGES WITH MUSHROOMS.—Dissolve, over a gentle fire, one and a-half ounces of butter; when hot, put in the partridges of a pint of button mushrooms, with a slight sprinkling of salt and pepper. Simmer for about a quarter to ten minute, and turn them, with the butter, over to a plate. When they are quite cold put them into the bodies of the birds, sew them up, truss them, and roast them from thirty to forty minutes. Serve them with brown mushroom sauce, or with gravy and bread sauce only, according to taste.

PARTRIDGES WITH SNIPPLINGS.—Take six apples, three-quarters of a pound of suet crust, sugar to taste. Pare the apples, and put them, with sugar without dividing them, roll each apple in a piece of crust, previously sweetening them with sugar and water. Take care to join the crust nicely. When formed into round balls put them on a tin and bake in a brisk oven for half an hour or longer. Arrange them on a dish and sift over them some pounded white sugar.

APPLE DUMPLINGS.—Six large baking apples, three tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, two ounces of sweet almonds, red currant jelly, the juice of half a lemon, two cloves. Peel, core, and slit the apples, stew them until they are nuts will the sugar, lemon rind, cloves, and a very little water. Then take out the rind and cloves, and rub the apples through a sieve. Blanch the almonds and cut them lengthways into thin shreds. Arrange the apple pulp in a pretty dish to look as much the shape of a hedge-hog as possible. Stamp out three round pieces of pastry, arrange these down the middle, then stir in a spoonful of red currant jelly about the size of a two-shilling piece, arrange these down the middle, then stir the shreds of almonds all over the apples.

Barwick has grown very little. The population in 1801 was 933.

Three persons guessed the correct weight (just 5lb.) of the bullock in the block test at Wetherby show. They were Messrs H. Taylor, Micklethwaite; A. Strothard, Wetherby, and C. Beanan, Tarnbrough. The sheep weighed were Messrs. H. Cooper, Wetherby, and F. W. Tindall, Boston Spa, divide first and second prizes, and A. E. Wardman, Collingham, and W. F. Coulson, Harrogate, divide third.

The Vicar of Manston has given some of his flock the straight tip in his magazine. He writes:—Ills had to believe, but it is true, that there are not a few of God's people of (he names) who worship in our beautiful church and are content to do so without having given anything for its building. Their religious privileges are held on the charity of others. In secular affairs they would be classed as "paupers." It is an enviable position, and oddly enough they contribute into church without a thought appearance of the necessity of it.

MARRIAGE OF MISS M. THOMLIN SON, OF EASEDIKE

CEREMONY AT WIGHILL CHURCH.

On Wednesday at All Saints' Church, Wighill, the marriage took place of Miss Mary Thomlinson, second daughter of Mr. Matthew Thomlinson, of Easedike, Tadcaster, and Mr Richard Charles Lyman, eldest son of Mr R. J. Lyman, of Tadcaster. The bride's father, who is well-known and highly respected throughout the whole of the county, is head of the firm of Messrs M. Thomlinson and Son, auctioneers, Easedike and Oxton, Tadcaster. Members of the Thomlinson family have resided in Wighill for the past four centuries, and the name is a household word along the countryside for miles around. It was only natural, therefore, that the interesting ceremony should attract a large gathering of friends, and the picturesque Norman church was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the invited guests, and those members of the public who assembled to witness the marriage. The interior of the church was beautifully decorated.

The service was fully choral, and Mr John Thomlinson, of York, brother of the bride, presided at the organ, and played "Prelude IV." (Bach) and "Lento Solennile," and the Bridal March from "Lohengrin" (Wagner) as the guests assembled. During the service the hymns "Lead us, Heavenly Father, lead us," and "O Perfect Love," and the "Deus Miserentur" were rendered. "O Perfect Love" was sung to a tune composed by the Vicar of Wighill (the Rev. C. D. Atkinson), who officiated at the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of rich ivory satin grenadine, which was cut with a small pointed train opening at the front, over an underdress flounced with Malines lace. The bodice was prettily draped over a chemisette of the same lace, and was trimmed with pearls and diamante. She wore a tulle veil embroidered and given by Mrs C. Daly Atkinson, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, lilies of the valley, myrtle, and heather. A pearl necklet worn by the bride was the gift of the bridegroom. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Rosamond, whose dress was of pale blue brocaded crepe, trimmed with old gold brocbe, shot with pink. The skirt had a tunic pointed at the sides, and a bouquet of Lady Hillingdon roses was carried. The hat was white Tagel, lined with pale blue, and trimmed with white Cupid wings. Mr Walter Parsons carried out the duties of best man. As the newly married couple left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," merry peals issued from the belfry.

The invited guests included:—Mr and Mrs Shilleto, Mr J. Thomlinson, Mr and Mrs Ed. Thomlinson, Mrs J. Thomlinson and the Misses Thomlinson, Mr W. Thomlinson, Mr and Mrs Edwin Thomlinson, Mr and Mrs Westerby, Mr and Mrs Horner, Mrs W. Thomlinson, sen., Mrs and Miss Kitchingman, Mrs Shilleto and Master Percy, Miss Shilleto, Mr and Mrs W. Rees, Mr W. Daney, Miss Sherwood, Mr F. Mason, Miss Sykes (Milford Grange), Mr and Mrs Carr and family, Mr and the Misses Weddell, Mr and Mrs Robinson, Mrs A. and Miss Wardson, Mr and Miss Jackson (Healaugh), Mr and Mrs J. Dunnington, Mr and Mrs Houseman and family, Mr and Mrs Kirk Steel, Mr and Mrs Smart, Mr and Mrs Sampson and family, Mr and Mrs Burniston, Mr and Mrs F. Jackson (Tadcaster), Mr and Mrs C. Hogg, Mr and Mrs S. Blacker.

A reception was subsequently held in a large marquee erected in the grounds of Easedike, the home of the bride. Here Mr and Mrs Lyman were showered with congratulations from the host of friends assembled.

Mr Matthew Thomlinson welcomed the guests, and the Rev. C. Daly Atkinson proposed, in felicitous terms, the health of the newly married couple. Mr Lyman suitably replied. Later in the day Mr and Mrs Lyman left for Llandudno, where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride's travelling costume was of grey Rodier, with collar and waistcoat of exquisite blue brocade, the sleeves being finished with the same material. The following is a list of the presents:—

KIPPAX DISTRICT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

NURSING SCHEME—MEDICAL INSPECTION.

The monthly meeting of Kippax District Education Committee was held on Wednesday—Mr J. W. Blackburn presiding. The other members present were Mr J. Cripwell, Mr J. Parrant, Mr W. Mellor, Mr A. Atack, Mr J. Harding, and Mrs Lowther, with the Clerk (Mr Powell).

Mr Atack, on hearing a very good report from Mr Stannard on Kippax School, asked how often the religious syllabus was drawn up, and by whom.—The Clerk: The syllabus is a matter of agreement, and it is drawn up by the County Education Authority. There must be uniformity.

Miss Chadwick was appointed an assistant teacher in the Kippax Council School.

Mr Mitson wrote stating his intention to take, with the committee's approval, a number of children connected with the Bowers Allerton School for an observation lesson to Pontefract Castle on the 17th of June. The request was granted.

Two tenders were received for repairs and renovation to the Kippax School and the schoolmaster's house, viz., £98 5s. 0d. and £159 10s. The former was accepted.

The report on the medical inspection of the children of Bowers Allerton Kippax, Swillington Parochial, and Swillington Common schools was considered, and it was stated a few children in each school were found to have defective vision and adenoids.—Mr Atack: Have we as a committee any obligation in regard to this matter.—The Clerk: Yes. The committee can consult the parents as regards these children, and advise them to take such action as the doctor would recommend. Parents can have assistance in the way of travelling expenses and the purchasing of spectacles for children.

The Clerk read a letter he had received asking the committee to consider the advisability of dealing with the question of teachers' salaries in committee.—The Chairman: I think that we had better use our own judgment in relation to this matter. The Committee agreed.

The county nursing scheme was discussed at some length. The advisability of working it in conjunction with the organisation already existing in the Great Preston district was stated by Mrs Lowther to be practicable, and she would undertake to supply particulars as to working arrangements to the Committee at their next meeting.—The Chairman: Tadcaster District Council are doing something in order to bring this scheme into operation, but they want to know what is being done locally. They will give assistance and arrange for the necessary remuneration, and I take it that the feeling of the committee is to accept the offer of the District Nursing Association.—The Clerk: If you wish, and you can get private subscriptions, you can work it yourselves.—The Chairman: The whole thing will have to be submitted to the County Council for their approval.—Mr Cripwell moved that the offer of the District Nursing Association be accepted. Mr Mellor seconded, and the resolution was carried.

Evening classes are to be held at Kippax and Bowers Allerton next winter.

On Monday at the meeting of the N.C.A.A. in Leeds's prospectus for sports at Fonk Fryston on July 28th was passed.

On Monday a piece of arable land at Hambleton, about an acre and a half in size, and bringing in a rental of £4, was sold to Mr Wm. Thompson, Hambleton, for £60.

MOTHERS' UNION.—A meeting in connection with the Monk Fryston branch of the Mothers' Union was held at the Concert Hall on Thursday. The Rev. W. M. C. Clarke presided over a large gathering, and he was supported by Mrs A. M. Watt, M.A., secretary of the National Council of Women's Institutes of Canada, and Prof. Ishikawa, of Tokio University, Japan. The former gave an address on "Home Makers in British Columbia," and the latter addressed the meeting on "Things Japanese." Both addresses were very interesting and were greatly appreciated. Tea was subsequently partaken of.

AMUSEMENTS.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week the revue "Alio-up-to-date" is the principal attraction. It possesses a fund of brigint topical allusions, but far too many of them are lost on the audience, although some of the heavy puns and broader humour are vastly appreciated. It is only fair to the audience, however, to say that some of the dialogue and the words of the songs are barely audible even in the stalls. The revue is about the brightest that has visited the city, with artistic mountings and a fair amount of tuneful music. Mr Fred Wirns, Mr Davy Barnaby, and Mr John Latham keep the ball rolling in fine fashion, and Miss Maie Ash, Miss Molly Dawson, Miss Sybil Clare, and Miss Dorothy Cooper contribute materially to the success of the production. The rest of the programme is sustained by Jen Latona, a well-known Leeds favourite; the Brothers Redmond, comedy acrobatics; Jack Smiles, comedian; and Claude M. Roode, a slack-wire performer.

Many old favourites are billed to appear at the Leeds Empire on Monday next. First there is Hetty King, the famous male impersonator. Miss King's vivacious and dashing style and her sunny disposition have won for her a great reputation. She will give a series of new items, including "Going Home by Rail," "The Poppy Show," "Tommy Boy," etc., etc. Ernie Lotinga will appear in a farcical sketch, entitled "Millions," in which he will be supported by Walter Bird's company. An entirely new feature will be Chas. and Fanny Van, in a novel skit, "A Case of Emergency." Further bookings for Monday next include Owen Clark, magician, who is the inventor of every trick he performs; Harry Grey, "the Australian Nugget"; Frank Le Dent, the juggler of the future; Williams and Warden, the popular Irish cross-talk comedians; and Olive Armidale, the sprightly comedienne.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Hippodrome this week half the programme is taken up with the revue "And Very Nice Too," described by those responsible for it as "a candid revue with a candid crew." The keynote of its success is that it is from first to last entertaining. There is nothing very deep or purposeful or even strikingly witty in it, but it goes with a rare swing, and the audience simply not given time to be dull. It is arranged in three periods. "As you were—1855," a quite refreshing harking back to old costumes and old songs, to days when Vauxhall Gardens were a rendezvous; "As you may be—1924," a delightful skit at the woman's movement and a poignant forecast of what may happen when woman has the "whip hand"; and "As you are—1914." The leading principals include Messrs Gwilym Wigley, Norman Payne, Len Keppel, Garry Lynch, and the Misses Moira Sember, Betty Shale, and Lillian Major. In addition to the revue the Five X-Rays appear in an amusing and very clever acrobatic act; Little Lucie Linda gives a pleasing exhibition of dancing, Bobbie Thornton displays a number of sleight-of-hand and other tricks, and Florence and Rose Showell appear in vocal duets.

At the Hippodrome next week Mr Austin Hurgoo's new production "Happy Days" will be submitted, and the company of artistes will include Hope Charteris and the famous Bros Egbert, besides the full Beauty chorus. The piece was a great success at the London Hippodrome. Others in the bill are Herd and Card, comedy musicians; Madam Rosaire, assisted by a pianist and a Jap fiddle; Clifford Morgan, and The Barts Trio, sensational flying acrobats.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week a baritone with a voice of singular richness is Bombardier Morris, who gives a couple of numbers in pleasing style. George Logan has specialised in ragtime parodies, and turns out a little melody with some degree of skill, though there is much more originality in his G. R. Sims-like sailor sketch. Wilson and Pritchard work hard in their acrobatic comedy and harmony act, and are equally facile in song and knockabout business. The Six Musical Navvies make the laughs come loud and long with their many extravagant little mannerisms. "At the Potter's Wheel" is a dramatic film with a nice love-story interwoven.

Next week at the City Varieties Mdlle. Lucilia and Cockie, the human bird, will provide the chief turn, and others in the bill are Seeley and West Trio in a new musical act "Opera in the Kitchen"; Tom B. Ford, the new comedian; Bertha Smillie, the factory lass with the Melba voice; Lees and Mona, in a novel and eccentric acrobatic speciality; Carl Muller, comedian.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

FRIENDLY GREETINGS IN FOREIGN LANDS.

The Arabians shake hands six or eight times. Once is not enough. Should, however, they be persons of distinction, they embrace and kiss one another several time and also kiss their own hands. In Turkey the greeting is to place the hand upon the breast, which is both graceful and appropriate. In Burmah, when a man meets a woman, he puts his nose and mouth close to her cheek and draws a long breath, as if inhaling a delicious perfume, but, strange to say, he does not kiss her cheek. A man is greeted in exactly the same way. The natives of New Zealand rub noses when they greet each other.

BOOKS IN ANCIENT ROME.

It has been pointed out that in old Rome books were actually produced and sold more easily and quickly than they are in modern times. With the trained staff of readers and transcribers, it is contended, an ancient Roman publisher could turn out an edition of any work at very cheap rates and almost a moment's notice. There was, of course, no initial expense of typesetting before a single copy could be produced, no costly extras in the form of printer's corrections. The manuscript came from the author; the publisher handed it to his slavers, and if the book were of ordinary dimensions the complete edition could, it is said, be ready, if necessary, within twenty-four hours. The old Roman libraries were immense as well as splendid. Plutarch says that the library of Lucullus, who expended much of his money on books, "had walks, galleries, and cabinets open to all visitors." It was proposed by Julius Cæsar to open this library to the public.

Mr Henry Barran has given £100 to the Baden-Powell Scouts' Fund.

Messrs J. W. and A. Pollard, of Moor Allerton Hall, won second prize at Escrick Show on Wednesday for agricultural yearling colt or gelding.

OCULIST and AURIST.
THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they may, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often omitted. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Cornets or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which sufferers at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr. ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure or benefit to the patient.
Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7; On Alternate Saturdays, June 13th and 27th. Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Templenewsam ratepayers are dissatisfied with their representation on Hunslet District Council; they think that they should have three members, at least, instead of two; but it is unlikely that any change will be made at present. Had the question been taken up ten years ago, when I suggested the advisability of seeking increased representation, there might have been some chance of success, but the opportunity has passed, and it will perhaps be wisdom to refrain from action meantime. It would mean an inquiry, if the authorities were disposed to consider the claim, and any show of dissatisfaction would simply be playing into the hands of Leeds Corporation, who have given every evidence of their intention to again attack the ancient township.

Of course, any change in representative would vitally effect Oulton-with-Woodlesford, which has a claim quite as good as that of Templenewsam, and then the voting strength of our townships and in-townships on Hunslet Board of Guardians must be taken into consideration. The Guardians would probably oppose any change which would upset the arrangement now in force. Figures are interesting. Templenewsam at the census had a population of 3,346, and the rateable value was £19,074, while the population of Oulton-with-Woodlesford was 3,205, and the rateable value £34,423. Thorp Stapleton, which returns one member, had a population of 28, and the rateable value this year is £461—the highest for 25 years. The total rateable value (Middleton, £10,857) of the Hunslet rural area is £64,814, or double what it was in 1874. No wonder Leeds covets this promising district.

Evidently the good people of Barwick have given encouragement to the directors of Garforth Gas Co., otherwise they would not be extending the gas service to the village. They may believe that the ratepayers will eventually adopt public lighting, and why not? A modest scheme would meet all requirements, and the cost would not be great. Barwick folks once attempted something in the way of lighting, but it did not last long. A generously-disposed lady resident purchased a powerful lamp, and it was erected on the old cross, which for once was fulfilling a useful purpose, but the powers that be declined to allow the cross to be utilized as a lamp standard—it was vandalism, so it was said—and of course, the fine lamp was removed. Since then Barwick has been content to walk in darkness.

Garforth Urban Council have not, I understand, thrown over the scheme of street improvement, and they are now considering the financial phase of the question. Residents have informed me that there are worse streets in the area than the two that it is proposed to deal with, and, if that is so, the Council have their work cut out for them. They are not altogether free agents in such matters. In another part of the district the County Council officials have been busy making investigations with a view to action, and one does not know when Garforth's turn may come.

Garforth at the present time is finding from the rates about £400 per annum to pay for loans in connection with water undertakings. The water is supplied from Leeds, and it is stated a profit—if the loan for the mains is not taken into account—is made on it, but the area is paying a penny more per 1,000 gallons for it than the price at which it has been offered to other townships. Garforth was, of course, determined to have Leeds water, and it is now paying for it, but I wonder how much it would have saved had it obtained a supply from Kiddal? I heard this question discussed by public men the other day, and it was asserted that Garforth could have had it for less than half the price of Leeds water. Garforth ratepayers, however, are satisfied with their new supply, and outsiders need not trouble themselves about it.

Expectations are not always realized, but there will be disappointment if greater interest in foreign missions and increased subscriptions do not follow the holding of the church missionary exhibition at Wetherby. Clearly, if commands are to be obeyed, the support of missions is one of the first duties of churchmanship, but the average individual has comparatively little interest in the welfare of the black and yellow races, who are destined to present knotty problems for the white man to solve. In Leeds, it is stated, largely increased contributions have followed the holding of the missionary exhibition last year, and Wetherby district will be expected to give more liberally in future to provide bread and butter for the missionaries, who, whatever their success, are out for no holiday.

Have the Selby Guardians noticed what occurred at Tadcaster a month ago, or were the Tadcaster Guardians simply a little ahead in the race? By the generosity of the Rev. Canon Greenwood, of Grimston, an enlarged photograph of Mr J. A. Bennett, who served the Board as Clerk for many years with conspicuous ability, was presented to the Guardians, and it now adorns the walls of the Board Room. It is an excellent photo, and it was very kind of Canon Greenwood to present it. For twenty-eight years the late Mr E. Townend was Clerk to the Selby Board, and the members have subscribed and obtained a large photo of their late Clerk, it being unveiled on Monday. At both Tadcaster and Selby the gentlemen who now discharge the Clerks' duties are sons of the former Clerks.

The N.E.R. Co. are at the present time engaged in building a dozen houses for their employees at South Milford, and it is possible that, in the event of a demand, the number may be increased. Apparently a similar policy is to be adopted at Selby, where there is a scarcity of working-class dwellings, and it is stated that a hundred employees have informed the Company that they require houses. John Smith's Co. have decided to erect houses at Tadcaster, and if all business firms would act in this way the difficulty of obtaining suitable houses for working-men would be at an end.

In a local church magazine the other day a writer had some scathing comments on the ingratitude of the public, but he might have spared himself. Gratitude on the part of the public is, rarely found, and as a matter how conscientiously a man may serve his fellows, the ratepayers are ready to kick him out when he makes the slightest mistake. Instead of being grateful, ratepayers actually think that public men should be thankful to them for giving them the opportunity of serving them. If a man enters public life expecting gratitude he will be grievously disappointed.

Halton, Seacroft, and Crossgates are not doing their duty. Last year the local Medical Charities Society contributed £30 to Leeds Infirmary, and the benefits the residents received from the institution totalled £161. Contributions are made by householders and workmen in other ways, but when all is added up it is apparent that the district is deeply in debt to the Infirmary. Halton does less than any of the other villages for the charities, yet it receives the greatest benefits, no less than £103 of the total of £161 going to the residents there. Crossgates accounted for £29, Seacroft for £20, and Stanks for £9. A sum of £10 was granted to the Women and Children's Hospital and the benefits received amounted to £38 17s., of which Crossgates got £23 and Halton £11 2s. Altogether the benefits obtained from the two institutions were valued at £109 17s., and the amount returned was £40. The working-class population profit by these institutions more than any other section, and it is their duty to contribute more liberally to the funds. How is it possible for this great work to go on unless more generosity is exhibited by the people who are not slow, when the evil day comes, to seek its benefit without any cost to themselves.

How is it in the district? It is asserted that the business of the farrier and shoeing-smith is doomed, owing to the introduction of motor-cars, but it will be a long time before the farmers have no use for the representatives of Crispin. It has, however, been deemed advisable this year to drop certain horse classes at the shows, and this may be regarded as a sign of the times. Talking of shoeing-smiths, one of them says that some of the men in the outlying districts have been rather badly hit. Wages were never better, and, owing to the scarcity of labour, they are likely to be higher, but despite that, he believes the farrier is doomed. Well, he must turn his hand to something else. The motor-cars, motor-waggons, motor-cycles, etc., are to be the vehicles of the future the shoeing-smith should endeavour to learn something about their construction, and be ready to turn his premises into a repairing shop.

At Wetherby, although it is one of the most prosperous agricultural districts in the county, certain folks have a tendency to always look on the dark side of things, but the genial pessimists—and they are genial chaps in spite of their dark outlook—are probably well understood by their neighbours. When it was announced that the Wetherby Union would have about £500 extra to pay this year to the county funds the gentleman who occupies the chief position among the Guardians declared that if these increases continued the ratepayers would have nothing to pay with. That, of course, would mean wholesale bankruptcy in Wetherby district—no prosperous farmers and shopkeepers, and an over-flowing workhouse, which, it might be suggested, would be maintained by a generous public through the medium of a rate meeting. It is not a pleasing prospect for future Wetherby residents, but so far as can be ascertained the prophets have not managed to cast a gloom over the district, nor to cause the residents to band themselves together to resist the iniquitous impositions of an authority whose principal characteristic seems to be that it can stand any amount of criticism.

Rothwell Wesleyan Circuit.

MEETING HELD IN THE OPEN AIR.

It is not often that the opportunity is afforded of holding a religious business meeting amid such pleasant surroundings as was the case on Wednesday afternoon at Carlton House, Rothwell. The official members of the Rothwell Wesleyan Circuit meeting mustered in good numbers on the lawn in front of the house, by the kind invitation of Mr Walter Hargreaves, C.C., and Mrs Hargreaves. At five o'clock the ladies and gentlemen were invited to take tea, which was provided at small tables on the lawn, and about 80 persons greatly enjoyed the good things so generously placed before them. After tea, the hearty thanks of the visitors to their host and hostess were voiced by Messrs M. Bielby, T. A. Young, J. Butterick, J. R. Seance, J.P., and Rev. M. Phillipson, B.A. Mr Hargreaves responded in a very cordial manner, expressing the pleasure Mrs Hargreaves and he experienced in ministering in any way to the success of the meeting and the enjoyment of their guests.

After a short interval, the chairs were rearranged in a shady part of the lawn, and the meeting opened with singing and prayer. The Rev. N. W. Thomlinson presided, and there were also present Rev. M. Phillipson, B.A., Councillor Hargreaves and Mr M. Bielby (circuit stewards), and about 56 other members, including 16 ladies.

Mr Hargreaves gave the financial statement for the quarter. The ordinary income was £105 19s. 6d., which is £3 12s. 9d. less than the expenditure. Special contributions, however, have been received, which not only clear off all deficiencies, but leave the stewards with £8 13s. 1d. in hand—a very satisfactory result. The membership this quarter is slightly less than last, as is often the case, but there are 18 persons on probation, with 127 in junior classes. Conversations indicated a larger use of open-air services.

Mr Hargreaves mentioned that while the circuit had already been honoured by having several gentlemen elected by the synod as delegates to Conference, including Mr J. H. Cookson, J.P., Mr J. T. Lygo, Mr J. Armitage, and Mr W. Stephenson, the latter gentleman had again being elected (for the sixth time), as one of the Leeds district representatives. Mr Stephenson made a few remarks on the forthcoming Leeds Conference, as far as regards this circuit, and the ministers who will be billeted here. Miss Stephenson was announced to be selling a large number of the attractive and useful Conference handbooks, of which Mr Stephenson is the lay editor.

The Sunday School report was not of a satisfactory description, and a discussion arose on the cause and cure of a reduced attendance.

It was unanimously resolved to support the Bishop of London's Criminal Amendment Bill, now being debated by the House of Lords.

As this was the last quarterly meeting the Rev. M. Phillipson will attend before leaving the circuit, many friends spoke in appreciation of his excellent services, including Messrs Hargreaves, Bielby, J. Armitage, Marland, G. W. Denton, Nixon, Legge, and Stephenson. Mr Phillipson responded feelingly, as well as wittily, and warmly thanked the friends for their generous words and kindly acts.

The next meeting will be at Normanton, when the new minister, Rev. John Wilson, of Bishop Auckland, will be publicly recognised.

Local Minister's Visit to Rome

IMPRESSIONS—"SEE NAPLES AND DIE."

The Rev. W. G Softley, the resident Primitive Methodist minister at Rothwell, who has returned home after a tour in Italy, had an interesting chat with our Rothwell representative. In the tour, which was conducted by the Free Church Tour Guild, there were about twenty ladies and gentlemen including Mr Softley and his friend, the Rev. E. Barrett, of Leeds, and three ministers of the Wesleyan Church. Mr Softley left Rothwell on May 14th, and journeyed to London, where the party was made up, and by way of Folkestone and Boulogne, they went to Paris, where a stay was made overnight. From Paris the journey was continued to Turin and Genoa, where another night was spent, and on the following day the party reached Rome, arriving about midnight. Seven full days were spent in Rome, so that the party had ample time in which to see the many places of interest. Among the places visited were the Palace of the Caesars, the Vatican Museum, the famous St. Peter's, the Forum, the Appean Way (which is said to be the way by which St. Paul entered Rome), the Coliseum, and churches which so plentifully abound. Of course, the party were in the hands of an able interpreter, who at each of the places visited gave a brief lecture. At the Forum the guide described the excavations which had been made, and which are, as a matter of fact, at present being carried on. A visit to the catacombs created a weird interest, the sight-seeing being done by the aid of candles; but the party did not venture far, probably owing to the none too assuring comment of the guide that it was quite easy for one to get lost on account of the numerous passages all of startling similarity, but leading in different directions.

Perhaps the most interesting and memorable part of the whole tour to Mr Softley was the visit to Pompeii, which was made during a four days' stay at Naples. "It is a wonderful thing," said Mr Softley, in describing it, that this place should have been buried about 1,700 years and accidentally discovered." They are still unearthing the buried city, and up to the present about one-third has been discovered in this way. Everything is being most carefully lifted. Vesuvius, although an object of interest in the distance, was not visited, the party contenting themselves with an inspection of a smaller volcanic mountain. Speaking of Naples as a city, Mr Softley said the phrase "See Naples and die" could be taken in two ways. The people are very dirty—living, eating, sleeping and working all in one room. The refuse is thrown from the houses into the streets, which are badly looked after.

From Naples a return was made to Rome, and Florence, Venice, and Milan were visited in turn. Florence, which is regarded as the intellectual centre of Italy, had much to offer to lovers of art. At all the places some very fine museums were inspected. Venice, said Mr Softley, was very interesting to the sight-seer, for there is no place like it. During the whole of the time he was in it he never saw a horse, bicycle, or motor-car, for the principal ways of the town are waterways, along which the traffic is carried by means of gondolas and barges. At Milan the famous cathedral was visited. A couple of days were spent at Lucerne, and from here the party returned to Paris, en route for home, Mr Softley arriving at Rothwell on Friday night.

SIR M. SYKES, M.P., AND YORKSHIREMEN.

Sir Mark Sykes, M.P., speaking at the annual gathering of the Society of Yorkshiremen in London on Tuesday night, said Yorkshire really was a link historically in time and in space—that was to say, it bound up north and south. It was the link between a definite north and a definite south. Racially it was a link between the Teuton and the Celt. Yorkshire was the link of all things in England. The result of this kind of link, and also of being the key of the situation, had apparently produced in the Yorkshire people a kind of dualism, a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr Hyde, as expounded in Stevenson's allegory. The crystallisation of a Yorkshireman had been put before the world by that transcendant genius Dickens, who crystallised the best and worst of Yorkshiremen in two characters. In John Browdy he depicted good sense, hospitality, and greatness of heart—whilst in the person of Mr Squeers he depicted a super-acuteness of the commercial sense (Laughter). This Mr Squeers, being a York shireman, was a good father, and supported adversity with Mrs Squeers with considerable fortitude. He thought, however, that the Yorkshire proverbs were dreadful, and exemplified the following, which he gave in the vernacular:—

Hear all, see all, and say nowt;
Eat all, sup all, and pay nowt;
And if you do owt for nowt, do it for yourself. (Laughter).

These proverbs were the only lasting monuments of the dark side. After referring to Yorkshire's progress from the Middle Ages to the present time, Sir Mark said they could look forward to the future with calm, for, as in the past, they had the capacity to go on.

MEMORIAL TO A BARKSTON ASH EDUCATIONIST.

In memory of the late Rev. John Spink, B.Sc., who was headmaster of Drax Grammar School for 40 years a great educationist and one of the pioneers in the teaching of science in the North of England, a stained glass window was dedicated in Drax Church on Saturday afternoon, and a memorial brass tablet was afterwards unveiled in the School. A large congregation assembled, including many old boys of the school, who owe everything they possess to the labours of the late John Spink, and the example and high ideals he set. The present memorials were decided upon at a meeting of old boys, and the Rev. H. Martin Thorpe, M.A., Willesden, and Mr E. Hill Fitch, of Batley, acted as secretaries to the movement, which has received whole-hearted support, as well as from Mr E. Arnold How, B.Sc., the present headmaster, and Mrs How.

For the dedication service, a procession marched from the school to the church, headed by Mr How, and the pupils and staff of the School, followed by old boys, governors, and clergy. Members of the family of the late headmaster were present, namely: Mrs R. H. Strickland (Doncaster), the eldest daughter; the Rev. Edmund Spink (Vicar of Leek), second son; and Dr. Spink (Eccles), the youngest son.

The Rev. Edmund Spink dedicated the memorial window in the church. The sermon was preached by the Rev. H. Martin Thorpe, a native of Drax, of whom the village is justly proud; while another old boy of the school, the Rev. H. B. Greeves, son of the Vicar of Winstow, presided at the reception. Other clergy present were the Rev. D. Mackay, Hull (locum tenens for the Vicar of Drax), the Rev. W. Seed (Snaith), the Rev. E. S. Hollingsworth (Hensall), and the Rev. W. Stratton (Airmyn).

The dedication service was simple and touching, and included hymns "Glorious things of Thee are spoken" and "Let saints on earth in concert sing." The window consists of three lights, depicting scenes from the life of St. John. The school arms are introduced in the top of the central canopy, and at the foot of the window is the following inscription:—

To the glory of God and in memory of the Rev. John Spink, B.Sc., headmaster of Drax Grammar School, 1864-1904, and honorary curate of this church from 1870 to 1879. This window is erected by grateful pupils.

The design and colouring is most pleasing. The work has been carried out by Messrs Kayll and Reed, Albion Street, Leeds, well-known stained-glass artists. After the dedication the hymn "Our Blest Redeemer" was sung, and the sermon followed.

PROPERTY SALE.—Messrs W. B. Hindle, Son, and Lewis have sold by private treaty the detached residence known as "Rosecliffe," Roundhay, for £910. The property was offered for sale by auction in May last, but was withdrawn.

In memory of the late Rev. Edwin Stanley Sykes, for many years vicar of St. Nicholas, Hedworth, a stained glass window has been placed in the east end of the church by his brother, Mr W. S. Sykes, of Roundhay, and his sisters.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

At the moment of writing (June 9th) rain is falling steadily, and there is every prospect of the soil getting just that soaking which we require to give almost all kinds of bedding vegetable plants a good start. Such subjects as sweet peas, calceolarias, etc., which were planted out some weeks ago, had begun to look pale, but now the much-needed rain has come we may confidently expect to see the production of rapid and healthy growth. In the case of sweet peas may we once more remind our readers of the importance of efficient staking? The growths should be kept in an upright position, and on no account should they be allowed to bend over or growth will be seriously checked. As with almost every kind of flower largely used for exhibition purposes, the sweet pea has fallen a victim to the craze for size. This means that most unnatural treatment must be resorted to, or no prize cards will be forthcoming. All side growths should be removed as soon as they venture to appear, flower buds must be sacrificed until about a week before blooms are wanted for show, and liquid foods of mysterious composition should be given once or twice a week to strengthen the growth.

Those who are content to obtain a good supply of serviceable flowers will allow his plants to grow naturally. Manure water, prepared and flower naturally. Manure water, prepared by soaking horse, or sheep manure in a tub of water, may be given once or twice a week, and a mulching of scrawny manure placed around the plants will keep the roots cool and moist, and act as a feeding agency during the showery weather. Flowers intended for table decoration should be cut early in the morning or in the evening, the former for choice. If intended for sending away by post they are best cut in the evening before the dew begins to fall. They should be packed dry in a suitable box, and although they will probably droop in transit, they revive quickly if placed in warm water. Sweet peas that are packed moist travel badly, especially the light coloured varieties. When unpacked it will be found that they are speckled over with yellow spots. We have repeatedly mentioned the urgency of cutting the flowers as fast as they open. If only a few seed pods are left on the plants it will be sufficient to considerably shorten the flowering season. It should be remembered that the natural function of a plant is to produce the means of reproduction of its specie. First the flowers, then the buds and flowers, and finally the seed. This accomplished, and the plants labours are almost completed, but fully so in the case of annuals. By postponing the production of seed, the flowering period may be considerably extended, as the plants will continue to do their best towards completing their natural task, the production of seed. This applies very strongly to many other kinds of plants besides sweet peas. Notable examples are poppies, campanulas in variety, phlox, and pansies, annual chrysanthemums, and roots of other free seeding plants.

CORFOPSIS GRANDIFLORA.

It is with confidence that we recommend our readers to grow a few plants of this wonderfully free-flowering plant. One plant will produce hundreds of long-stalked blooms, admirably suited to table decoration requirements. Sow now in a cold frame and grow on in a similar position until next April, when the plants may be hardened off and planted in a sunny position outdoors. They usually require six-inch pots in February

VEGETABLES.

The welcome rainfall has made it possible to proceed with the planting of late-sown veg-tables, such as cabbage, cauliflower, savoy, broccoli, etc. Plant firmly and give a good soaking of water, even though the ground is moist. It will settle the soil about the roots.

Further sowings of peas, kidney beans, lettuce, radishes, etc., should be made, and a few lettuce plants should be planted to form large heads.

Turnips, carrots, and similar root crops should be thinned early. If the seedlings are allowed to crowd each other the tops get drawn, and the roots cross each other in such a manner as to destroy every chance of securing a really satisfactory crop.

NOTES ON BLACKBERRIES.

Cultivated blackberries produce excellent crops under favourable conditions; but they must have a soil rich enough in humus to hold abundant moisture, which is so important as the weather becomes better. Very shallow surface tillage also helps to preserve soil-moisture. Deep surface tillage tends to injure the roots and to cause them to throw up an immense number of suckers. These, of course, need to be destroyed. With pruning, keep from 3 to 6 canes yearly. Those produced this year will bear fruit next, so that the old canes should be cut out and destroyed as soon as the fruiting is over.

PLANTS UNDER GLASS.

MALMAISON CARNATIONS.

The American tree carnation has become so popular that the old favourite Souvenier de la Malmaison varieties have been pushed into the background. All the same, it cannot be denied that if well grown they give a commanding display when in bloom. The flowers should be temporarily shaded during bright sunshine, and although it is necessary to keep the foliage almost dry, it is advisable to damp the floor down several times a day during hot weather. As soon as the plants finish blooming they should either be repotted or layered, according to the requirements of the grower.

SHADING PLANTS.

During the next few months shade will have to be provided for many occupants of the glass houses. Zonal pelargoniums and schizanthus are two notable exceptions to this rule. These two plants will quickly any amount of sunshine when in bloom. American carnations should be shaded during brilliant sunshine only. They enjoy plenty of light and fresh air, and the ventilators should be opened wide whenever the weather is mild enough to warrant it being done. Ferns should be densely shaded, and this should be supplemented by a large amount of atmospheric moisture. Damp down walls, floor, and staging two or three times a day. Overhead spraying is good for many kinds, but mildewfoers are impatient of this treatment.

HYDRANGEAS.

The new race of hydrangeas that have come into existence during recent years have almost eclipsed the older varieties. There are numerous varieties, varying in shade from pure white to rich pink and bright blue. A few of the best are Madame E. Mouillere (white), Radiant (blue), and Soy. de Madame E. Chautard (pink). Cuttings rooted now will produce grand plants for flowering in the autumn, but next spring they should be grown cool throughout, and only one stem should be allowed to develop the first year. Older plants, after flowering, may be cut back slightly and repotted into larger pots. They will then break away freely and flower again during the autumn. The freedom with which they flower is perhaps their greatest advantage over the older varieties.

FANCY PELARGONIUMS.

Young plants of fancy pelargoniums that are commencing to bloom should be staked out directly it is all leggy. Liquid feeding assists them to swell their flower buds, but should not be used after the first petals commence to unfold. Weak soot water is usually blown rather earlier than the young ones. After flowering they may be placed outdoor in a sunny position, and water should be withheld for a fortnight or so. They may then be cut down. Any shoots that have failed to bloom may be utilised as cuttings. They root freely if placed around the sides of small pots filled with sandy soil, and plunged on a greenhouse shelf. Unless extra large plants are required it is not necessary to retain them after flowering a second time.

EARLY STRAWBERRIES.

Where very early supplies of forced strawberries are in demand the first opportunity should be taken to layer some strong first runners. We have tried numerous varieties, but have found nothing to equal Royal Sovereign for early forcing. Layering is accomplished by fixing the first plantlet on the runner to the top of a three-inch pot filled with a moderately rich compost. The pots are usually used to hold the plants in position. Roots soon form, and when these reach the pot bottom, the runners may be detached from the parent plants. Regular attention must be paid to watering, and when the pots are nicely filled with roots repot into six-inch pots. Yellow fibrous loam is excellent for strawberry culture.

CYCLAMEN.

Cyclamen corms are now commencing to make new growth, and require repotting. Turn them out of the old pots and remove a quantity of the old compost, taking care to avoid damaging the young roots. Repot into a compost of a fibrous nature. No animal manure is required, but a good sprinkling of wood ashes, bone meal, and old crushed mortar may be mixed with the loam. Place the plants in a cold frame and water carefully until new roots becomes free. When established they will flourish they may be kept well watered, and spraying overhead will promote healthy growth and keep insect pests in check.

N.U. FOOTBALL AT ROTHWELL.

CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual-meeting of the Rothwell Northern Union Football Club was held at the Black Bull Hotel on Saturday night, and it was presided over by Mr J. Oakland.

The balance sheet showed a balance of £1 9s. 2½d. The gate receipts for the season produced £19 17s. 1½d., while the half-gates for cupties accounted for an income of £8 19s. 8d. The total income was £73 10s. 1½d., while the expenditure amounted to £71 0s. 10d. In presenting his third annual report Mr J. Ledger said the past season had not been so good financially as the previous one. Since then the number of workers was less, and the result was reflected in the balance sheet. The gate receipts, however, were up nearly £6, which pointed to better following of Rugby football. The share in cup-ties was down to the extent of over £9, which in his opinion was due to playing at home, the matches not attracting such good gates as they had when away. From a playing point of view the team had done well, being actually at the top of the League, but having the misfortune to be beaten in the semi-final by Hunslet A. Altogether they played 26 matches, comprising 20 League matches, four cup-ties, and two ordinary matches. Of these seven were lost, two being ordinary and two League matches, which compared favourably with the first season, when out of 27 matches played, 19 were lost. During the season in the whole of the matches, the team scored 286 points to their opponents' 185. Among the individual players Mr. Balmer made the best display, scoring 45 goals and 1 try—a total of 102 points. R. Wise had eight tries to his credit, A. Cox seven, P. Bower a good five tries, C. Hayton and T. Dolan five tries, A. Wilkinson, J. Atack, and J. Hutchinson four tries, W. Catherall one good three tries, A. Lazenby five tries, G. Best and G. Stone two tries, F. Wilkie two tries, and the following one try each—W. Dobson, N. Parker, C. Bulmer, T. Whitham, E. Cowburn, and W. Bough.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and balance sheet, paid a tribute to the secretary, and said they might congratulate themselves on being able to show a balance on the right side, especially when they took into account the miserable amount taken at the gates at some of the home matches. Financially, however, they had not met with the success they were entitled to, though no one could grumble at that when the opening point of view it had been a more successful season than the previous one, although the distinction of winning a trophy had not fallen to their lot.

Mr F. Garbutt seconded.

Mr G. Bulmer, who supported, said that in Rothwell "soccer" had got the hold.

The election of officers resulted in Dr. H. Stevenson being unanimously elected as president. Mr J. Oakland was re-appointed a vice-president. Mr J. Ledger was also re-elected secretary, and Mr S. Boswell was appointed treasurer.

PROFITABLE POULTRY CULTURE

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

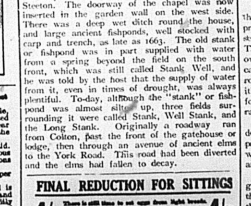
(Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain the first and end. It is laid down by many that, full value, the earlier article should be read in conjunction with the current one).

RISING AND COOLING THE EGGS.

Bear in mind that while you are turning your eggs you are also airing and cooling them, so that the time occupied must be taken into consideration when you determine how long to air and cool. It is laid down by many that, providing the ventilation in the machine is good and not sluggish, the time occupied in turning is sufficient for the other purposes as well.

My thoughts were first attracted to this question by forgetting to return some eggs to the machine for a period of over two hours. Naturally, I imagined that this gross carelessness had resulted in ruining the batch, but as the period of incubation had nearly expired I replaced the tray and awaited results. Judge of my surprise when I had an excellent batch. At this period of time I cannot give exact percentages, but it was considerably above the ordinary. Here was food for thought. Why had these batch not been ruined? Pondering over the question I remembered a theory advocated by an old American friend of mine, that it was beneficial to air up to one and a half hours on the eighteenth day; consequently, I set myself to try experiments on these lines, remembering that the hen when coming off to feed nearly always takes longer over her daily meal as the days progress.

The results of my experiments justify me in stating that, although I could trace no increased results in hatching, I could certainly detect that the chicks hatched were much more hardy and lively, and, consequently, thrived better. Many will perhaps disagree with me; but for those who choose to give my system a trial I detail my own practice as regards airing and cooling.



Commencing on the second evening, I allow the eggs to be out of the machine for a period not exceeding five minutes per diem until the seventh night. Please note, however, that the eggs are turned twice daily, and the period of five minutes is practically occupied by this operation, so that in reality the eggs are not removed at all except for the purpose of turning. From that time, until the fourteenth day, I allow a period of ten minutes per diem—that is an extra five minutes to the time occupied in turning—then until the eighteenth day a quarter of an hour per diem is allowed, but on the eighteenth day I allow them to cool until a temperature of about 85deg. is reached. Naturally, this temperature would never be arrived at during the summer months; but I do not hatch then, and if I did I should allow them to cool for one hour after the eighteenth day I do not cool them at all. A word of warning must here be given. When cooling never allow the temperature of the eggs to fall too rapidly, and never place the tray or drawer where it will be subjected to a draught. If the room is particularly cold, it would be advisable to cover the tray with some coarse porous material.

By practising airing and cooling eggs I also have another theory that it is of assistance in weakening the shell and facilitating the exit of the chick at the end of the period. It is my opinion that the cooling process and subsequent heating to 103deg., with its attendant contraction and expansion of the shell, tends to weaken same, thereby offering less resistance to the chick when the time for its exodus arrives. The subject, at all events, offers matter for reflection and consideration.

Before passing from this topic to that of testing the eggs I would mention that the embryo can be subjected to much greater variation of temperature towards the end of the hatch than during the earlier stages; in fact, it is a constantly increasing strength. I personally have taken eggs from an incubator on the nineteenth day, and, packed in only an ordinary wooden box and protected only by brown paper (which I might mention is an admirable non-conductor of heat), have taken the eggs to the Continent to hatch them got in competition; whilst on other occasions I have taken them such journeys as Sandbridge-worth to Newquay, in Cornwall, and completed the hatch with excellent results. On the other hand, during the earlier stages of the hatch a little judicious nursing of such treatme it would have been sufficient to kill the germ entirely. A knowledge of these facts will prevent many disasters, and operators must be warned that the cause of failure I have not noticed is the time occupied in testing on the sixth or seventh day. The time spent causes the embryo to become chilled, and consequently retarded, or perhaps killed outright. At the subsequent test one wonders why so many have died since the previous test when they looked so well, whilst others have been materially weakened.

STEETON HALL AND THE FAIRFAXES.

A RUNAWAY MARRIAGE STORY.

The York Historical Association had a very successful and enjoyable outing when they journeyed by motor charabanc to Steeton Hall, a Fairfax homestead. The route taken was via Acaster Malbis, Acaster Selby, and Appleton Roebuck. Stops were made at each of these three places, the objects of interest being the Holy Trinity Church, and the site of the Roman camp at Acaster Malbis, the sites of St. Andrewe's College, the Roman camp at Acaster Selby, and the site of Brocket Hall, a fine manorial earthwork at Appleton Roebuck.

It was evening before the party reached Steeton Hall, the residence of the Bramleys. Mr T. P. Cooper read an interesting paper on "Steeton Hall and the Fairfaxes." At the outset he said the homestead was of considerable interest. Under its roof Were born, and in its private chapel were baptised, many Fairfaxes who had filled positions of honour and distinction locally as well as in higher spheres of the realm, and their names were written large on the pages of history. The earliest ancestor of the Fairfax family, of whom we had any account, was a resident of the city of York. He was the progeniter of the stock from which sprang all the branches of the great Yorkshire family of Fairfax.

Before the close of King John's reign, estates in the Ainsty were held by one Guy Fairfax, through Steeton Hall, the cherished home of an illustrious race which flourished for over many generations, did not come into the possession of the family until 200 years later. The place name Steeton was said to be a corruption of Stive-ton, "stive" meaning a fish pond. From what remained of the hall, it was rather difficult to understand what it was like in the days of its splendour, but with the aid of an ancient inventory of the place, penned in 1558 by professional valuers for probate purposes at the death of William Fairfax, they could in imagination build up the old structure. This inventory mentioned the effects in every apartment, commencing with the entrance hall, which contained one table with a frame of rich tapestry, one square table and a cupboard, hangings of buckram and say in the same, and one buffet stool. The Hall opened upon an adjoining parlour, in which the old knight spent his declining days and died. There were four other rooms downstairs, including the great parlour, and some of these were in the two wings which were added in 1577. It also appeared that the bed chambers upstairs had special names, such as the Rysher Chamber and the Inderawe Chamber. All these contained spiretop four-post bedsteads with rich hangings. In the gallery there was a bedstead with hangings and a feather of sarn. The south chamber bedstead had a tester of red and black velvet, and that in the great parlour was hung with flowered blue damask, while the room was adorned with arras. In the high study there was a garnish of pewter vessels, and three oaken chests contained a valuable collection of books. Here again walls were covered with tapestry. The older mounted homestead was taken down by Sir Guy Fairfax, third son of Richard Fairfax, of Bilton, and he built the present house mentioned in the inventory, which, together with the chapel, was completed in 1477, in which year the latter was consecrated.

Sir Guy was an influential Yorkshire knight. He was elected Recorder of York in 1460, which office he resigned in 1477, and the following year he was appointed Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench. He married Isabel Ryther, who was a grand-daughter of Chief Justice Gascoigne; hence one of the principal apartments in the house was named Ryther Chamber. Sir William Fairfax, a distinguished lawyer, succeeded Sir Guy, and he was nominated Recorder of York on February 9th, 1499, and at the same time admitted a Freeman of the city, his father being present when the election took place in the old Council Chamber on Ouse Bridge. He died in October, 1503, leaving until 1466. Sir William was appointed one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, in 1509, and died in 1514. Sir William Fairfax, the grandson of Sir Guy, who built Steeton Hall, married, in 1518, Isabel Thwaites, a great heiress, and acquired lands in Durham, and the manors in the West Riding, Daxy Hall, and property on Bishop Hill, now Fairfax Street, in York. This marriage was of a romantic character, his bride being a runaway sister of the Priory of Nun Appleton, where there appeared to have been some laxity in the religious life and conduct of the community. She was allowed the freedom of riding out and visiting her friends in the vicinity. In her carriage one day Sir William Fairfax, and a love match ensued. Sir William was forbidden to approach the nunnery, but he undaunted the difficulty, and obtained an order for her release. The Prioress still clung to the fair novice. The story went that Sir William enveigled the nun into the woods, and by force chained his bride, and carried her off in triumph. They were subsequently married at Bolton Percy Church. From the union descended many statesmen, warriors, scholars, and poets, who rendered famous the ancient house of Fairfax.

It was a circumstance that, at the time of the dissolution was granted to the Fairfaxes, and the last Prioress delivered up possession on Christmas Day, 1539. To Thomas, the son of Fairfax, two sons of the fair Isabel, the erstwhile sister who had once been under restraint in its cloistered walls. Sir William died in York in March, 1557, and died soon afterwards in the great parlour previously mention-d, and at whose decease the inventory mentioned was made. He left Steeton and the Manor of Bolton Percy to his younger son, Gabriel Fairfax, the ancestor of the present family. His eldest son, Sir Thomas, inherited Denton, Nun Appleton, and Bishop Hill in York. This Sir William Fairfax married Lady Dorothy, the grandaughter and great grand-parents of the two Parliamentary Generals, the Lords Fairfax.

Another Sir William succeeded to Steeton in 1581, was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. He undertook extensive additions and repairs to his ancestral home, and the present gate-house, with a porter's lodge, formed the south side of the court. Over the gateway there was a large perpendicular east window, filled with stained glass, the chief heraldic parts of which were preserved at Bilbrough Hall by Mr Guy Thomas Fairfax, the present owner of Steeton. The doorway of the chapel was now inserted in the garden wall on the west side. There was a deep wet ditch round the house, and large ancient fishponds, well stocked with carp and tench, as late as 1663.

The fishponds are now filled with water from a spring beyond the field on the south front, which was still called Stank Hill, and the moat was told by the supply of water from it, even in times of drought, was always plentiful. To-day, although the "stank" or fishpond was almost filled up, three fields surrounding it were called Stank, Well Stank, and the Long Stank. Originally a roadway ran from Colton, past the front of the gatehouse or lodge, then through an avenue of ancient elme to the York Road. This road had been diverted and the elms had fallen to decay.

INDUSTRIAL LAW COMMITTEE.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Will you kindly allow us through your columns to draw attention to the fact that a branch of the Industrial Law Committee has been been formed in Leeds to carry on locally the work on which the Central Committee in London has been engaged since 1898?

The purpose of the Committee is, in the first place, educational. By means of lectures and other meetings it seeks to make known the Factory and Workshops Acts the Shops Acts, and other industrial laws to persons who are interested in those laws, or who, being directly affected by them, are either ignorant of the legal conditions under which they work and of the protection which the law gives them.

It is obvious that while this is so the administration of the law must remain imperfect, and this is to be regretted, since it is to the interest of everyone that it should be fully observed.

In the second place, the Committee acts as a means of communication between the worker and the inspector, in case any breaches of the law should occur, particulars of which might otherwise not reach the proper quarter. Such cases when they reach the secretary pass through the Committee without mention of the name of either employer or worker, and are forwarded to the proper authorities.

The Central Committee also administers an Indemnity Fund, which is used to protect workers who have been dismissed for giving truthful evidence to an inspector, or for having refused to comply with conditions illegally imposed by an employer.

The Central Committee has carried on its work successfully for 17 years, and is in close touch with the Home Office. Within recent years it has seemed desirable to devolve some of its duties, and branches have been formed in Edinburgh, Dublin, and Birmingham.

The success of the Leeds branch must depend on the support of those who are interested in efficient factory administration. An annual sum of about £60 will be needed, and we issue this statement on behalf of the committee to make our purposes and requirements known.—Yours, etc.,

WEST RIDING DISTRICT COUNCILS' ASSOCIATION.

MR PINDAR AND ANNEXATION SCHEMES.

HOUSING—A WETHERBY OPINION.

The annual meeting of the West Riding District Councils' Association was held in the Philosophical Hall, Leeds, on Tuesday. Mr Roslyn Holliday (Featherstone) presided.

The annual report showed that one Council had joined the association during the year and one had withdrawn, leaving a total membership of 108. The scheme of the West Riding County Council for the treatment of tuberculosis was now in partial operation, and while the existing accommodation was far from sufficient for the needs of the riding it was being freely made use of pending the provision of additional sanatoria by the County Council. Under the heading of "Borough Extension Schemes" the report said that far-reaching proposals for the extension of the boundaries of Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax, involving the destruction of no less than 30 independent local authorities, were put forward by the Corporations of the respective boroughs. A special conference was convened by the committee to discuss the position, and resolutions were unanimously adopted protesting against the several extension schemes. The president and secretary subsequently attended a deputation to the President of the Local Government Board, and laid before him the views of the association. The President of the Local Government Board stated in reply that he would bear their views in mind, but could not commit himself in any way by an expression of his own opinion. The annexation schemes had, however, been withdrawn, and a threat that they would be revived on the first favourable opportunity; but the committee felt that their protest, coupled with that of other bodies interested, had not been without effect, and that the position of the smaller local authorities would in future receive a much more sympathetic consideration by the Local Government Board than formerly.

The report was adopted, and Mr Holliday re-elected chairman. Mr Richard Wilson (Skipton) and Mr W. C. Haigh (Hemsworth) were elected vice-chairmen, and Mr W. B. Pindar (Hunslet Urban Council) was reappointed secretary and treasurer.

Mr Pindar said they felt that at times strong influences were at work to put an end to small local authorities, and to hand over their administrative functions in larger bodies. By combination they would protect their interests and ensure their continued existence. Their relations with the County Council were most friendly and cordial, and great changes had taken place since they were some time ago, and the Council had endeavoured to meet the views of the Association as far as they reasonably could.

Mr E. C. Newstead (Clerk to the Wharfedale Rural Council) read a paper on "The Housing Problem." He suggested that local authorities should be encouraged to clear away their slums and put up wholesome dwellings by grants in aid from the Imperial Exhequer, that defaulting authorities, after receiving due warning, and after being given due opportunity, should be deprived of the exercise of this portion of their duties, and that in default the necessary work should be undertaken by an existing Government department working as far as practicable with the existing machinery.

The Rev. W. Pearson (Wetherby) said he thought that the large landowner and large property-owner in the country was not rendering as great a service as anyone in the community. The trouble had been with the small property-owner, who, either for want of inclination or cash, allowed his property to deteriorate. The root difficulty was, he thought, that local authorities were very slow to demand measures of reform which would involve the imposition of a rate. (Hear, hear).

In the discussion of further discussion one delegate evoked laughter by saying that the real problem was how to build houses in districts where the labourers were too poor to pay rent at all.

The Chairman moved a resolution approving generally of the combined nursing scheme of the West Riding County Council, but adding that the meeting was of opinion that the details of the scheme should be capable of modification to meet the circumstances of the different districts."

Mr Newstead seconded the resolution, which was carried.

THE GREAT DIVORCE CASE.

A MESMERIST'S STORY.

(By Dr. Kennedy).

A very dear friend of mine and his wife, who loved each other like two human love birds, so much so that jealousy sprang up on the part of the lady, and like a silly little woman she went advertised to no effect, and I argued that as everybody reads divorce cases, so she would not only be acquitted of any ill-doing but be restored to wealth. My friend Jack Spruce, who was a lawyer, had her case in hand, hence his frequent visits to the lady. Which logical explanation his wife would not hear of, and so the eventful day arrived.

I met the gentleman detective outside the Court. I talked to him, we drank, chatted, and smoked together. I worked on his nature, and found him a man with a degree, and I got him under my train of thought. I absolutely supervised his brain; in less time than it takes to tell he closed his eyes; and when he opened them again he was under my influence.

The case was called. The Court was crowded, and the bewigged barristers and jaunty ladies looked at the expectancy of something very smiled at the expectancy of something very sweet. The detective's questions went into the box and told how they popped through keyholes and saw what they ought "not" to have seen, and swore the character of the lady and Jack Spruce away. The last witness, the boss detective himself, was then called upon, he was near me in the body of the Court, and he went into the box well primed. On oath he swore that the whole thing was a fabrication from beginning to end, how the lady had come to him, as numbers of other ladies do, he had sent money to be made out of her, she had made it know he and his confederates who had preceded him in the witness-box had, instead of peeping at keyholes seeing imaginary compromising things, were comfortably seated in the "Hare 'em Arms" smiling "scotches and sodas," and how instead of their client's costs costing £300, as they had been put in, all they spent was about £5 on drinks.

Then came the turn of the barristers started, the ladies chuckled, and Jack Spruce and his wife kissed in open Court.

The "co-respondent" found his friends relations, and the detective and his pals were sent for trial.

MISSIONARY EXHIBITION AT WETHERBY

A ROUNDHAY RESIDENT AND MISSIONS.

THE NAME OF WETHERBY.

The opening ceremony on Thursday of the Church missionary exhibition, held at Wetherby Town Hall, was conducted by the Rev. E. P. Doudney, M.A., vicar of Bilton. Mr. W. Wilby, Mrs. Dodd, Mrs. and Miss Merry, Mr and Mrs. Hy. Crossley, Miss Groves, etc. There were also present a large contingent of people from Harrogate and other villages.

Mr Macpherson said that there had recently been published a book, entitled "Egypt in Transition," dealing with our occupation and administration of that country, with special reference to the development of the Soudan. It was stated therein that Lord Kitchener had thought it necessary, as regarded the penetrating of Christianity, to those provinces, in the interests of peace, and because at present the northern provinces are populated by Mohammedans for the most part, that it would be best that no effort should be allowed to be made there by missionaries, and so only in the southern provinces was such enterprise allowed for the southern provinces dwelt only the heathen. Without venturing to question the justice or wisdom of that decision, he would point out that sometimes things which were clear in the interests of peace in the long run had a contrary effect. As regards India, some were of opinion that had the Government been bolder, and presented Christianity along with education, we should have had less to deplore than was the case to-day. Only in the districts which were practically heathen were the missionaries to seek converts; but that was by no means the work, and they wanted to try and bring home to their fellow countrymen, Churchmen, and communicants the fact that the winning of converts was nothing less than the making known to those who had it not the most blessed knowledge they possessed—the knowledge of their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The missionary was doing their own work, as well as his own, and they were not true followers of Christ unless they took an interest in what their missionaries were doing. No one who read the newspapers could help but notice the fact that their old faith was being called into question, and very distressing it was to read. But on the other hand, it was very encouraging to read through the Epistles. They would have a great strengthening for their faith in listening to the talks at the courts of that character; and if they spread the Gospel to the world they would reap it back a thousand fold.

The Rev. W. H. Green said precisely a year ago in Leeds they were engaged in a similar effort, so he understood the nature of the work they had got in and the worries incidental to such an exhibition. But he brought them a very cheering lesson from their Leeds experience. They had been able to send £700 more this year to headquarters than in the previous year. It would not be true to say it was all the outcome of last year's exhibition, for some of it was due to the Swanage Conference, and to other sources; but the fact remained that to the exhibition was due something over 10 per cent. of the contributions from the parochial branches throughout the whole of the diocese. It had aroused interest, sympathy, and support aroused by the labours of the exhibition, and the interest excited by the holding of it. He trusted that the exhibition would have the same personality, and that they would have the same pleasing experience. He knew that they aimed at something more than having a successful exhibition in the way of attendances and the amount taken. The object was much more spiritual. They desired as a result of the exhibition an increase to be aroused in sympathy in the work of the foreign missions; they wanted also increased knowledge, increased responsibility, and kindled enthusiasm. Those were the objects they had before them. There was great need for a great increase of knowledge on missionary subjects. He believed in all honesty that there were few subjects upon which generally well-informed people were so ignorant as they were of foreign missions. They desired people to have an increased sense of their responsibility. Interest aroused was not sufficient. They desired also to kindle enthusiasm in the great cause of evangelising the world. The modern crusade was to carry life to the heathen countries, and not to carry death to the heathen, as did the Crusaders of old. Enthusiasm could only come through knowledge and a feeling of responsibility, and they needed little by little to lead up to this height. They must do all they could to help forward the power of that small band of missionaries endeavouring by their own power and the power of Jesus Christ to spread forth the saving knowledge which he gave them. The thought of evangelising must lift them up. If, by their exhibition they could do something towards this cause they should rejoice in the holding of it.

On Friday the Rev. G. S. Charlewood, M.A., vicar of Hunsingore, acted as chaplain, and the chair was occupied by the Rev. G. S. Lascelles, vicar of Harewood, and Rural Dean for the Wetherby Deanery.

The last-named expressed, on behalf of Mr G. Lane Fox, M.P., his great regret that he was unable to be present, and his wishes that the exhibition should be a great success.

The opening ceremony was performed by Sir Matthew Dodsworth, Bart., who said he hoped that exhibition would aid them greatly in the missionary cause in the town of Wetherby. The last syllable of the word Wetherby—bie—reminded one of the old Danish days, when they invaded the country, formed their "byes" or colonies, and then made war upon Christian residents. They were also reminded that the missionaries went to them with their Gospel in their hands, so that they were changed—that was all due to Christianity. They were not present at that exhibition merely as exhibitors or spectators, but as exhibits, telling of the victories of the Gospel of ancient times. The exhibits on the stalls reminded them of other races and nations throughout the world, all now brought so close together; a hundred years of research, invention, travel, trade, and colonisation had brought the world closer together, but in addition many of the old barriers which separated their minds had been swept away. Chinamen no longer called us "foreign devils," and we no longer looked upon Chinamen as being mere objects for a museum; they were nearer in heart. He asked them not to let the exhibition stop when the exhibition closed, but to carry the spirit of it into their daily lives. They must risk something, as the missionaries did, and give of their knowledge, money, and personal service. They needed reminding daily of Christ's claim upon their money, for everything was His in the first place. It was true that the missionary church was saving them from themselves, from the selfishness which was their chief danger. The greatest gift from God was the power of prayer, and with it they could go hand in hand with God to save the world for Him.

CROSSGATES, SEACROFT, AND HALTON MEDICAL CHARITIES.

WHAT THE DISTRICT GIVES—POOR RETURN FOR BENEFITS.

The annual meeting of Crossgates, Seacroft, and Halton Medical Charities Society was held in Cookman Inn (Hall) on Monday evening—Mr A Greenwood presiding.

Mr G. W. Beaumont, the hon. treasurer, in submitting the annual report and balance sheet, stated that at the commencement of the year there was a balance in hand of £52 12s. 5d., subscriptions amounted to £23 19s. 11d., concerts £2 6s. 8d., sales of flowers £8 3s. 6d., box at Children's Hospital, £3 10s., box at Travellers' Rest (Halton) 10s., box at Old Red Lion (Whinmoor) 7s., Crossgates Recreation Hall box 12s., Crossgates Bowling Club £2 10s., Crossgates Fisherboys' £2 8s., and Whitkirk Operatic Society £1, the total income being £106 10s. 7d. The Committee sent £30 to Leeds Infirmary, £10 to Leeds Women's and Children's Hospital, £10 to Leeds Dispensary, £3 to Whitkirk District Nursing Association, and £12 12s. 6d. was spent on "recommends." There is a balance in hand of £28 11s. 5d.

The Hon. Treasurer had prepared a statement, showing how much the district was indebted to the healing institutions of Leeds. The figures for the past twelve months were—Crossgates 9 inpatients, cost £26 10s., and 22 out-patients, cost £2 4s.—total £29. Seacroft, 4 in-patients, £17 12s., out-patients, 24, £2 8s.—total £20. Halton, 22 in-patients, £109 14s.; 33 out-patients, £3 6s.—total £103. Stanks, 2 in-patients, £9. For the district, 34 in-patients, £153 2s., and 79 out-patients, £5 14s.—total £168. Infirmary, Rev. R. Eagar, Messrs W. Holden, H. Dawson, P. S. Marsden, W. O. McLintock, and J. A. Rhodes (Whitkirk), and C. E. Fitton (Colton), Messrs L. J. Dewhirst, C.C., G. Chaffer and E. Townend (Seacroft), Rev. H. H. Malleson, Messrs E. Hawkesworth, H. Johnson, W. Popplewell, and R. Mills ((Crossgates), Mr J. A. Micklethwaite and other gentlemen; hon. treasurer, Mr G. W. Beaumont; hon. secretary, Mr A. Flowith, Crossgates; Committee (with power to add to their number)—Mesdames Beaumont, H. Johnson, and Greenwood, Misses Beaumont, E. Holliday, Messrs A. Greenwood, W. H. Harle, T. W. Tennant, and D. Mills (Crossgates), Mrs L. J. Dewhirst, Miss Dewhirst, Miss Townend, Miss B. Townend, and Mrs. Jenkinson (Seacroft), Mesdames E. Crosthwaite, Dockray, H. H. Giddings, F. Grover, and W. B. Pindar, and Messrs F. Hyde and G. Chaffer (Halton and Whitkirk), and Messrs J. H. Holgate and A. Goodall (Manston); hon. auditors, Messrs E. Hawkesworth and F. T. Hyde.

The hon. secretary reported that he had received £2 from Whitkirk Amateur Operatic Society.

It was stated that a sum of £10 had been set aside for "recommends" to convalescent homes, and the hon. secretary and hon. treasurer were appointed a sub-committee to deal with applications.

Mr Beaumont stated that it had been the intention to hold the annual out-door concert in July 18th, but they found that every Saturday in July was taken up with some function or other, and they recommended that the concert should not be held.

It was decided to have the annual sale of flowers on July 4th, and to arrange for an indoor concert in October.

The arrangements for ladies to make a house-to-house collection in the villages of the district were left with the hon. secretary.

GARDEN FETE AT MOOR ALLERTON HALL.

Brilliantly fine weather, charming surroundings, and a happy company of nearly 200 people combined to make a distinct success of a garden party and fete held on Saturday in aid of the Leeds Young Men's Christian Association. The enjoyable function took place in the grounds of Moor-Allerton Hall, Lidgett Lane, the residence of Mr R. Borrough Hopkins. The Lord Mayor (Mr E. A. Boutherton), the Lady Mayoress (Mrs. Charles Ratcliffe), and Mr Robert Armitage, M.P., President of the Association, were unable to be present at the opening of the proceedings, but they attended later in the afternoon. An apology for absence was received from Mr John Heppir, a past-president of the Association. Mr T. Brewster Hunter, Chairman of the Y.M.C.A. Council, presided in the place of Mr Armitage, and thanked Mr and Mrs Hopkins for their generosity in throwing open their delightful grounds for that garden party.

Mr W. H. Harding, who had organised the event, in a brief and direct speech, explained that they wanted to raise money. The expenditure of the Y.M.C.A. for each year was about £1,000, and the members were only able in various ways to subscribe £250. There was a subscription list, for a city like Leeds, with half a million people, of only £180 per annum from the citizens. Was it any wonder, he asked, that magistrates in other parts of Yorkshire looked in a deprecatory manner on what was going on in the underworld of Leeds. How could the partially necessary work amongst the young men be still carried on if the Association was not better supported? This subscription list from the citizens should be at least £500 per annum. The Association must have the money, and the city must not be left where it was.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr and Mrs Hopkins, on the motion of Mr J. E. Plant, seconded by Mr William Boston.

The flowers in the gardens and conservatories were greatly admired, and there was plenty of variety in the other entertainment provided before and after tea. A team of the Association's gymnasts, under Mr Mason Clarke, gave a capital display, and in addition there were sports, a concert troupe from the junior department of the Association, The Adel Reformatory School Band gave selections during the afternoon.

MR. LANE FOX, M.P., AND THE IRISH PROBLEM.

"MEN WHO SHOULD BE THEIR PRIDE."

Mr G. R. Lane Fox, M.P., speaking at the anti-Home Rule demonstration in Leeds on Saturday afternoon, said that the religious problem a few years ago in Ireland was settled, and the country was settled politically. The religious question had been again raised by the present Government, and they were bringing it to a position it had never held before. Every man who went over to Ireland, except a few irreconcilable cranks, was convinced of the necessity for maintaining the Union. He came back and said that he did not know until he went there what the Irish problem was. This feeling was shown in a letter which appeared in a newspaper the other day from Sir William Nunecy, a stalwart Radical, and an ex-M.P. for Pontefract. He said that over and over again he had voted Radical Home Rule, but since then he had been over to Ireland. He saw that they meant business, that their cause was an honest one, and that their cause was a true one. He had now changed his opinion, as many of those present would do if they had the opportunity of going over to Ireland. He (the speaker) knew from his own experience over there—and he challenged any man to contradict it—that commerce and prosperity went with Unionism and the Ulsterman. Wherever Unionists were, there prosperity, wealth, and success did not fail them. In Belfast they had the same condition which Irishmen always said came from the Union, which had raised such a great and prosperous community.

It was a community they were proud of, and it was as prosperous as any great city in this country. But compare the prosperity of Belfast with Dublin, which had the same opportunities, but was under Nationalist rule. In the one case they saw something of which Ulstermen were proud. In the other they saw what bad government could do compared to the good government in Belfast. Compare affairs in Belfast and Dublin. The slums, miserable wages, and distress in Dublin had made it a by-word in the cities of the world. That was what unionists did not want to see. That was what they wanted to avoid, and he came to ask them that day, were they going to put the efficient under the inefficient? Were they going to make them come under a Government which they knew to be corrupt and bad? Were they going to allow the British Army to be used to force these men to come under that rule? They talked about a plot of aristocratic officers! Who were those aristocrats in Belfast? They were the pick of the working men of Belfast, men who in Leeds would support the Labour party. They ought to be proud of them. They joined with the aristocrats of the drawing-rooms, but they were none the worse for that. They refused to be made parties to the bargain which the Government were trying to strike, and to allow the British Army to be used to force these men to come under that rule? They talked about a plot of aristocratic officers! Who were those aristocrats in Belfast? They were the pick of the working men of Belfast, men who in Leeds would support the Labour party. They ought to be proud of them. They joined with the aristocrats of the drawing-rooms, but they were none the worse for that. They refused to be made parties to the bargain which the Government were trying to strike, and to allow the British Army to be used to force these men to come under that rule? They were proud to be members. He wanted those present to support Ulstermen by their votes when the opportunity came, but he could not say how long this Government of limpets was going to keep that opportunity from them. Were they going to place this rule upon men who should be their pride? They were proud of them as fellow citizens. He was perfectly certain that they would not do that, and he asked them to use all their influence to prevent it, and then not any Government, or whatever completion or creed it might be, would dare to perpetrate the crime that was contemplated now—of driving on to civil war for such an unworthy and impossible object. (Applause).

AN INCIDENT AT ROUNDHAY.

I saw a quaint thing in Roundhay Park the other day (writes a correspondent). A duck was swimming proudly about with two ducklings near the margin of the Waterloo Lake. A rough-haired fox terrier caught sight of them, and stopped down to the water's edge to get a better view.

The duck immediately protested loudly, and endeavoured to get her ducklings away from what she believed to be a threatening danger. What feigned the dog's curiosity, and, after a moment's indecision, he proceeded to swim after the trio.

The cries of the alarmed mother grew more and more frantic, and soon the drake appeared on the scene. He did not seem particularly anxious to tackle the dog, however; and spectators on the bank were beginning to wonder whether the affair would have a tragic outcome, when suddenly a male swan dashed up to the rescue, hissing furiously.

He hardly gave a glance at the distressed mother, but made straight for the dog, who, after looking at his new and unexpected adversary, concluded that he had seen as much duck as he wanted for that day, and made post haste for the shore.

A THORNER THEFT CHARGE.

MISSING SHEARS.

On Tuesday at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions Thomas Lekenby, a groom, was charged with stealing a pair of pruning shears, the property of Mr Samuel Bickerdike, of Thorner Grange.

Evidence was given by Mr Bickerdike that on Friday, May 29th, the prisoner came to him and asked to be given some work. He was told to start the next day. About noon the prosecutor missed a small pair of shears, which he had shown in a letter which appeared in a newspaper the other day from Sir William Nunecy, a stalwart Radical, and an ex-M.P. for Pontefract. He said that over and over again he had voted for Home Rule, but since then he had been over to Ireland. He saw that they meant business, that their cause was an honest one, and that their cause was a true one. (Applause).

Mr Runciman: I have received some offers of land to be used for the purpose mentioned in the question. The Board have no power to accept such offers, but I understand the Commissioners of Woods and Forests might be able to take advantage of them. I found, however, that, in consequence of the peculiar constitutional position of the Commissioners, legal difficulties arose, and although in one case with which I persevered as an experiment I understand that the difficulties have at last been surmounted, it is clear that legislation is necessary before the Government can proceed on any considerable scale with the provision of cottages.

ACCIDENT.—Mr Robert England, landlord of the Rose and Crown Hotel, Selby, slipped while descending the steps leading from the bar in his house on Friday morning and sustained a fracture of the leg.

GASCOIGNE WOOD PARENTS' SAD BEREAVEMENT.

LITTLE SON DROWNED IN PICKERING BECK.

An inquest on the body of George Harry Thornton, son of Mr and Mrs C. J. Thornton, formerly of Gascoigne Wood, South Milford, who was drowned in the Pickering Beck, was held at Pickering before Dr. J. F. Porter (Coroner) on Thursday.

Charles J. Thornton identified the body as that of his child, who was about 4 years old. He said his son went out with other children in the field. He did not see him, however, after 1 o'clock. About 3 o'clock he was called from the station, and saw that his little boy had been taken out of the water. Efforts were made to restore animation by means of artificial respiration, and these were continued for an hour and three-quarters, but without avail. His child had frequently been chastised for going near the water, and his mother had no idea that he was playing there. She sent him out to take another child home to Brant Hill, but it seemed that instead of going there they had gone the other way to play.

Florence May Middleton stated that she was a nurse with Mr Westmoreland, of Pottre Hill. On the previous day she was on the wood bridge in Well's Walk. She saw three children playing in a grass field, and one of them went to the Beck side with a tin. She saw him fall into the water, but on going to the place she could not see anything of him. After this she went and told Mrs Westmoreland. There were no men about that she could get.

Replying to a question by the Coroner, Miss Middleton said she could not swim, and the place where the child had fallen into the water would be five feet deep. She did not think about going to tell the police.

George R. Hesp, a telegraph messenger, said he was crossing the bridge about three o'clock when he noticed looking over at the water, which was in flood, what appeared to be the body of a child floating down the stream. He noticed a red jersey, and at once gave the alarm to Mr Rod. Hey, who was passing at the time. Mr Hey run round behind the mill and called Mr Boyes, who dashed into the stream and pulled the body out. The water here would be about three feet deep. Mr Hey then went for Dr. Toke, who was soon on the spot.

Wm. Hy. Boyes, a warehouseman, of Pickering, said he was working in a warehouse near the beck when Mr Hey ran up and said there was a child in the water. He ran out at once and dashed into the water, which was about three feet deep. After getting the child out he and others started artificial respiration, but without success.

Replying to the Coroner, witness said he could not swim, but he did his best to save the child.

Superintendent Calvert said that he was present soon after the body had been taken out of the water, and testified to the efforts made to restore the child. Everything was done that could be done.

The Coroner said the case was a simple and clear one, but as sad as it was simple. He reviewed the evidence, and remarked that very great care and attention were often allowed to wander about with little or no control. This could hardly be avoided, as the father was where he ought to be, and had to earn the bread winner, as he did, while the mother had all the great responsibilities of the home to attend to. But there it was, and they would agree that every effort that could be made ought to be made to keep these children out of danger. Apart from this everything that could be done was done. Florence May Middleton, as a powerful swimmer, could hardly be expected to jump into this deep and rapid flowing water. Mr Boyes had acted as a man should act, and although a non-swimmer had plucked up courage and jumped in. His attention was drawn to a further belt which was fastened round the body. By means of the belt he got the remains to the side and then he informed Police-constable Rothwell. Witness described the body, and said that attached to the belt were two pieces of black material which had evidently formed part of a female's wearing apparel. He added that a party of two previous years had been an extra flush of water, and probably this was responsible for disturbing the body from the mud.

P.C. Leahy, Rothwell, said the remains were removed on a wheelbarrow to the Anchor Inn. On the belt was inscribed "The Leeds Surgical Supply Limited." Enquiry had been made, said the officer, but no one could establish the identity, neither had they any report of anyone being missing within the last two years.

The remains were interred at Pickering on Saturday afternoon.

HOUSING PROBLEM.—It is likely that the North-Eastern Company will build a number of houses at Selby for their employees, and so to some extent lessen the scarcity of workmen's dwellings. The company have already a number of houses on various parts of their property.

Inquiry is being made as to the workmen who would require houses, and nearly a hundred have already given in their names. The company own land at Selby near the railway lines on which cottages could be built.

SCOUTS' DEMONSTRATION AT ROUNDHAY

On Saturday the Boy Scouts of Leeds and district gave a demonstration in Roundhay Park. The proceedings began shortly before seven, when the Scouts were reviewed and inspected by the Lord Mayor (Mr E. A. Broutherton), who was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress (Mrs Charles Ratcliffe), and was escorted by a bodyguard of patrol leaders. After the inspection the boys "rallied," and were briefly addressed by Mr Brotherton, Commissioner W. A. Radley thanked the Lord Mayor, for whom three cheers were enthusiastically given, the Scouts raising their hats on poles.

There was an excellent turn-out, all the five divisions being well represented. Varied troop work then began, and several exhibitions were given on the ground at the same time. Trek carts were paraded, and the 3-in harnessed themselves with almost as much alacrity and precision as bluejackets manning a naval gun. Most of the carts were covered, and rather resembled ambulance waggons. After marching several times round the ground the trams wheeled into line and halted in the middle, when the order was given to pitch tents. The carts were full of camp equipment, and in a very few minutes the Scouts had tent poles up, pegs driven in, and guide ropes tightened. Meanwhile in other parts of the ground a number of Scouts were erecting a "bridge" by lacing out of rough poles bound together with ropes, and another troop was giving a gymnastic display. Another example of Scout training was seen in a fire fighting exhibition. A blaze was kindled, and a bugler sounded "Water," the call which tells a cavalryman to refresh his horse. To a Scout, however, it has another significance. Informed promptly brought up several who were running out a hose-pipe as they came. The extinguishing of the fire left a good deal to the imagination, but the way the Scouts dealt with a "casualty" was realistic enough. First aid was rendered, and the "victim," swathed in bandages, was put on a bicycle stretcher, an ingenious contrivance carried by three cyclists. Afterwards a bugler sound the call to "strike" camp, and all the equipment was quickly restored to the trek carts, and the Scouts got on the march again.

The troops then formed up. With massed drum and bugle bands they marched round the ground, and by way of a finale crossed the bridge, which had taken about an hour to complete, and looked like a rigid structure. The carts were dragged across, and no doubt a regiment of soldiers could have safely passed over it. Shortly afterwards the troops marched off home, the Caledonians stepping behind their piper to the tune of "Cock o' the North."

GRUESOME FIND AT ROTHWELL

SEX UNKNOWN.

The trunk of a human body, badly decomposed, was found in the River Aire at Rothwell Haigh on Thursday. It was recovered and removed by the police to the mortuary, by the side of the canal, and an inquest was held there on Monday morning by Mr P. P. Maitland.

Edgar Sainor Crowther, a miner, living at Waterloo School House, Rothwell, stated that about 1 p.m. on Thursday he was having a ramble along the river bank, when he saw something resembling a skeleton, floating in the water close to the bank. His attention was first attracted by a leather belt which was fastened round the body. By means of the belt he got the remains to the side and then he informed Police-constable Rothwell. Witness described the body, and said that attached to the belt were two pieces of black material which had evidently formed part of a female's wearing apparel. He added that a party of two previous years had been an extra flush of water, and probably this was responsible for disturbing the body from the mud.

P.C. Leahy, Rothwell, said the remains were removed on a wheelbarrow to the Anchor Inn. On the belt was inscribed "The Leeds Surgical Supply Limited." Enquiry had been made, said the officer, but no one could establish the identity, neither had they any report of anyone being missing within the last two years.

The remains were interred at Pickering on Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Buck, who examined the remains on Saturday, gave a description of them in full. The remains, he said, were bare, and without arms. The chest was entirely open and devoid of contents. The breastbone had gone, and there was nothing but the ribs and spinal column remaining. The left leg was entirely missing below the knee, leaving only the thigh bone. It had the appearance of having been torn off. The right also was missing below the knee, evidently a stump which had been amputated some time. It was impossible to tell the sex of what remained, said Dr. Buck, but from the ribs and the pelvis he thought it was a female. It was evident from the state of decomposition that it had been in the water over a year at least.

The Coroner raised the question as to whether the doctor thought the remains were part of an anatomical specimen from some hospital.

Dr. Buck replied that if such was the case the head would have been intact, and added that the old days were passed, nowadays all such got a decent burial. He also expressed himself of the opinion that the right leg had been amputated before death. With regard to the bone found around the body, Dr. Buck expressed the opinion that it was possible it had been used to support some surgical appliance for the injured limb.

The Coroner advised the jury to say that the body was that of some person, the sex and cause of death being unknown. The jury complied.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

60,285. (27th May, 1914).

Declaring Parts II, III., IV., VI., and X of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, to be in force.

ROTHWELL (YORKSHIRE) URBAN DISTRICT.

To the Urban District Council of ROTHWELL (YORKSHIRE);—

And to all others whom it may concern.

WHEREAS the Urban District Council of Rothwell (Yorkshire) (herein-after referred to as "the Local Authority") have, in pursuance of Section 3 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (herein-after referred to as "the Act of 1907"), applied to Us, the Local Government Board, to declare certain Parts of the Act of 1907 to be in force in the Urban District of Rothwell (Yorkshire) (herein-after referred to as "the District");

And whereas proof has been given to Our satisfaction of the advertisement required by sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Act of 1907, and at least one month has elapsed after the date of that advertisement:

NOW THEREFORE, in the exercise of Our powers in that behalf, We by this Order Declare, Specify, and Direct as follows; that is to say:—

ARTICLE I.—(1) On and after the day on which this Order comes into operation,— Part II.;
Part III.;
Part IV.;
Part VI.; and Part X.
of the Act of 1907 shall be in force in the District.

(2) Where a Section to which reference is made in the first column of the Schedule to this Order is a Section comprised in Part II., Part III., or Part IV., the Section shall be in force in the District subject to the following conditions and adaptations; that is to say:—

Unless and until We, by a further Order made on such application and after compliance with such requirements as are described and set forth in Section 3 of the Act of 1907, otherwise Declare, Specify, and Direct, the said Section, in its application to the District and in relation to the exercise of the powers and to the discharge of the duties of the Local Authority under that Section, shall have effect as if the words and figures set forth in the second column of the said Schedule opposite to the reference to that Section in the first column of that Schedule were added to and formed part of the Section.

ARTICLE II.—Within the period of three weeks immediately following the date of this Order, or, where in Our opinion the circumstances so require, within such later period as We by Order prescribe, the Local Authority shall cause this Order to be published by advertising the same once at least in one or more of the newspapers circulating in the District, and shall also cause a statement of the effect of this Order to be published in the London Gazette.

ARTICLE III.—This Order shall come into operation on the Eighth day of July, One thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

SCHEDULE.

Parts and Sections. 1.	Conditions and Adaptations. 2.
Part II.— Section Twenty-five	"The power of making or enforcing byelaws under section one hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, as extended by section twenty-three of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, with respect to the paving of yards and open spaces in connexion with dwelling-houses, other than yards and open spaces common to two or more dwelling-houses, shall cease to be exercisable."
Section Twenty-seven	(7) Nothing in this section shall apply to any temporary building erected or set up for use by the Territorial Force."
Section Thirty	"Nothing in this section shall apply to any wall or other structure in so far as the same is used either for the support of any street or public footpath, or for the protection of any street or public footpath from damage or obstruction, by reason of the surface of the street or footpath being above or below the level of the surface of the adjoining land, unless the wall or other structure was built after the street or footpath became a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large by or at the expense of a person other than the highway authority responsible for the repair of the street or footpath."
Part III.— Section Thirty-five	"This section, so far as it relates to the deposit of material, shall have effect subject to the first proviso to section ninety-one of the Public Health Act, 1875: "Byelaws made in pursuance of section seventeen of the Local Government Act, 1888, or for the prevention and suppression of nuisances shall not, in relation to any subject-matter of this section, be of any force or effect within the district."
Section Thirty-eight	"Nothing in this section shall prejudicially affect any power or right exercisable by or attaching to an owner or occupier of premises by virtue of section twenty-two of the Public Health Act, 1875, or of section eighteen of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890."
Part IV.— Section Fifty-nine	(6) Nothing in this section shall apply to a public or circulating library which is not within the district."

Given under the Seal of Office of the Local Government Board, this Twenty-seventh day of May, in the year One thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

A decision given by a bench of Northampton magistrates is not calculated to make people fulfil their obligations to parents. When a septuagenarian applies for an old age pension he must state the amount of his income, in order that the Insurance Committee may adjudicate upon the case, and it seems that an old man, either by oversight or by design, neglected to state that his family made him a small weekly allowance, and he was in consequence summoned before the magistrates and fined. It was contended—and with reason—that the family allowance was a voluntary one, and should not be considered in the amount of income, but the justices thought otherwise, and the old man had to suffer. The decision, whether right or wrong, is an unfortunate one for old people, because it may cause families, not too well off, to withhold assistance which, in other circumstances, would have been gladly given. And can such a contribution be termed income? It is not earnings nor is it the proceeds of investments, and depends entirely on the goodwill of the people who give it. A contribution made by a charitably-inclined person might with equal reason be viewed as income. Throughout the country there must be thousands of similar cases, yet not a word has been said about them, and something should be done in order that the Northampton decision may not rule future cases, to the hart of respectable aged folks, who should not be called upon to suffer because their children are kind to them. The judgment means that septuagenarians who have worked hard and brought up families may be debarred from receiving pensions if their children make them such allowances as would put them outside the purview of the Act, and this was not intended to be the reward of the old soldier of industry. But parents cannot very well look upon contributions from children as income, as they are liable to be withdrawn at any time, and unless there is some guarantee of their continuance it seems unfair to take cognizance of them. The spirit of the Old Age Pensions Act, as we understand it, is that persons who have not a dependable income of a certain amount are entitled to the reward granted by Legisla-sure, and the giving of the pension should not be contingent on the gifts which are given by a family from time to time. Under the Poor Law system the Guardians may recover from children in a position to pay it, the amount of out-relief given to parents, but the old age pensions have absolutely no connection with that system, and any attempt to bring a similarity of working into operation is to be deprecated.

Why do public bodies spend money in trying to create an opinion on questions with which they have no direct concern? In obtaining support to a resolution in connection with their own work a Council or Board of Guardians are acting in a perfectly legitimate way, because it is presumed that they understand the question better than outsiders, and are in a position to speak with authority, but when they attempt to create an agitation on a question which does not directly concern them they should be pulled up. A public body is not necessarily representative of the opinion of a district; in fact, it is doubtful that on many questions it in any way reflects accurately the views of the ratepayers generally, and it is, therefore, deserving of censure if it uses the public money for the purpose indicated. At their last meeting, for instance, Tadcaster Guardians were asked to give their support to a resolution in favour of increasing old age pensions, but why should Guardians, more than Parish Councils, be asked to take such a step? They are no more responsible for the administration of the Pensions Act than the Parish Councils, and the only way in which it affects their work is to reduce the amount of relief granted. Moreover, what is the value of such an opinion? It does not weigh with political parties, who alone have the power of promoting social or other legislation. Vaccination work is undertaken by Boards of Guardians, but they are no more qualified than other individuals to give an authoritative opinion on it except on its administrative side, yet how much money has been wasted in circularising Boards with respect to the conscientious objection phase. No one can say that pure beer or fiscal reform have any connection with the duties of a public administrative body, nor can it be said that one body is justified in using the ratepayers' money to promote protests against the expenditure of another. The humour of such a situation is lost upon people engaged in the agitation. Public bodies, whose work lies in other directions, have been asked to urge the Legislature to take certain action on education, employers' compensation, nationalization of railways, and even on Socialism, and probably things will go on in the old way until the official auditors call a halt by surcharging people for money expended on agitation which has not a direct bearing on their work. It would be interesting to have a return of all expenditure on printing, deputations, conferences, etc. Thousands of pounds must be thrown away annually in this way, and the results are such as to arouse the righteous indignation of the ratepayers.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL.

LEEDS WEST RIDING PETTY SESSIONS.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Morkill (in the chair), Col. A. M. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr F. M. Lupton, Mr J. Hirst, and Mr H. Evans.

CONSERVATISM.—Under the auspices of the Normanton Division Conservative Association a successful open-air meeting was held at Rothwell on Wednesday night, the speaker being Mr Thomas Enfield. The meeting was presided over by Councillor J. Hirst.

IN THE BECK.—A sensation was caused at Rothwell on Saturday afternoon by a man who was seen acting in a strange manner in the beck which runs through the town. Owing to his actions he was apprehended by the police, but could give no clear account of himself beyond remarking that he had walked from London in two hours. The unfortunate man, who was almost wet through, was taken to the Workhouse at Rothwell Haigh and detained. According to letters found in his possession his name is Francis John Mulkey (53), a native of Dublin, and a tailor by trade. Evidently he had made his way from Leeds.

ENTERTAINERS STRANDED.—There is a pathetic ring about the story of a party of entertainers being stranded at Lofthouse Park. As is pretty well-known, this little pleasure resort has been doing poor business. Since Whitsuntide there has been a band at the Park, the performers having been engaged for the season—until October. Owing to the poor attendance of the public, however, the band have not been called upon to play regularly, and a few days ago the musicians agreed to forego their engagements on condition, so they say, that all received a certain sum and their return train fares. Only a small portion of the agreed amount, they allege, has been forthcoming, and as the performances have been abandoned and their engagements have terminated, they find themselves stranded without the wherewithal to carry them home. Accordingly, as a final effort, they arranged an entertainment at the Park "on their own" on Saturday night, with the object of raising funds for the temporary relief of their difficulties. In addition to the ten members of the band there are one or two labourers, a couple of electricians, the owner of the wonderful horse "Billy," a female employee, and others. Three of musicians come from as far afield as Glasgow—one of them managed to scrape enough together to go home by a night excursion on Friday—another hails from Cambridge, and two are from Glossop. The one in the worst plight, perhaps, is a man from Glasgow, who has his wife and little boy with him. The young woman told a pitiable tale of the privations of the family. All that her husband had received since the beginning of the engagement was 18s., and their landlady had threatened to turn them out on Monday. With tears in her eyes she told how she had had to pawn everything possible, and she said her husband had had no food on Friday and Saturday. Several others of the musicians told similar stories. One or two, having nothing wherewith to pay for lodgings, have been sleeping in the pavilion. A labourer with two little boys, who has been at the park since it opened, is absolutely "on the rocks," and it was noon on Saturday before he broke his day's fast—and then his meal consisted only of a loaf of bread and some tea, kindly provided by one of the bandsmen, himself in almost as sad a plight.

ALLERTON BYWATER

On Saturday afternoon Allerton cricketers had a match with Breffits, and the Allerton team won by six wickets. Their opponents were dismissed for 40.

HOMING.—On Saturday members of Allerton Bywater Homing Society sent 95 birds to take part in the race from Bournemouth. Results:—Booth Bros. 776 (wins 6d. pool and 5s. special), Hutchinson 775, Hall 749, Smith and Rhodes 748, 721 (wins 5s. and 1s. pools), Bescomb 683, Atkinson 681.

EJECTMENT ORDER.—At the Castleford Petty Sessions on Tuesday Mr Tadcaster, a Pontefract District Council made application for an ejectment order, under the Housing and Town Planning Act, against Mr Alfred Harding, Bowers Row, Ackhithe, Allerton Bywater. Evidence was given by Mr H. M. Driver, surveyor and sanitary inspector, that a closing order was made by the Council on the owner of the cottage, who has five defendant children. She was allowed £20 down, and 7s. 6d. a week.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—The attendance at Barwick School last month was excellent, the percentage being 94.07 against 90.10 for May last year. The number of scholars on the register was 159, and the average attendance 151. At Scholes School the attendance was affected by sickness, the percentage being 72.76 as compared with 92.21.

GREATEST LOCAL PREACHER.—Boggard House, Leeds, held about a thousand people, and its erection was a prophetic vision of the society of last seven years' growth. Here for seventy years the Leeds Wesleyan Conferences assembled, and here the famous meeting took place, on the 6th of October, 1813, the centenary of which has just been kept as the birthday of the Foreign Missionary Society. Among the names of the lay fathers of Leeds Methodism associated with that day was that of William Dawson, of Bernbow, the greatest local preacher Methodism ever had, who delivered the crowning speech of the occasion.

BOWERS ALLERTON

At Bowers Allerton School last month the percentage of attendance was 93.55 against 95.28 for May last year.

BIBLE CLASS.—Mr Askew, of Methley, addressed the Bible Class last Friday evening, his subject being "What Religion means to me." He gave much evidence in proof of Christ's assertion that Christians should be the "salt of the earth," to keep and render more wholesome the human race.

ALCOHOL AND RACE DEGENERACY.—The fortnightly meeting of the Mission Hall Band of Hope was held on Thursday in the open air, at a place where workmen, the congregate, and among a good number of men and women listened with appreciation to a lecture full of sound reasoning on "Alcoholism and Race Degeneracy," delivered in an impressive style by Mr W. Lockwood, of Leeds. Mr Josiah Wade presided, and, in his remarks, referred to the fact that up to about three years ago he was one of the heaviest drinkers in the district, but now, thanks to the fellowship he had found at the Mission Hall, and the influence of the Master whom they all endeavoured to follow, he was master of the drinking tendencies which once so completely held him down. Temperance solos and recitations were rendered by members of the band.

CARLTON

ANNIVERSARY.—The Carlton Wesleyan Sunday School anniversary services were continued on Sunday, when the children and teachers again sang their festival hymns. In the morning and evening sermons were preached by Mr Buckroyd, of Leeds, and at the children's service in the afternoon Mr Buckroyd also gave an address. At all the services the singing was conducted by Mr T. Hampson.

CROSSGATES

The third annual exhibition of Crossgates and District Sweet Pea Society will take place on Saturday, July 25th. See advt.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—Anniversary services will be held at the Wesleyan Church on Sunday, and the special preacher will be the Rev. G. Edward Young, of London. In the afternoon the cantata "Day and Night" will be sung by the choir. On Monday evening Mr Young will deliver a lecture on "Some key words of Life." See advt.

OUTING.—On Saturday the members of the Crossgates branch of the League of Young Liberals had a most enjoyable outing to Whitby. The party had a saloon carriage placed at their disposal, and on the homeward journey they had a whist drive. The first prizes were won by Mrs Morgan and Mr Garner, Mr Green secured the "sealed," and Mr Steele the "booby."

THE LATE MR CASTELOW.—On Tuesday the death occurred at Beulah House, Crossgates, of Mr Ben William Castelow. Deceased, who was in his 79th year, had lived in the district for many years, and was one of the oldest residents of Crossgates. Mr Castelow was at one time the proprietor of the Old Railway Inn, Marsh Lane, Leeds. He leaves a grown-up family to mourn his loss, his wife having predeceased him.

COMPENSATION.—At Tadcaster County Court it was stated that Lucy Plows, of Manston, whose late husband was employed in connection with a threshing machine, was entitled to £122 12s. in all. His Honour allowed her £100, and her five children amounts varying from £10 to £17 12s. The money will be paid at the rate of 4s. a week to the widow (who received £3 down), and 2s. 6d. a week to each of the children.

B.W.T.A.—The Crossgates and district branch of the B.W.T.A. held the June meeting in the grounds of Whinmoor Lodge, by the invitation of Mrs Dewhirst, who presided. There was a good attendance. Mrs Carr (Halton) gave a report of the London conference, which she attended as a delegate, and Miss Embleton also addressed the meeting. Miss Dewhirst gave a recitation in every way appropriate. Tea was kindly provided by Mrs Dewhirst. Fifteen new members were enrolled. Votes of thanks were passed to Mrs Dewhirst for her hospitality, to Mrs Carr for her report, and to Miss Embleton for her inspiring address.

UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL CLASS.—On Thursday evening a meeting was held in the Crossgates Wesleyan School premises for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming a University Tutorial Class. Mr J. M. Armistead, of Whitkirk, presided, and there were between thirty and forty ladies and gentlemen present. Excellent addresses were given by Professor F. W. Moorman, of Leeds University, and Mr G. H. Thompson, secretary of the Workers' Educational Association, and others who afterwards spoke were the Chairman, Mr R. Mellor, Mr Birch, Mr Young, Mr Wood, and Mr Appleton. It was decided to form a class, and a provisional committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

PROPOSED RECREATION FIELD.—A number of residents have suggested the advisability of securing a piece of land in the centre of the village for the purpose of providing a playground for the children, who have nowhere, except the streets, to play their games. They state that in a few years the land may not be available, and they think that the time for action is now. It is suggested that Leeds Corporation should be approached by means of a petition signed by the residents, and, as regards the cost, it is believed that few, if any, people in Crossgates would object to paying the amount of a penny rate, which, it is assumed, would meet all expenditure. As the first step of proceeding, were the Corporation disinclined to take the responsibility, would be, if the owner were willing, by the villagers, through a management committee, renting the field.

RECREATION HALL BOWLERS—LADIES' DAY.—On Saturday afternoon the members of the Crossgates Recreation Hall Club invited their wives and lady friends to witness the drive, which was won by Mr J. Cowl, Mr A. Bowman being second. Mr Cowl, who is the club's captain, was presented with a smoking cabinet. After a substantial tea the ladies tried their luck on the green, and some very good play was seen. Subsequently all adjourned to the large hall, and songs and duets were given by Mrs Withy, Mrs D. Johnson, Miss E. Harrison, Mrs Goldthorpe, and Messrs. Mr. Johnson, Mr. Geo. Brook, Mr A. Withy, Mr F. Johnson, Mr J. Airey, Mr E. Coates, Mr J. Fisher, and Mr J. Cowl. Miss Fisher and Mr Preston, Mr Bacon and Mr Dixon, jun., were solo and piano duets. Miss A. Fisher was an excellent accompanist. A most enjoyable afternoon and evening were spent.

CROSSGATES BOWLING CLUB.—The annual ladies' day in connection with this club was held on Saturday. A large number of the members with their wives and friends took advantage of the very fine day and took part in what was one of the best functions ever held by the club on the green. A mixed bowling drive, in which 20 ladies took part, was played in the afternoon, at the conclusion of which tea was provided by Mrs Ryder, of the Station Hotel, and served by herself and Miss Ryder, was partaken of. After tea the President (Mr C. Holiday) presented the prizes won in the drive, the following being the winners:—First prize, Mrs Armytage; second prize, Mrs Holliday; third prize, Mrs Morton; fourth prize, Miss Firth; fifth prize, Mrs Ryder; sixth prize, Mrs T. Firth. A pleasant and interesting feature of the proceedings was the number of children who disported themselves on the green after the fun of the bowls, and who became suddenly inspired with a desire for proficiency in the game. A number of challenges were reported which will no doubt in fulness of time fructify.

GARFORTH

RATES.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday three Garforthians were summoned by the Garforth Urban Council for non-payment of the general district rate, and orders for payment were made.

WITHDRAWN.—When the charge of assault against Albert Nicholson, a miner, of Garforth, and Florence Crosbland, a single young woman, of Garforth, was called for hearing at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday, the prosecutor, Thomas Kilbride, Garforth, asked the magistrates for leave to withdraw the charge, explaining that the parties were now friends again. The permission was given.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—The percentage of attendance for Garforth district last month was 90.52 as against 87.58 for May last year, and Garforth R.C. returned the highest figures, 95 against 85.78. The returns for the other Garforth schools were:—Garforth Council, mixed, 92.72 against 92.04; Garforth Council, infants, 85.12 and 88.06; East Garforth, 93.20 and 91.25; Garforth Parochial, mixed, 92.68 and 91.71; and Garforth Parochial, infants, 88.73 and 86.21.

ARDEN'S CHALLENGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Aaron Backhouse, miner, of Garforth, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Garforth on Monday, June 1st. P.C. Beadon stated that about 9 p.m. on the day in question he saw the defendant, who was drunk, outside the Goose Inn, Garforth, and using obscene language. There was a lot of people around at the time, and defendant was offering to fight anyone in the crowd. A fine of 15s. and costs was imposed.

ON LICENSED PREMISES.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Thomas W. J. Hepple, miner, of Garforth, was summoned for having been drunk on licensed premises. P.C. Bevcor stated that about 5 p.m. on Monday, June 1st, he was in the Station Road at Garforth, when he saw the defendant, who was the worse for drink, enter the Miners' Arms. On going towards the public-house he saw Hepple being ejected by a barman. Later he was taken home by two friends. A fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—On Sunday anniversary services were held in Garforth Wesleyan Chapel, and there were fairly good congregations. The special preacher was the Rev. G. H. Armitage, of Dewsbury, who was very popular in Garforth when he was one of the circuit ministers. At the morning service he spoke on "Walls of salvation," and at the evening service his subject was "Walls of fire." The choir gave an excellent rendering of the anthem "Wake thou that sleepest." In the afternoon Mr Armitage delivered an address to the Brotherhood and Sisterhood. Collections were made at all services for the Chapel Funds.

IN DARKNESS.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Walton, miner, of Stourton, was summoned for riding a bicycle without a light at Garforth. P.C. Bevor stated that about 1.15 a.m. on Monday, June 1st, he was on the Leeds and Selby Road at Garforth Bridge, when the defendant came along on a bicycle, which was without a light. When spoken to he said the light had gone out as he was coming down the hill. The constable saw the defendant about 500 yards away, and the lamp was quite cold when he came up. After being spoken he lighted his lamp without any difficulty and rode away. A fine of 1s. and costs was imposed.

GARFORTH W.M. BOWLING CLUB.—On Saturday afternoon Garforth W.M. had a League match with Garforth, and it resulted in a win for the W.M. by 208 to 104. Details (Garforth W.M. names first):—Whitley (captain) 21 v. C. H. Slater 8, W. H. Monks 21 v. D. Gent 15, A. Reed 21 v. G. Walker 1, M. Morritt 21 v. T. Brownridge 4, G. Hill 21 v. T. S. Slater 4, W. Venables 21 v. A. Dickinson 21, G. Freeman 21 v. A. Mathers 18, A. Cockrem 21 v. E. Walker 5, T. Whitley 21 v. F. Walker 17, and T. Simpson 21 v. G. Randall (capt.) 13. Tomorrow (Saturday) Garforth W.M. play Batley C. and B.C. in the second round of the Yorkshire Consolation Cup on the Gipton Bowling Green.

A PONY DRIVER'S EXCUSE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday William Booth, a pony driver, of Garforth, was summoned for riding a motor-cycle at Garforth without a licence. P.C. Jackson stated that about 6.30 p.m. on Friday last he was in Main Street, Garforth, when he saw the defendant on a motor-cycle. He stopped him and enquired whether he had a licence, and the defendant replied that he had not, as the machine belonged to someone else, but he would take it back until he obtained one. He was told he would be reported. Defendant said he had been sent to get some petrol for the bicycle, and he thought there was no harm in getting on the machine and pedalling. The engine was not running.—The officer said the engine was going, but as soon as the defendant saw him he stopped it. The Bench said they would make the fine as light as possible, and ordered the defendant to pay 2s. 6d. and costs.

PICTURE HOUSE.—At this popular house of entertainment the features in the beginning of the week were the three films "Rag Pickers of Paris," "Tapped wires," and "A healthy neighb-urhood," and they took well. For the week-end the outstanding film is "Dr. Gar-El-Hama," describing the adventures of a master criminal, and his escapades will afford plenty of excitement. "The price of thoughtlessness" and other pictures of interest complete the programme. For the first three nights of next week a thrilling and exciting production by the Gaumont Company, entitled "The Mystery of the Kaiser Cliffs" is promised, and other attractions will be "The Breed of the North," a strong two-reel drama of the Lubin Company of Western life, and "Runaway Coal horses," and "A twelve o'clock." For the week-end the principal feature will be a picture of the Fantomas series, entitled "The Tragedy of the Masked Ball," showing further adventures of this daring criminal. Other excellent films will be screened, and the patrons of the house are assured of first-rate entertainment. For times and prices see advt

POLICE SPORTS.—On Wednesday afternoon the annual match between the Skyrack Police and Garforth Tradesmen was played on the Garforth Club's ground, before a good crowd of spectators. The police gave a good batting exhibition, and the honours were carried off by P.S. Haigh, of Halton (25), and P.C. Brown, of Gildersome (34). The total was 82. Garforth Tradesmen, who won by four wickets, had the assistance of the brothers Glover and Morley, of the Garforth club, and the Glovers batted splendidly. P.C. Marph had the best bowling record for the police. The scores were:—Skyrack Police—P.C. Wilmack, b Glover, 0; P.C. Marples, c Morley, b Glover, 4; P.C. Brown, b Ward, 34; P.C. Hankinson, b Glover, 0; P.C. Hemsley, b Ward, 25; P.C. Lockett, b Hancock, 9; P.C. Otter, b Ward, 3; P.C. Bennett, b Ward, 0; P.C. Beaumont, b Ward, 0; P.C. Hutchinson, not out, 0; P.C. Hesketh, b Ward, 12; extras, 3; total, 82. Garforth Tradesmen—A. Pickersgill, c Bennett, b Marples, 0; S. Glover, b Marples, 38; W. Glover, c and b Marples, 0; A. Morley, c Otter, b Marples, 0; Williamson, b Marples, 5; T. Slater, c Haigh, b Marples, 2; Laycock, not out, 7; W. Goodall, not out, 10; extras, 3; total (6 wkts), 82. In the evening sports were held, and races for school children aroused some interest. A pig-guessing competition attracted numerous entries, and bowling at the cricketers was participated in by large numbers anxious to distinguish themselves as trundlers. Excellent selections of music were discoursed by Garforth Band, who in the evening played for dancing. The weather was all that could be desired, and the gathering proved a very enjoyable one.

GREAT PRESTON

At Great Preston School last month the per centage of attendance was 88.54 against 91.95 for May last year.

JOSEPH'S LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Joseph Simpson, a miner, of Great Preston, was summoned for having used obscene language at Kippax. P.C. Gough stated that about 6 p.m. on Monday, June 1st, he was on duty in Station Street, Kippax, and saw the defendant, who was under the influence of drink, making use of bad language. When told he would be reported, defendant said "Well, I shall have to stand it." He was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

HALTON

BOWLING.—On Saturday afternoon Halton bowlers defeated Tadcaster by 199 to 152, and Halton Travellers scored 189 to Garforth Conservatives 168.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—At Colton School last month the percentage of attendance was 89.76 as compared with 91.53 in May last year; at Halton School, mixed, 89.62 against 85.59; and at Halton School, infants, 85.32 against 72.55.

WESLEYAN CHAPEL—ORGAN OPENING.—On Saturday, June 27th, the new organ at the Wesleyan Chapel will be opened by Mr Atkinson, of Churwell, and the preacher at the dedication service will be the Rev. George Allen, B.A., of Leeds. In the evening there will be an organ recital and public meeting. For particulars see advt.

KIPPAX

PARISH CHURCH.—A special service for women was held in the church on Sunday afternoon, when an address was given by the Vicar on "The Safe Plbt."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—The percentage of attendance for the schools in Kippax district last month was 90.62 against 92.02 for May last year. At the Boys' School it was 93.27 against 93.61; Girls' School, 90.91 against 86.44; and Infants' School, 83.99 against 85.98.

G.F.S.—The G.F.S. in connection with the Parish Church was well represented at the Girls' Friendly Society Festival which was held at Oulton on Saturday, when 22 of the members journeyed there by waggonette. The Vicar and Mrs Smith, who take a deep interest in the movement, accompanied them. Service was held in the Oulton Church, the curate in charge preaching the sermon. Tea was provided for the visitors by the Oulton friends. The five members of the Kippax Society who were presented with certificates were presented for five years' membership were as follows:—Miss Sylvia Wright, Miss Nellie Green, Miss Florence Firth, Miss Jane Logg, and Miss Sarah Handley. Seven parishes were represented at the festival.

M.P. FOR OSGOLDCROSS.—At Goole on Wednesday a two days' bazaar and garden fete in aid of the Bartholomew Hospital were opened by Mrs Holmes, of Maidenhead, the eldest daughter of Sir J. Compton-Rickett, M.P. There was a large attendance of prominent townspeople, Sir Joseph himself presiding over the proceedings. In the course of a short though interesting speech the hon. member for Osgoldcross observed that some people asked, seeing that Governments had gone so far in helping the country, why they should not help to free the pitals. It might be in the future that the hospitals of this country would be taken over by the authorities, and form one part of public service. They were always glad to get any great exhibition of individual work in this country, just as they liked to preserve the friendly societies, and there had been a great deal done in founding and conducting the hospitals of this country, which represented a monument of independence and self-sacrifice, that they would hesitate before they parted with them.

UNITED METHODIST CHURCH.—The Sunday School anniversary services were held on Sunday, and Mr W. S. Blackburn, of Astley, was the preacher for the day. His sermons were based on "Beginning well." There was, he said, a sad decline of family religion. Amidst all the work of human life there was none more suggestive than that of building. In the building of a fortune or a name, it was best always first to build an altar. Without the parent altar, the basis to work on for results of evangelical endeavour would be much less.—The children's service which was held in the afternoon was well attended. Special hymns were sung by the teachers and scholars, who had been trained by Mr Joseph Ratcliffe (choirmaster). Recitations were given by several of the scholars, under the direction of Miss Halliday and Mr George Bleasby. Mr Brown's string band (Castleford) rendered efficient service, along with the organist (Mr W. Halliday). The church was filled at the evening service, when Mr Blackburn gave a short address to mothers. The special hymns and recitations were again contributed. The parade through the village took place on Monday afternoon, and the hymns were sung at various points, led by the choir. The children had tea in the church, and afterwards each scholar was presented with a handkerchief and nuts. The public tea attracted a large company, and was served by Mrs Atha Barton, Mrs G. Goodall, Mrs E. Smales, Mrs Allerton, Miss H. Goodall, and Miss Hemingway, of Great Denton. The children played their games in a field kindly lent by Mr J. P. Howson. The street and Sunday collections realized £11 11s. 11½d.

LEDSHAM

The percentage of attendance at Ledston School last month was 86.27 against 85.45 for May last year.

METHLEY

Mr Henry E. O'Dwyer, of Hazel House, Methley, left £14,961.

MICKLEFIELD

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—At Micklefield Infants' School, singular to say, the percentage of attendance last month was precisely the same as for May last year, viz., 87.40, while in the Mixed School it was 89.49 against 92.54.

MICKLEFIELD WESLEYAN CHURCH.—On Tuesday the choir held their annual effort. A public tea was provided in the afternoon, and in the evening the cantata "The Rock of Ages" was rendered by the choir, conducted by the composer, Mr John O. Bilbro, of Bradford. Mr E. England, of Ledston Luck, presided. The cantata was performed in an excellent manner, and the choir very generally appreciated Mr Wilby's valuable advice which they received on previous occasions, and this no doubt greatly enhanced the value of the performance of a most difficult work. The principal parts were rendered by Miss Eva Taylor (soprano), Miss Hilda Taylor (contralto), Mr S. Wallis (tenor), Mr H. Gill (bass), and they were all splendidly sung. The soprano and contralto are promising young singers, and the way in which they rendered their parts was most creditable. Mr W. H. Hemingway presided at the organ.

Mr Witty gave an address on music and its aid to public worship, and it was greatly appreciated.

MOORTOWN

CRICKET.—On Saturday afternoon Moortown, at home, had an easy win over Leeds St. Clement's. Scores:—St. Clement's—H. Walton 8, Hey 29, Quinn 8, Hartswaite 3, Langbonne 3, Margatroyd 0, Dalby 14, S. Walton 3, Daniels 3, Chandler 2, Wilson (not out) 1; extras 7; total 81. Moortown—Wilson 13, M. Topham 0, France (not out) 46, Layton 6, Haywood 5, A. Topham (not out) 19, extras 7; total (4 wkts.), 83.

JOULTON

ATTENDANCE.—At Oulton School, mixed department, last month, the percentage of attendance was 87.18 as compared with 95.18 in May last year, and for the infants' school 88.70 against 91.30. The percentage for the district was 90.15.

GOLF.—In the competition for the June medal at Oulton the scores were:—A. P. Bolland, 89, 9, 80; F. Denton, 100, 16, 84; W. A. Gibson, 108, 24, 84; J. T. Tomlinson, 97, 12, 85; J. W. Jeffery said he was 106, 21, 89; J. J. Brown, 113, 24, 89. 20 cards were taken out.

SCOUTS.—On Saturday a party of Scouts, numbering 30, and forming the South-East Leeds District troop, joined in the rally and demonstration of Scouts which took place in Roundhay Park as a wind-up of the National Scouting week, a report of which appears in another column.

LANGUAGE.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Samuel Booth, a labourer, of Oulton, was summoned for having used obscene language. P.C. Coldwell said that on Saturday, June 6th, at about 11.45 p.m., he was on duty in Oulton Lane, Oulton, near the vicarage, when he heard the defendant shouting and quarrelling and making use of language not fit to be repeated in public.—Booth, who admitted the offence, was fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

ANNIVERSARY.—Anniversary services in connection with the Oulton Wesleyan Sunday School were held on Sunday. The sermons were preached by the Rev. A. T. Kennings, of Headingley College. The afternoon was devoted to a children's service, and Mr H. Bedford presided. The children, who had been trained by Mrs Penn and Miss Henslock, gave recitations, and the singing of the special hymns was also a pleasing feature. Mr W. Waddington presided at the organ, and there was an efficient string band.

G.F.S.—The annual festival in connection with the G.F.S. took place on Saturday afternoon, when about 250 members of the organization were entertained at the Hall. Representatives were present were Rothwell, Middleton, Kippax, Oulton, Great Preston, and Swillington. The clergy present included the Rev. E. G. W. Bence (vicar of Rothwell), and the Rev. H. E. Wienckie (curate), the Rev. E. B. Smith (vicar of Kippax), and the Rev. A. E. Glover (vicar of Middleton). During the afternoon a number of certificates and prizes were distributed, and later games, and dancing, to music, supplied by the Oulton Band, were indulged in. Altogether a very enjoyable time was spent.

STOURTON

A MENDICANT.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday James Harrison, an ironworker, of no fixed abode, was sent to prison for seven days for begging at Stourton on Monday.

P.S.A.—On Sunday there was a highly satisfactory attendance at the weekly P.S.A. service held in the Primitive Methodist Church. Mr H. Hemingway presided, and an interesting address was given by Mr W. Thurwell, of Rothwell. Mr Waterton was the organist.

SWILLINGTON

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—Swillington Common School has the best attendance of the schools in the district, the percentage being 95.24 against 93.10 for May last year, while the figures for the Swillington Parochial School were 91.85 against 90.

WOODLESFORD

CRICKET.—Woodlesford first had no match on Saturday, but the junior team entertained Altofts Wesleyans, and succeeded in annexing the points by a majority of six runs. The homesters batted first and secured 48, of which H. Bennett had 25 and T. Morton 11. Altofts looked like pulling off an easy victory, but the batsmen's efforts only realised 42. For Woodlesford H. Williams captured 6 for 14 and Bennett 4 for 9. Scores:—Woodlesford A—L. Taylor 2, H. Bennett 25, F. Baxter 0, L. Wilkinson 0, T. Morton 11, J. Holmes 1, H. Williams 0, J. Hamer 0, T. Collin 0, W. Carter 0, W. Madely (not out) 0, extras 3; total, 48. Altofts Wesleyans A—J. Brown 6, J. Hollis 15, W. Carter 2, C. Hampson 2, J. Gibbons (not out) 3, A. Richards 1, G. Thompson 4, T. Hopson 1, W. H. Brown 3, W. Poxon 0, T. Penney 0, extras 5; total, 42.

THOUGHT IT WAS TRIFLING.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Edgar Speak, a steel smelter, of Leeds, was summoned for not having a dog described as dangerous, under proper control. P.C. Broughton stated that about 4.50 p.m. on Tuesday, June 2nd, he saw a dog chasing sheep in a field in Carr Slade Hill, when he saw a dog chasing a sheep in a field. The defendant, who was standing at the roadside, whistled to the dog on seeing the officer. Broughton said the defendant called the dog a pomeranian, but he called it a big dog. The dog was brought into court and proved to be a pomeranian. Defendant denied that the dog was chasing sheep, and said he could have brought a witness but he thought the case was too trifling. A fine of 1s. and costs was imposed.

MR E. H. FOSTER, J.P., AND THE POLICE.

There was some discussion at a meeting of the West Riding Standing Joint Committee, held at the Town Hall, Wakefield, on Wednesday—Mr T. H. Morris in the chair—on the petition of police superintendents and inspectors under the new scale of pay and conditions of service which has been adopted by the Committee. The agenda included a number of applications from officers of the ranks named for pensions to be guaranteed, and also for a joint "long-service class."

Mr Herbert Smith pointed out that it was optional for the Committee to place the officers in the "long-service class," which meant that each of the superintendents elected was put into the class would get an advance of 2s. a day, of 14s. a week, or £36 10s. a year. According to the regulations in force at present, the officers had served their time, and could retire on a pension. The proposal before the Committee was an indirect way of getting an advance of salary, and he moved that no such advance be granted. His objection also applied to the inspectors who had put in applications.

Mr E. H. Foster said it was a pity Mr Smith had been prevented by illness from attending the special Committee meeting at which the scheme had been approved. The whole matter had been considered at length, and the opinion of a large majority of the members was that it was a proper thing to allow the superintendents and inspectors to have the benefit of the "long-service class." Mr Smith argued against the principle, and not against the selection of any particular individual. Surely it was not in order for the question to be raised?

The Chairman ruled that Mr Smith's amendment was not in order as applied generally, but that the point might be raised in each individual case.

As each application came forward, therefore, Mr Smith moved, and Alderman P. H. Booth seconded, that the request be granted. The whole of the applications were granted, the amendment only securing three votes.

NEW ROAD.—The Selby Urban Council on Wednesday night received a recommendation from the Highways Committee that the Local Government Board be asked to sanction the purchase of property in Gowthorpe Street, to enable the Council to make a new road into Flaxby Road, and the sanction to a loan of £3,600 was also given in connection with the same project.

LADIES AS GUARDIANS.—At the meeting of the Leeds Board of Guardians on Wednesday the old question of the constitution of the purchasing committee again came up. The House Committee had made certain statements, which Mr Jones' The potatoes supplied were not up to factory," and "Recollect that the contractors' attention be drawn to the fact that the potatoes are not satisfactory." Mr Ali. Edmanson moved that the chairman of the three committees interested in the consumption of potatoes should form the purchasing committee.—Mr Sagar-Musgrave: I think we ought to have a lady on the committee. Every potato we have found that gentlemen (including myself) know little about potatoes.—Mr Edmanson: I believe that ladies are good judges of potatoes after they are cooked, but not before the potatoes are cooked.—Mrs Percy Leigh: I wish to make a protest. I think it is too bad to bandy women's names about.—It was pointed out that no one's name had been mentioned.—Mr Sagar-Musgrave: I mentioned Miss Kitson as a member of the committee.—Mrs Leigh went on to refer to some statements which had been made regarding the politics professed by the lady Guardians, and she was called to order by the Chairman (Mr Geo. Moore), who observed that no member of the Board had treated the name of any woman lightly. Mr Mitchell thought that, in view of the continued complaints regarding the potatoes supplied, the position could not be much worse even if there was a lady on the committee. It was agreed that the new committee should consist of Mrs Booth, Mr Fearnehough, Mr Townend, and the Chairman and vice-chairman of the Board.

CRICKET JOTTINGS.

LANE FOX CUP MATCHES FOR SATURDAY.

In the first round of the Lane Fox Cup Competition on Saturday afternoon eight matches will be played, and if form alone is considered it will not be difficult to forecast the results, out of frequently past performances count for nothing in these contests, and this fact should deter enthusiasts from being dogmatic as to the outcome of this stage of the tournament. One of the keenest games, if the teams give of their best, will be at Old Manston, where Tadcaster try conclusions with Crossgates Wes. In my view, Tadcaster are the strongest and more experienced combination, being self-supplied in their bowling and batting departments, but their opponents have been showing improved form, and they may have a surprise in store. Scarcroft will be expected to defeat Swillington Park, and Crossgates, unless Heaton and Bramham play above their average, should succeed at Shadwell.

Not the least interesting game will be decided at Collingham, where Representatives of the Senior and Junior Leagues meet. Garforth Wes. proved the opposition, and as they are a smart team the homesters have no easy task on. Halton Wes., at home, are confident of their ability to beat the sportsmen of Barwick, who are, however, a team to be treated with respect, and Micklefield expect a profitable journey to Cawood, but they should not overlook Milford's experience there early in the season. Garforth have to meet their old friends at Great Preston, where disaster has unexpectedly overtaken them in several games, and they will not take any liberties with their opponents. Garforth are, of course, the better combination, and the chances are in their favour. Great Preston are a plucky lot, and a surprise victory at Whitkirk is fresh in people's minds. Saxton, another team given to upsetting opponents' calculations, will be at home to South Milford, who have already proved themselves the stronger side, and, with Saxton at full strength, this should prove a good game.

LEAGUE BUSINESS.

Did the League Executive not make a mistake in passing a resolution for the reinstatement of Dalby, the Collingham groundsman? The rules provide only for the reinstatement of men who have acted as professionals, and if Dalby was not eligible to play—and I think he was—there was no need to reinstate him. All that was required was an expression of opinion that Dalby was qualified, in order to safeguard the Collingham club.

Several complaints have been made regarding the decisions of umpires in both Senior League and Junior League matches, and, singularly enough, not one of them is in relation to an interpretation of the laws of the game. They are all concerned with matters of fact, and, whilst the best men occasionally err, it is remarkable that some o' the decisions, according to the testimony of players on both sides, should have been given. Incompetency cannot fairly be charged against the umpires, because the principles of the game were not in dispute, and the only conclusion one can arrive at is that the umpires were not sufficiently alert.

MIDDLETON PARK.

Middleton Park had a League game with Barnmantalle on Saturday, and they won comfortably. Scores:—Middleton Park—Sutcliffe 15, Spink 12, Goulthorpe 9, Barraclough 11, Speak 25, G. H. Place 17, J. W. Place 1, Chrigleson 4, Richardson 3, Ramsden (not out) 4, Butler 0, extras 8; total 149. Burmantofts—Wood 20, B. Waller 10, Jackson 2, Murray 5, Rider 12, Gregory 0, Charlesworth 22, Ingram 10, J. Waller 0, Clough (not out) 11, Thompson 5, extras 5; total 101.

SENIOR LEAGUE MATCHES ON SATURDAY.

The outstanding feature of the Senior League matches was the defeat of the unbeaten leaders of divisions 1 and 2. Comparatively few people expected that the calculations of the Farsley team, who had given every evidence of being as skilful as ever, would go under on their own ground to South Milford, and it is just possible that the Calcarians, with a small score registered against them, were over-confident. Milford batted first, and they were dismissed for the small score of 43, of which R. Sutton had 15 and E. Atkinson 11. Herbert, who made his first appearance with the Calcarians this season, bowled with remarkable effect. He had six overs, and four were maidens, and he captured 4 wickets for 3 runs. Raper secured 3 for 11 runs, Swinden one for 9, and West one for 18. So far Tadcaster had done well, but they gave a miserable batting exhibition, and 40 was the score for the 8 runs. Raper made 12 (not out), and H. Todd 10. It is evident that some of the batsmen were over-eager, for no fewer than three runs ran out. Swinden worked well for Milford, taking 5 wickets for 21, and A. Lindley claimed 2 for 16. Milford and Tadcaster are now on a level in the League table.

Church Fenton Sycamore go up a step in consequence of their victory over Church Fenton, who, it must be confessed, gave a sorry batting display, probably due to the rain-sodden pitch. They were dismissed for the paltry total of 17 (A. Foxton 7), and C. Poulter, who had five maidens in eight overs, secured four wickets for 4 runs, while E. Poulter had five wickets for 11. The Sycamore team had an easy task set them, but they lost four wickets in making 19, of which C. Poulter had to (not out). For the Bwrs. W. Dixon, in 6 overs, claimed 3 wickets for 5 runs, and Claughton had one wicket for 12.

Micklefield, after a keenly-contested game, with Gorforth, lost their position at the head of affairs in division 2. The batting on both sides was very poor, and it is difficult to account for such low scoring. Micklefield soon found the secret themselves "tied up in a knot," as the saying goes, by T. Ballance and G. Reed, and Ald. Smith, who was again the best player on his side, was the only batsman to make any stay, getting 26, and six men had not a single among them. Every credit must be given to Ballance, who opponents by over a hundred runs. For the secured six wickets for 4 runs—exceptionally fine performance, while Reed's four wickets were got at an expenditure of only ten runs. Garforth will have no easier thing in hand this season, but, despite a splendid innings of 29 not out by Sidney Glover, they lost five wickets in getting 27 runs. Ald. Smith had four wickets for 19, and J. H. Townend one for 8 runs. Micklefield, Garforth, and Scarcroft are now on the same rung of the League ladder, and they should be a fine tussle for premier position.

Scarcroft, after their failure against Micklefield, gave a great batting exhibition on the Green against Halton, who had to admit inferiority in every department of the game. The Crofters gave their opponents a merry time in the field, and when stumps were drawn at the end of the innings was finished. The total was 182, and D. Burton compiled 55—the highest figures got in the League on Saturday—Tom Toft 37, G. Stead 21, E. Johnson 18, H. Meade 13, and C. Johnson 10 (not out). C. Sunter and E. Daniel shared the bowling honours for Halton, taking, respectively, 4 wickets for 44 and 4 for 50. Faced with such a huge score the Halton team made a very plucky effort, and their total indicates that they might have done better had they had "first knock." They got on 85, and W. Smales batted remarkably well for his score of 45. G. Stead captured four of their wickets for 10 runs, and D. Burton had 5 for 27.

Barwick were credited with their first points this season by gaining a fine victory over Great Preston, who probably did not expect such a beating on their own ground. The homesters run up a score of 87, and T. Wiggleworth made 20. J. Cooper 17, T. Varley 15, and W. Cockerham 11. Seven of their wickets fell to V. Robshaw for 27. Fred Lumb had 2 for 19, and Bowes 2 for 21. Barwick players, full of confidence, tackled the wet wicket, and, in proper style, and they flogged the bowling, sending up 89 for a loss of four wickets. Walton registered 28 (not out), F. Lumb 19, J. Robshaw 17, and W. Hartley 10. Green's two wickets cost 23, Greenwood's one was got for six, and T. Wiggleworth's one for 14. Preston must wake up and get on terms with their opponents.

Competition among the leading clubs in division 3 is quite as good as it is in the other divisions. First, Shadwell were leaders, then Crossgates, and now Halton Wesleyans have gone to the top, while Crossgates Wes. look as if they would have made a strong bid for honours. Halton's opponents on Saturday afternoon were Collingham, who have lost every game they have played, and the Wes. registered a five wickets' victory. Collingham opened very promisingly, Whitehead making 9, Gibson 28, Smithson 20, and Allen Dalby 7, and then there was a collapse, caused by Batty's deliveries. The total was 78, and seven players had nine among them. Batty's six wickets were secured for 19, and Muetland's two cost 19. For a loss of five wickets Halton got the runs necessary for victory, and Don Crosthwaite distinguished himself by rattling up 25 (not out), while O. Bell had 17 (not out), Muetland 12, and J. Popplewell 11. The best of the Collingham bowlers was A. Dalby, who had 3 wickets for 21.

Crossgates had their record spoilt at Old Manston, where they played the Wesleyan team. Batting first, the ground team delighted their supporters by giving a sound display, and the innings did not close until 127 had been put on the register. The feature was, of course, E. Holliday's fine effort, realizing 43, but substantial assistance was given by E. Clough and A. Beaumont 18 each, and Bentley and V. Thompson 10. Yeates was the only Crossgates bowler to meet with much success, his 4 wickets costing 21. Crossgates, who have made some big scores recently, started well, and, although Burnell got only 8, Walter Sykes put on 15, and Bert Spivey 29. White (10 not out), however, was the only other player to reach any stand, and the innings closed for 81. George Umpleby, if he failed to score, showed his usefulness by securing 5 wickets for 26, and Ted Clough obtained 4 for 29 runs.

Whitkirk, at home, unexpectedly came a "cropper" when opposed by Shadwell, and the homesters are now wondering how they lost. They seem to have struck a bad patch, and they must pull themselves together. Shadwell, to whom every credit is due, had first lease of the wicket, and put together a respectable total of 176, H. Smith contributing 17, Freeman 14, and Fawcett 11. Ernest Ingle had the best figures of the home bowlers (6 for 59), while Rowland got 4 for 20 runs. Whitkirk lost Milford without scoring, but A. Shepherd put on 10, and J. Shepherd 18, and there was every prospect of a very close finish, but, with the exception of Moss, the remaining players contributed little, and the total score was 60. For Shadwell W. Metcalfe had 2 wickets for 8, P. Scott had 4 for 21, and A. Heaton 4 for 27.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES ON SATURDAY.

Bramham, who opened the season in such promising style, are not doing so well now, and they sustained their third defeat on Saturday, when Sherburn W.R. were their opponents. The match was at Sherburn, and the homesters scored 55 (Smith 18 and Petch 12), and Bramham had to be content with 38. Hey captured seven of the Bramham wickets for 14, and Cawthorne had 3 for 20.—Tadcaster A are going ahead, and their victory over South Milford keeps them at the head of affairs. They scored 176, every player contributing his quota to the total, and Milford were dismissed for 58 (A. Chilton 21). The best bowler in the match was A. Smart (Tadcaster), who had 4 wickets for six. Aldous had 3 for 22, and Taylor 2 for 17. On the other side Albert Lindley captured four for 27. J. Hill 3 for 34, and Crawford 2 for 19. Kirk Deighton and Barkston tried conclusions, and the former won. The winners made 56 (Nicholson 12 and J. Oxley and Beasley 13 each), and Woods captured six of their wickets for 21, while Bailey had 4 for 13. Barkston were dismissed for 32, and White had four wickets for 11, and H. Oxley 3 for 7.

Scarcroft A. the Faders in division 2, inflicted a crushing defeat on Micklefield A, who had only a moiety of ground. The homesters were dismissed for 23, and W. Lindley took five of their wickets for 11, and J. Lindley 5 for 13. Without losing a wicket Scarcroft A. obtained the necessary runs, J. Lindley scoring 15 and Hardy 9. By the way, Scarcroft A are the only unbeaten team in both Leagues.—Aberford had a great victory over Barwick, where they sent up the big score of 154 (Blakey 40, Lupton 39, Abbott 34 not out, and Pickles 10), and defeated their opponents by 60 runs. For the Barwick team Johnson had 3 wickets for 8, and F. Walker 3 for 10, while for Barwick, who tried eight trundlers, Ingham secured 3 for 32, T. Robshaw 3 for 36, and F. Hutchinson 2 for 31. Halton A and Great Preston A had the best contested match of the afternoon at the Primrose Valley ground. The homesters were soon got rid of for 56 (F. Nicholson 12, and H. J. Batty, C Grace, B Entwaisle, 13; E. Lister, 10 among them. Then Swales came in and rattled up 17, and there was great excitement when Preston got to within two of their opponents' total. They failed to stay, however, two men being given out l.b.w., and Preston were beaten by two runs. Longden (Halton) captured 6 wickets for 20, and H. Dobson 2 for 21, while for the Preston side A. Wigglesworth had five wickets for 17 and H. Colbey 5 for 18.

Garforth Wes., who defeated Whitkirk A by six wickets, have assumed first place in division 3. Playing at home they sent Whitkirk in first on (C. Nowell 28), and they knocked up 43 for a loss of 4 wickets (J. Bulmer 14). For the winners F. Gent had five wickets for 17, and R. Brownridge 3 for 16, while for Whitkirk C. Webster secured 4 wickets for 4, and R. Kirk 6. White Wes. had 2 for 14.—Crossgates Wes. A were beaten by Crossgates A. The winners scored 117 (J. Brookes 35, H. Holliday 31, and Scored 117 (J. Brookes 35, H. Holliday 31, and Brooks 18), and A. Brook claimed five of ours for Halton, taking, respectively 4 wickets for 44 and 4 for 50. Faced with such a huge score the Halton team made a very plucky effort, and their total indicates that they might have done better had they had "first knock." They got on 85, and W. Smales batted remarkably well for his score of 45. G. Stead captured four of their wickets for 10 runs, and D. Burton had 5 for 27.

Barwick were credited with their first points this season by gaining a fine victory over Great Preston, who probably did not expect such a beating on their own ground. The homesters run up a score of 87, and T. Wiggleworth made 20. J. Cooper 17, T. Varley 15, and W. Cockerham 11. Seven of their wickets fell to V. Robshaw for 27. Fred Lumb had 2 for 19, and Bowes 2 for 21. Barwick players, full of confidence, tackled the wet wicket, and, in proper style, and they flogged the bowling, sending up 89 for a loss of four wickets. Walton registered 28 (not out), F. Lumb 19, J. Robshaw 17, and W. Hartley 10. Green's two wickets cost 23, Greenwood's one was got for six, and T. Wiggleworth's one for 14. Preston must wake up and get on terms with their opponents.

Competition among the leading clubs in division 3 is quite as good as it is in the other divisions. First, Shadwell were leaders, then Crossgates, and now Halton Wesleyans have gone to the top, while Crossgates Wes. look as if they would have made a strong bid for honours. Halton's opponents on Saturday afternoon were Collingham, who have lost every game they have played, and the Wes. registered a five wickets' victory. Collingham opened very promisingly, Whitehead making 9, Gibson 28, Smithson 20, and Allen Dalby 7, and then there was a collapse, caused by Batty's deliveries. The total was 78, and seven players had nine among them. Batty's six wickets were secured for 19, and Muetland's two cost 19. For a loss of five wickets Halton got the runs necessary for victory, and Don Crosthwaite distinguished himself by rattling up 25 (not out), while O. Bell had 17 (not out), Muetland 12, and J. Popplewell 11. The best of the Collingham bowlers was A. Dalby, who had 3 wickets for 21.

Crossgates had their record spoilt at Old Manston, where they played the Wesleyan team. Batting first, the ground team delighted their supporters by giving a sound display, and the innings did not close until 127 had been put on the register. The feature was, of course, E. Holliday's fine effort, realizing 43, but substantial assistance was given by E. Clough and A. Beaumont 18 each, and Bentley and V. Thompson 10. Yeates was the only Crossgates bowler to meet with much success, his 4 wickets costing 21. Crossgates, who have made some big scores recently, started well, and, although Burnell got only 8, Walter Sykes put on 15, and Bert Spivey 29. White (10 not out), however, was the only other player to reach any stand, and the innings closed for 81. George Umpleby, if he failed to score, showed his usefulness by securing 5 wickets for 26, and Ted Clough obtained 4 for 29 runs.

Whitkirk, at home, unexpectedly came a "cropper" when opposed by Shadwell, and the homesters are now wondering how they lost. They seem to have struck a bad patch, and they must pull themselves together. Shadwell, to whom every credit is due, had first lease of the wicket, and put together a respectable total of 176, H. Smith contributing 17, Freeman 14, and Fawcett 11. Ernest Ingle had the best figures of the home bowlers (6 for 59), while Rowland got 4 for 20 runs. Whitkirk lost Milford without scoring, but A. Shepherd put on 10, and J. Shepherd 18, and there was every prospect of a very close finish, but, with the exception of Moss, the remaining players contributed little, and the total score was 60. For Shadwell W. Metcalfe had 2 wickets for 8, P. Scott had 4 for 21, and A. Heaton 4 for 27.

JUNIOR LEAGUE MATCHES ON SATURDAY.

Bramham, who opened the season in such promising style, are not doing so well now, and they sustained their third defeat on Saturday, when Sherburn W.R. were their opponents. The match was at Sherburn, and the homesters scored 55 (Smith 18 and Petch 12), and Bramham had to be content with 38. Hey captured seven of the Bramham wickets for 14, and Cawthorne had 3 for 20.—Tadcaster A are going ahead, and their victory over South Milford keeps them at the head of affairs. They scored 176, every player contributing his quota to the total, and Milford were dismissed for 58 (A. Chilton 21). The best bowler in the match was A. Smart (Tadcaster), who had 4 wickets for six. Aldous had 3 for 22, and Taylor 2 for 17. On the other side Albert Lindley captured four for 27. J. Hill 3 for 34, and Crawford 2 for 19. Kirk Deighton and Barkston tried conclusions, and the former won. The winners made 56 (Nicholson 12 and J. Oxley and Beasley 13 each), and Woods captured six of their wickets for 21, while Bailey had 4 for 13. Barkston were dismissed for 32, and White had four wickets for 11, and H. Oxley 3 for 7.

Scarcroft A. the Faders in division 2, inflicted a crushing defeat on Micklefield A, who had only a moiety of ground. The homesters were dismissed for 23, and W. Lindley took five of their wickets for 11, and J. Lindley 5 for 13. Without losing a wicket Scarcroft A. obtained the necessary runs, J. Lindley scoring 15 and Hardy 9. By the way, Scarcroft A are the only unbeaten team in both Leagues.—Aberford had a great victory over Barwick, where they sent up the big score of 154 (Blakey 40, Lupton 39, Abbott 34 not out, and Pickles 10), and defeated their opponents by 60 runs. For the Barwick team Johnson had 3 wickets for 8, and F. Walker 3 for 10, while for Barwick, who tried eight trundlers, Ingham secured 3 for 32, T. Robshaw 3 for 36, and F. Hutchinson 2 for 31. Halton A and Great Preston A had the best contested match of the afternoon at the Primrose Valley ground. The homesters were soon got rid of for 56 (F. Nicholson 12, and H. J. Batty, C Grace, B Entwaisle, 13; E. Lister, 10 not out, 5; extras, 6; total for 8 wkts.). The visitors, however, put on 1b.w., and Preston were beaten by two runs. Longden (Halton) captured 6 wickets for 20, and H. Dobson 2 for 21, while for the Preston side A. Wigglesworth had five wickets for 17 and H. Colbey 5 for 18.

SHERBURN'S DOINGS:

Sherburn, who in the previous week defeated Normanton Wes., somewhat easily, had a more difficult task set them on Saturday afternoon, when their opponents were Leeds Training College. The match was at Leeds, and the College scored 94 for 7 wickets and declared, Sherburn did not bat quite so well, making 54 for a loss of eight wickets, and W. Osborne contributed 25 (not out) and J. Batty 13.

ETOFTS WIN EASILY.

On Saturday afternoon Etofts had an easy victory over a Leeds eleven. The scores were:—Leeds—Swift 5, Hargate 7, Bray 0, Jackson 2, Brown 6, N. Edwards 8, Ballwill 0, Smith 2, Garnett 4, G. Edwards (not out) 2, Town 0, total 39. Etofts—Pickersgill (not out) 22, Maltby 4, Arrowsmith 2, Foster 0, Hudson (not out) 11, extras 2; total (for 3 wkts.) 41.

CHAPTER XX.

Mr. and Mrs. Colthurst, accompanied by Miss Patricia, Peter, and Pamela, all went to Brabazon Hall on the following morning. They arrived there in the course of the early afternoon, and spent a long time looking over the beautiful place. It had been unlet for a long time, and was in consequence more or less in a state of ruin. The gardens needed a great deal done to them, and the house itself showed signs of damp. It had, in short, that appearance which even the finest unused house in the world must soon present. There was a queer sort of dampness about it. It was a magnificent place, but to Pamela it seemed depressing.

"Now, you two young things come and look at everything," said Paul Colthurst. "It is here I mean you both to live after you are married."

"Oh, but we're not going to be married for ages, are we, Peter?"

"I don't know, I am sure," said Peter, "To be frank, I haven't thought much about the marriage—it's so awfully jolly being engaged. At least, that's what I feel, father."

"It would be much nicer to be married," said Miss Patricia; and at her words Peter and Pamela turned, looked at her, and laughed. Then Peter went up and put his arm round her waist.

"You are a darling," he said. "I wonder some very nice man didn't marry you long ago."

"Don't think of me, dear Peter—think of your little Pam. It will be splendid for you to be her husband."

"Of course it will, and I mean to be her husband."

"Come and walk with me, Peter," said Miss Patricia, suddenly. "I have something I want to say to you.

"Yes, do go round the grounds, Pete," exclaimed Pamela; "then mother and father and I will have more time to walk round the house and look at everything and see what changes are necessary."

"Oh, but there's no hurry, darling, is there?"

"Of course, not the slightest," said Pamela. She entered the house, her hand resting on Paul's arm, and Mrs. Colthurst trotted by the side of the pair. Not yet had Mrs. Colthurst breathed a word to Pamela of her last conversation with Miss Patricia. As she said to her husband, she could not bring herself to do it, and she considered the old lady very fussy on the subject.

Meanwhile, Miss Patricia was quite determined not to let the grass grow under her feet. The day before Pamela had described at lunch the young whom she had invited within the grounds.

"The saddest, queerest, most sordid, most terrible face I have ever encountered," said Pamela; "and I think—I think I did him good. I felt that I must try to do him good."

"Pamela knows what she is about, Pat," Paul had remarked. Then he told the incident of Pamela's shaking hands with the tramp, and of the man's daring to stoop down and kiss her hand. Pamela's mother and Paul were quite touched by the story, and Paul said that if he met the poor tramp he would do something for him. But Miss Patricia did not feel easy in her mind. In her heart of hearts she agreed with Peter. Pamela must be careful; she must not let unknown people inside the grounds. It seemed to Miss Patricia that she must be a very wicked old woman to attribute wrong motives to this harmless tramp, as she would call him, if she could not help connecting him with Thomas Oswald.

"Thomas Oswald means mischief, and he will use his own tools," thought the poor lady. Perceiving, therefore, that, notwithstanding all her words, Mrs. Colthurst had said nothing to her daughter about a speedy marriage, Miss Patricia made up her mind to assail the fortress in its most defenceless part. She would attack Peter—the ardent young lover. She would say to him: "Is it possible, open he eyes to the danger of delay, and she would use every effort in her power to persuade him of the wisdom of a marriage as early a date as possible.

"You will have a nice time when you come to live here, Peter," she said, as the two men rambled away together.

"Well," said the boy, "as far as I am concerned, the place is too big. It is so very vast and lonely."

"But you can't help it, Peter, for you know, my dear, that some day, wherever your dear father dies, it will belong to you. This is a much finer and more important place than Connop Grange, and, naturally, you will keep it up in preference to Connop Grange."

"Just so!" said Peter.

"Well, there's only the 'must' of nobleoblige; but that does tell, doesn't it?"

"I suppose so," said Peter. "But to be frank with you, Miss Patricia, neither Pam nor I has the least idea of living the life of very great people. We want to have a good time, and a happy time. We want to spend as much of our money as we can spare in helping others. We don't want to hoard it. There is so much misery in the world, and Pam is so set on doing good—little darling!—that she makes me feel with her. If we come here, we will certainly transform, not the house so much as the homes of our tenants. That will take enough upon which to spend our pounds, so we won't have a vast lot to spend on ourselves."

"Peter, you rejoice my heart when you talk like that. You remind me—you remind me of—of—"

"Of whom?" asked the lad, turning and looking at the old woman with his beautiful eyes.

"Of your dear mother. She was like that. She never gave herself a thought."

"Oh, well! How I wish I could have seen my mother! You were very fond of her, weren't you?"

"I was devoted to her, Peter."

"And you were so good to me after she died—Father says I lived with you for a time until—until he married again."

"It is true that you did live with me for a time, dearest."

"You must have felt giving me up a good bit."

"Peter, it nearly broke my heart."

"You are a sort of aunt to me, aren't you?"

"Not exactly."

"Do you mind if I call you Aunt Patricia?"

"I should quite love it."

"Of it, then, Aunt Patricia, when in the far distance Pam and I come to live here you must come and live with us. You shall have your own suite of rooms, and you shall help us both. You will come, won't you?"

"I can't promise, Peter; but there's something I want to say to you.

The boy looked back. He was anxious by now to join Pamela. Miss Patricia felt that she must hasten with her story.

"Now," she said, "I am going to take you into my confidence, you have not read that very peculiar will by which you inherit all this great property?"

"No; but I've heard enough about it, in all conscience."

"I don't think you have heard quite enough. You love Pamela, and you are willing to marry her?"

"Willing to marry her! I could never look at anybody else."

"Then that is all right. But just consider, will you? Suppose, for instance, that you had not loved her, and that you had loved someone else?"

"In that case I would have married the someone else—no fear."

"In that case, then, Peter, the property—this glorious old place and Connop Grange—and all the rest of the money would never have been yours."

"Do you think I'd have given up the girl I loved for the sake of the place? Do you imagine so, even for a moment?"

"You are a dear boy. Everything has come right. You get the girl you love and the place."

"That is true," said Peter; "and, to tell you the truth, Aunt Patricia, the only thing that has ever troubled me in regard to my intimacy with Pamela is the fact that I have to take all this property along with her."

"You can't help that, Peter. It would be very upsetting and dreadful if you were to refuse. You have to take the property for your own sake, for Pamela's sake, and for your father's sake; and, last but not least, my dear boy, you have to keep out a bad man."

"What do you mean?"

"You raw Mr. Thomas Oswald the other day?"

"The scoundrel—yes!"

"Well, Peter, if you don't marry Pamela he gets the place."

Peter laughed.

"And, Peter, he is a wicked, dangerous man, and there isn't a stone he will leave unturned to prevent your marrying Pamela in order to secure the property one day for himself."

Peter laughed, and began to whistle. "Let him try his best," he said, after a pause.

"It's just like you, Peter—just like any very young man who doesn't understand the world—to make nothing of danger. But I can assure you there is danger. If the marriage between you and Pamela can be prevented by any possible means, if you reach the age of twenty-five and are not married to Pamela, nothing that you can do in the future will save the place. According to the terms of the will, you both will be given ten thousand pounds apiece; nothing more, ever. Your father, while he lives, will have the income from its derelict and decrepit estates, and eventually the whole of this vast property will go to Thomas Oswald and his family. Do you think of Thomas Oswald here? You saw him the other day at lunch; you know what sort he is. Think of him as Connop Grange! You can imagine how he pines and longs for the place. He is not a good man, Peter. I have lived in the house now for a week and all the depredations, no crime, I know he would, to prevent your marriage. Peter, I am in earnest."

"But, dear aunt, he can do nothing. Pamela and I are going to be married, and if it is really a clause of the will that we are to be married before we are five-and-twenty we will marry before I am five-and-twenty we will be seventeen. I think we would both like a year, or even longer, to be, not husband and wife, but lovers."

"Peter, it is dangerous; I want you to see it. I cannot inculcate fear into Pamela's breast; but surely, for her sake, you would guard her!"

"Of course I'd guard her. I'd fight the world for her. But I don't know what you mean."

"I must speak out," said Miss Patricia. "Thomas Oswald is the sort of man who would stoop to crime, to sin, to prevent your marrying Pamela."

Peter looked dark eyes were fixed on old Miss Ransome's face. He would stoop to crime?" he said. "What do you mean?"

"My dear boy, read the reports of the police-courts in any newspaper you like to take up, and tell me what the tendency of a modern murderer is. It's my impression—I may be wrong, but it is my strong impression—that you and Pamela are attacked, and that there will be not a stone left unturned to prevent your marriage."

Peter was silent for a minute or two. Then he said, with a light laugh: "You try to frighten me, Aunt Patricia, but, somehow, you can't succeed. However, I'll speak to Pamela and to my father, and let you know the result."

CHAPTER XXI.

Miss Patricia, during her stay with the Colthursts, began to consider that bravery was a very good thing indeed. It came firmly into her head that people who were not brave were the best off in the long run. Nothing could frighten Peter, and Paul was very nearly as bad; while Mrs. Colthurst could not be got to have the smallest degree of alarm when Miss Patricia tried to speak to her.

Paul Colthurst saw Miss Patricia a day or two after their visit to Brabazon Hall. He took her aside and put his thin shoulder.

"My dear friend," he said.

"Yes?" she answered.

"I have news for you."

"You have got at him, her face as anxious as usual.

"I have talked to Peter and Pamela; I have also talked to my dear wife, and I am pleased to say that I am quite satisfied Pamela will marry Peter at the end of August. We have not yet got Pamela's consent. She is devoted to the end of Peter, but she says she doesn't want to give up her life as a happy girl, and I cannot see why we are to frighten her into doing so."

"I will come and see you and talk to you presently. Something may be arranged for you," said Miss Patricia.

"I'm going now," said the man. He turned on his heel, and walked away.

She slouched down the path towards the gates. The gates were open, and he went out. The next minute Peter appeared in view.

"Pam, did I really see you talking to that tramp again!"

"Yes; I take an interest in him," said the girl. "I know he is very wicked, but I want him to turn from his wickedness. If he were not so wicked, I shouldn't be interested in him; and Aunt Patricia is interested too. And you are going to see him at Mrs. martin's, aren't you, auntie?"

"I think I will, dear, but I am not sure yet."

"If I were you, I would have nothing to say to him," said Peter. "The man ought not to be allowed to come into the grounds. You really ought not to do it, Pamela. He is not a fit sort. It's more than likely that he has been sent down to spy out the land. We'll have a big burglary at Connop Grange before long unless we are careful."

"Oh, I hope not," said Pamela. "But I'm not afraid of burglars," she added. "It's dull, very difficult to make me afraid of anything."

"I tell you what it is, Pamela," said Miss Patricia. "You are only fearless and brave because you are absolutely innocent. You don't know the meaning of wickedness. Now, my dear child, you want someone to look after you, and you can't have a better person than this dear young friend of mine. Why don't you both marry and be happy?"

"Of course I'll marry Peter some day," said the girl.

"But now—this summer, said Patricia.

"I don't know why everyone should want to hurry it on," said Pamela, pouting her rosy lips a trifle.

"Of course we want to hurry it on. We love you too well not to."

"It must be exactly as Pam pleases," said Peter. "Of course, if she can be married before August. If not, we will put it off until next year."

Miss Patricia went slowly back towards the house. She left the young people to discuss the question by themselves. Nobody quite knew what occurred between them, but at lunch-time that day Peter's face wore a triumphant air, while Pamela's was a trifle sad, and traces of tears were still seen round her pretty eyes.

When the meal came to an end, and the servants had withdrawn, Peter stood up, put his hand on Pamela's shoulder, and, turning round, said:

"Father, mother, Aunt Patricia, Pamela and I have good news for you. We have seceded to your wishes. We will be married on the 24th of August."

"Oh, thank Heaven for that!" said Miss Patricia.

Mrs. Colthurst was quite silent for a minute. Pamela rushed over to her mother's long bare arms round her neck, and burst into tears.

"My darling! What are you crying about?"

"Oh, nothing. I am very, very happy," was the girl's reply. But she went on sobbing at intervals, and Mrs. Miss Colthurst, like many mothers under the circumstances, was eager to talk of the trousseau, of the announcement of the engagement, of all the plans which were to be set on foot for a grand wedding. Pamela could not be got to talk anything else.

It was late that same evening when Miss Patricia went down unobserved to the village. She found that it had leaked out that she was a very old friend of Squire Colthurst's, caused her to be treated with considerable respect. The villagers were of that acute and sensible kind who invariably know a lady when they see her. A woman in magnificent clothes could not hide the fact of her low origin from their eyes, and Miss Patricia, in her plain dress, could not hide the fact from them that she was a true lady by birth.

Mrs. Lane was standing outside the door of her cottage when Miss Patricia stopped for a minute to speak to her.

"I think I know your face," she said. "You have been up at Connop Grange since I came, have you not?"

"I come up once a week regular, ma'am. I'm given a lot of the little apples to make cider. I sell 'em again, and make a tidy bit by 'em. The Squire's very good to all us folk, and what we like about him is this that he helps us to help ourselves. That's what we want. We don't want charity; we want to have the way to 'arn a bit of honest money put into our 'ands—that's what we want."

"Your Squire is the best of men," said Miss Patricia. "And what do you think of the young Squire, Mrs. Peter?"

"Ah! Bless 'is 'eart, says I!" answered Mrs. Lane.

"Well, now, I should like to ask you a few questions with regard to your neighbour, Mrs. Martin. Mrs. Martin—Israel, is not part of the property of Mrs. Pamela's underclothes for her trousseau."

"Mr. Martin, is it? The goodness of the ladies at Connop Grange to Mrs. Martin is past belief," replied Mrs. Lane. "And why? Because she's a widdy woman with a son and daughter to pervide for? I never took agen Mrs. Martin until she made a liar of that tramp in fer 'ouse. I ha' warned her agen him. It's come over me that he's a wicked 'un, if there is a wicked 'un, and that she's in danger of having her throat cut some night, maybe, or something terrible happening to her all on account of he."

"Oh, I'm sure he's not so bad as that," said Miss Patricia. "Miss Pamela Lennox has taken rather a fancy to the man, and allows him into the grounds, and she certainly would not be kind to a person who was wicked."

Mrs. Lane laughed. "Is it Miss Pamela," she said. "Why, she always did take to the 'ungry-looking ones, auntie" she was a little babe, and could hardly speak, it was the naughty boys she'd get and fuss over. They used to say that she was the gel to make the naughty boys good boys. There ain't Miss Pamela's like in any part of the country. Yes, ma'am, it is true that we love our Squire, and we respect his lady, and we love young Mr. Peter. But there's no one we love young Mr. Peter. But there's no one we love young Mr. Peter. But there's no one

The monthly meeting of Garforth District Education Committee was held at the offices at Garforth on Wednesday evening.—Mr John Wordsworth (Chairman) presiding. The other members present were Messrs W. T. K. Young (Aberford), H. Gascoigne, H. Chappel, and H. Richardson, with the Clerk (Mr H. W. Powell).

The Clerk intimated that the attendance in the Garforth division for the month of April was the highest in the West Riding.—The Chairman: Capital.

Tenders wire submitted for painting work to be done at the Garforth Council Schools, and that of Mr J. Beanland (Leeds), amounting to £48, was accepted.

The tender of Mr Naylor (Garforth) for closet pans at the Council School was accepted. The amount was £2 7s.

Mr Morley, of the Garforth Council School, asked for permission to take standards 5, 6, and 7 to Hull on an educational visit, and it was granted.

A letter was read from Mr Morley concerning the building of a boundary wall at Garforth Council School.—The Chairman said that the probable cost would be about £80.—Mr Gascoigne said it should have been done when the school was built.—Mr Chappell said something would have to be done with the fence. There were gaps in it, and the children could get through at many places.—The Clerk said the cost of the wall would be borne by the county and district jointly.—It was decided to recommend to the Education Authority that the wall be built.

It was stated that the recommendation as to increasing the salary of Miss Goulden, of the Garforth Parochial School, had been adopted.

The Chairman gave a report on the cases in Garforth dealt with in the medical inspector's report at last meeting. He said that a promise had been made that every case would be attended to. All the work had been most cordially done through the teachers at his request, and he had to pay only one visit, and it was a special case.

The Clerk said Miss Young had visited the Aberford cases, and Mrs Childe had promised to look after the Barwick cases.

The Clerk reported that on Garforth evening classes there was a balance of £10 10s. 7d. in hand.

A letter was read from Mr Freeborn, of Aberford, stating that he did not see the slightest prospect of establishing evening classes there, and Mr Booth, of Barwick, said there was no possibility of carrying on an evening school at Barwick successfully.

It was decided to have a mining class at Garforth, with Mr T. H. Breed as teacher, and other classes are to be started at Garforth, under the direction of Mr Morley and Miss Barber, and at East Garforth under Mr Chadwick.

Players please note that entries for the Barkston Ash Individual Merit Competition close on June 27th, to Mr W. Green, the hon. sec.

Misses Nussey, of Thorner, have given £10 to the "Bay Scouts' Endowment Fund.

Lady Hawke, of Wighill, was a prize-winner in the fruit classes at York Show on Wednesday.

Tow'on feast and sports will be held on Wednesday, and there will be a horse race and other events. See advt.

Mr J. Sunley, of South Milford, was a prominent prize-winner at the York Flower Show.

At South Milford School last month the percentage of attendance was 94.09 against 92.53 for May last year.

The marriage arranged between Mr Charles Bannatyne Findlay, Royal Horse Artillery, and Miss Violet Gunter will take place on July 30th, at St. Saviour's, Walton Street, S.W.

TRAIN SERVICE.—Commencing on July 1st the 11.5 p.m. train from Harrogate to Wetherby and 11.45 p.m. train from Wetherby to Harrogate will this summer run on Wednesdays as well as Saturdays, giving an additional night per week for passengers wishing to spend a full evening at Harrogate.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.—The school attendance in Sherburn district last month was excellent, the percentage being 91.32—the highest of the four districts in Garforth Division. Sutton Endowed was first with 96.49 against 93.27 in May last year, while Sherburn Girls' had a percentage of 90.85 against 91.19.

DEATH OF DR. F. W. MAIS.—On Sunday the death occurred, after a short illness, of Dr. Frederick William Mais, of Thorner. The deceased, who was 49 years of age, was well-known in the district. Dr. Mais took up the practice on the death of his father over 20 years ago. He leaves a widow, but no family. The deceased gentleman was exceedingly popular in Thorner, and the trib was evidenced during his illness, for numerous were the inquiries concerning his condition that a daily bulletin had to be posted outside the house. The news of his death was received with marked signs of grief. The funeral took place yesterday. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, and many beautiful floral tributes were sent. It has been suggested that a permanent memorial be erected to the memory of the late doctor and his father.

SPORTS MEETING AT SAXTON.

THE WINNERS.

The annual sports at Saxton were held on Saturday, and the meeting was a very successful and enjoyable one. The arrangements were admirably carried out by Messrs T. Richardson and A. SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST A FARMER.

A serious charge of cruelty to 40 sheep against Arthur Paul, farmer, of Helperthorpe, Sledmere, was investigated at Dewsbury on Tuesday. The cruelty was alleged to have been caused by packing them in a railway truck. A summons has also been issued against the North-Eastern Railway Co. in respect of the case.

It was stated by Mr Blakeley, on behalf of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, that on May 7th a cattle truck containing 40 fat sheep arrived at the Dewsbury G.N.R. Station. The truck had been partitioned off, leaving about two feet vacant. When the sheep arrived one had been trampled to death, while another was so severely crushed that it died on the way to Bierley Hill Mart. The animals had been driven by road from Mr Paul's farm to Sledmere Station, a distance of seven miles, packed into the truck, and then sent on the 60 miles journey to Dewsbury. The railway journey took over 27 hours.

Mr Blakeley stated that the partitioning of the truck would save about 4s. 10d. in the railway rate, and the magistrates had power, if they found defendant guilty, to impose a fine of £5 for every sheep ill-treated, which meant that the maximum in this case was £200.

Sergeant Barker said the inside of the reduced truck was 13ft. 6in. by 7ft. 6in., which only allowed one square yard to every four sheep.

Mr Dovey, for the defence, urged that there was no intention of being cruel on the part of the defendant. He had never previously sent sheep by rail, and he left the loading entirely to the railway company.

The magistrates reserved their decision until after hearing a summons against the North-Eastern Railway Co., and when this was heard, both cases were dismissed.

RECORD BOATING.—The brilliant weather of the past week has given a tremendous impetus to the pastime of boating at Wetherby, and the numbers of people who on Saturday and Sunday disported themselves on the river probably constituted a record for the town. Mr Richmond, who has from 40 to 50 boats and punts on the river, was kept busily employed from noon to dusk. The streets of the Wharfe at Wetherby—there is fully two miles available for boating—is one of the finest in Yorkshire, and is becoming increasingly popular with visitors from Leeds, Harrogate, and other towns.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE AND AGRICULTURE.—Mr George Nicholls, prospective Liberal candidate for the Thirsk and Malton Division, has entered upon an active campaign in the constituency, and on Tuesday night addressed a meeting of the electorate at Osbaldwick. Mr J. Windass presided. Mr Nicholls, alluding to Tariff Reform, said Mr Bonar Law's Edinburgh policy to tax manufactured goods and not tax foodstuffs meant that the farmer would have to pay more for what he bought, get no more for what he sold, and pay a minimum wage to the labourer. To the latter proposal a large section of the Tory party were pledged. From the farmers' point of view that meant absolute bankruptcy. Speaking of the effect of Tory legislation on agriculture, he asked how many farmers realised that the increase in local rates was chiefly due to the Balfour Education Act. Practically during their long period of office the Unionists did nothing for the farmers; on the other hand, the present Government had given them compensation for damage done by game and unreasonable disturbance, and had put on the statute book a measure dealing with freedom of cropping. They had made a grant in aid of light-horse breeding, and had passed the Feeding Stuffs and Fertilisers Act. Dealing with the land and housing proposals before the country, he said the Tory proposals as to a minimum wage for farm labourers advocated a Wages Board, but did nothing for farmers, whereas Mr Lloyd George's proposals included the case of the farmer by giving him security of tenure and Rent Courts. There they had something that at any rate was practical. Answering criticisms of Mr Lloyd George's finance, he said the Tory Government left the country hopelessly in debt, whereas the Chancellor, while having more money to provide for old-age pensions, the Army, the Navy, and many other things, had paid his way as he went without taxing any real necessity of the working classes. We were never better off, and the rich people had not run away as the Tories said they would because they were taxed. We were face to face every year with fresh reform or revolution, and the men who insisted on reforms were the men who saved us from revolution.

Squire of Templenewsam and Politics

POSSIBILITY OF AN EARLY ELECTION.

The Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., of Templenewsam, speaking at a Primrose League gathering at Dunscombe Park on Saturday, said he did not think he would be unduly rash if he were to prophesy the great possibility of a General Election in July next. Therefore, he was delighted to know that in the Ripon division their forces were in good fighting trim. (Applause). He wanted them to bear two things in mind with regard to Home Rule. No blame and no words could be too strong to use when they blamed the Government for the present state of things, for they were solely and entirely responsible. (Hear, hear). The second thing to bear in mind was that however bitterly they blamed the Government there was the national crisis they must consider. There was an old Latin proverb they might well remember: Sovereign law was the safety of a Republic. It was incumbent upon them, and upon all parties, to put forth their best efforts, whenever and wherever they could to try and find a solution, not merely of a party problem, but of a great national crisis. (Hear, hear). When they started to blame the Government they could very easily find reasons. There never was a Government before the present one which had tried to force their policy on the people in the face of strong opposition feeling up and down the country, and of that opposition feeling Ipswich was the latest proof. (Applause). The Government had forfeited the confidence of the people; yet they were seeking further to use the power to which they had no moral right.

What Government before had ever found it necessary to give conditional orders to the Army? Was there not sufficient self-confidence in them when the Government found it necessary to give orders to the officers, and at the same time give them the option of resigning if they did not wish to obey those orders? They all knew what had been the fruits of the Radical party's policy, and they knew that that policy was the outcome of a desire to retain salaried offices. (Hear, hear). They must not be surprised that the loyal Irish were prepared to resist to the uttermost any attempt to transfer them as a whole community from one citizenship to another, from the protection of the Union to government under a Dublin Parliament. Mr Lloyd George had had some difficulty with the doctors over the Insurance Act, but the Government would find that they could not employ the same kind of methods where the Ulstermen were concerned. In fact, they had already hopelessly broken down. There was a great deal of talk about the Amending Bill. Now, he would not say one word hostile to the chances of a peaceful settlement, but with regard to the Amending Bill he could only help feeling little faith in it. He had two reasons for his lack of faith. If the Government or Mr Asquith meant business with the Amending Bill why was it not produced long ago? The longer they played with and trifled with the people of Ulster the harder would it become to get them to consent to anything suggested as a compromise. (Hear, hear). The second reason was that he could not believe Mr Asquith would submit propositions which Mr Redmond could not agree to whilst he needed the support of Mr Redmond. (Applause). The more he thought of it the more he became convinced that what must be previous to any satisfactory settlement of the difficulty was the final judgment of the people. (Hear, hear). To them it must be submitted for final settlement.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER.

GRASS SKIRTS.

The women and girls in many parts of New Guinea wear a skirt of native grass, which hangs down from the waist to the knee, each piece of grass being plaited into a strong encircling belt at the top. The material may also be cocoa-nut or banana leaves, the former finely shredded with a shell. Sometimes the grass used is laid in the mud and stained black, or reddened by the juice of a root, and the three colours, red, black, and light brown, are blended very harmoniously.

ORIGIN OF "BLACKGUARD."

The earliest record of the term blackguard is in the Churchwarden's Account of St. Mary-at-Hill, London, where, under date 1532, is: "Item, received for iiij. Torches of the Black Guard iiijd." This, and the following old lines, seem to show that the name was then applied to link-boys:

"Her Cupid is a blackguard boy,
That rubs his link full in your face."

The name was also given to menial servants in the King's Kitchen. In the "Calendar of State Papers" is the following entry: "August 17th, 1558, Bir William Fitzwilliam to Mr. Secretary Cromwell: Refusal of the workmen to work for less than 6d. a day. Two of the ringleaders had been those of the time 'Black Guards' of the King's kitchen." These "Black Guards" were responsible for the cooking utensils and coals.

According to Miss Strickland, the historian, the scullions of the Royal kitchen were for many centuries clad in black, and were called the Black Guards of England.

EDIBLE INSECTS.

Certain insects, resembling the northern June bugs, are found in great quantities in the high plains about Quito, and are toasted by the natives and eaten as a delicacy. They are also sold in the streets, just as peanuts or other nuts would be. A traveller tasted one and found that it was very much like toasted bread, with no particular flavour. While this may seem a curious and perhaps repulsive form of food, it is probably no worse than a soft shell or oyster crab, which Englishmen is generally eaten while still alive. It is all a matter of custom.

FATAL DIVE NEAR MEITHLEY BRIDGE.

At the inquest at Whitwood Mere yesterday on George Calvert, bye-workman, who lodged at 3, Phillips Street, Whitwood Mere, it was stated that he and a fellow lodger, A. Parker, went for a walk on the river Calder bank, near to Methley Bridge.

Parker undressed and dived into the water, and when coming out Calvert shouted "I can't swim, but I'm coming in." He walked into the water up to his knees and then began to swim a little, but on getting to the middle of the river he began to sink. After going down a second time Parker went to his aid, and deceased gripped him round the throat.

They both swam safely Parker had to release himself, and swam to the side. He did all that he could to save Calvert, but the latter would not keep afloat.

A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

Mrs C. A. Warwick, of Boston Spa, was a prize-winner in the poultry classes at Batley Show on Saturday.

A marriage has been arranged between Robert St. Martin Delius, Bridge House, Harewood, and Jeannie, daughter of the late Comte Bernard and Comtesse Ivan Cokas des Francs.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire Palace this week Miss Hetty King gives a pleasing turn. Her work as a male impersonator reveals more variety than is common to similar entertainments. She sings four songs, all with a vim and gusto so characteristic of the feminine point of view, and is a pronounced favourite. Owen Clark is a deft manipulator of most things that can be handled in his mystifying act, several of the tricks he performs having the savour of novelty. Ernie Lotinga has had provided as a setting for his comedy abilities a sketch named "Millions." Charles and Fanny Van, along with a company, are a true of typical American entertainers, whose work is inconsequent but not without humour. Others who appear are Frank le Dent, Harry Grey, Williams and Darden, and Olive Armidale.

Mr Frank Allen, the manging director of the Leeds Empire, has secured a stupendous list of star attractions for Monday next. The bill is headed by the great Leeds favourite, Maidie Scott, the comedienne who sprang into public favour in the first place by her original method of singing songs regarding family affairs. First concerned "Father and Mother," and next "Everybody works in our house, but our old man." Miss Scott is going to present an entirely new character study, entitled "The troubles of a stage-struck girl." Sharing the bill with Miss Scott is the very well-known Anglo-Scottish comedian, George French; Fred Nixon Nirdlinger presents the singing comedian Bert La Mont and his Cowboys, in a round up of mirth and melody; Fred Duprez, the American humorist; Hunter and Bob, pantomimical eccentrics; Conway Dixon and Netta Lynde, assisted by "Pip," in their artistic vocal and musical act; J. H. Scotland, the eminent bassoo, in old dialect songs; Fred Keeton, comedian; and the American Bioscope.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

This week the greater part of the entertainment at the Hippodrome consists of Austen Hurgon's revue, "Happy Days." It is throughout a bright and breezy production. The widely contrasted scenes gives an opportunity for a plentiful spread of oriental colour and the glitter of Western social life. The music by Hermann Darewski, junr., is quite appropriate. There is some really good vocalism. Prominent in a large and able company are Miss Hope Charteris, whose voice retains its beauty and power; the laughable Brothers Egbert, with their feminine contemporary in fun-making, Miss Gwennie Harcourt, Mr A. Scott Collen, and Mr Reginald Adair. The remainder of the programme is of a high standard. Clever work as acrobats is shown by the Barts Trio, who make themselves very popular. Madame Rossini and her pianist serve up popular musical numbers delectably, while Clifford Morgan gives a Kipling ballad with taste, and Herd and Gard are acceptable comedians.

Next week at the Hippodrome the principal attraction will be Colossus and the Kids. Colossus is said to be the tallest man in the world, being 8 feet high, and the Kids are described as the funniest elves ever seen, and they provide an entertainment of song and dance. Others billed to appear are La Fiori, the charming Parisian posture; The Edie Gray Trio, in a novel vocal and dancing speciality; Vera Moore, the ballad vocalist, and her sister; Dan Whitley, described as full of funnisities; Joe Hayman and Mildred Franklin in "Another mistake of Cohen's"; and pictures.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week there appears Lucilla, who gives a really wonderful performance, and is assisted by an almost human cockatoo. It is the essence of originality. Bertha Smillie, who stepped straight from the factory to the stage, has a beautiful voice, and ought to make a big name in the future. Seeley and West Trio, in a musical act, are smart, and Lee and Moss, in an acrobatic act, are good. Others appearing are Tom B. Ford, comedian, and Carl Muller, comedian.

Mr William Mellor, who was Mr Charles Budd's chief agent at the Queen's Theatres, Leeds, is now the new manager at the City Varieties. He is only a young man, but he knows his work, and his many friends will wish him success in his new sphere.

Next week at the City Varieties the programme will include Bros. Larkum, novelty comedians; Little Elsie Prince, child comedienne and dancer; Rosefield's Marionettes; Vocalties, in character songs; Fred Dunstone, comedian; James Sweeny, singing pianoboy; Seltin Trio, in an original acrobatic pot-pourri act; and the pictures "The Janitor's flirtation" and "On the breast of the tide."

Mrs M. Furniss, of Monk Fryston, was a prize-winner in the amateur classes at York Flower Show.

DOGS IN THE PARK.—The rule as to keeping dogs on leads in Roundhay Park is to be more strictly enforced than in the past. The first prosecution under the new by-laws came before Mr C. M. Atkinson at the Leeds Police Court on Friday, when Roland Hill, of Oakwood Drive, Roundhay, was ordered to pay the costs on a summons for not keeping a Pomeranian dog under proper control. The dog was running about near the Waterloo Lake, and when the defendant was warned by a park policeman he replied: "I have the dog under proper control. I will not put it on a leash for you or the City Council either. It is all nonsense talking to such fools as you. You can report me." Subsequently the defendant wrote and apologised to the Town Clerk. The magistrate said the next offender would be fined.

SHERBURN AGRICULTURAL CLUB.—On Friday evening a meeting of the Agricultural Club was held at the Red Bear Hotel, Sherburn, and Mr J. E. Cawthorn, of Elmet House, who has accepted the presidency, was in the chair. Other gentlemen present were Messrs C. A. Wilber, T. Tomlinson, T. Jones, E. Sykes, J. Atkinson, C. W. Helm, J. Smith, T. H. Bramley, C. Bramley, H. Farrar, T. Bradley, F. Bramley, C. M. Wellburn, W. Wainwright, R. Hayes, D. Greenwood, H. Hare, M. Bregden, W. Wainwright (Low Street), E. Hills, G. Hill, and the secretary (Mr C. Babelby). Mr Helm introduced the new President, and Mr Wilber welcomed him on behalf of the members. Mr Cawthorn, who has two sons at the Garforth Farm, although not a farmer, is interested in agriculture. He said he was a busy man and his time was fairly well taken up, but he would do what he could to further the interests of the club, and hoped it would be as successful and enterprising under his presidency as it had been in the past. The business was then proceeded with, and the secretary was instructed to obtain prices for coal to be placed before the Buying Committee.

Ison's Eye & Ear Dispensary
LIMITED.
71, GREAT GEORGE ST., LEEDS
MR. THOS. ISON,
OCULIST and AURIST.

THIS INSTITUTION was ESTABLISHED in 1871. The system of working is the provident one, each patient paying a small periodical fee whilst under treatment, and they are, therefore, justly expect to receive the prompt care and attention which in many instances in charitable institutions is too often denied. The treatment is of a mild and safe character, without operation or the use of Ear Drums, Ear Corrects, or other mechanical or painful appliances. Another advantage appertaining to this dispensary is its system of treatment by correspondence, by which patients at long distances, and in isolated positions can have the advantage of Mr ISON'S advice and remedies forwarded through the post. No case is undertaken unless there be a reasonable hope of cure, or benefit to the patient.

Attendance at Leeds every Tuesday, from 10 to 7 Hours 10 to 7. Other days by appointment.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT JOTTINGS.

Templenewsam town-planning scheme will, I understand, be ready in about two months, and then the Local Government Board will be asked to sanction the carrying of it into effect. It is not proposed to proceed with the whole scheme at once, but the work of making the road through the Primrose Valley, from Halton Hill to Cross-gates, will probably be undertaken. It is not expected that the Local Government Board will permit Leeds Corporation to take the Halton sewage works into their scheme for the purpose of driving a road through it.

Oulton-with-Woodlesford and Aberford are to give a lead to backward Garforth. Since the county nursing scheme was launched a desire has been expressed to start nursing associations at both Aberford and Woodlesford, and I have no doubt it will materialize. At Oulton-with-Woodlesford a public meeting is to be convened, and a committee, it is expected, will be formed and an association inaugurated. The residents say they won't be content with anything less than a first-class nurse, and this is the proper spirit to exhibit when starting a scheme.

Aberfordia League has come well out of the ambulance competition at Harrogate, but it seems that the ladies of Barkston Ash have something to learn from the Ripon Ladies, who scored heavily. Garforth and Rothwell men, however, distinguished themselves, and the honour of first and second positions fell to them. It will be remembered that a few weeks ago the Garforth miners' team won the Championship of the Yorkshire Mines' Ambulance Competition, and I should not be surprised were the Bingham trophy to go to Garforth. Rothwell, at one time, occupied a prominent place among ambulance teams, and it seems that they are coming again. Patience and perseverance bring their reward.

Discipline must be maintained on the farm, but the young men nowadays are inclined to jib at some of the restrictions put upon them, and it is evident that a modification will have to be made. Naturally, old farmers have no patience with young fellows who will not fall readily into their ways, and all the trouble in a case at Marston seems to have arisen owing to the servant declining to comply with the master's demand to be in the house nightly at nine o'clock. The farmer, who has seen nearly ninety years, believes in the good, old custom of "early to bed, early to rise," though it may not make the men wealthy and wise, and he had allowed the case to be brought, although he had not been in a Court before, in order that young men may learn that discipline must be maintained. When men engage themselves for a year they should know the conditions under which they are to live and work, and, having accepted them, they should honourably abide by them. They are not compelled to go to farms where the conditions are not such as would suit them.

The first steps towards the launching of a town-planning scheme for Scholes have been taken, and a small committee, appointed by the District Council, will go into the question and report. This is the only part of Tadcaster rural area in which an attempt is being made to have future building carried out on proper lines, and the scheme will be followed with interest. Without doubt the district will develop in that direction, and when Scholes gets a water supply it is not improbable that many people will desire houses in the "haven of rest."

Tar-spraying has, as Kippax people know, its disadvantages as well as its advantages. The purpose for which it is intended is to mitigate the dust nuisance, which is very necessary in these days of heavy motor traffic, but when the work is newly done it is sometimes the cause of damage to individuals. The streets are slippery, and people who do not walk carefully are apt to find themselves emulating skaters, and finally landing on their backs. A man and a girl came down on a tarred road at Kippax, and destroyed their clothes, and they claimed against the District Council for damage. It was very unfortunate for these people, and to have a nice suit or dress ruined with tar is very unsatisfying, but the District Council decline to make good their loss. They would have to prove carelessness on the part of the Council before they could succeed against them.

The square of Kippax is apparently prepared to grant a recreation ground to the children of the village, and the parish "fathers" should show no hesitancy in accepting the offer of Mr Bland, despite restrictions as to adults using the field for playing football and cricket. What the square seemingly intends is to restrict the use of the field to children only, and they will thus be taken off the streets, and be allowed to play their games without inconvenience or danger. Another field is suggested for cricket and football, and if Kippax has any chance of securing it the residents should not let it slip.

A well-known magistrate—Mr W. F. Walles-Fairbairn, of Askham Grange—is on the warpath, and he apparently wishes he was back in the "good old days." Mr Bamborough, who, I believe, is Liberal agent for Thirsk and Malton, has aroused his anger, and he writes to the newspapers concerning a statement made by Mr Bamborough "that no one on my estate dare let a room to the Liberal party for a committee room for fear of dismissal or notice to quit? If we lived in the good old days I should have the pleasure of "calling him out," and with a bit of luck, sending him to the place to which no doubt he will eventually go; but in these effete days I can't do this, but must confine myself to demanding an unqualified apology." Bribing is very popular just now, and as Mr Fairbairn cannot "call out" his opponent, why not challenge Mr Bamborough to a bout with the gloves? It would add to the gaiety of the district.

Barkston Ash is leading! The Garforth division, comprising the Kippax, Sherburn, Oulton, and Garforth districts, had again the highest attendance in the West Riding for April, and the teachers and children should be proud of the honour. All the parishes, with the exception of Kippax, Ledsham, and Oulton-with-Woodlesford, are in the Barkston Ash Division—the smallest county division in the Riding—and they are doing their duty to the ratepayers, earning more money proportionately, by way of grants, than any division in the county. In a measure, the attendance reflects an increased interest in education in the district, and that is highly satisfactory.

Complaint was made at the meeting of Rothwell District Education Committee respecting the publication of news about county mining exhibitions, and the County Council would seem to require an advertisement department. In my view, the best way of making known the granting of scholarships is by advertising in the weekly newspapers, which are read by all classes of the community, and the District Education Committees might take up the suggestion.

In a short time Roundhay, Shadwell, Crossgates, Seacroft, and Moortown, will probably be provided with canine police. It seems that several members of the Leeds force in the outlying districts have dogs of their own at present, which, with a little training, would answer the purpose admirably. It is suggested that these constables should be relieved from the burden of paying the licence on the condition that the animals are used in the service of the police. This would be purely experimental, but as the system is capable of expansion it is felt that it might be developed at a later stage by the purchase of a number of Airedale terriers. There is general agreement that the Airedale breed supplies the most useful dog for police work. The Watch Committee do not intend taking action at present, but they will likely come round to the idea. Will P.C. Towzer be provided with a uniform?

In the district motor traffic is increasing enormously and the protection of people is a primary consideration for the local authorities. An interesting discussion, having in view what occurred at the Bramham Cross Inquiry a few years ago, took place at the meeting of the Rural District Councils' Association, which referred to the Executive a resolution to consider the desirability of the powers being given to local authorities to enforce the cutting of hedges, lopping of trees, etc, where the view of traffic at cross roads or other places was obstructed, and refuse to pass plans for new buildings the erection of which would cause danger or risk either to users of motor or other vehicles or to the general public. One member objected to the resolution on the ground that it would only have the effect of encouraging scorching motorists, and would not benefit any locality. District Councils must work in accordance with new conditions, and, as motors have come to stay, it is their duty to endeavour to take all measures necessary to minimise danger on the public roads.

Many people imagine that the organisers of farm labourers have a very happy time. It is recalled that when Joseph Arch set out to do a little spade work he enraged the squires and farmers, and was sometimes roughly treated. "You'd better look out," he was frequently told at meetings, "the squire, I've heard, is going to turn the fire hose on you, and make you dry up your spouting." And did not an eminent bishop once prescribe a ducking in a horse-pond as excellent discipline for the first champion of the farm labourer. But things have not advanced much since then. It is not long since an organizer was mobbed at Wetherby and hauled for daring to preach higher wages for farm labourers.

Although the parish "fathers" have made no attempt to popularize the place, Wetherby is having a "boom" this year as a centre for recreation and enjoyment. Knaresborough, with its natural beauties and romantic associations, has hitherto overshadowed Wetherby as a place for boating, but, judging by the number of people who have lately been seen on the river, Wetherby is at last coming into its own. The excellent golf course is another source of attraction, but many of the townspeople look with a disapproving eye on Sunday recreation.

The N.E.R. Co. could, I believe, do a great deal more than it is doing to develop the district on the Wetherby line. The directors seem to be concentrating their efforts on "booming" Harrogate, but if they would, by giving cheap fares and by judicious advertising, attract more people to Scholes, Thorner, Collingham, Wetherby, and Boston Spa they would eventually bring profit to themselves.

Thorparch, the pretty little hamlet near Boston Spa has had a shock. A couple have arranged to enter the bonds of wedlock, a house had been taken, the wedding breakfast prepared, and some of the guests had actually assembled at the church; in fact, everything had gone as merrily as the proverbial marriage bell up to this point; and then a hitch occurred. The bridegroom, who had sent a bouquet to the bride, was on the way to the church when he seems to have suddenly changed his mind, and got out of the cab, taking a route that did not lead to marriage. Happily, the bride was made aware of what the man of her choice had done, and she was saved a fruitless journey to church. Of course, the villagers greatly sympathise with the lady, but it is possible the bridegroom may again change his mind.

The difficulty in regard to an entrance to the new Whitkirk recreation ground, the gift of the Hon. E. L. Wood, M.P., to the children, has been overcome by the squire allowing a gate to be placed on the Selby Road side of the field, and it is hoped that ere long the children will be in full possession of the field. By and bye, it may be possible to get an entrance from another street, but meantime it would be a great pity to deny the children of the district the opportunity of enjoying themselves because of the difficulty that has arisen. An entrance off Hollshaw Lane would certainly be better, in my opinion, but it is not always possible to get what one wants.

LEEDS EMPIRE PALACE.

At the Empire this week there is an excellent programme. Maddie Scott is the most interesting personality, and she charms the audience with a new character study of a stage-struck girl. Her vivacious self-confidence, her determination to eclipse the "star" lady, and her disillusionment are depicted in a very attractive little scene, in which her sister also takes part. She also sings two of her own songs, "Father Started Work" and "The Bird in Nellie's Hat," in her most engaging manner. George French appears in the funniest make-up, and is very effective with his songs and patter, and entangled proverbs. Dialect songs are finely sung by Mr J. H. Scotland, who has a voice as well as style, and he is warmly recalled. The pleasing harmonies and quaint by-play of Bert La Mont and his cow-boys are very entertaining; there is much breezy laughter in the "Zoo Revue" of Donaldson Brothers; and Conway, Dixon, and Norris Lynde give a refined musical act. The other capable artists in a strong "bill" are Fred Dupree, Fred Keeton, and Hunter and Bob.

The amusement lover who can enjoy a good laugh is sure to find one, and a very long one, too, at the Leeds Empire, on Monday, when that exceedingly popular comedian, Ernie Mayne, will make his re-appearance, with some new songs, and other special attractions will include Cruikshank, "the fool of the family"; Van and Schenk, the great American comedy duo; Fred Edwards, assisted by May Yates, in a comedy duologue, entitled "A Savage Encounter"; O'Gorman Bros., patter comedians and expert dancers; Edward Crossland's Melody Makers, in a delightful vocal scena "The Burglar's Dream"; Briff, Braff, and Broff, comedy acrobats; Louie Tracy, the dapper dandy boy; and the incomparable American disease, Nella Webb.

LEEDS HIPPODROME.

At the Hippodrome this week the principal turn, "Colossus and the Kids," is provided by an Irish giant, and his children to be the largest progeny of man in the world, and his two small assistants. The children present a bright and clever entertainment. In a sketch entitled "Another Mistake of Cohen's," Joe Hayman and Mildred Franklin, Hebrew comedians, exaggerate the characteristics of their race in a most amusing manner, and without giving offence to anyone. They finish their performance with a lively medley composed of current ragtime tunes. Dan Whitby, who adopts the distinctive style of Dan Leno, is a comedian with a very mobile face. He has one or two funny and original songs, and indulges in amazing contortions between the verses. Bowden and Gordey, a trick cyclist and an acrobat, perform some surprising feats, while the Edie Gray Trio sing boisterous airs and give a smart exhibition of quick-step dancing. A good reception is given to Vera Moore, who possesses a very sweet voice that is heard to advantage in several sentimental songs. Syd Sydney, a diverting comedian, also appears.

At the Hippodrome next week Messrs Julian Wylie and Jas. W. Tate will present "I should Worry," a musical extravaganza. Besides a beauty chorus of forty girls, the artists will include Jake Friedman, Tom Payne, Ben Zeller, Bonny Browning, Vera Hilliard, Helma Ritchie, Jack Wayho, and Alec Hassell. Others in the bill are Emerson and Baldwin, the American juggling comedians; Burr and Hope, a lady, a lover, and a lamp; the Society Quartette, vaudeville entertainers; Cromo and Hamilton; and Mollie McCarthy, dainty comedienne.

LEEDS CITY VARIETIES.

At the City Varieties this week the Brothers Larkum, novelty comedians, have some excellent fun with which to regale the people of Leeds. The Finnetts, vocalists from the Isle of Man, sing some interesting character songs in an admirable way; and the Seltini Trio, in an original acrobatic pot-pourri act, provide a distinct novelty. Then there are James Sweeny, the singing pit boy, who has a couple of excellent numbers; Nat Gould, a comedian, who knows how to tickle an audience; and little Elsie Prince, a child comedienne and dancer, who has a big future before her. The pictures are also good.

Next week at the City Varieties the principal turns will be given by the Four Shades, ladies' vocal quartette, described as an absolute revelation in vocalization; and by Joe Almasia, the only jumping juggler; and Miss Yamina, the only lady Arab tumbler. Others in the bill are the Shannons, comedy duo; Quinn and Lodge, "the shoeblack and the pro."; Isa Wise, dainty comedienne; and the Finnettes, in their refined speciality act. The pictures include "A friend in need" and "The gusher."

To-morrow (Saturday) an athletic fete and amusement competition take place at Bramham Park. See advt.

LABOURERS' WAGES.—In the House of Commons on Wednesday Mr Lane Fox asked the Prime Minister whether the Government proposed to appoint district land commissioners, who will themselves fix a minimum wage for the agricultural labourers in their district, and if so, what approximately would be the size of the districts which such commissioners will administer, and what would be the salary that they would receive. Mr Asquith said he was not yet prepared to announce the details of the Government's proposals on this subject.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

A BOY AND HIS SCHOLARSHIP.

THE BOARD AND ROTHWELL COUNCIL.

HOMES WATER SUPPLY.

The fortnightly meeting of the Hunslet Board of Guardians was held at the Union Offices, Hunslet on Wednesday afternoon, Mr T. Thomas (Chairman) presiding. Other members present were Mr J. Gavins (vice-chairman), Dr E. Groves, Father T. Cody, Messrs J. Butterick, D. W. Hargreaves, T. G. Conyers, J. R. Chappell, J. Bannister, E. B. Pickersgill, H. L. Pulford, W. Lunn, W Stead, and W. Hemingway, with the Clerk (Mr F. W. Mee).

At the meeting of the Children's Homes Committee the sub-committee appointed at the last meeting to supervise the work of repairing the water pipes reported on the work done and the Clerk further reported that in consequence the meter readings for the three weeks ended the 10th inst. showed that the average daily consumption had been reduced to 1,590.5 gallons or 580,532 gallons per year.

It was proposed that the Board of Guardians be recommended to increase their offer to the Council to £20 per annum for water required for domestic purposes at the Homes, and this was carried. It was also resolved that the sub-committee be requested to arrange if possible for another meeting with the Waterworks Committee to discuss matters further.

The committee had under consideration the invitation of the House Committee to suggest a suitable boy for the post of master's clerk at the general institution. The Clerk also submitted correspondence with the West Riding Education Committee on the subject of the release of Herbert Arrowsmith from the scholarship agreement with them in the event of his selection for the post.

It was resolved that the committee, having carefully considered the question, have come to the conclusion that in the best interests of the lad it will be advisable that Herbert Arrowsmith shall continue with and complete his scholarship training, and that the House Committee be accordingly informed that the Committee has no suitable lad to recommend for the situation.

The Clerk submitted further letters from the Bishop of Knaresborough concerning the prayers taught in the Rothwell Church Sunday School, the last one stating that the Bishop of Ripon is now at home, and that the Guardians will no doubt hear from him in due course.

It was resolved that a challenge be sent to the House Committee to play a cricket match with this Committee at the Homes on July 15th; and that if accepted the Committee also fix the day at 2.30 instead of 3 o'clock, and other arrangements be made accordingly.

An amendment was moved by Father Cody that the minute relating to the boy Arrowsmith be referred back as he thought it was a good opportunity for the boy.

Mr J. R. Chappell, in supporting the action of the Committee, said all the circumstances had been considered by the Homes Committee who thought it would be a great pity to deprive the lad of the privileges which he had under the scholarship. The Clerk had read correspondence from the West Riding Education Committee that if the lad was taken away from the school without completing the scholarship the Guardians would be liable to pay a certain sum of money, but that fact, said Mr Chappell, had not influenced him one iota.

Mr Lunn, who said he would support the amendment, said the one and only thing that animated the discussion was the best interests of the lad, and he did not think there was any keen feeling among the members present. If the minute was referred back he was of the opinion that those who had voted for the lad remaining at school might possibly change their view. He thought there was a chance of the boy getting into the institution. The opportunity the Board could give to the boy was a fine one to make a man of him.

The Chairman: What is the age of the boy?

Mr Butterick: Fourteen.

The Chairman: What is the wish of the boy?

Mr Butterick said it had been asked in the meeting. The lad was the first one to gain a scholarship, and why not then, should he have the full benefit of the same. Neither Father Cody nor any other member could say what the boy would be fitted for when he had completed his scholarship. The highest they could hope for under his present accomplishments, was an assistant, master's position, which would only be worth about £45 and rations. It was no sensible man who thought that after a lad had had a three years' scholarship at a secondary school, and a smart lad like this one, he was not going to make anything better of himself than £45 per year. He personally thought the Homes had come to the right decision, and he thought the Board would be acting wisely if they confirmed the minutes, and so give the lad a chance.

Mr Gavins also supported the amendment.

The Clerk said he thought the lad need not stand still in his education work if he took up the position. The Guardians would give him every opportunity of attending evening classes, which would add to his prospects in that or any other direction.

The amendment was carried.

At a meeting of the Workhouse Committee the workhouse master presented his report, which showed that six deaths had occurred in the institution during the fortnight. A letter was received from the baker and the cook asking permission to get married and to retain their present single appointments as a joint one. It was resolved that a sub-committee be appointed to consider the matter and report.

In consequence of the Guardians annual outing falling on the date of the next meeting of the Committee, it was resolved that the next meeting be altered to Tuesday, 30th inst.

It was also resolved to accept the challenge from the Children's Homes Committee to play a cricket match at the Homes.

OUR GARDENS.

A Weekly Article specially Written for

Amateur Gardeners, Allotment Holders, &c.

By ALBERT CLARKE, Birkenshaw.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Bedding operations should now be completed, and in the case of plants which were planted early, free growth will probably have commenced. Verbenas, phlox, drummondi, petunias, and pelargoniums manglesi are a few of the plants which should be pegged down. This furnishes the beds, checks evaporation, and gives a much more pleasing effect than can be obtained by allowing them to straggle about at will. The pegging down operation may be commenced as soon as the shoots commence to run. In the case of verbenas and phlox it often becomes necessary to thin out the shoots to prevent overcrowding. Hairpins make excellent pegs.

MARGUERITES.

The semi-double marguerites such as Queen Alexandra, Mrs Sanders, etc., are apt to outgrow their quarters if allowed to grow away unchecked. Any that show a tendency to run into gross growth should be cut back, a few shoots at a time. This will cause them to break into new growth and preserve a shapely appearance. A batch of cuttings may be propagated now in a cold frame. If grown on in pots until late in summer they will be found useful either for conservatory decoration, or to take the place of exhausted annuals, etc., in the flower gardens. Remove all flower buds, until free growth commences.

THE ROSE GARDEN.

Established rose trees are promising exceedingly well this year, and we shall expect to see some fine exhibits at the various shows. Where large blooms are wanted for exhibition or other special purposes, disbudding must be resorted to. Where only one bloom to a shoot is required it will usually be found expedient to retain the centre or crown bud. If two or three are to be retained the centre one should be removed, and those buds that are allowed to remain should be as near of equal size as possible. If the centre bud is left it will open a week or more before the side buds. For ordinary purposes very little disbudding is necessary. The exceptions are such varieties as Captain Hayward, which often produces as many as twenty buds on one stem. These should be reduced to three or four. In cutting rose blooms a few simple rules should be observed. In the first place they should not be cut when the sun is shining full upon them. Early morning or in the evening is the proper time to cut flowers. Those cut on Saturday will fade in a few hours. If the weather is dull this rule does not apply. Another important point is to cut the stem well back. If only short stalks are required a good length of stem should be cut with the bloom. It can be shortened afterwards. The object of this is to cause the plants to break strongly, which they are unlikely to do if only a few inches of stem is cut. Some rose growers do not cut their blooms, but prefer to allow them to remain on the plants. With this we are much in sympathy, but must point out that where this system is practised, it is advisable to cut the stems back after they have borne their first crop of flowers. This will answer the same purpose as cutting the flowers with long stalks. Insect pests are sure to prove troublesome. Frequent syringing with soap suds, soot water, or some prepared insecticide, will do much towards keeping them in check. If a hose-pipe is available, give the trees a good swilling overhead once a week.

HARDY BORDER PLANTS

Lupins, doronicums pyrethrums, and similar early flowering subjects should have their flower stems removed as soon as the flowers fade. Under generous treatment they will flower again later in the summer. Freshen up the soil around them with a fork, give a good soaking of water, and mulch with half-rotten manure. About once a fortnight give a good watering with liquid manure. Hollyhocks, delphiniums, perennial asters, rudbeckias, helianthus, and similar rapid-growing subjects all derive benefit from an occasional application of liquid manure. The value of liquid feeding is rarely appreciated at its true worth by beginners. It often makes all the difference between success and failure.

SWEET PEAS.

These ever-increasingly popular flowers promise to be a huge success this year. The mild spring was all in their favour, and where generous attention is afforded they cannot fail to give satisfaction. Here again we have a subject which requires special attention as regards the provision of suitable liquid feeding. An important point in feeding is to avoid giving strong manures when the roots are at all dry. A good soaking of clear water should be given a few hours previously. Any kind of animal manure may be used, but cow manure mixed with soot is particularly good.

THINNING FRUITS

The thinning of fruits not only prevents overtaxing the energies of the trees, but also results in much better qualities of fruits being produced. Thinning may be effected by removing superfluous shoots and branches or some of the actual fruit spurs, or by picking off superfluous fruits while they are yet too small to have imposed any considerable tax on the tree.

Perhaps the most satisfactory method of thinning the fruit is to remove all inferior or grubby specimens and enough of the remainder to leave balance to mature at suitable distances apart, say at least four inches asunder for apples, always bearing in mind that the removal of all the blossoms or very young fruits from some spurs encourages an annual instead of biennial bearing.

The thinning of currants and gooseberries, etc., does not appear to produce so marked an improvement in the fruit.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Make a large sowing of maincrop peas. Earlier sowing should be staked and earthed up as necessity arises. Growers who have not made a practice of drawing fresh soil from the sides of the rows as growth proceeds should give it a trial. They will be more than pleased with the result.

Complete the planting of cabbage, cauliflowers, broccoli, and savoys. Water the plants a few hours before lifting, preserve as many roots as possible, plant firm, using a trowell for the purpose, and when all are in give a thorough soaking of water.

Sow seed of curled kale to provide plants for filling in gaps as early crops mature.

Sow endives on a shaded border and water daily until the seedlings are an inch high. Radishes grown in a hot, dry position are rough and of strong flavour. French breakfasts, turnip-rooted and long sickle are suitable kinds for present sowing.

Sow cos lettuce and transplant seedlings from previous sowings. Injuries at the root is disastrous in the cultivation of lettuce.

Thin onions, carrots, beet, turnips, etc., before they get crowded.

Make a final sowing of Canadian Wonder kidney beans.

Keep the hoe going amongst growing crops. A loose surface spells large crops in the vegetable garden.

PLANTS IN POTS.

TUBEROUS BEGONIAS

These much improved flowers are now largely used for conservatory decoration. It is important that they should be provided with a free root run, and to get the best results they should be repotted before the pots get full of roots. Under good cultivation the plants that are now commencing to bloom should continue until well into the autumn. If under-potted they flower for a few weeks, and when the compost becomes exhausted flowering ceases. They require a rich, fibrous compost, and the pots should be well drained. Few plants are so greedy as the begonias, and liquid manure may with advantage be given at alternate waterings. Double varieties should be disbudded to single blooms.

QUESTIONS.

I have a rose slip, rooted in a glass jar, in silver sand and water. Would you please tell me when to pot, soil, etc.? What size of a pot? Inside rose. Also two American tree carnations that should have flowered last winter and have not. What should I do with them now? No bud showing. (Amateur).

Pot the rose into a five-inch pot, stand inside, and shade from bright sun for two or three weeks. Gradually harden off, and stand outdoor for a few weeks in August and September. Return to the greenhouse at the end of September, and give all the light possible. Drain the pot thoroughly, and place a little decayed manure over the drainage. Mix the soil as follows:—Two parts fibrous loam, 1 part leaf mould, ½ part silver sand, 1 part dried pulverised clay, and a table-spoonful of crushed old mortar.

If the carnations are growing freely they will bloom in due course. If they are weak, and do not look likely to develop flower buds, you might cut them back to within six inches of the base, and let them make a fresh start. In the latter case repot into stiff loam, a little sand, leaf-mould, a very little old manure, when new growth commences. Keep them cool, and grow in full light.

ROTHWELL CHARITY FOOTBALL CUP.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual general meeting of the Rothwell Charity Football Cup Competition Committee was held in the Council Offices, Rothwell, on Saturday night—Mr W. Lupton presiding.

In his report, the secretary said that last season they made application to the West Riding Association asking to be affiliated with that Association instead of the Leeds and District Association. The application was granted, and he thought it had been a great benefit to them, the sixteen clubs joined the competition against six in the previous year. There had been no balance in the previous season, but there was a little for the past year, so that it would seem they were advancing in the right direction. They had a good cup to play for, while medals were provided for the finalists. There was no competition which was governed better because no matter who the clubs were who entered, they were made to play according to rules, otherwise they were thrown out altogether. With regard to certain remarks said by the Chairman at the meeting over the annual meeting of the Rothwell Parish Church Football Club, he was afraid those remarks would have done them no good.

The financial statement which was read showed a balance in hand of £10 3s. 6d. An income of £32 7s. 11d. was accounted for as follows:—Balance from the previous year £7 13s. 3½d.; semi-final at Methley £2 15s.; semi-final at Oulton £4 2s. 3d.; boys' match £1 7s.; sixteen entries £2; ten per cent of gate receipts £2 8s. 6d.; late starts, 1s.; and final Rothwell Haigh on Easter Tuesday, £12 2s. 2d. The expenditure amounted to £22 3s. 7d.

The report and balance sheet were unanimously adopted.

The Chairman called attention to the rules governing the competition which only apply to the Leeds and District Association, and urged the advisability of adopting new rules. It was decided that a sub-committee consisting of the president, secretary, and treasurer, be appointed to draft new rules in time for the meeting of the West Riding Association. The following dates were chosen for the rounds of the competition:—First round, Nov. 14th; second round, Dec. 12th; third round, Jan. 9th; semi-finals, Feb. 13th, and March 13th; and the final Easter Tuesday.

It was decided that £5 from the Rothwell Charity Cup be handed over to the treasurer of the Rothwell Infirmary Committee.

The comments made by Mr Walter Wormald regarding the Charity Cup Competition formed the subject of much discussion.

The chairman said he had had a personal interview with Mr Wormald, and related what had passed. After his report it was decided that the matter be left to the full committee to consider what should be done.

The election of officers resulted in Mr J. H. Rawlings being re-appointed president. Mr J. Goddard was re-elected secretary, and Mr M. Ward, financial secretary. Mr J. Fox was also re-appointed treasurer. The following were elected on the committee:—Messrs W. Lupton, G. Palmer, J. Holmes, G. Tiffany, G. W. Nodding, J. Bradley, H. Copley, A. W. Brook, A. E. Padley, H. Wilde, R. Goddard, and J. Elliott.

In the Davenport Cup final at Oulton golf links A. P. Bolland (9) defeated Mrs Badeley (17) by 3 and 2.

A SUCCESSFUL BREEDING SEASON.

(Readers are particularly requested to note that this series of articles commenced with the first issue in January. In order to obtain their full value, the earlier article should be read in conjunction with the current one).

We have now arrived at a stage when our young chicks are hatched either by the natural manner under hens or by artificial methods.

A warning must be here advisably been sounded not to interfere with either the machine or the hen during the twenty-first day; it is their privilege to hatch out the eggs and they will do it in a slight manner, and they will do it best.

The assistant clerk, who took the depositions at the occasional court, said when prisoner made the charges he did not show any such mark mentioned.

Prisoner: My face was swollen. One of the men was a little man, and the other man called him sergeant. They were taking finger prints at the time.

Supt. Symonds said he was in his office, which is separated from the general office by a thin partition only, but he heard nothing.

Sergt. Dunn said that when the prisoner was brought into the station he was instructed to take his finger prints. Prisoner was very awkward, and tried to prevent him from doing so, and also tried to spoil them. When they were at last taken he was handed a pen and told to sign them, but he deliberately scribbled over them. There was no assault whatever.

Prisoner: Did you strike me in the face?

Witness: No.

The Chairman told prisoner to stand down.

TADCASTER GUARDIANS AND DISTRICT COUNCIL.

KIPPAX, TADCASTER, ULLESKELF, AND MILFORD AFFAIRS.

TWO CLAIMS FROM KIPPAX.

The fortnightly meeting of Tadcaster Board of Guardians was held on Monday—Ald E. C. Brooksbank, J.P. (Chairman), presiding. The other members present were Rev. Canon Greenwood (Grimston), Miss Bethell (Newton Kyme), Rev. C. D. Ash (Saxton), Messrs R. Wright (Barwick), W. Simpson (Lead), F. Myers (Bilbrough), W. P. Birkenshaw (Ledston), J. H. Scholefield (Oxton), J. H. Ingleby, J.P., W. Scholefield and W. Sykes, C.C. (Tadcaster), E. H. Lowe (Great Preston), J. Harding (Kippax), F. Phillips and W. Pearson (Allerton Bywater), C. Ellis (Micklefield), A. Johnson (South Milford), J. E. Cawthorn and J. J. Foster (Sherburn), Wilson (Steeton), G. Webster (Huddleston-cum-Lumby), A. H. Horner (Askham Bryan), T. H. Prater (Darlington), E. Parker (Ledsham), E. Aldgley (Colton), Copley (Ryther), J. Y. Wheatley (Appleton Roebuck), and J. Pick (Ulleskelf), with the Clerk (Mr G. A. Bromet), the surveyor (Mr Scott), and the sanitary inspectors (Messrs Driver and Wood).

The treasurer was reported to have a balance of £1,600 in hand.

The master's report showed that during the fortnight there had been five admissions to the workhouse and two discharges, and the number of inmates in the house was 86 and in the children's home 17—103 against 104 at the corresponding date of last year. The tramps relieved during the two weeks were 31 and 31 against 17 and 12 for the corresponding weeks of last year.

The House Committee reported that two applications for the post of assistant nurse were received, and Miss A. Allen was appointed.

The Home Committee minutes showed that a complaint had been made as to the unsatisfactory quality of the coal supplied.

A return was read by the Clerk showing that for last half-year there was a reduction of £68 in relief in the Union, as compared with the corresponding half of the previous year.

A letter was received from the County Council stating that it was their intention to hold a conference relative to the working of the Mental Deficiency Act at Wakefield, on the 29th, and they asked the Board to appoint representatives. Canon Greenwood and Mr Wordsworth were appointed.

Mr Foster said that when the Bill dealing with the White Slave Traffic was going through Parliament they passed a resolution in support of it. Now it had been found necessary to amend the Act, and he asked if the Board should not pass a resolution urging Parliament to pass 19½ law the Bishop of London's Bill.

The Chairman asked if he would give notice of motion so that it could be placed on the agenda.

Mr Foster said he would.

DISTRICT COUNCIL

The treasurer to the District Council was reported to have a balance of over £4,000 in hand.

The Highways Committee minutes showed that in regard to the Kippax Bridge footpath the surveyor was instructed to have the work done. An application for the tar gravelling of a footpath at Tadcaster West is to have the surveyor's attention. It was reported that a workman had had his hand injured at Micklefield while working the tarring machine, and he was unable to work. The Insurance Company have been communicated with. A Leeds man stated that he fell on a tarred road at Kippax and damaged his clothes, and he claimed £4 compensation. It was decided to repudiate liability. Complaint was made as to the erection of a footpath opposite the Primitive Methodist Chapel at Tadcaster, and the East Tadcaster Parish Council are to be asked what they want done.—East Tadcaster Parish Council also complained about a wire supporting a telegraph pole at Hill Top, and stated it was a danger to the public. The surveyor was asked to take the matter up with the postal authorities.—Application was made by the Post Office engineer to erect poles at South Milford, and it was granted.—It was reported that the County Council had given permission for the tar-spraying of a road at Barlseton.—Application was made for the taking over of roads at Ulleskelf, but it was not acceded to.—A letter was received from a Kippax resident stating that his daughter had got a tar-sprayed road and damaged her clothes, and he claimed compensation. Liability was repudiated.

The minutes were passed.

SANITARY AND BUILDINGS.

At a meeting of the Sanitary and Building Committee three cottages at Barlseton belonging to the County Council were condemned as unfit for habitation and closing orders were to be made. Plans for alterations to the "White Swan" at Kippax were adjourned. An application to make a connection between a water main and a trough for cattle at Austhorpe was referred to the Water Committee.—In regard to the Kippax sewage scheme it was reported that a meeting of the West Riding Rivers Board would be held on July 9th, and Messrs Brooksbank and Parkin were appointed to attend on behalf of the Council.—Plans for the erection of 12 houses by John Smith's Co., at Tadcaster, were approved.—A sketch plan of drainage to two houses at Askham Bryan was aproved.—Messrs Bonnet and Thorman, of Tadcaster, were appointed engineers to the Askham Bryan water scheme, and asked to get out estimates, etc.—Plans for the erection of shops and a slaughterhouse at Tadcaster were adjourned.—It was reported that inspections were under the Housing and Town Planning Act at Tadcaster East had been made. A letter was received from Tadcaster East Parish Council complaining of a nuisance arising from the boiling of offals for the feeding of pigs, and notice is to be served.—It was reported that a tender for name plates for streets at Tadcaster has been accepted.—A letter was received from Barwick Parish Council suggesting the advisability of carrying out a town-planning scheme for Scholes. A sub-committee was appointed to consider the matter, with power to appoint an engineer to report on the scheme.—A letter was read from the County Council as to the treatment of tuberculosis, and it was resolved to pay half the cost of the treatment of patients from the district in institutions other than those provided for by the Insurance Act and by Government grants.—Formal authority to Dr Hill and Messrs Driver and Wood in carrying out their duties under the Housing and Town Planning Act to enter houses was recommended, but the matter was adjourned for a fortnight.

VARIOUS

A letter was read from the Local Government Board enclosing the order as to the salary of the medical officer payable by the several districts.

Complaint was made of deposits of night soil from Garforth on land near a road leading to Barwick, and the sanitary inspector was instructed to look into the matter.

A communication from the Rural District Councils' Association as to imperial taxation and grants was referred to the Finance Committee.

A conference is to be held in the Board Room on the 3rd July in connection with the county nursing scheme.

A SHERBURN MAN'S WEDDING.

CEREMONY AT MARKET WEIGHTON.

At All Saints' Church, Market Weighton, the wedding took place of Miss Ida Winter, second daughter of Mr and Mrs Robert Winter, of Northgate Farm, Market Weighton, and Mr Harry Steeventon, son of Mrs Steventon, of Sherburn-in-Elmet.

The ceremony was performed by the vicar, the Rev. Arthur A. R. Gill, while the guests and others present were: Mr and Mrs Robert Winter, Miss N. Winter, Miss A. Winter, Mr W. Hunley V. Winter, Master Harry Winter, Mrs George Moor (The Common Farm), Mrs Steventon (Sherburn), Miss Alice Steventon (Leeds), Mr and Mrs. Thos. Baker, Mr and Mrs J. Potter, Mrs. Richard West, Mr T. D. Conett (Market Weighton), Miss Yeates (Shipton Thorpe), Miss Winifred Kelsey, Mr A. Kelsey, Mrs Jos. Arnold (Market Weighton), Mr C. Atkinson (Southburn), and many others.

The bride was accompanied by her brother, Mr Tom Winter, who gave her away. The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr George Steventon, of Sherburn-in-Elmet, who officiated as best man.

The bride was prettily attired in a dress of cream alpaca, trimmed with silk lace and cream ribbon, and wore a hat of white leghorn straw, trimmed with large pale blue ostrich plume. Her handsome bouquet was composed of carnations, roses, and maidenhair fern, with trailers of smilax.

She was attended by Miss Ada Steventon (sister of the bridegroom), of Harrogate, who wore a dress of slate silk voile, trimmed with pink ribbon and cream lace, with hat of white chip, trimmed with pink lace and spray of pink flowers. She also carried a lovely bouquet of pink roses and carnations, with maidenhair fern and trailers of smilax.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride consisted of a beautiful gold brooch set with diamonds, etc, whilst the bridesmaid also received a very pretty gold brooch.

A reception was afterwards held at Northgate farm, the residence of the bride's parents, and this was largely attended. Mr and Mrs Harry Steventon left Market Weighton for Southport, for their honeymoon.

The bride travelled in a costume of black velvet, trimmed with silk braid and buttons, with cream hat trimmed with blue tulle and roses. Both the bride and bridegroom were the recipients of a large number of useful presents.

The happy couple are anticipating to shortly take up their residence near Stockton.

During the evening the bells of All Saints' Church rang out a merry peal in honour of the event, the bridegroom at one time being a member of the bell-ringers.

AFFAIRS OF SKYRACK MAGISTRATES' CLERK.

DISCHARGE FROM BANKRUPTCY.

An application was made to Judge Graham, at the Leeds Bankruptcy Court on Monday, for a variation of an order made in June, 1911, suspending for five years the discharge from bankruptcy of Herbert Greenwood Teale, solicitor, formerly of Trinity Street, Leeds, and of Boston Spa.

It was stated by the Official Receiver (Mr H. Clifford Bowling) that there had been no funds for payment of a dividend to unsecured creditors.

Mr J. H. Green, barrister, who represented applicant, said the whole assets had gone in costs through no fault of the bankrupt. In spite of the heavy burden of a professional man Mr Teale had continued to practise as a solicitor, and had no reason to suppose he could to some extent relieve his position.

Mr Teale said he was clerk to the West Riding Justices in Leeds at the present time. His salary at the time of his bankruptcy was £570, but was now only £540 owing to some of the townships in the Skyrack Division having been taken into the city of Leeds. He had three clerks to keep, and altogether quite £250 went in expenses. His ordinary business as a solicitor had suffered through the bankruptcy and was practically nil.

A letter from Mrs Teale was read by the Official Receiver. This stated that if any variation of the order was to be made to Mr Teale it should either set apart a portion of his future income for the benefit of the creditors or consent to judgment for £500 in their favour. Her admitted proof in the bankruptcy was for £7,000.

Subject to judgment for £250, to be paid in instalments of £50 per annum, His Honour granted the bankrupt's immediate discharge.

IMPORTANT INSURANCE ACT POINT.

At Selby Petty Sessions on Monday six summonses were in the list against Mr George Edward Hides, farmer, Drax, for failing to pay contributions under the National Insurance Act.

The summonses raised the question as to the compulsory insurance of workers engaged in potato gathering, getting, or sorting.

Mr C. H. March, solicitor, who appeared for the defence, said the question was one of great importance to agriculturists throughout the country. The defendant, a member of the Selby branch of the National Farmers' Union, would be defended by the Union, who were taking the question up. But the organisation would not have a meeting until that afternoon, and in order that the defence might be prepared, he applied for an adjournment. Mr March added that on this very question representations had been made to the Government, who had promised to deal with it.

MASTER AND SERVANT CASE AT TADCASTER.

DISCIPLINE ON THE FARM.

At Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday—before Ald E. C. Brooksbank (Chairman) and other magistrates—John Willcock, farm labourer, of Tadcaster, made a claim for wages against John Gowland, farmer, of Marston. It was stated that the original claim was for £16 17s., and it had been reduced to £10 so that the Court could deal with it. It was stated that Mr Gowland was about 90 years of age.

Willcock said he was hired to Mr Gowland in November for a year at £18, and his insurance, to go with the horses. He went into Mr Gowland's employment in December, and he left on June 10th. On the latter date he had got his horses up, and had his breakfast, when Mr Gowland told him he had finished with him, and asked him to go. His master had complained about his not being in the house at nine at nights.

In answer to Mr Crumbie, who defended, complainant said that he was engaged as head horseman, and he had to fodder the animals in the evening. He had fodderred them lots of times at eight o'clock. He admitted that he had got a man named Metcalfe to fodder the horses sometimes.

Mr Crombie: Do you think a servant should ask another servant to do his work without asking the master's permission?—Yes.

Were you often in bed in the morning when Metcalfe came from the village?—Yes.

Did not Metcalfe and another man have to get you up?—Five o'clock is over-soon in winter.

Did you stay out all night on June 4th?—No

At what time did you get in?—About ten o'clock.

Did you go through the window?—No.

How often did you get in through the window?—About three times.

Do you think that a proper thing for a farm-servant to do?—No.

In the course of further evidence, he said that he went out on the Sunday and came back about ten o'clock. He did not know that Mr Gowland had a cow at the calving, but that was not his work. He admitted that one day he was ploughing in the field and he lay down behind a hedge for half-an-hour.

Mr Crombie: Do you think it is playing the game to be lying behind a hedge when your master expects you to be working?—Willcock: No.

A youth named Johnson was called, and he stated that he let Willcock into the house about four times from 10 to 10.30. He did not know how often the girl let him in.

Mr Crombie said that the case was brought in the interests of farm hands in order to make them realise that there must be some discipline on farms. This young man would not come in at nights. He had not made out a case that he was entitled to the money, and while he asked the magistrates to dismiss the case, Mr Gowland would pay him something for the work he had done.

The Chairman said that no case had been shown by Willcock, and they had decided to dismiss it. They understood that Mr Gowland was prepared to pay him something for his services.

CROSSGATES LITERARY SOCIETY.

VISIT TO THE BRONTE COUNTRY.

On Saturday afternoon a number of the members of Crossgates Literary Society visited Haworth, the home of the Bronte family, and the neighbourhood described by Hallaweli Sutcliffe in "Red o' the Foud," "Men of the Moors," etc.

The excursion coincided with Keighley gala, and it was a crowded train which left Leeds close upon 2 p.m. The journey was not altogether uneventful, as a stoppage outside Shipley was caused by the discovery that on axle or one of the carriages was on fire. There was no panic, as the only person cognisant of the trouble considerately refrained from imparting his knowledge to the rest of the party until all had disembarked at Keighley station.

Changing on to the picturesque Worth Valley single line, Haworth was reached, and the climb of 200 feet up the steep Main Street was accomplished fully refreshed. At the summit the old "Black Bull," the stocks, the parsonage, and the church and churchyard of many tombstones were seen in close proximity. A message for the party awaited them at the church steps from Mr Jonas Bradley, the genial schoolmaster of Stanbury, who had promised to act as cicerone, and it was to the effect that serious illness prevented him from leaving home, but guide books and maps of the district were enclosed, and though not with us in flesh, our friend was with us in the spirit, and from his room overlooking the valley would watch for our approach.

A cloudy sky tempered the tropical heat which was felt on the outward journey, and the walk in the footsteps of the talented sisters was commenced. Passing through the Parson's Fields, the open moor was soon reached, and the landscape of the district was displayed in all its beauty. The work of construction of the new reservoir in Sladen Valley next came into view, with Stanbury, the "Lingcroft" of Sutcliffe in the background. Black faced sheep and ruined huts with here and there a prosperous looking farmhouse, were passed, and on arriving at the top of the descending path to the Bronte waterfall, the sun burst through the clouds, and in the far distance shone upon the lonely farm of Withens, the windows being a glow of fire. Was it a glimpse of "Wuthering Heights"

Rumblings of thunder from all the airts as the party descended the rocky slope to the foot of the waterfall decided a change of plan. Each to go with the horses. He went into Mr Gowland's employment in December, and he left on June 10th. On the latter date he had got his horses up, and had his breakfast, when Mr Gowland told him he had finished with him, and asked him to go. TADCASTER WESLEYAN CIRCUIT MEETING.

GATHERING AT BOSTON SPA.

The quarterly meeting of the Tadcaster Wesleyan circuit was held at Boston Spa, under the chairmanship of the Rev. Lewis Thomas.

The Rev. Lewis Thomas, the present member-ship to be 708, and that during the year the circuit had contributed £484 17s. 5d. to the connexional funds.

The Rev. Lewis Thomas was accorded a very cordial vote of thanks for the service he had rendered to the circuit during the three years of his superintendency, several members testifying to his brotherliness, his preaching ability, and his zeal.

The meeting extended its most hearty congratulations to Mr Wm. Adkin, of Collingham, on the occasion of his having completed 50 years of active service as a local preacher within its borders, and many tributes were paid to a faithful and gifted member of that order of laymen which renders such invaluable service to the Methodist Church.

The meeting decided to form a branch of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and Mr Slater-Whitfield, of Wetherby, was appointed circuit secretary.

The Rev. R. W. Davidson, was appointed editor of the Circuit Magazine, with Mr Crowe, of Tadcaster, as secretary, and treasurer.

A committee was elected to secure a site for the building of a chapel at Stutton.

The meeting expressed its deep sympathy with Mr Charles Booker, of Collingham, on the death of his wife, and directed that a letter of condolence be sent to him.

Resolutions were passed heartily supporting the Bishop of London's amendment, which proposes to raise the age of consent from 16 to 18, to the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, and urging that throughout the circuit the co-operation of other Churches should be sought in holding meetings to combat the terrible evils of gambling and intemperance.

A TADCASTER BEER RAID.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST YOUNG MEN

Four young men—Arthur Hewitt, Walter Husband, Arthur Johnson, and George W. Powell, described as labourers, of Tadcaster—were charged at Tadcaster Petty Sessions on Monday with stealing 36 gill bottles of beer, value 4s. 6d., the property of Mr Samuel Smith, of Tadcaster, between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. on June 7th.

Supt. Slack said the case had been taken as a simple larceny to enable the magistrates to deal with it, but, as the evidence would show, it was a case of breaking and entering and stealing. Defendants were well-known and their families were very respectable people. On this particular morning these men entered the bottling stores at the Old Brewery, and consumed 36 bottles of beer. They were seen to leave the premises at five minutes to six by workmen. Mr Smith, he said, did not wish to press the case.

Cecil James Abson, brewery manager, Old Brewery, Tadcaster, said that he was in the bottling stores on Saturday afternoon, June 6th, and everything was all right. The stores were locked at night On the following day at five p.m. he visited the stores, and found a window had been broken. He saw that a number of bottles had been removed, and a quantity of beer consumed. Two of the defendants worked on the premises.

Joseph Calvert, labourer, employed at the Old Brewery, said he was on night duty at the place, and on Sunday morning, the 7th, he saw defendants come out of the bottling stores and walk out of the yard. He told them they were carrying on a nice game, and they made no reply. The door had been opened from the inside.

The Chairman: Did you see signs as to how they had got in.

Witness: Yes, I saw a broken window.

One of the defendants said they did not get through the window.

P.S. Juniper having given evidence, the defendants pleaded guilty.

Supt. Slack said that they had all been decent young fellows, with the exception of Husband, who had been there before.

The Chairman said they had placed themselves in a very serious position by this stupid, idiotic breaking into this place, because it was a case of burglary, but Supt. Slack had reduced it to a minor offence so that they could deal with it. He warned them that this kind of thing could not go on, and if there were any further cases they would be treated differently.

Husband was fined 20s. and costs, and the others 10s. and costs.

ABERFORDIA AMBULANCE LEAGUE.

GARFORTH AND ROTHWELL SUCCESSES

On Saturday a preliminary competition of teams representing voluntary aid detachments in Ripon, Harrogate, York, and Aberfordia districts in connection with the Territorial branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, West Riding of Yorkshire, for trophies presented by Colonel Sir John Bingham, Bart., V.D., took place at the St. Mark's Schoolroom, Harrogate. There were competitions for men and women. Three detachments of men took part, and 14 women, each team numbering five.

The examination consisted of demonstrations or tests and the answering of questions. The judge was Major Hyde, staff officer, A.D.M.S., West Riding Division Territorial Forces (York), who was assisted by Captains Ewin, Darlow, and Dobson, of Leeds.

At the conclusion of the competitions Major Hyde declared the results as follows:—

Men.—Garforth, 77 points; Rothwell, 71 points; York, 67 points.

Women—Ripon, 92 points; Harrogate No. 1, 75 points; Tadcaster, 74 points; Whitkirk, 74 points; Bramham, 73 points; Monk Fryston, 72 points; Garforth, 69 points; Ainsty, 68 points; Aberford, 68 points; York (Bootham), 66 points; Knaresborough, 65 points; Harrogate No. 2, 64 points; York (Mount), 61 points; Boroughbridge, 56 points.

Garforth (men) and Ripon (women) will compete in the final at Leeds on October 17th.

A SINGULAR GARFORTH CASE.

STOURTON MEN DISMISSED.

At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Agustus Harris, miner, of Stourton, and Daniel Taylor, miner, of Hunslet, were summoned for riding bicycles without a light at Garforth.

P.C. Bevoor stated that about 1.15 a.m. on Monday, June 1st, he was on duty on the Leeds and Selby Road, at Garforth Bridge, when he saw the defendants coming down the hill without any light on their machines. When stopped the lamps were quite cold, although the defendants said the lamps had gone out as they were descending the hill. Both the defendants lighted their lamps, which burned all right. The addresses which they gave to the officer were wrong, and witness had some difficulty in tracing them. He had, however, no difficulty in recognising the young men when he saw them again.

Both defendants denied being on the Leeds and Selby Road at the time in question, Taylor saying that he "was hard asleep in bed at that time." Later both stated the summonses were made out in the wrong name.

A witness named Horace Newton said Harris was at their house at Stourton when they were having a party.

Asked by the Chairman why he had come to the Court to answer the summons if it was wrong, Harris said it was the first time he had received one, and did not know what to do. He came to the court as the policeman said he had to.

A witness was called for Taylor, who said Taylor was with him on the Sunday night.

The magistrates found there was not sufficient evidence to convict, and discharged both men.

PRACTICAL PRESCRIPTION AGAINST STOMACH ACIDITY.

BY A SPECIALIST.

"Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach trouble nowadays," says a leading specialist, "are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased, but if this acid condition is allowed to continue, the acid is very likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce stomach ulcer or cancer, either of which may render a radical surgical operation necessary, even to prolong life. Therefore an "acid stomach" is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. It is utterly useless to take pepsin and ordinary stomach tablets. The excess acid must be neutralised by the administration of a diffusible alkali. For this purpose physicians nearly always recommend taking half a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little water after each meal. Larger quantities may be used if necessary, as it is absolutely harmless. But be sure to get the bisurated magnesia, as other forms of magnesia have not the same action in the stomach as the bisurated, and frequently do more harm than good."

SELBY COUNTY COURT.

COMPENSATION CASES.

At the Selby County Court on Friday an application for an award under the Workmen's Compensation Act was made by William Tempest Mills, aged 48, a fitter, of Rochville Road, Stoney Rock, Leeds. The respondents were the Selby Olympia Oil and Cake Co., Ltd.

Dr Milburn (Hull) sat as medical referee.

The applicant, while employed at the Olympia Works, in December, 1912, met with an accident, his left thumb being fractured. Compensation was paid up to October 25th, 1913, but from 1913 to December 3rd last nothing was paid. The applicant had been treated for his injury at Leeds Infirmary, but though the thumb had healed up it was admitted that he was not yet fit to resume his full employment as a fitter, though there were some parts of the work he was able to do. He could not bend his thumb, nor use the fingers as he used to before.

On behalf of the defence it was maintained that the man had recovered from the injury, and was able to do his work as a fitter.

His Honour awarded the applicant 19s. 3d. per week, half his average wages, for the five weeks of incapacity that he received no payment, and 4s. per week from December 19th.

Costs were allowed to Workman on Scale A.

The referee thought that after some weeks' work the applicant might recover the full use of his hand.

FARM LABOURER'S COMPENSATION

In another workman's compensation case, Walter Cawthorne, farm labourer, was the applicant, the employer being Mr T. H. Warrington, of Ulleskelf.

It was stated that Cawthorne, while clipping a hedge, injured his left eye with the cutting hook. He was still being treated as an out-patient at the Leeds Infirmary. There was a possible danger of his right eye being affected.

Mr C. H. March, solicitor for the applicant, said that his client had entered into an agreement to receive £55, but on his taking legal advice the case was brought into court, as the sum was not sufficient.

Mr Norman Crumbie (York), for the respondent, stated that the matter was not rushed in any way by his client.

His Honour adjourned the case for six months so that the extent of the applicant's injury might by then be ascertained.

It was stated that the applicant was working for the same employer at reduced wages.

A PLUMBING AND GLAZING CONTRACT

A claim was made for £52 10s. for materials supplied and work done, the plaintiff being Squire Swift, plumber, Gowthorpe Street, Selby, and the defendant John Routh, joiner and builder, Barlston. The dispute arose out of a plumbing and glazing contract in respect of nine new houses at Selby.

His Honour found that the contract was for £120, and referred the settlement of the case as to what extra the contract had been properly carried out to arbitration.

Experts are to be appointed to view the work.

DAMAGE TO A ROTHWELL SCHOOL.

BOYS AND GIRLS ON THE WAR-PATH.

MINING EXHIBITIONS—INFECTIOUS DISEASE AND ATTENDANCE RETURNS.

The annual meeting of the Rothwell Education Sub-Committee was held in the Robin Hood Council School on Friday night, and the members present were Mrs Stoner, Messrs J. Butterick, J. Hirst, S. R. Chadwick, T. Thomas, R. Ackleugh, W. Lunn, T. Balls, J. Horner, J. Dobson, J. Walton, with the Clerk (Mr A. Angus), and the attendance officer (Mr W. Steel).

Mr J. Butterick was unanimously elected to the chair, and Mr W. Lunn to the vice-chair.

Mr Lunn raised an interesting question with regard to the mining exhibitions offered for evening classes, and said that, as a rule, very little was known about them by likely young men who could qualify for them. Only during the past week he had been asked about them, the persons thinking they were too late to make the necessary application.

The Clerk said that a number of bills calling attention to the exhibitions were printed and distributed. These were sent out to head teachers of the schools in the district for them to notify likely boys in the school, while other copies were displayed in the windows.

Various members remarked that they never saw any of the notices, and Mr Hirst said that as the County Council could put up notices at the various posting stations about the killing of birds and the letting off of fireworks in the street—(laughter)—why could not the authorities do the same in regard to mining classes.

Mr Chadwick, who was also of opinion that something ought to be done to make the exhibitions a little better known, moved that the authorities be recommended to post up notices in public places.

Mr Lunn seconded, and the members agreed.

Mr Butterick brought to the notice of the Committee the damage which has been done to the Carlton Lane Council School, Rothwell, by boys and girls playing in the recreation field. The fence at the latter had been down to see him that afternoon about it, the children having made serious havoc in connection with the roof. Some of the girders came down to the ground and up these the boys swarmed, and got upon the roof. Stones had also been thrown on to the roof, and the spouting had been filled up. A lot of work would have to be done owing to the damage. Either a notice board of warning would have to be put up or someone would have to be good-hold of and an example made. The headgir

Rothwell Courier & Times

SATURDAY, JUNE 27th, 1914.

The Member for Osgoldcross, whose daughter performed the opening ceremony at a bazaar held in aid of the funds of an hospital, at Goole, directed the attention of the public to the possibility of a new burden being imposed upon them. "It might be," he said, "that the hospitals of the country would be taken over by the authorities, and form one part of public service." A few years ago such a change would have been scouted at, but, owing to one reason and another, the voluntary system is breaking down, and unless there is a marked advance in the generosity of the public towards hospitals an agitation for the placing of them on the rates is sure to ensue. Many argue that the compulsory system is a better and fairer way than the present plan—that all persons would have to pay according to their means, and that those who are so niggardly that they take advantage of their neighbours' generosity, would no more escape contributing their quota to the common fund. It is disheartening work raising funds to keep these institutions going, because the great bulk of the people recognise no personal responsibility to them, and a large amount of the money is given by the really charitable who receive no benefit in return. It has been pointed out by the Member for Barkston Ash that a levy of 1s. per head on the inhabitants of the West Riding would provide ample funds for the work of the Leeds Infirmary, and while there are thousands of working-men who contribute more than this annually, there are thousands who never give a farthing, but who do not hesitate, when they require help, to avail themselves of the benefits of the institution. This is extremely mean. Wealthy people, if not charitably disposed, can best safeguard their interests by maintaining the present system, and if compulsion eventually comes about they will have to accept a share of the blame. It is no use asserting nowadays that the ratepayers have no responsibility in these matters, because the service has come to be looked on as a public one, and if the voluntary system crumbles up, it may be accepted that legislation will at once be passed to maintain the institutions in an efficient state. For many reasons, compulsion is not desirable, and the only way to avert it is by the public generally recognising that hospitals have a claim upon them.

A startling proposition in regard to the imposition of the poor rate was made at the annual meeting of the Association of Parish Councils in Scotland—a body somewhat analagous to the Poor Law Unions' Association in England. The Chairman (Mr Cunningham, chairman of the Glasgow Parish Council), said that "if they were to eliminate the drink curse, the poor law question would be considerably eased. The annual drink bill in Scotland amounted to £15,815,000, which was equal to £2 6s. 6d. per head of population, or £15 per family, and the great bulk of this was paid by the poorest class of the community, and the class which accounted for nine-tenths of the poor law. It was seriously suggested that the poor law rate should be made chargeable on the drink bill. They would then see their expenses reduced to vanishing point. Was it a Utopian idea? Drink made poverty, let drink pay for it. He did not suppose that the liquor sellers would foot the bill, but would increase the cost of drink. In that case, if less was drunk so much the better, and if what was drunk cost more, they need not pity the drinker." Coming from an authority on the Scottish poor law, the proposition must be viewed seriously. Frequently advocates of prohibition or the limitation of drinking facilities have made novel suggestions which have received no more than passing notice, but when the Chairman of the Poor Law Association, in all earnestness, advocates a new method of rating it is bound to have some opinion behind it. No doubt many people would gladly hail any change which would remove burdens from their shoulders, because there is a strong element of selfishness in the community, and if it was suggested that an additional tax on drink should be imposed to meet Poor Law expenditure many would vote for it with both hands, simply because they would save money by the immediate transaction. Mr Cunningham's idea is that the poor should pay for their own maintenance; and he argues that as the drink bill is largely met by the section of people who seek relief they should find, through a new tax, the money to meet their own needs. This is somewhat on the lines of the cut and rat ranches proposed in America. The cats were to be fed on rats, and the cats were to be killed for the sake of their skins and the remains given to the rats to feed on. It would work automatically, and the money spent by the poor on drink would provide for them when they were unable to find the wherewithal to expend on liquor. No one can gainsay the assertion that drink creates poverty, but, on the other hand, it can be safely stated that poverty causes drinking. More than that, drink is only one of the factors in the poverty problem. How is it possible for an agricultural labourer with the extremely low wages that are prevalent in some parts of the country, to bring up a family decently, and, at the same time, put away something for his old age. That man is living on the verge of poverty throughout his life, and he is the type that generally receives attention in purely rural Unions. Many families are born to poverty. They are reared in an unhealthy environment; they are not properly fed, and the squalor and disease which continually beset them give them absolutely no chance whatever in life. Well-fed, prosperous persons argue that if the denizens of slumdom were placed in better surroundings they would create another slum, but the experiment is not tried, and, in any event, human beings so long divorced from decent ways of living would need some guidance. If they did not fully appreciate new conditions their children would, and a new race of people would be evolved from slum surroundings beget evil habits it seems to us that until the authorities strike at the root of the matter they will not do much good. In a few years Scotland will have an opportunity of dealing with the drink question in a way denied to other parts of the Kingdom, and if the Association of Parish Councils can persuade the electors to create a large prohibition area, they will be able to test the true relation of drink to the poor law problem.

ROTHWELL & DISTRICT NEWS.

ROTHWELL

HOMING.—In the Yorkshire Combine race from Guernsey the best results for members of Leeds Federation were:—Keitel 1,246 and 1,229, Hodgkinson 1,223, Newton 1,220, Fox 1,215 and 1,209.

Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions.—The magistrates at the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday were Mr J. W. Maskill (in the chair), Col. A. M. Sagar-Musgrave, Mr F. M. Lupton, and Mr J. R. Cross.

Success.—At the Convocation held on June 23rd at Durham University the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on Mr J. H. Cockerham, of Hatfield Hall, in the above University. Mr Cockerham is a native of Rothwell, and we well know many of our readers. He is hoping to take Holy Orders shortly.

Cricket.—On Saturday Rothwell W.M. had an easy victory over East End Park on the latter's ground, when they won by five wickets. Scores:—East End Park—T. Mosson 11, Wheatley 5, Hutchinson 12, Aspinall 1, Asby 4, Moxon 0, White 0, McKenshaw (not out) 3, Hollingdrake 0, Lloyd 0, Beckett 0, extras, 7; total, 43. Rothwell—S. Pritchard 20, J. Seanor 14, M. Naylor 3, J. Parker 0, H. Sanderson (not out) 1, W. Booth 0, M. Clarkson (not out) 1, extras, 5; total (for 5 wkts), 44.

Drink.—At the Leeds West Riding Petty Sessions on Tuesday Walter Israel Taylor, a labourer, of Rothwell, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Rothwell. P.C. Womack stated that about 12.10 a.m. on Sunday, June 14th, he was in Commercial Street, Rothwell, when he met Taylor, who was very drunk, and making use of filthy language. The officer asked him to go home quietly, but he would not do so until the officer threatened to lock him up. A fine of 7s. 6d. and costs was imposed.

Anniversary.—The anniversary services of the Wesleyan Sunday School attracted large congregations on Sunday. The special preacher was the Rev. W. E. Russell, of Leeds, who is well known as the Sunday School secretary for the Leeds district. His sermons were peculiarly adapted to the occasion. At each of the services the children sang their favourite hymns, under the able conductorship of Mr S. Morton. At the afternoon service several of the children gave recitations. Mr T. A. Idle was the organist, and he was assisted by a small band of instrumentalists.

Outing.—An enjoyable outing to Monk Fryston was made by the members of the Rothwell Mothers' Union on Wednesday afternoon. The party, which numbered about fifty, left Rothwell in three waggonettes, and arrived at Monk Fryston about three o'clock. The grounds of the Hall were visited (by kind permission of the Rev. B. Hemsworth), much interest being taken in the zoo. A sumptuous tea was enjoyed, after which the party returned home. During the afternoon the Rev. and Mrs. Wienckie (curate of Rothwell) cycled over.

Police Cricket Match.—In aid of local charities a cricket match was played between the Rothwell Town Constables and a team representing the Skyrack Police, on the ground of the Rothwell Cricket Club on Wednesday afternoon. The effort was well supported, there being a good attendance. The police showed great batting form, and won by twelve, scoring 120 to the Tradesmen's 108. For the police P.C. Marples had batting honours with 39 runs, while P.S. Matthews (Shipton) made a good second with 24. Four of the Tradesmen were caught out by P.C. Bennett (Woodlesford). The scores were:—Skyrack Police—P.C. Marples 39, P.C. Brown 11, P.C. Womack 21, P.C. Stempster 9, P.C. Lockett 4, P.S. Matthews 24, P.S. Haigh 0, P.C. Bennett 3, P.C. Hankinson 12, P.C. Beaumont 4, P.C. Dyer (not out) 0, P.C. Hutchinson 1, extras, 11; total, 120. Rothwell Tradesmen—J. Newton 6, A. Tiffany 3, Perkins 13, Nash 0, Matthews 8, T. Tiffany 12, E. Hampson 19, A. Lunn 1, N. Baines 6, R. Tiffany 0, Wm. Nunns (not out) 16, Copley 8, extras, 9; total, 108. The Rothwell Old Band was in attendance and rendered an excellent programme of music. In the evening various competitions such as dart throwing, and bowling at the wickets were arranged by the police, and these were well patronized. The Old Band was again present and played suitable dance music for the young people to "trip it" on the grass.

BOWERS ALLERTON.

Anniversary Services.—The Sunday School anniversary services were held at the Mission Hall last Sunday, when in the morning Mr W. S. Blackburn preached a very appropriate sermon. At the afternoon and evening services many excellent recitations were given by the scholars, who also sang special hymns, assisted by Messrs Dyer's string band and Miss Spink (organist). They had been trained and were conducted by Mr Walter Blackburn. Good congregations were the order of the day. On Monday afternoon a good number of the teachers and scholars, along with the string band, paraded the streets of the village and sang their hymns at various points, after which about 200 scholars and 50 teachers partook of an excellent tea. The remainder of the evening was very agreeably spent in the Astley cricket field, where a variety of outdoor games were indulged in. Sweets and nuts were distributed. Much interest was created among the children by the successful manipulation of a number of balloons by Mr C. C. Bellwood.

CARLTON

Anniversary.—On Sunday the Carlton Primitive Methodists celebrated the first of the anniversary services, when a successful day was recorded. Two sermons were preached by Mr E. Williams, of Woodlesford. The children sang their festival hymns in a most pleasing manner, and recitations were given by Misses Harrison and L. Ward, of Rothwell, E. Ward, Carlton, and Masters T. Ward and Stones.

CROSSGATES

On Saturday afternoon Crossgates R.H. defeated Leeds 188 to 154.

A receiving order has been made against James Luther Thorpe, hardware and crockery dealer, The Arcade, Crossgates.

Leeds junior city scholarships have been awarded to Jessie C. McConomy and Harold C. Willans, who attend Manston School, and to Herbert H. White, Crossgates.

WESLEYAN CHURCH.—On Sunday anniversary services were held at the Crossgates Wesleyan Church, and the special preacher was the Rev. G. Edward Young, of London, who is very popular in the district. Mr Young is a cultured preacher, and his sermons on Sunday were highly appreciated by large congregations. At the evening service the choir sang the anthem "God hath appointed a day." In the afternoon a musical service took place—Mr Lunn, at the organ, presiding—and an augmented choir, under the direction of Mr J. H. Walker, A.R.C.O., gave an excellent rendering of H. Ernest Nichols' cantata "Day and night," the organistic being Mr A. Britton. The principals were Miss Ethel Holliday (soprano), Miss Elsie Lea (contralto), Mr Andrew Withy (tenor), and Mr J. Atkin Watson, and they sang their solos admirably. At all the services collections were made for the trust funds. On Monday afternoon a public tea was provided in the schoolroom, and it was largely attended. In the evening a meeting was held—Mr F. D. C. Atkinson, of Halton, presiding—and the Rev. G Edward Young delivered an interesting and instructive lecture on "Some Key-Words of Life." At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer, chairman, and the ladies who managed the tea, on the call of Mr Dewhirst, seconded by Mr Rippon.
